TOP HAT: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers—Boy, oh boy, what a show! Fully as good as "Roberta" and "Flying Down to Rio" and this team is more popular than when the other pictures were made. Step on this one. It's excellent.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. General patranoge.

Twentieth Century-Fox

CHARLIE CHAN IN EGYPT: Warner Oland, "Pat" Paterson—One of the best Chan pictures we have played so far. Plenty mystery in this. It pleased our patrons. Running time, 72 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

COWBOY MILLIONAIRE: George O'Brien—These George O'Brien westerns are not as good as they used to be. It seems as if they want to produce them too cheaply. It just makes no difference what type of a picture it is, if the story is too weak the picture never is much good. Running time, 64 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

DANTE'S INFERNO: Spencer Tracy, Claire Trevor—Let me give my exhibitor friends a little advice. Do not use any of the 11 x 14 photos, 22 x 28 or any of the "Hell" advertising put out on this picture. You can get good "stills" and other forms of advertising which eliminate the "horror" scenes from the lobby. The advertising furnished on this picture will drive your patrons away. Read your press book and find out just what the picture really is and advertise it as such—a modern story. Here is one of the best pictures produced this year, but we did less than average business due to poor paper distributed by Fox. It's a wonderful picture, fellows, and women will love it if you can get them in, but that hideous paper will drive the ladies away if they see it. The picture is really BIG and will do a good business, but it must be handled right.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. General patronage.

DANTE'S INFERNO: Claire Trevor, Spencer Tracy This is sure a missout. Did not please even the few who came to see it. No drawing power to this one. A 100 per cent flop. Running time, 88 minutes.—G. W. Harttmann, Armour Theatre, North Kansas City, Mo. Small town patronage.

DOUBTING THOMAS: Will Rogers, Billie Burke—This has been called Will Rogers' poorest picture, but if it is, it is about 99 per cent better than the average picture. Excellent cast, clever story and Will Rogers make a picture that will please any audience. Allison Skipworth is very good, while Will Rogers as a crooner is the highlight of the picture. Don't be afraid to advertise this one for it is plenty good and will please. Running time, 73 minutes. Played October 23-24.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

DRESSED TO THRILL: Tutta Rolf, Clive Brook—The Swedish star Rolf did not mean a thing at the box office. She has an accent that is not so good and the picture is rather a weak story set in Paris, and how I wish that they would keep them at home. The public does not go for these pictures of old world settings and we are getting a lot of them right now. Rolf is a good actress, fair singing voice and undoubtedly Fox is trying out for some new personalities which I will concede the screen needs. I think that she has something on the ball if it had been a better story. And a little less accent.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

FARMER TAKES A WIFE, THE: Janet Gaynor, Henry Fonda—Very good. Pleased 100 per cent. Played October 30.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

FARMER TAKES A WIFE, THE: Janet Gaynor, Henry Fonda—Very good; should please almost everybody.—R. C. Metzger, Ritz Theatre, Winner, S. D. General patronage.

FARMER TAKES A WIFE, THE: Janet Gaynor, Henry Fonda—The poorest Gaynor I have ever shown, although many liked it. Very dry. Running time, 91 minutes. Played November 3.—Carmen M. Roberts, Eagle Hall Theatre, Carlin, Nev. Small town patronage.

FARMER TAKES A WIFE, THE: Janet Gaynor, Henry Fonda—Good picture to fair business. It pleased.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. General patronage.

GAY DECEPTION, THE: Francis Lederer, Frances Dee—Poor—nothing much to this one. Played October 26.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

GAY DECEPTION, THE: Francis Lederer, Frances Dee—A very clever picture. Good acting. Don't miss playing this one; it will please everyone. If Lederer would talk slower this would be perfect. Running time, 79 minutes. Played October 23.—Carmen M. Roberts, Eagle Hall Theatre, Carlin, Nov. Small town patronage.

GEORGE WHITE'S SCANDALS OF 1935: Alice Faye, Ned Sparks—This is much the best of the George White's Scandals. It has about everything to make a good evening's entertainment. Ned Sparks is a scream. Had been shown all around here, but pleased everyone who came. Plenty of comedy and is what it takes to put over a musical. Running time, 83 minutes. Played October 19-20.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

HARD ROCK HARRIGAN: George O'Brien—Fair entertainment, but not as good as previous pictures by this star.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

ORCHIDS TO YOU: John Boles, Jean Muir—Will get by; better one day than two; just didn't click. Can't tell why. Played November 30-31.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

OUR LITTLE GIRL: Shirley Temple, Joel McCrea—I feel like writing one report on the Shirley Temple pictures, i. e.: "The best they make," and that goes for all I have ever exhibited or expect to exhibit. Her pictures are all good, clean entertainment and please the patrons and that is all I ask of any picture. Joel McCrea is very good. Hope he is featured in more pictures. Running time, 65 minutes. Played October 30-21.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

SILK HAT KID: Lew Ayres, Mae Clarke—Good little program picture that done quite well at the box office. Running time, 70 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

STEAMBOAT ROUND THE BEND: Will Rogers, Anne Shirley—The biggest money getter we have played in several years. Lots of new people out to see it. Pleased very much. Running time, 90 minutes. Played November 3-5.—George E. Hall, Rose Bowl Theatre, Franklin, Neb. Small town and farming patronage.

STEAMBOAT ROUND THE BEND: Will Rogers, Anne Shirley—Absolutely the biggest box office attraction in six months. It's a wonderful picture for us small town fellows. So long, Will, you'll never die in the hearts of the Exhibitors of America. Played Sept. 29-30.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. General patronage.

$10 RAISE: Edward Everett Horton, Karen Morley—It's good, fellows. Don't be afraid of it.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. General patronage.

THIS IS THE LIFE: Jane Withers, John McGuire—Nothing big about this picture, but it is good entertainment. This is due almost entirely to the personality and acting ability of the child star, Jane Withers. With the proper handling this star can be developed to a big box office attraction, but it will be necessary for Fox to spend more money on her productions than was done with "Ginger" and "This Is The Life." This picture fitted in splendidly on a double bill. Running time, 67 minutes. Played October 27-29.—W. J. Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

THUNDER IN THE NIGHT: Edmund Lowe, Karen Morley—Just another picture. A fairly good plot, but slow in unfolding. Got by on a double bill, but audience rather restless throughout the early reels. Running time, 68 minutes. Played October 31-November 2.—W. J. Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

THUNDER MOUNTAIN: George O'Brien, Barbara Fritchie—A good western, but O'Brien has made better ones. It will please the action fans. Running time, 60 minutes.—G. W. Harttmann, Armour Theatre, North Kansas City, Mo. Small town patronage.

THUNDER MOUNTAIN: George O'Brien, Barbara Fritchie—As part of a double bill this feature outdrew any Thursday, Friday, Saturday program in months. The other feature had no drawing power, so credit must be given to the combination of a popular star and the magnet of Zane Grey's latest novel. As a picture I would class it as merely good entertainment, but as a box office attraction here it proved to be outstanding. It seems like the "old days" when the BIG (?) productions barely pay expenses and the small town exhibitor banks his profits on such stars as George O'Brien, Joe Brown and Hoot Gibson. Running time, 65 minutes. Played November 7-9.—W. J. Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

United Artists

CALL OF THE WILD, THE: Clark Gable, Loretta Young, Jack Oakie—Here is a picture made for the box office of every exhibitor everywhere. Big town, little town, all around the town, everywhere, this picture will go good and make money even where big film rental is paid. It's the one U. A. picture this year that is a real money-maker. Here's where you will make up some of the losses on higb rental pictures that did no business. Cast, story, scenery, sound, in fact everything is great in "The Call of the Wild." My advice to every exhibitor everywhere is to play this up big. Raise your prices and the people will gladly pay. It's worth a raise. My trouble was in getting the fans out of the house to make room for those standing. Fully half the people wanted to stay in and see it over twice. Boys, you have a box office wallop. Use the brains that God gave you and make yourself some money for Christmas. This picture is big.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. General patronge.

ESCAPE ME NEVER: Elisabeth Bergner—No draw for a small town. While Bergner has been acclaimed for her portrayal of tbis stage show, it is not the type that will get business in a situation like this one. No doubt but what she is great as an actress, but unknown to the average moving picture audience. The high class will go for it but there are not enough of them. British produced.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

RED SALUTE: Barbara Stanwyck, Robert Young—Good entertainment; everyone seemed to enjoy it. It was a little different than the usual picture. Good business. Played October 27-28.—W. A. Cassidy, Frolic Theatre, Midland, Mich. General patronage.

SANDERS OF THE RIVER: Paul Robeson—The second United Artists release in a row that I starved to deatb on. It isn't a bad picture, in fact it is very interesting in that it is much differently produced than our American pictures, but what help is that when no one comes to see it? Incidentally, the weather was below zero, so maybe I'm being too harsh. Played October 30-31.—Ted Stump, Elted Theatre, Absarokee, Mont. Rural patronage.

SANDERS OF THE RIVER: Paul Robeson, Nina Mae MacKinney, Leslie Banks—We have a large negro population here and they turned out to see this feature. Good photograpby, good recording and a good draw. What more can an exhibitor ask for? A mucb better picture than "Hei Tiki" which we played recently. Both are jungle pictures, but "Sanders of the River" proved the one to please the best. Played November 9.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

THUNDER IN THE EAST: Charles Boyer, Merle Oberon—Slow moving. Foreigners—not interesting. Running time, 79 minutes. Played November 6.—George E. Hall, Rose Bowl Theatre, Franklin, Neb. Small town and farming patronage.

THUNDER IN THE EAST: Merle Oberon, Charles Boyer—This is definitely not a small town picture. We enjoyed the poorest midweek attendance we have ever had and the weather was fine. I bought this special on the salesman's recommendation and "He done me wrong." The acting is fine, but none liked the picture but my wife, and she isn't a cash customer. Says I—"Skip it." Played October 23-24.—Ted Stump, Elted Theatre, Absarokee, Mont. Rural patronage.

Universal

FIGHTING YOUTH: Charles Farrell, June Martel—A very good football story. Well acted and with the old footballs stars it made a good entertaining picture. The stars were very good. Satisfied. Played November 7.—Bert Silver, New Silver Theatre, Greenville, Mich. City and country patronage.

IT HAPPENED IN NEW YORK: Lyle Talbot, Heather Angel, Gertrude Michael—An average programmer that satisfied on a doube bill with a strong feature. Meant nothing as a box-office attraction.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

NIGHT LIFE OF THE GODS: Alan Mowbray—Late in reporting on this picture, due to our delaying the play date as long as possible. It is just the picture we anticipated: an unusual story that looked swell on paper, but as a film just didn't jell. Had this Thorne Smith novel been produced as a three-reeler it would doubtless have created a small sensation, but stretched out to feature length it becomes monotonously silly. Poor audience reaction.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

RAVEN, THE: Karloff, Bela Lugosi—Pretty good horror picture. No business. Circus was in town.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

SHE GETS HER MAN: Zasu Pitts, Hugh O'Connell—This picture was made with the idea of fun. It begins like an old-fashioned slapstick comedy and ends with the impossible situation of all the gangsters giving themselves up to the police because of Esmerald's plea. The cash custtomers liked it and turned out better than average. Played October 25-26.—Ted Stump, Elted Theatre, Absarokee, Mont. Rural patronage.

THREE CONTRIBUTORS ADD THEIR REPORTS

Contributing for the first time to "What the Picture Did for Me" in this issue is

G. W. HARTTMANN, Armour Theatre, North Kansas City, Missouri.

Showmen returning to the fold as contributors this week after a long absence are

L. H. LANE, Cozy Theatre, Long Prairie, Minnesota;

D. E. FITTON, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Arkansas.

Read the reports of these exhibitors in this issue.

STRAIGHT FROM THE HEART: Mary Astor, Roger Pryor, Baby Jane—Satisfying with an especially fine performance on tbe part of Baby Jane. Played November 2.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

THREE KIDS AND A QUEEN: May Robson—Here is entertainment plus. While we hit bad weather the picture is still a knockout. Watch this little Billy Barrud, with the right type of holes the boy will go a long ways.—Russell Armentrout, Clark Theatre, Louisiana, Mo. General patronage.

Warner Bros.

ALIBI IKE: Joe E. Brown, Olivia De Havilland—A honey. Did a fine business and real entertainment. Running time, 72 minutes. Played Oct. 25-26.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

DEVIL DOGS OF THE AIR: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien—A little old but a good picture. The usual air service story. In my opinion the movie-going public is getting weary of these air stories. Planes and airplane stunts have ceased to be a novelty. Did just average business here. Played November 2.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

LITTLE BIG SHOT: Sybil Jason, Robert Armstrong—Good program picture. Will please majority. Played November 23-24.—D. E.Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

LITTLE BIG SHOT: Robert Armstrong, Sybil Jason—This child star showed excellent ability and promise, but the vehicle being a gangster picture was not liked by the very class of patrons to whom the appeal of Sybil Jason should be the greatest, namely, women and children. The picture did not draw anything more than ordinary business and the splendid acting of the star brought no comments one way or another from patrons. Running time, 72 minutes. Played October 31-November 2.—W. J. Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

LITTLE BIG SHOT: Sybil Jason, Glenda Farrell—Excellent entertainment. Little Sybil Jason steals the show and some told me they considered her better than Shirley Temple. Anyway, she can act, sing and dance—and cry. A fast moving story with gangsters, comedy and romance enought to please any audience. Glenda Farrell, in her usual hard-boiled role, is very good. Running time, 72 minutes. Played November 2-3.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

PAGE MISS GLORY: Marion Davies, Dick Powell—Marion Davies has long been one of our town's best liked picture stars. The fact that this was her first picture in about two years does not seem to have affected her popularity here. The picture drew well for three days and gave splendid satisfaction. Some of the Dick Powell fans complained that he was relegated to tbe background, but the drawing power of this feature as a Marion Davies picture was greater than that of any former Dick Powell production, in spite of the fact that he is also one of our steller attractions. Running time, 90 minutes. Played November 3-5.—W. J. Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

—Not a strong two-day picture for us. Overrated. Played October 20-21.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

ST. LOUIS KID: James Cagney, Patricia Ellis—A little old but it has what it takes, plenty action, comedy and romance plus a good title. Better than average take on this one. Played October 27.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

SPECIAL AGENT: George Brent, Bette Davis—A very good picture. The acting extra good by stars and all the cast. I call it one of the best gangster pictures we have played. Played November 5-6.—Bert Silver, New Silver Theatre, Greenville, Mich. City and country patronage.

WE'RE IN THE MONEY: Joan Blondell, Glenda Farrell—Joan Blondell and Glenda Farrell, the go-getting-gimme gals as process servers, as usual "get their man," though they have to go to sea in this one. Ross Alexander as the "poor rich boy" is good and Hugh Herbert is a scream. Good, fast moving feature that will please. Running time, 63 minutes. Played November 6-7.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

Short Features

Educational

AMATEUR NIGHT: Terry-Toon—All the Terry-Toons are good. Running time, 8 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

BIG BUSINESS: Marty May—We screened this, then returned it. Watch your step and don't let them slip you this one. Running time, 18 minutes.—George E. Hall, Rose Bowl Theatre, Franklin, Neb. Small town and farming patronage.

DORA'S DUNKING DOUGHNUTS: Shirley Temple, Andy Clyde—Andy Clyde comedy with Shirley Temple in it that can be played up for some extra business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

RADIO RASCALS: Cabin Kids—A swell filler on any program. They had an old time orchestra in it that was really good and the Cabin Kids were also crowd-pleasers. Running time, 9 minutes.—Phil Billiet, Coliseum Theatre, Annawan, Ill. Small town patronage.

STYLISH STOUTS: Tom Howard—I have always had a few laughs from Tom Howard's Comedies, but this sure misses out all the way through. Running time, 20 minutes.—G. W. Harttmann, Armour Theatre, North Kansas City, Mo. Small town patronage.

MGM

ALIBI RACKET: Crime Doesn't Pay—The second of this series and better than the first one. Running time, 21 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

BARNYARD BABIES: Happy Harmonies—One of the best of the very good colored cartoons. These cartoons are an addition to any program. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

FOUR STAR BOARDER: Charley Chase—Another Charley Chase comedy that pleased. Silly but they seemed to like it. Running time, 20 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

GOOD LITTLE MONKEYS: Happy Harmony Color Cartoon—A No. 1 short. The color is beautiful in these Metro shorts. I hope Metro will continue to make these color cartoons. Running time, 8 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

GYPSY NIGHT: Musical Revues—A colored musical. Only fair rating. Running time, 18 minutes.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

NURSE TO YOU: Charley Chase—Fair Charley Chase comedy. Running time, 20 minutes.—Charles C. Cassinelli, Wyoming Theatre, Mullens, W. Va. Small town patronage.

OKAY TOOTS: Charley Chase—Good. Well received. Running time, 17 minutes.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

POKER AT EIGHT: Charley Chase—Plenty good for any day in the week. Running time, 2 reels.—B. A. McConnell, Emerson Theatre, Hartford, Ark. Small town patronage.

SING, SISTER, SING!: Todd and Kelly—Only fair. Below their regular standard. Running time, 21 minutes.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

THICKER THAN WATER: Laurel and Hardy—Not funny. Merely silly. Running time, two reels.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

Paramount

I WISHED ON THE MOON: Abe Lyman and his Orchestra—Very good. Running time, 7 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

JUNGLE WATERS: Grantland Rice Sportlight—Very good reel of its kind. Running time, 9 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

RKO Radio

GOING ON TWO: Dionne Quintuplets—A very interesting subject that if billed properly will get some extra money.—G. W. Harttmann, Armour Theatre, North Kansas City, Mo. Small town patronage.

GOING ON TWO: Dionne Quintuplets—A real interesting subject and well received. Running time, 17 minutes.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

MARCH OF TIME: No. 5—Another short that costs plenty and should not be played on same program with a newsreel; I have to play them that way. Too much footage given to each subject taken up. The music used is very good, but I wouldn't buy if I had it to do over again.—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House, Kasson, Minn. Agricultural patronage.

MARCH OF TIME: No. 5—Unless these subjects are played night after release, they lose their "timeness." Very interesting.—Charles C. Cassinelli, Wyoming Theatre, Mullens, W. Va. Small town patronage.

United Artists

GOLDEN TOUCH, THE: Silly Symphony—Very good, but too expensive for a small town. They don't seem to draw any extra business.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

TORTOISE AND THE HARE, THE: Silly Symphony—Very good. Running time, 7 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

Vitaphone

BUDDY OF THE LEGION: Looney Tunes Series—Used this one to open the show, and it brought plenty of laughs. Might say that it is just a little above par. Running time, 7 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Recreational Director, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

DIZZY AND DAFFY: Dizzy and Daffy Dean—Dizzy is right. This so-called comedy was Daffy and the audience and I were Dizzy at the finish. Very, very punk. Running time, 20 minutes.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

REMEMBER THE MAINE: See America First. E. N. Newman, series—This is the poorest one of this series. The old shots are so very poor they spoil the effect of the entire reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

ROMANCE OF THE WEST: Broadway Brevities—More entertainment in this one than in a lot of the features. A plane load of tourists, stranded in the Rockies, put on an entertainment of riding, roping and dancing, combined with beautiful scenery in technicolor. Advertise this one like a feature. It can't help but please. Running time, two reels.—Glayds E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

SHOESTRING FOLLIES: Broadway Brevities—An outstanding musical short featuring Eddie Peabody. A very clever dance number, but Eddie Peabody and his banjo are the highlights. Running time, two reels.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

WHAT'S THE IDEA?: Pepper Pot—Lew Pollack's song hits in a specialty that is extra good. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

Miscellaneous

LOUIS-BAER FIGHT PICTURES: Drew extra big. Good plain pictures. Comments very good. Running time, 20 minutes.—George E. Hall, Rose Bowl Theatre, Franklin, Neb. Small town and farming patronage.

Serials

Mascot

MYSTERY MOUNTAIN: Ken Maynard, Verna Hillie—Just finished the last chapter of "Mystery Mountain" and consider it the most satisfactory serial I ever exhibited. Brought them back each week and pleased. Running time, 20 minutes each chapter.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebannon, Kan. Small town patronage.

THEATRE RECEIPTS

The total of the theatre receipts for the calendar week ended November 16, 1935, from 110 theatres in 18 major cities of the country reached $1,182,400, an increase of $118,890 from the total of the preceding week ended November 9, 1935, when 110 theatres in 18 major cities aggregated $1,063,510.

NEWS NOTES FROM CHICAGO SECTOR

A CHANGE in plans brings the meeting of Paramount's district managers to Chicago for three days starting December 1st. The film men will conduct their meetings at the Edgewater Beach hotel for the Sunday, Monday and Tuesday session, which will see the forming of their sales plans for next season.

Those from New York who will attend the meeting will include John E. Otterson, George J. Schaefer and Neil Agnew. Many of the latest Paramount pictures will be screened.

The meeting originally was scheduled for Hollywood.

"In Old Kentucky," the only unreleased Will Rogers picture, will get its first showing at the Chicago this week. Following this "So Red the Rose" will be the attraction, opening on November 29th. Then will come the Bing Crosby film, "Two for Tonight," to be shown with Libby Holman doing a personal appearance on the stage.

William Howard, RKO vaudeville booker, is due from New York this weekend to look over some Chicago vaudeville units. He will be here several days.

Sam Morris, all aglow with a broad smile and a sun tan, is back from three weeks of Hollywooding. Sam, motion picture editor of the American, will now be in a position to enlighten his readers with true stories about "My Adventures in the Cinema City." During his absence Maxine Smith, the beautiful blonde typewriter tickler, handled the movie page—and did a swell job.

Clifford Niles, veteran theatre manager of Anamosa, Iowa, was one of the many who listened to the Iowa-Purdue game over the air. Niles is a rabid Iowa fan and the game didn't go to suit him. But he's a good loser and says, "Wait until next time." "Cliff" reports that business at Anamosa is very good despite the fact that one-third of the town's population is in the hoosegow. (The state reformatory is at Anamosa.)

A most friendly gesture, that came as a complete surprise, was made through Walter Immerman, general manager of Balaban & Katz theatres, to the B & K Employees Club. It was the announcement that all receipts from the 10 cent service charge on passes at the B & K theatres would be turned over to the club treasury for that organizations activities. This amounts to about $5,000 a year.

The Devon, which jumped to the "C" week class, also showed a marked improvement at the box-office.

Business at the Essaness Sheridan which adopted a "B" week policy, is the biggest the house has had in years. "Dark Angel" was the first picture shown under the new arrangement. Two cashiers were hardly able to handle the weekend crowds and on Sunday night many customers had to be turned away.

The B & K Employees Club will hold a "Midnight Mix" at the Roosevelt theatre November 25th. A special showing of "A Night at the Opera," the latest Marx Brothers picture, has been arranged, and there will be a $50 Screeno, a $25 Banknight and a special $25 door prize.

LeRoy Morris of the Harding theatre and Alma Hale plan to get married on December 14th.

An item in the issue of November 2 said that "Sol Lesser's latest Tarzan serial starring Herman Brix had been booked into the Essaness houses." The latest Tarzan serial with Herman Brix is a Burroughs-Tarzan picture.

House managers and their assistants have been named for the Avon and Town theatres being opened by Essaness. At the Avon Dick Zeller is manager and Jack Conway his assistant. At the Town Carl Levine is in charge and Herbert Rapley has the assistant's job. Both houses opened with a huge fanfare created by Herb "Blurb" Ellisburg.

Given a special advertising campaign, "Peter Ibbetson" proved a strong draw at the Chicago this week and grossed well up in the money class.

Members of the Chicago Amusement Publicists Association and other theatrical persons are much elated over the plans now in formation for the Christmas charity activities which CAPA is sponsoring. Local theatremen are back of the proposition a hundred per cent.

Not even Ripley knows about J. Victor Scholefield, Jr., Chicago postal employee, and his hand-colored print of Edison's "The Great Train Robbery," stellar item in a phenomenal collection of rare films, hoary with tradition, eloquent of the industry's fitful beginnings. Scholefield just goes on adding to the collection, selling off a portion of it occasionally, as when Paramount bought a large amount for its "Screen Souvenirs," tracking down and acquiring a split-reel here, a shot there, piecing out a library of antiques fit for Smithsonian attention. The prize item, discovered in a collection passed on to Scholefield by an earlier collector on departing this mortal coil, is without known origin, the memory of man recalling no colored edition of an ancient classic. Or do you happen to know where it came from?

J. S. Markstein made a flying trip to San Francisco on business. He expects to be gone about a week.

Jimmie Savage, T. L. Regelin and S. Goldfinger of the B & K circuit were homeward bound the other dawning after putting "Balabanter," the club's newspaper, "to bed," when a bomb exploded behind them. Masonry, glass and shrapnel broke around them but they escaped with a few injuries. A "gambling war" was given by police as the cause of the blast which occurred in the loop district near Wabash avenue and Lake street.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

WORKS BOTH WAYS

It's perfectly all right to say that the best way for ambitious youth to learn the technique of theatre operation is to start as usher or doorman. Sound advice it is for the best part and proven so by the many executives in responsible theatre posts today who started their theatre careers "on an aisle." But unless your beginner is given a break when the break occurs, unless he is encouraged to do his durndest, then his job is just a job and there's no need of looking in that direction for a lot of enthusiasm or cooperation.

All of which is suggested by Dan Krendel's enlightening article "Keep Your Staff Happy," on a following page, and in which the manager of the Famous Players-Canadian Tivoli Theatre, in Toronto, points out a number of things.

Whether or not a manager is personally interested in making his personnel happy, it is obvious that a contented staff keeps the machinery of house operation moving effortlessly and the ease with which the staff functions has much to do in determining the theatreman's standing with his home office. And another check-up in this direction may be made by the number of promotions from the personnel of any one house for as Krendel says, "just as much credit attaches to the manager who makes it possible for his boys to get ahead as to the lads good enough to make the grade."

It certainly is to be assumed that a manager's prestige increases when members of his house staff are selected for bigger jobs. The smart theatreman knows that by aiding the advancement of these lesser members he is doing nothing to retard his own progress.

And as the above is being written comes a news flash from Boston reporting a service contest among the 35 ushers at the de luxe Metropolitan Theatre, the prize a three-day trip to New York with all expense paid. Personal appearance, initiative, etc., are being carefully rated weekly, according to Jack O'Brien, assistant manager in charge of service who is putting on the contest under the sponsorship of Manager E. A. Smith.

THEY'RE AT 'EM AGAIN

Besides being the month of football upsets, Thanksgiving and flu germs, this November is also to be distinguished for what we now dub "Sock-the-Film-Publicist Fall Festival".

Snappy title, eh, what? We like it, too, and the reason whereof is the frying given the pore, ole press agent by Alice Hughes, of the New York American at a recent AMPA meeting. Miss Hughes indicted the boys on many counts, the main charge being lack of initiative. "Editors," said the well-known merchandise columnist, "have to make suggestions that should originate with the film companies before a real live publicity angle is developed."

Lady, pu-leeze.

Miss Hughes further cited the case of a woman publicist on a distillery account who snuck over new fashion colors named after two of the company's brands of likker. It also seems the film laddies have no eye for color.

Well, at the risk of incurring Miss Hughes' displeasure by quoting statistics, in 1935 over 450 features will be released and publicized in the papers. Most of these releases star or feature two players—oftimes more; thus, on a bare minimum, publicists will turn out considerably more than 1,000 stories of general interest. This figure does not include general exploitation ideas, art stuff, features, etc., for which the publicity men are also held accountable.

Considering the general situation, we are amazed that the film publicity men manage to strike so handsome an average in turning out ideas that click. It is our opinion they roll up a figure to compare more than favorably with the results obtained by more favorably situated publicists in other lines of endeavor.

There is too much of an eagerness by advertising people to take a poke at motion picture publicity. It should be remembered that many sales promotion ideas now bringing big returns to merchandisers were conceived and developed in the same picture business.

THAT'S SURE ENOUGH COLOR

Following right on the heels of our plaint last week on the absence of color in current exploitation, comes a report from Round Tabler George Tyson, skipper of the Harris-Alvin, in Pittsburgh, on the idea put over with John Harris, of landing Mayor McNair for a week's date as M.C., the stunt covered by the newsreels, a national broadcast and other sock slants.

It's color indeed, and applied with broad and vigorous strokes. More exploitation "painting" of this sort is by all means in order.

Porto Rico Premieres All-Disney Color Show

What is announced as a world premiere is the All-Disney unit show at the Paramount, San Juan, Porto Rico, on Nov. 25, wherein under the Spanish title of "El Gran Desfile de Walt Disney" (Walt Disney's Big Parade) eight of the all-color shorts are to be shown on one program. Special publicity and advertising has been prepared by Sam Cohen, U. A. foreign publicity manager.

Opening is being arranged by Ramos Cobian, United Artists' Porto Rico theatre head in cooperation with J. S. Barkey, branch manager. Governor Winship and staff, leading socialites and civic figures, are to be invited and many tieups, contests and stunts are planned.

Dempsey Hosts James Melton

On the eve of the opening of his first motion picture, "Stars Over Broadway," at the New York Strand, Warners arranged a supper at Jack Dempsey's in honor of James Melton with a representative gathering of metropolitan big names in attendance. Party was plugged well ahead at the restaurant and also in the newspapers.

Travel agencies and Postal plugged the date in special windows with number of merchandising tieups and newspaper co-op ads obtained. Local celebrities also attended the opening.

"Marx Brothers" Appear At Local Concert

To indicate how completely screwy the campaign was on "Night at the Opera" at the Century, Baltimore, Loew's City Manager, William Saxton, sends along tear sheet on what most popular columnist had to say say on some of the gags.

Top stunt was appearance at local Lawrence Tibbett concert of three stooges dressed a la Marx, who made their unexpected appearance in a box and applauded loudly. They then dashed madly up and down the aisles comporting themselves generally in the manner made famous by the brothers.

Rest of the campaign was in keeping, including a stunt for a gag set of auto license tags issued by the State Commissioner of Motor Vehicles.

Rosy's Heavy Eater Does Stuff on "Jim"

Obviously, men with the build and the appetite of the late "Diamond Jim" are not to be picked up for the asking, and thus Manager Morris Rosenthal not only got his papers to advertise for the double but to plug the find—when he was located—in institutional ads as a buildup for the classified page draw.

The double performed a number of different duties to help put over the date at the Lew Majestic, Bridgeport, Conn., among the most pleasing, to him, no doubt, being the consumption of a "mammoth meal" arranged for by Rosy at a towntown restaurant (see photo). Week ahead the meal was shown at a window display with public invited to witness the stunt.

The local "Jim" also gave away novelty imitation diamond pins and with a local "Lillian Russell" in costume rode a bannered tandem bike two days ahead. The couple also bally'd with a 1905 model car and otherwise made themselves conspicuous.

Jewelry stuff included free ring given away in letter contest by prominent jeweler, display of original diamond Jim locomotive set of jewels, and entire staff decorated with imitation diamond rings and other phony "ice."

Special sales were arranged by five-and-tens, with diamond-shaped cards advertising Diamond Sales and windows carrying out the general idea. Western Union jumbo blanks were used, auto parking tags imprinted and laundry stuffers imprinted, orange drink and orange tieups made with drug stores and markets.

Newsboy parade to theatre and 50 boys on bannered bicycles made the downtown district on opening day, prominent windows planted, free admissions offered to those appearing at theatre in gay 90's costumes were other clickers that helped bring 'em in on this engagement.

Mystery Man Sells "Drood"

W. Hinks of the Alex Theatre, Paisley, Scotland, exploiting "Mystery of Edwin Drood," sent mystery men roaming about town, local newspaper printing picture and description of men. People carrying copy of the newspaper and tapping men on shoulder received passes. Store windows, heralds and posters around town also carried announcements and description of the mystery men.

3-Way Ticket Sale Tops Goldberg Drive

Philadelphia newspapers were more than generous, exploitation angles were not overlooked, but Harry Goldberg, Philadelphia Warner Theatres' zone publicist, credits the advance of nearly 14,000 tickets on Warners' "Dream" at the Chestnut Street Opera House to direct sales made through three different sources. These were through individual theatre managers to patrons and friends, tickets sold in schools and colleges, with officials handling sales.

Goldberg inaugurated his managers' campaign with a series of speeches at district meetings, stressing the highlight angles of the production. Cash prizes were given managers selling most tickets, with a cup to the district manager.

Managers were supplied with "Dream" trailer, lobby display and order blanks, and further aided the campaign by making contacts as neighborhood schools or clubs where Goldberg would speak on the picture. This was done in the face of any fears that such cooperation would commercialize the schools and in every instance the heads of English departments were prevailed upon to handle the school sale of tickets. Bulletin boards were posted, announcements made by teachers in classes, in some instances students were allowed a half-day off to see the picture and given credits for same in English courses.

Women's clubs were also called upon, with Goldberg arranging for the appointment of one clubwoman in each of the surrounding counties to write to every key woman in that county to promote the ticket sale through the local Warner theatre. The clubs also helped in arranging speaking dates for the Warner publicist.

Every railroad contacting Philadelphia aided with distribution of heralds, posting window cards in suburban and city stations, etc. Libraries cooperated with distribution of literature and card displays and a neat street bally was a traveling box-office with two girls in costume distributing heralds and application blanks at traffic points.

Prominent department store costume windows were also obtained, and among the many other excellent hookups was a "man on the street" broadcast (see photo) where passersby were interrogated on whether the plays of Shakespeare would be as successful on screen as on stage.

Jules Seltzer, Harry's assistant, is credited with cooperation in the campaign and for his efforts has been awarded a Bronze Citation certificate.

WINNERS FOR OCTOBER

It's Rosenthal, of Loew's, and Goldberg, of Warners, who, as announced last week, finished up front in the Quigley October competitions. Morris Rosenthal, manager of the Majestic, Bridgeport, Conn., won the Silver on Universal's "Diamond Jim," and Harry Goldberg the Bronze, for his effective campaign on Warners' "Dream" at the Chestnut Street Opera House, Philadelphia.

Editor and Critic Praise "Rendezvous" Ads

From Sam Gilman, manager, Loew's Regent, Harrisburg, Pa., a report on a visit from editor and motion picture critic of local daily in which various advertisings were discussed. Among these were the national ads on MGM's "Rendezvous" which the newspaper folk, according to Sam, said were highly novel and very clever.

Same reaction was heard from local merchants, who also gave the campaign some extra bows.

Shellman Takes Newsreel Shots of Newspaper Office

A novel stunt was engineerer by Myron Shellman, Raymond Theatre, Passadena, Cal., by having members of the staff of local daily enact a few busy moments in a newspaper office for benefit of motion picture camera. Film ran about three minutes and was shown once an evening during week. Latest telegraphic news dispatches direct from press bureaus of the world were read, items being furnished from paper's teletype system. Gag, naturally, rated stories in paper.

Another tieup effected by Myron was free kiddie show staged with cooperation of department store. Coupons were run in daily, which if clipped and presented at store entitled kids to free show admission provided they brought an adult along. In connection with kid child patronage, Shellman gives away scratch pads, first sheet of which carries a matinee record card which is signed each week by manager. When a child attends five weeks in succession he is entitled to one free admission.

Dance Instructor Does Piccolino for Grady

Residents of Lubbock, Texas, had a first hand opportunity to learn the Piccolino when Hal Grady, at the Palace Theatre, promoted local dancing teacher and one of his ace pupils to perform on stage in connection with "Top Hat" engagement. School carried theatre copy in ads.

All ushers wore top hats and badges with copy, four-foot block letters spelling out title were planted at curb in front of theatre and for his classified ad tieup Hal ran a "True or False" contest, listing 10 questions on current events, with tickets going to those answering the list correctly.

Plane flying over city dropped toy parachutes containing ducats and heralds, plane gaily painted with title. Making further use of the cutout letters in front of house, Hal had six boys, each carrying a letter in jumbled fashion parade through the streets. At crowded corners the boys would stop, arrange themselves in proper order and march on their way.

Louie Presents Winning Jockey With "Hot Tip" Cup

Plastering the paddocks, stables, grandstand and club house with notices, Louie Charninsky, Capitol Theatre, Dallas, Tex., let it be known that he would present a loving cup to jockey winning the fourth or seventh race, which for his purpose was dubbed "Hot Tip."

Leading jockeys were invited to theatre as Louie's guests at which time head of the race track commission presented the winner with cup donated by Louie. Papers gave stunt nice break.

Philly Ball Team Aids George on "Alibi Ike"

Contacting George Blaeholder of the Philadelphia Athletics, Doug George, Warner's Parker Theatre, Darby, Pa., for "Alibi Ike" promoted him together with some of the other players for a personal appearance and talk to the kids on baseball. They also gave away autographed balls and bats promoted from sporting goods store. Accompanying photo shows ushers dressed in uniforms and easel announcing the giveaways. Heralds on appearance of players were distributed in schools by teachers, permission having been secured from supervisor.

Lions Club cooperated in entertaining orphan kids, stunt breaking daily and weekly papers. Parade of Lions Club bannered cars from orphanage led by police escort and high school band marched to theatre where band obliged with selections on stage.

Paper Cameraman Snaps 'Em At "Dark Angel" Opening

Julia Smith, State Theatre, Waterbury, Conn., effected tieup with local daily for "Dark Angel" whereby staff cameraman snapped photos of crowds at opening. Pictures were run in paper following day with cash prizes awarded those identifying themselves.

Numerous window displays were promoted, co-op ads arranged with department store and jewelry shop featured star photo in ads.

Tohill Has Cops Guard "Jim" Jewelry Window

D. Tohill, Gladmer Theatre, Lansing, Mich., called for armed guards to be stationed in front of jewelry store window containing replicas of "Diamond Jim" gems. The precious stones were delivered in bannered express truck preceded by police escort and newspapers sent their photographers to cover event.

Another highlight of Tohill's campaign was a costume dance held in leading ballroom and for street bally Diamond Jim and Lillian Russell impersonators paraded town in bannered early vintage car and then attended the ball.

Manager Cook Shot Works on "Agent"

An admitted old one that worked for Earl Cook at the Warner Theatre, San Pedro, Cal., was distribution of flyers with "Warner theatre manager shot" in bold type and followed by "the works on," etc., etc., for his "Special Agent" engagement.

On "We're in the Money" Earl handed out phoney money with cut of Blondell in center and copy reading not worth a dime, but good for a thousand laffs.

Cost Promotes Posies For "Orchids to You"

For "Orchids to You" Frank L. Cost, Variety Theatre, Cleveland, Ohio, arranged a tieup with florist in exchange for trailer credit whereby every lady attending show received a rose. Florist also donated lobby display of posies (see photo) which were later sent to hospitals as announced on card in lobby and store window.

$500.00 A SEAT

- Is there anyone in Memphis willing to spend Five Hundred Dollars for an evening's entertainment . . . with the money to go to a very commendable charity?
- The Warner Theater will present, for that amount, a private preview of the year's tops in pictures, "Shipmates Forever," for the exclusive delectation of any individual who would be humored by an advance showing IN SOLITUDE—The Five Hundred Dollars to go to the Memphis Community Fund.
- Only one person will be thus accommodated, and for but one performance. This person, however, might bring as his or her guest one other person . . . and one only.
- $500.00 for ONE SEAT—and "Shipmates Forever" is yours alone for one performance. . . . Dick Powell, Ruby Keeler, Lewis Stone in a whirl of mirth, melody and middies in the navy's "Flirtation Walk."

"KEEP YOUR STAFF HAPPY"

Ushers Are Theatre's Potential Executives, Says Canadian; "Pat On the Back" Treatment Urged

by DAN KRENDEL

Manager, Tivoli, Toronto, Canada

Much has been written in these pages regarding the theatre staff as an active ticket-selling agency. Showmen unanimously agree that the greatest advertisement for attraction and theatre is a well pleased patron. Much has been done in recent years to perfect the machinery which guarantees this customer-happiness from the moment he is greeted by the cashier until he is led to his seat by an alert usher who is the last word in smiling efficiency. Chalk up another happy patron for the usher . . . his job is done . . . his responsibility ends right there, and he returns for his next assignment.

In the course of a day this same usher personally greets hundreds of customers possessed of as many individual personalities. He adapts himself to the mood of each incoming patron. The patron is happy . . . the manager is happy . . . Home Office says SWELL. But, how about the usher? How about the manager's responsibility to this invaluable contact man? Does it end each week with the handing over of the pay envelope?

Ushers Potential Executives

Does the manager ever stop to think of his 10-dollar-a-week usher as a potential theatre executive? How simple a matter it is, and how much it means to these youngsters to get a pat on the back once in a while. A handshake and a few moments' chat to show them that they're being watched, that their response to the training they are receiving is being constantly checked—with a view to advancing them as rapidly as their capabilities permit, taking into consideration, of course, the powers of absorption of the individual organization concerned.

We mustn't forget that to these youngsters the manager is pretty much of a "big shot"—THE BOSS. They may kid around with the assistant, the treasurer or the chief of staff, but THE BOSS is a power unto himself. They daren't, in some instances, advance even a complimentary remark to him unless he notices them and speaks first. In some instances I have even known the manager to be entirely ignorant of the names and personalities comprising his staff.

Of course, some may advance the old theory of familiarity—that the only way to maintain one's dignity and the staff's respect is to act BIG. Perhaps so, but I for one have derived much more satisfaction out of knowing each individual member of my staff personally—and incidentally—the amount of work I can get done, without demanding it, is certainly a revelation.

I am happy in the knowledge that during the past 12 months my head usher was selected to take over the assistant managership of an important suburban operation. Recently my assistant officially took over the active management of a newly opened house in the city. My present head usher steps into the assistant's berth on several months' probation, and a lad off the floor assumes the duties of chief usher. Can anyone help but visualize the exhilaration of the rest of the staff at these promotions from within? Wild horses can't hold them back now. They feel they're alive, doing a man-sized job which may in turn elevate them to positions of trust and responsibility. They are no longer ushers, but important executives whose current assignment happens to be the personal care of every patron who enters this establishment. And they're doing a real job. They're happy in the knowledge that their job is now a means to an end, and I'm happy to see the harmony and cooperation which means so much to the prestige of a first-class service staff.

One of the greatest executives in this industry not so long ago remarked that he had a chance to take over a new circuit, but was afraid to tackle it because of the alarming shortage of manpower. What better guarantee is there against a recurrence of such a complaint, and what better way to show our loyalty to our chiefs than the very careful selection of personnel, and the personal training of each individual member to assure, when the call came, positions of trust, with an even chance, at least, of making good.

Keep your staff happy. Show them that you're just as human as they are and you will derive more than ordinary satisfaction out of watching your organization grow.

THINKS JUNIOR MEMBER COMING INTO HIS OWN

In his introduction to the above article "Keep Your Staff Happy," Dan Krendel stresses the importance of careful selection and personal training by the manager of all personnel. He thinks the junior members of theatre staffs are at last coming into their own in this business, which he calls, essentially a young man's.

Just as much credit attaches to the manager who makes it possible for his boys to get ahead as to the lads good enough to make the grade, adds Dan.

Morgan Gets Out Own Newspaper on "Love Me"

Contacting prominent merchants in his town, Jeff Morgan, Rylander Theatre, Americus, Ga., sold them enough ads to get out his own four page newspaper on "Love Me Forever." To further insure the paper being read it was gotten out in extra form with "RYLANDER MANAGER SHOT the works" across the top in bold type. Newsies cried "wuxtry" as they distributed the tabloids. Entire front page was devoted to theatre and picture copy with various scene stills, and cut of Morgan who was supposedly "shot."

Stump's Social Movie Club Gets Underway

Some time ago, we detailed in these pages an account of Ted Stump's social movie club organized by him at the Elted Theatre, Absarokee, Mont., comprised of fifty local married couples who would gather at the theatre every third Tuesday. Ted now forwards us details of his first meeting which was called a "hard times party." Members of the club came dressed in their oldest clothes, prizes were awarded for best costumes and those not "dressing" were assessed ten cents which went into the Club's coffers. Picture shown in conjunction with party was "Virgins of Bali" and Ted reports the first show a complete success.

For the benefit of those who may not have read of this member's club activities as detailed in issue Sept. 28th, briefly he advertised for 50 couples to pay $10 in advance for ten meetings to cover regular admissions and cost of lunch. Each member has the privilege of bringing another couple at an extra charge of one dollar and a picture, chosen by the members, is shown followed by a party and repast. These meetings are held every third week on a night when his house would otherwise be dark.

"SO RED THE ROSE" OPENINGS

Southerners Sponsor Smash Campaigns; Exploitation Features From Various Openings Detailed

Southern showmen went back to first principles on the night of November 14, when Southern key cities, capitals of the original Confederate States, opened Paramount's "So Red the Rose" in a blaze of old-fashioned showmanship.

Atlanta's Big Campaign

Atlanta's five thousand seat de luxe Fox Theatre, piloted by E. E. Whitaker, turned the premiere into a statewide civic event with Governor and Mrs. Eugene Talmadge as honored guests (see photo), as well as many other city and state celebrities present.

House front was bathed in rose glow of sun arcs mounted on trucks in street outside. Bunting covered exterior of house and hung from marquee, Confederate flags mingling with Old Glory and the official flags of the states. A box-office public address system kept the sidewalk throngs apprised of the celebrities coming in; newsreel cameras took sound reels of the opening; the Georgia Military Band played outside, and the entire street area within several blocks of the theatre was lighted by red flares.

Whitaker lined up all agencies on plea of importance of film to the South, winning alliance from such organizations as the United Daughters of the Confederacy, Washington Seminary girls who acted as ushers dressed in crinolines of the period, city officialdom and merchants of Atlanta. A feature that aroused much comment was the screening immediately after "So Red the Rose" of the newsreel taken of the crowd.

One of Whitaker's high spots was an atmospheric prologue simulating opening scene of picture on plantation, with local people playing parts, Governor Talmadge speaking and organ playing "Swanee" as the first scene of the picture hit the screen.

Richmond Civic Celebration

Richmond, Va., through A. L. Nowitsky, manager of the Colonial Theatre, put over a spectacular premiere, also along civic celebration lines. Nowitsky started with an advance exploitation campaign that included an eight-page special "Salute" supplement of co-op advertising in a Richmond daily, and radio spot broadcasts, one of them featuring Mrs. Harrison, prominent social leader, who announced a 200-word plug several times a day for two days prior to opening.

A party of Washington newspaper men made the trip to Richmond to catch the premiere on the basis of the buildup given the picture in this Southern city.

Gala Columbia Campaign

Warren Irwin's campaign at the Carolina Theatre, Columbia, South Carolina, was in his own words "a gala world premiere" that made this Dixie city take notice. Intensive work on the sectional feeling of the state brought prominent elements into play to sponsor and attend the premiere.

Governor and Mrs. Olin D. Johnston of South Carolina, Commander of Southern Veterans General Yarborough and staff, and many other dignitaries lent support to opening and attended. Others were the presidents of the Chamber of Commerce and the Merchants' Association.

As in the case of most of the other premiere openings, a special atmospheric backdrop and set illuminating the scene of "So Red the Rose" was built for the lobby (see photo), and later for the stage itself.

Raleigh Used Radio

At the State Theatre, Raleigh, N. C., Manager W. G. Enloe promoted a special lobby broadcast over WPTF, Raleigh station, at which celebrities attending were introduced and said a few words. He also had an advance cooperative broadcast, the time for which was pro-rated among a group of old Raleigh merchants, much in the same way as cooperative newspaper advertising tieups are arranged.

Tallahassee's Campaign

Florida's place in this showman's parade of Southern premieres of "So Red the Rose" was occupied by the historic capital city of Tallahassee, where A. P. Talley, manager, and Mr. Neel, assistant manager and publicity director, put over a bang-up premiere showing. Starting with a strong advance campaign which lined up the United Daughters of the Confederacy solidly behind the picture, Talley and Neel went after and secured the interest and cooperation of the State's officialdom.

Opening night broadcast was promoted over WTAL, broadcasting proceedings from the lobby. Posting of 24-sheets, a host of windows trading on the Southern spirit of the community, and distribution of heralds, brought results.

Nashville's Unique Prologue

Charles H. Amos, of the Paramount Theatre, Nashville, Tenn., ran announcement trailers two weeks in advance, and the special Paramount trailer week in advance. He also staged a prologue for the trailer showing a week in advance, using a cameo effect of roses framing a girl in Civil War dress, flanked by a man in Confederate uniform on each side. To organ accompaniment the girl sang a Dixie medley, stepping out and offstage on final note, while the men gave a Confederate salute. Red rosebud slide filled screen as large Confederate flag was also projected, after which the trailer was faded into the bright rosebud on the screen.

For the opening, Amos gained the cooperation of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, which organization acted as reception and invitation committee. Nashville officialdom, Confederate veteran leaders, society people, and the Governor of Tennessee and his staff accepted. A unique stunt was to have all invitations delivered in Nashville by a man dressed in Confederate uniform and traveling on horseback.

Amos got good newspaper publicity out of laying a wreath at the Confederate monument in the presence of the Governor. He also had a uniformed street parade on opening day, with a 50-piece band promoted to head the procession.

YOU ARE INVITED TO JOIN UP

H. PAUL FASSHAUER
is assistant to Charlie Carroll at the Victoria Theatre, Ossining, N. Y., and it was our pleasure to meet Paul personally when he came down to Club headquarters to bring in a campaign. We wish all our new members could join up that way, and come in again to see us. We are counting on you and Charlie sending along some further accounts of your doings at the Victoria.

joins us as manager of the Huntington Station Theatre, Huntington Station, L. I., and we are indeed grateful for all the nice things he says about the club. Here's hoping you will let us know what you are doing at your house so that we may in turn publicize your efforts that other members may take advantage of them.

is the proprietor of the Regal Talkies, Jubbulpore, C. P., British India, and we are always glad to welcome overseas members. Magan's father was in showbusiness first and the Regal was the first in the province to install sound. The small town depends on military patronage mostly and has three changes a week.

is assistant to Louis Gianazza at the Forum Theatre, Bronx, N. Y., who recommends him highly. Max started as usher at the Paramount Theatre, N. Y. C., then chief of service at the New York Rialto until he assumed his present assignment with Consolidated Amusement Enterprises.

acts as assistant to Charles Abercrombie at the Capitol Theatre, Danville, Va., coming, as he puts it, "by way of some of the finest men in the business." Curtis worked under Warren Irvin in Charlotte, N. C.; Richard Spier of Fox West Coast in San Francisco, and then his last job was assistant at the Paramount in Lynchburg.

manages the Logan Theatre, Logan, Ohio, having been assistant to Mike Chakeres at the State in Springfield, until his present promotion. Dick says he's read our pages for some time and finds them very helpful; well, you've got to help the other fellow, too, you know, by sending along your own material.

manager of the Grandin in Roanoke, Va., started as doorman at the Warwick, Newport News, later promoted to manager of that house and since then has been connected with all five of the Wilder theatres in Virginia. Harry has been in his present assignment for the past four years and has had plenty of experience in first and subsequent run exhibition. However, while Valentine likes second run, his real kick comes from the first runs, he claims.

RUSSELL HARDWICK
manager of the Lyceum and Mesa Theatres in Clovis, New Mexico, believe it or not, has only just joined the club; thought he'd done so before. We don't have to ask him to be an active contributor, he's one of our old standbys and tells us he has a complete file of the Herald in his office since 1909.

is another active contributor who scarcely needs an introduction because of his frequent activities being publicized in our pages. However, Seymour manages the Colonia Theatre in Norwich, N. Y., and we must bid him welcome via this page as we do all our other good friends.

assistant manager of the Culver Theatre, Brooklyn, comes very well recommended by his superior, George Littman. Between the manager and assistant joining up 100 per cent strong we ought to be kept in touch with doings at the Culver.

manages the Skouras Astoria Grand Theatre, Astoria, N. Y., and has had a mighty interesting career; starting at the age of 13, Dave, who was born in Germany, was the youngest lion trainer in the world. He later was injured at the Pan-American Exposition in Buffalo and went into the less hazardous business of theatre management. He joined Herring-Blumenthal as publicity director, later joined Warners, doing exploitation, and last year went to his present assignment.

is assistant manager of the De Luxe Theatre in New York City, having started in show business working for his brother, who is managing the Roosevelt Theatre in Gary, Ind. Teddy later came on to this city, worked in George Ritch's division and we now find him at a neighborhood house where he promises he'll keep in touch.

acts as assistant manager of the Astoria Grand in Astoria, L. I. Ted Rodis proposes him for membership and promises he'll be an active one. Well, we bid you welcome and since your theatre is no stranger to these pages we shall look for additional material from you.

manages the Edwards Theatre in Myerstown, Pa., and is the first member to join the club from that town. It's going to be up to you, "J. D.," to keep us informed as to what's what down your way; can we count on you for this cooperation?

starts his membership off with the proper spirit, having already contributed to these pages from Holyoke, Mass., where he manages the Strand Theatre. We've plenty of other friends in your town, Fred; let's get together and have some lively competition.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Running times are those supplied by the companies. Asterisk indicates running time as made known by West Coast studio before announcement by home office in New York. Variations also may be due to local censorship deletions. Dates are 1935, unless otherwise specified. Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1935-36 season.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

Vol. 121, No. 9 — November 30, 1935

FACTS WANTED

CONSIDERING in sympathy the problems of vendors of some overseas product, Mr. Red Kann, in a recent issue of Motion Picture Daily, ventures to give voice to a line that has been heard from distributors before, including the familiar phrases "exhibitor lethargy" . . . "setting himself up as supreme arbiter of the public's likes and dislikes" . . . "lacking the daring to foray into fields that are new" . . . "lazily depending on names that are known but do not always draw" . . . "too much disregard of the freshness in players, in treatment and in style which non-Hollywood product is quite apt to embrace."

All this really means that the exhibitor, like everybody else in this and other industries, is cautious enough to stay by known values until he has been sold to the point of action the prospective value of departures. The retailer finds there is speculation a-plenty to be encountered in dealing with product that he knows something about.

And how the exhibitor does want to know about it! There is no "lethargy" reflected in his demanding approach to the product information presented in Motion Picture Herald. There is no evidence that the exhibitor gives a hoot whether the product is made in Hollywood, New York, Elstree or Hongkong. It is inevitable, however, that he should have an impression based on experience, of probabilities, of averages. He would in general prefer more diversity of sources, but he is not to be pushed into experimentation with the unknown.

For the overwhelming preponderance of exhibitors, managers, showmen all, their knowing has to come from two sources; first and most importantly with reference to the buying, from what they can glean on paper, from the printed page, about the wares; secondly, and in post mortem, by what those wares have done for their box office, late, but educational.

In a large number of theatres and circuit offices there will be found an indexed file of Motion Picture Herald's attentions to product in "The Cutting Room" and "Showmen's Reviews." It is The Herald's policy to make these presentations of fact, in "The Cutting Room" a presentation, as early as the picture has been recorded, of what the producer was shooting at and what he hopes to have when the previewing and revising are over; and in the "Showmen's Reviews" a presentation of what has reached the screen in the product, not a presentation of opinion but rather factual material upon which the showman can form his own opinion.

Today's box office problems are abundant. The exhibitor is eager enough for material that will draw. Even in close one-man towns, with the world's output to consider, he still finds problems. Juggling playdates, he studies the product he has bought quite as diligently as that he may yet buy.

And, let no one claim to know more about what the hometown folks will take.

PRODUCT PARADES

SHOWMEN across these states will greet with encouraged interest an incidental manifestation of recognition of the problem of programming conveyed in a recent utterance from Mr. Will Hays. In the course of a semi-official conveyance of his recent message delivered to Hollywood's producers anent "G-Men" pictures, Motion Picture Herald, of November 2, quotes:

> " . . . These pictures, Mr. Hays declared, have been proper and interesting entertainment. . . . Mr. Hays raised a question, however, as to the number of these and similar pictures already released or in the course of production and stated his belief that the quantity of such films in proportion to other entertainment had become too high. . . . "

It is, to be sure, reasonably probable that this was primarily a bit of Mr. Hays' diplomacy in delicately telling his clients that too much is a lot too much and that the "G-Man" label was still no adequate camouflage for gangstering on the screen. But quite as important is this piece of even indirect recognition in high places that the output needs programming in behalf of the consuming public's interest.

It is too much to expect the whole organized industry will sit down at the conference table to meet and deal with a scheme of diversification of product, to consciously and purposely eliminate imitative efforts, the riding of so-called trends. But it might be reasonable enough to expect important production concerns to do that for their own outputs.

If anything of the sort is done it will be done in, from and by New York and sales authority. Hollywood just cannot keep itself out of the grooves. Successes in type or style or theme are in Hollywood like measles—everybody gets it, and like measles the vigor of the infection becomes rapidly attenuated by dissemination.

Just now with Miss Shirley Temple rating high, the infantile infection is spreading. Hollywood is burbling the names of Freddie Bartholomew, aged 10, out of Copperfield into Fauntleroy at a thousand a week; Sybil Jason, aged 7, at Warners; Jane Withers, 9, at Fox, and Paramount's David and Betty Holt, 7 and 4. Also there's Billy Lee, 5, who gets $85 for working and $35 for resting, and Baby LeRoy.

The industry may yet become a baby parade.

This Week

MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S

Withdraws

ASCAP on Tuesday shook under the impact of the withdrawal of the 11 Warner music publishing subsidiaries, effective December 31, and the resignation of Herman Starr, Warner vice-president and treasurer, as a director.

Warner contends that the revenue it has obtained from ASCAP is inadequate, and will set up its own licensing and collecting agency for performing rights.

ASCAP countered with a statement charging Warner was "speculating, not only with their own interests, but those of the composers and authors." See page 13.

'Closed Shop'—Again

A "closed shop" for motion picture acting talent in Hollywood was the aim of Actors' Equity in New York this week, as important matters such as a vote of confidence in its officers and policies and WPA federal theatre projects engaged the attention of the Eastern group.

Cooperating with the Screen Actors' Guild on the Coast, Equity stressed its intention of making the tie more binding in the near future, with the object of building a powerful, cooperative organization on the two production fronts.

The motion picture industry meanwhile is expanding its production activity on Broadway, and there are other developments in the world of the stage, all of which are detailed in the story on page 40.

Invited

Another invitation to producers in Hollywood dissatisfied with the high taxes of California and wanting to move is made this week by Mayor Edward J. Kelly of Chicago, who invites them to come to Chicago. In an exclusive statement to MOTION PICTURE HERALD, he says:

"In view of the dissatisfaction of some of the Hollywood producers over the high taxes in California, Chicago is happy to invite these producers to establish their studios in our city. We realize fully the value of having the film industry center in Chicago, and producers may rest assured that not only will they be welcomed heartily but also that we shall at all times give them every possible cooperation.

"Chicago is the ideal spot for a motion picture studio, especially since most of all scenes in pictures today are 'shot' inside the studios. For outdoor scenes, our central and convenient location should be especially desirable. Our 'city atmosphere' is vastly superior to that of any city on the coast. There is an abundance of natural scenery in this area, such as the forest preserves, sandy beaches, the sand dunes, farm country, hills, rivers, etc. We are but a short distance from forest country as well as mountainous and various other advantageous locations.

"From an industrial standpoint, Chicago has every sort of facility to care for the needs of the motion picture industry.

"Our taxes are especially reasonable compared to the present load of the film industry, and there is every reason to feel that this advantage will continue indefinitely.

"All in all, then, Chicago seems to be a logical center for motion pictures and it is my earnest hope that the industry will give serious consideration to our suggestions. It will find welcome, cooperation and profit here."

More Investigating

Motion picture theatre owners whose admission tax returns and reports to the Treasury Department at Washington are found to be irregular stand to pay considerably more than the deficit, in fines, the Government having started out to investigate exhibitors' books in 20 cities with prosecution in view. Millions of unpaid admission taxes are said to be involved. See page 12.

Agnew Heads Sales

John Edward Otterson, Paramount president, announced the succession of Neil Agnew, sales manager, to the post of vice-president and general sales executive that was held until his resignation on Tuesday by George J. Schaefer.

Mr. Shaefer's resignation and Mr. Agnew's succession, both were expected, Mr. Schaefer having opened negotiations some weeks ago to become a Paramount theatre partner in the northwest. This deal, however, is now off, and Mr. Schaefer will leave Friday for a Mexican vacation, with no further plans.

The Paramount executive committee this week approved and signed a contract vesting in John and Barney Balaban the operation of the Balaban & Katz and Great States theatre organizations for seven years. A. H. Blank's contract was renewed for operation of Paramount theatres in Iowa and eastern Illinois.

Announcement of an expected 25 per cent increase in film rental and decision to limit the forthcoming sales meeting in Chicago to two days were other Paramount developments of the week. Story on page.....

Long Reel Action

A special committee of distributors has been appointed to seek changes in city ordinances which in a few places, such as New York and Chicago, prevent the use of 2,000-foot reels, the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America announced Wednesday.

At a meeting Tuesday, official sanction was given by all major distributors except Universal to adoption of the longer reel replacing the 1,000-foot length. Bids and samples of the required equipment are to be obtained in preparation for the change-over scheduled for next April 1.

Earnings

Loew's, Inc., earned $7,579,744 net profit, and Warner Brothers earned $674,159 during the year ended August 31, 1935, according to annual statements to stockholders that were made public by both companies this week, each reflecting the extent of the upturn in business in motion pictures during the past season.

The Warner earnings compared with a $2,530,513 loss last year, and a loss of $6,291,748 in 1932-33, while Loew's $7,579,744 net was nearly $100,000 better than the peak net of $7,479,897 last year.

Financial operations of Loew's and Warners for the past three years are tabulated on page 47.

NEWS SUMMARY COVERING THE SCREEN WORLD

Breathing Spell

In a surprise move, the Department of Justice at Washington decided this week to suspend all its widespread investigating activities against distributors charged with possible conspiracy in violation of the anti-trust laws, pending the outcome in St. Louis of the equity case against Warners, Paramount, RKO and their officers and subsidiaries. And, if the Department fails to obtain an injunction against the defendants, Washington believes that the Government will bring to an end, for some time at least, efforts of the Justice Department to "clean up" the motion picture industry.

Meanwhile Judge George Moore disqualified himself in St. Louis federal court from hearing the civil suit. Warners, Paramount and RKO had charged him with prejudice, following their acquittal in the criminal-indictment action, and they demanded the appointment of a successor to hear the civil suit.

Developments this week involving distributors in the anti-trust situation are reported on page 39.

Ranking Stars

Ten thousand British filmgoers, voting on a male star questionnaire of Alexander Korda's London Films, give Charles Laughton a comfortable majority, with George Arliss runner-up.

But, writes Bruce Allan, the HERALD's London correspondent, something of a problem is presented to British producers in the ranking of Jack Hulbert, Tom Walls and Gordon Harker among the first twelve. These three are distinctively British players, Harker for example playing "Cockney" roles. Yet British producers for the most part are aiming their product toward America.

This and other matters of current interest in British film circles are treated in the article on page 46.

Carbon Uniformity

Standardization of a new Suprex carbon, brought out by National Carbon Company, so that exhibitors will not be confused, was proposed by the board of directors of the Independent Theatre Supply Dealers' Association at a three-day meeting which was concluded Saturday in the association's offices in the Paramount Building, New York.

The organization is trying to interest other carbon manufacturers to standardize their products with Suprex, which, it is said, produces the same white light on the screen as that under which pictures are made in studios.

Besides a general review of the association's activities and a discussion of policy, it was also revealed by the board of directors that the supply business throughout the country is about 40 per cent better than last year. A further sign of improvement, it was also stated, is that all members of the association have spent considerable sums in refurbishing their places of business.

The board of directors also set some time between June 15 and June 30 as the date of the annual convention of the organization to be held at the Edgewater Beach hotel in Chicago next summer. Definite dates will be set later.

'Take-a-Chance'

Appealing, successfully too, to the natural gambling instinct in the public, A. H. Blank's circuit of theatres in the Midwest, has instituted "take-a-chance" showings, whereby patrons, upon entering, dip into a box and draw envelopes in which are contained slips of paper, or passes, telling them how much admission they must pay, the prices ranging from the box office low to the top. The idea is explained on page 18.

Forearmed

The industry in France, and that includes representatives of American companies, is breathing a sigh of relief over failure of the decree under which the Government would have taken control of the business. However, the industry is not resting on its oars, because it is expected that a new measure will be introduced at the next session of Parliament.

One development in the industry's favor, however, is the fact that in the common cause all interests have been united as never before. The story is on page 57.

Two Accept

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Radio-Keith-Orpheum are the only two large interests which to date have accepted the invitation of the United States Government to attend discussions at Washington on December 9th for the purpose of studying the possibilities of resurrecting regulatory codes.

Edward L. Kuykendall completed his tour of the country in the interest of a plan for the industry's own regulation, and repaired to his home in Mississippi to assemble the data and write a report for presentation shortly to the industry. The motion picture in its relation to possible code drafting is discussed further on page 42.

Diverse Opinion

That a wide divergence of opinion exists in exhibition over the benefits and results at box offices of Hollywood's "arty" type of motion picture production became apparent this week when several leaders engaged in a controversy over the charge by Edward L. Kuykendall, MPTOA president, that pictures are now "too arty, too costumy, too morbid."

The opinions for and against Mr. Kuykendall's criticism, as expressed by a dozen of America's leading motion picture showmen, are set forth on page 15.

Soviet Film Ban

"Peasants" is the second Soviet film to be banned by the Detroit police censor in recent weeks, and Amkino Corporation, the American distributor for Russian product, sees in the rejection a clamp-down on all pictures emanating from the Soviet Union. Meanwhile the censor's rejection of "The Youth of Maxim" is scheduled for hearing on appeal in the Michigan supreme court in January, the while the Reds continue to agitate against certain American films. See page 24.

Church Shows

Dr. Burris Atkins Jenkins, staunch supporter of the motion picture as a medium of entertainment and education for the masses, does not agree with the widespread belief of exhibitors that the showing of motion pictures in churches constitutes unfair competition to the regular established theatre. He explains the conclusions he has drawn in this connection, after showing films in his church for 20 years, on page 52.

Australia Looks Up

Australia's amusement business has increased its personnel by 10 per cent in a year, a definite reflection of improved position and a justification for the bright outlook for the new season, says Cliff Holt, the HERALD's correspondent at Sydney. It's now up to the American companies to deliver the standard of product that will take advantage of the momentum, he points out.

As for the New South Wales Quota, the advisory board is making headway and the distributors' quota now seems certain to go into operation on January 1st, the exhibitors' quota year to start six months later. Story on page 56.

U.S. "CRACKING DOWN" TO RETRIEVE MILLIONS IN UNPAID THEATRE TAXES

Squadron of Special Agents Making Study of Exhibitors' Books in 20 Cities; Penalties Seen Unless Merely Oversight

Setting out to collect unpaid motion picture theatre admission taxes reputedly running into millions of dollars, the United States Government this week dispatched a "flying squadron" of special agents from Washington into the field to investigate the books of exhibitors.

The drive on exhibitors who have failed to account for their admission taxes, partially or otherwise, may cost a number of theatre operators throughout the country much more, in fines, than the original amount.

Uncovering glaring irregularities in returns during the course of a check made recently under the Works Progress Administration allotment, the Treasury Department has thrown agents into some 20 cities to go over the books of theatres.

Exhibitors are only one of several groups whose tax-paying activities are under scrutiny, it was said at Washington. Jewelers, sporting goods manufacturers, toilet preparation manufacturers, gasoline dealers and all others subject to special excise taxes also are being carefully checked up.

Audit Initiated

An audit of special tax returns was initiated several months ago by the Treasury Department under an allotment of $2,448,290 of Public Works funds. Irregularities were at once uncovered, and the Department began a drive for the collection of back taxes, interest and penalties. During the first 10 weeks of the survey, something like $1,250,000 was collected, and indications are that many times that amount will eventually flow into Uncle Sam's coffers.

Originally designed to pave the way for the collection of delinquent taxes, certain of the returns, it is learned, evidenced an intention on the part of some taxpayers deliberately to evade full payment, and where evidence can be secured to support this impression it is probable the Government will prosecute as a warning to others that retribution cannot be avoided.

In some 20 cities, agents of the Department are engaged in an audit of taxpayers' books, particularly those of exhibitors. Included in the cities where this work is being carried on are New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Baltimore, Washington, Detroit, San Francisco, St. Paul, Kansas City, Los Angeles, New Orleans, Minneapolis, St. Louis, Milwaukee, Newark, Tacoma, Seattle, Buffalo, Cleveland, Brooklyn and Cincinnati.

In all cases where an audit of returns shows delinquency, interest will be demanded and in most cases penalty taxes will be imposed. However, where the exhibitor's returns and his books demonstrate his desire to play fair with the Government and show that his failings were inadvertent the Treasury will follow its policy of omitting penalties. In any case where it is apparent the exhibitor deliberately falsified his returns or books, severe penalties will be meted out and criminal prosecution may be initiated.

Hampered by lack of funds and struggling with the millions of returns filed annually, the Bureau of Internal Revenue for several years has been unable to make any thorough study of tax payments in various categories. With President Roosevelt's Public Works fund offering an opportunity to undertake such a project as a relief job, the Bureau immediately applied for funds, which were granted last summer.

Indications are that the money spent on this work will be returned several times over—one of the few relief projects which will pay dividends in cold cash.

Halt on New Taxes Seen

No new taxes until 1937 may be a slogan of Congress during the coming session as members whose terms expire next year listen to the counsel of their advisers that tax increases may bounce back in the shape of defeat in next November's elections.

All members of the House of Representatives and one-third of the Senate are faced with the expiration of their terms. With few—very few—exceptions, they will be candidates for re-election.

This consideration will far outweigh all others in the minds of members of Congress who like their jobs and who realize that the people generally will begin to ask embarrassing questions about boondoggling, wanton spending and deficits if asked to pay for those luxuries at this time.

President Roosevelt himself is represented as highly anxious that taxes shall not be permitted to become an issue in the coming campaign.

The President's feeling in the matter was evidenced last week when he met with the Conference of Mayors and indicated that he was desirous of putting off new tax legislation until 1937.

Any new revenue measures might double the rate of theatre admission taxes.

Surveying possible sources of new revenue from which to obtain another billion dollars or so a year in taxes, Washington officials are said to have made a study of the admission tax receipts, now coming in at the rate of $15,000,000 a year. In some quarters it is firmly believed that people like their motion pictures so well that they would not balk at doubling their tax contribution, providing consideration is given the poor in the shape either of total tax exemption or a cut in the rate. At present, the tax does not apply to admissions up to 40 cents, but in the event of new legislation it is possible the limit may be cut to 25 cents.

In many sections, under Administration plans, this would not involve any greater tax upon theatre-goers since it is contemplated that means shall be worked out to divide the various taxable fields between the federal, state and local governments so as to eliminate overlapping taxes.

Free Shows Go To 470 Spots

Free shows are now being provided to 470 institutions, hospitals and associations through the 32 Film Boards of Trade, according to a survey compiled by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America. The survey is the first in eight years. In 1927, the peak of the silent era, more pictures were serviced free throughout the country than at the present time. This is due to the fact, it is said, that many institutions have not yet added sound apparatus to their machines.

Accounts served without remuneration today are given shows once a week, bi-weekly, monthly and twice a month and in some instances only three or four times a year. Because of the irregular bookings, the MPPDA is reluctant to hazard a guess on the total number of pictures supplied annually as well as the amount of money exchanges would receive if these dates were turned into cash.

The New York Film Board figures it provides about 40 institutions in the metropolitan area. Boston leads with a greater number of weekly requests. It is estimated that the local bookings would approximate $1,000 a week, if sold. At one time, it was estimated that the free show bill for distributors amounted to about $500,000 a year.

Thanksgiving and Christmas weeks are two weeks in the year when the demands for free shows are the greatest. The rise during these weeks is from the regular 40 to 200, part of which is attributed to theatres, in conjunction with benevolent organizations, putting on morning shows, and turning the proceeds over to charity.

Arguments Heard On Sound Patents Use

Arguments were heard by Federal Judge Mortimer W. Byers in Brooklyn federal court Tuesday in a patent suit by Western Electric, Electrical Research Products, Inc., and American Telephone and Telegraph Company against General Talking Pictures Corporation. The arguments were made by Charles Neave and Henry Ashton for the plaintiffs and Samuel Darby and Ephraim Berliner for the defendants.

Testimony in the case was taken about 18 months ago before Judge Byers sitting in the New York federal court. The socalled Loenstein, Mathes and Arnold patents owned by the telephone company, of which WE is a manufacturing subsidiary, are concerned in this case. The validity of the patents is not involved, the question being merely whether the defendants went beyond the bounds of their lease when they distributed vacuum tube amplification circuits for loudspeakers in talking picture apparatus for commercial use by theatres. The plaintiffs contend that use was restricted to radio receivers and use by radio amateurs. Judge Byers reserved decision.

11 WARNER MUSIC FIRMS WITHDRAW FROM ASCAP

Company Says Inadequate Payments Obtained by Society, Run by "Entrenched Clique", Strangle Music Publishing

Will Set Up Own Agency; Mills Says Composers and Authors Protest Warner Action Jeopardizes Their Financial Status

With consequences that may be of major importance to exhibitors, Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., on Tuesday withdrew its 11 music publishing companies from the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, effective December 31, when present membership agreements expire. The resignation of Herman Starr, vice-president and treasurer of Warner, as ASCAP director, also was presented at a meeting of the ASCAP board, and the Society announced it would be accepted.

This was the first serious breach in the ranks of ASCAP in its 21 years of existence, and climaxed months of disagreement over the revenue distributed to the Warner firms as their share of the ASCAP collections from music taxes.

Harms, Inc., M. Witmark and Sons, Remick Music Corporation, T. B. Harms, Inc.. and their subsidiaries were the publishing companies involved. The first two are charter members of the Society, and Remick and T. B. Harms are among its oldest members. This is the largest group of music publishing companies controlled by a motion picture company, and represents an investment of $9,000,000.

Warner to Set Up Own Agency

Warner now will proceed to establish its own performing rights collection and licensing agency, dealing with the users of music direct.

On behalf of its music subsidiaries, Warner on Wednesday said in a statement:

"Our resignation from the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers has been rendered necessary in our own interests and in those of the composers and all concerned in the music publishing enterprises with which we are connected.

Call Royalties Insufficient

"The chief reason for our action is what we consider to have been the insufficient and inadequate royalties collected by the Society from radio broadcasters. The Society is simply an agency. The inadequate payment obtained by the Society for the use of music on the air—and music is the life blood of radio and has mainly built up its uninterrupted and increasing prosperity—has strangled the legitimate possibilities of music publishing until drastic action is necessary if this business is to continue. This has injured the creative as well as the business end of these enterprises.

"Therefore, we have decided that hereafter we shall conduct our relations with radio, so far as our music interests are concerned, independently and directly, in order to secure the fair returns to which we and our associates—including emphatically the authors and composers—are entitled.

RESIGNED TO PRESERVE UNITS, SAYS WARNERS

In reply to a statement issued by ASCAP describing the Warner action as "solely and selfishly in the interests of themselves," Warners said late Wednesday that the withdrawal was dictated by self-preservation. Warners accused ASCAP of being run by a 'well entrenched clique' of well-paid executive officers and of disposing of its rights to radio for the next five years on a basis which would render it impossible to keep its music companies alive if they retained their membership.

Warner charged the distribution of revenue is conducted illogically and based mainly on favoritism and politics, and that the arrangements made by the society have unduly favored the big radio chains over the independent stations.

"A quick checkup indicates that approximately 40 per cent of all the music played on sponsored radio programs is published by our companies. We have reason to believe that the same proportion holds on the sustaining programs.

"Formerly a hit song might easily sell one or two million copies; as things are now, a sale of 300,000 copies is extraordinary, and even in such a case it is usually problematic whether a loss will be sustained."

One of the consequences of the move, it was conceded in New York music publishing circles, will be litigation to determine the vested rights of copyrights. A great many of the more important composers continuing as members of ASCAP have reserved their rights, according to E. C. Mills, the Society's general manager. These include Jerome Kern, Irving Berlin, Sigmund Romberg, Victor Herbert estate and others. Rights in their works remain with ASCAP as well as the rights to the music in many stage productions, the music of which is controlled by the Warner companies, said Mr. Mills.

A statement by Mr. Mills on Wednesday assailed Warner and, inferentially, other motion picture aggregations in the music industry, saying: "They (the composers) contend that Warner Brothers have not consulted their interests, but have acted solely and selfishly in the interests of themselves, as motion picture producers primarily, who purchased music publishing businesses as adjuncts to their sound film business, and who are now speculating, not only with their own interests, but those of the composers and authors, who are helpless at the moment to protect themselves against this speculation, as to the wisdom of which they have had no voice." . . .

Mr. Mills denied reports that other publishers planned to pull away from ASCAP and said that other motion picture companies controlling music firms would renew their membership agreements. These are, chiefly, MGM with Robbins and the recently acquired Feist catalogue, Twentieth Century-Fox with Movietone and Sam Fox, and Paramount with Famous Music Corporation. MGM now takes first rank in importance among the film interests affiliated with ASCAP.

Saying that the differences arose over the belief held by Warner that the revenue collected by ASCAP in the United States and 21 foreign countries is insufficient, Mr. Mills continued:

"They contend that inasmuch as radio broadcasting has destroyed normal music business, that unless substantially greater royalties can be collected from the broadcasting stations their firms cannot survive, and their resignation is based on the belief that acting independently they can collect much larger royalties for the use of their catalogue than has been represented by their share of the royalties collected by the Society.

"This share (Warner's) last year represented about $340,000 for all their firms. Thus far the so-called Warner firms are the only ones to indicate any intention of withdrawing from the Society and the composers and authors have all renewed their current membership agreements for an additional five years commencing January 1, 1936.

"Composers and authors generally are greatly disturbed at this action of Warner Brothers, which they contend has placed in hazard their royalties received from performing rights through the Society and upon which, in these times, their very livelihood depends.

"At a late hour last (Tuesday) evening, such composers and authors as could be reached indignantly denied the right of Warner Brothers to place them in financial jeopardy through their withdrawal from the Society and making separate attempts to license the performance of their works by radio at substantially increased rates.

"These composers point out that when in years past they placed their works with the individual firms subsequently purchased as a group by the Warner Brothers they had no reason to believe that these firms, which were charter members of ASCAP, would ever withdraw."

CALLS RADIO TAX LOW

Mr. Mills estimated that between 25 and 30 per cent of the music played on the air and licensed by ASCAP is controlled by Warner, but that the repertoire used in motion pictures would be less. He added that with the resignations, exhibitors "could be served not as well but adequately," through the ASCAP performing catalogue, which represents several million numbers.

$800,000 from Theatre Tax

Estimating that ASCAP's revenue for 1935 would be about $4,000,000, Mr. Mills expected that $800,000 of this would come from theatre music taxes, the remainder from radio, hotels, dance halls and other sources.

Warner contended that the 5 per cent tax on gross receipts of radio stations collected by ASCAP applies to the independent stations, while the large chains in reality pay only about one per cent. Mr. Mills explained that the 5 per cent the broadcasters are committed to pay is assessed on the stations' revenue after deductions for talent, program building and other expenses. He said revenue from radio last year totaled $2,440,000, representing a sustaining fee of $840,000 from 600 stations and $1,600,000 in commissions.

Mr. Mills said that many publishers, not Warner alone, are dissatisfied with the present classification system under which revenue is distributed to publishers, and that a committee has been attempting for a long time to devise an improvement. It had been believed that a plan proposed whereby the frequency of use of compositions, or the per use system, would take precedence over seniority of membership and availability of catalogue in figuring distribution, would have conciliated the Warner dispute, but no plan as yet has been adopted.

Three Per Cent Return

ASCAP maintains that in receiving 26 per cent of the money distributed to the publishers last year Warner was given a good share of the proceeds, although Mr. Mills said, "I don't blame them for wanting more money." Warner's share in 1934 of about $340,000 from ASCAP alone is a return of more than three per cent on its investment in music companies. Warner set a figure of $900,000 to $1,000,000 as the revenue it should have received from ASCAP.

Warner particularly insisted that the per use system be installed, and contends that on this basis its revenue would have been appreciably increased.

Notification has been sent to the National Association of Broadcasters, National Broadcasting Company and the Columbia Broadcasting System that beginning January 1 they will have to deal with Warner direct for the use of its music. The radio stations and chains will now pay a tax to Warner in addition to the ASCAP fees.

BROADCASTERS MAY CANCEL CONTRACTS

Broadcasting stations may now cancel their five-year contracts with ASCAP because of a clause permitting cancellation if ASCAP at any time cannot deliver the music catalogue which it controlled at the time the agreements were made. E. C. Mills, ASCAP general manager, said that those stations which have inquired have been informed that they may cancel if they wish. Up to a late hour Wednesday, however, no cancellations had been indicated, he said.

Sunday Shows Go Big In Pittsburgh Area

Approximately 100,000 attended Sunday shows for the first time in the history of the city on the Sabbath, packing the downtown and neighborhood houses from the opening at 2 P. M. and continuing until late at night. Loew's Penn, the Stanley, Alvin and the Warner, the downtown crowd leaders, had crowds on hand long before opening time. Philadelphia's second experience with Sunday showed an increase of 50 per cent over the first open Sabbath, a break in weather contributing to the substantial rise. Practically all downtown theatres reported capacity or near capacity at night. Neighborhood theatre operators estimated the improvement ranged all the way from 20 to 100 per cent.

Sunday shows were defeated for the third time in a special election in Grundy Center, Iowa, November 18. The vote was 339 for and 458 against. Russell Bartlett, M. J. Lovejoy and John Barnet of the Rockland, Me., Board of Aldermen are determining the disposition of a petition protesting Sunday shows in that community.

U. S. List Covers Non-Theatre Pictures

The issuance of a check list of sources of non-theatrical films is announced by the Department of Commerce in Washington. The list covers film companies as well as industrial, agricultural and cultural producers of such films, but makes no attempt to list the individual films.

The directory was compiled by Nathan D. Golden, chief of the motion picture section of the department, with the assistance of Francis M. Johnson, to meet a constantly increasing demand for information on sources from which non-theatrical films can be secured.

Colvin Brown Goes to Coast

Colvin Brown, vice-president and general manager of Quigley Publications, left New York Wednesday on the Twentieth Century Limited for a several weeks' visit in Hollywood.

New York Critics To Make Awards

An annual award for the best film is planned by motion picture critics of New York newspapers and some of the national magazines, who are meeting to consider the proposal as well as an organization to be known as the New York Film Critics.

Several meetings have been held, but there has been no decision because of lack of agreement whether the award include foreign pictures as well as those in the English dialogue. The critics also have not been able to decide on the type of the award, although the suggestion to publish the winning scenario in book form by Covici-Friede and award the royalties to the writer has found some favor.

The idea was suggested by the recent decision of the play critics in New York to make an annual award for the "best play" of the year, in opposition to the Pulitzer prize. Sponsors of the proposed association are Andre Sennwald, Times; Richard Watts, Jr., Herald-Tribune; Thornton Delehanty, Post; William Boehnel, World-Telegram. Film editors of such publications as The New Yorker, Time and the New Republic are to be invited.

A Society of Publicists and Newspaper Correspondents was organized in Hollywood last week by Douglas Churchill, New York Times correspondent; Sidney Skolsky, columnist of the New York Daily News, Jack Cooper and Al Parmenter of Twentieth Century-Fox publicity and others.

Delay of Union Merger Until First of Year Seen

Completion of negotiations for a merger of Local 306, Allied Motion Picture Operators and Empire State unions is not expected before the first of the year in New York. Slow progress is being made toward bringing the various factions together, but these are expected to be ironed out by the end of next month. Justice James C. Cropsey reserved decision on an action by Estates Operating Company for a permanent injunction to restrain Allied M. P. Operators' Union from enforcing a contract for the employment of Allied men in the plaintiff's theatres.

In Des Moines contracts providing for a one-man-in-booth policy have been signed by the local Tri-States theatres and the Orpheum with Local 286. The deal runs to February 1, 1938.

Balcon Signs Riesner

Michael Balcon, Gaumont British production chief now in Hollywood, has signed Charles "Chuck" Riesner for one year to direct Jack Hulbert and Cicely Courtneidge in London. Mr. Riesner, who has been directing for MGM, leaves for London immediately.

RCA Quarterly Dividend

The regular quarterly dividend of one and three-quarters per cent for the quarter, amounting to 87½ cents a share, on the "A" preferred stock, was declared last week by the board of directors of Radio Corporation of America.

STORM RAGING IN EXHIBITION OVER HOLLYWOOD'S "ARTY" PRODUCTIONS

Issue Centers on Tendency of Some Producers to Use Trend as License to Make Pictures Lacking in General Appeal

Hollywood's "arty" motion pictures, so-called, and the trend in the producing capital toward the "operatic," are today the subjects of a heated controversy in exhibition as they relate to public tastes and the theatre box office.

Edward L. Kuykendall's open declaration of two weeks ago to studios in California that motion pictures are "too arty" has brought expressions from many exhibitor leaders similarly criticizing those producers who are responsible for the "class" productions of reputed limited appeal which appear in the product supply that is intended for general consumption. On the other hand, a few believe that this type of product should be continued, submitting that it is a box office essential.

The issue appears to be the tendency of some producers to accept the present progressive and apparently commercially successful high producing standard as a license to create "arty" motion pictures that lack the entertainment appeal required by the masses who support practically all of America's motion picture theatres.

Controversial repercussions from Mr. Kuykendall's criticism—voiced in Hollywood by him in his significant position of president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America—began to be felt in the field last week, and indicated at once that his challenge has all the potentialities of a bombshell that may explode the impression prevalent in the minds of some producers that theatre owners the country over are not only content but are quite happy about the creation of that type of product which the complaining exhibitors brand as "too arty."

"I wish there were fewer 'arty' and more 'hearty' pictures," declared Walter Vincent, Pennsylvania.

"We are being 'high-C'ed' to death," charges H. B. Robb, Texas.

"The masses want humanness and naturalness, and when pictures go 'arty,' then both producers and exhibitors suffer," added Harry Huffman, Colorado.

"Pictures answering this description are doomed to failure," agreed Frank Durkee, Maryland.

"The middle classes do not care for 'arty' pictures," concluded Sidney B. Lust, District of Columbia.

On the opposite side, M. A. Lightman, Tennessee, Mr. Kuykendall's predecessor in the MPTOA presidency, led the forces which not only disagree with the criticism that "class" pictures hurt the box office, but also hold that they are essential to public merchandising of the screen.

It has been generally understood in the trade, and considerably substantiated by the factual revelations from box office reports, that the comparatively new Hollywood order of higher picture standards had increased receipts impressively during the past year, retaining existing audiences and bringing new millions into the theatres who previously did not attend because of their adverse attitude toward the "low stuff" of the films.

25,000 "DREAM" STILLS USED IN SCHOOLS

Nationwide distribution of specially selected stills from Warner Brothers' production of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" for display purposes in schools, colleges and libraries "have aroused keen interest and discussion about the film, according to many letters received by the company's home office," Warners said this week.

More than 25,000 of these special stills have been given to school principals, college deans and librarians, who, in cooperation with exhibitors showing the "Dream", have arranged special Shakesperean exhibits.

Several hundred of these exhibits were timed to dovetail with "Open School Week".

Mr. Kuykendall's declaration now creates considerable speculation over the existence of any such benefits accruing from "arty" pictures, and other exhibition authorities—all actively engaged in operations—concur with him in the opinion that "films still are the entertainment of the masses and it is a waste of time and money to confine them to the classes."

Leading the defensive, however, Mr. Lightman warns, "We have fed the public socalled 'mass' entertainment so long that we had better start educating them to the appreciation of finer things or we will soon find that 'school's out.'

"There is no set formula for public taste—there never has been and never will be," he explained. "Ours is a creative business. We must continually experiment.

"When 'Little Women' clicked so well, I was very happy for the sake of the industry. When 'Night of Love' met with such success, I thought, 'Well, we are getting somewhere.' When Metro's 'David Copperfield' scored such a tremendous success, I was overjoyed.

"I won't say that all companies are doing as well with 'class' pictures as might be done with them from the point of view of public reception; there is room for much improvement. I won't say that the public is ready to grab any costume picture or any artistic production. Often it is not the fault of the 'class' or 'artistic' picture that might cause it to fail, but rather the fault of the manner in which it is produced."

Lightman, Defending New Type Product Against Kuykendall's Criticism, Revives Plea for Two Kinds of Film Theatres

"The producers of 'David Copperfield' could have made a failure much easier than they made a success, and so it is with most pictures of this kind. As a matter of fact," he added, "the odds are against their succeeding at this present time, but we must develop that field if we are to go forward. That is what will lift the motion picture theatre out of 'a place of amusement' and will make it a vital part of a community. It may cost the industry money to achieve this goal but it will ultimately pay big dividends not only in cash but in the pride and satisfaction to be derived from the new place in which we will find ourselves.

"All pictures cannot be made for Morrilton, Arkansas. Which brings me back to my old 'war-cry' that ultimately we will be making pictures for 'class' theatres and pictures for 'mass' theatres and it will then definitely follow that many from the ranks of the 'mass' audiences will be 'educated' and they will want to see the 'class' productions. It is merely a matter of development and advancement.

"I quite agree that 'morbid' pictures should be reduced to a minimum"—as demanded by Mr. Kuykendall. "Also, I think too much bloodshed and butchery should be avoided. Marvelous pictures have been seriously reduced in exhibition value by horrible massacres portrayed in them. Such scenes are shown in too much detail."

Taking exception to Mr. Lightman's viewpoint, and concurring in Mr. Kuykendall's criticism, H. B. Robb, Dallas, declared, "The very existence of this business has been dependent upon the support of the masses—art in its various forms has been for the edification of an all too limited intelligentsia, whoever they are."

Mr. Robb said he is "willing to admit, if that will solve the problem, that from the standpoint of historical and biblical knowledge and a very high order of intelligence that certain producers in Hollywood have contributed something to 'art'."

"However," he continued, "we cannot continue to look at these pictures and say to ourselves: 'Well, here is another one that the public should support.' "

"Try as we may, we have been unable to sell the masses to accept this new brand of entertainment in the quantities in which it is coming, and each succeeding contribution seems to be a greater 'flop' at the box office than the one before. We do not care to mention pictures by title, but the branch of the industry which has to sell this product to the public knows all too well what they are, and this oftentimes before our judgment is finally confirmed at the sick box office.

"Besides costly costume pictures, which always require preferred time, we are being

WANT PICTURES WITH WIDE APPEAL

'high-C'ed' out of business by a cycle of grand opera stars trying to make entertainment acceptable to the masses. Even grand opera as an institution will not stand on its own legs and is usually subsidized by its limited patronage. How then do producers expect the common herd to go for it?

"And as a parting shot," he added, "we are sitting here literally quivering in our boots wondering what liberties the producers will take with Shakespeare. Let us come out of the 'dream' of uplifting the public's taste and give them what we know darn well they want."

R. B. Wilby, too, observed, "There are too many pictures now being made which do not have an appeal to established picture audiences." Mr. Wilby operates a circuit in the South.

The controversy became further enlivened by the participation of Joseph M. Seider, prominent New York independent circuit owner, who disagreed with Mr. Kuykendall, except for Mr. Kuykendall's statement that "Pictures are talking the customers to death —action has been supplanted by dialogue."

"Socalled 'class' pictures are as necessary to the box office as the screen itself," Mr. Seider declared. "Concededly, the people to whom this type of picture appeals, are in the minority, but this minority give their support to the other 90 per cent of filmdom's output, in which they are not particularly interested. This class of the motion picture audience is entitled to, and it is good business for the exhibitor to give them the opportunity of seeing the pictures that please them.

"Perhaps it is a coincidence," observed Mr. Seider, "but the fact is that business is somewhat improved since the advent of the higher standard of motion picture production."

Vincent Asks for "Hearty" Pictures

"Naturally, box office takings must determine whether or no our patrons think a picture is either good or bad," explained Walter Vincent of Pennsylvania, but, personally, he added, "I wish that there were fewer 'arty' pictures and more 'hearty' pictures. By 'hearty' I mean screen drama with human interest, modern drama with heart interest, with romance, with comedy and with sufficient action to relieve the tedium of dialogue. Pictures filled with 'gab,' supposed to possess smartness, and with no action, are, in the main, poison at the box office.

"The costumed drama today possesses very little box office value. No socalled 'spectacle' is of any value unless the story that accompanies the spectacle has box office value entirely apart from the spectacle.

"There is much that can very well be called 'tripe' produced in Hollywood, but that is inevitable, so long as producers insist upon keeping to the huge quotas they set for themselves.

"It is to be hoped that the stock company idea will not spread, for that leads to the practice of casting stock players utterly unsuited to the parts they are expected to play. It is also to be hoped that we may some day get away from the picture cycles that now afflict us.

"Too Arty, Too Costumy"

Edward L. Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, explains to John L. Franconi, GB exchange manager in Dallas, how he became a "Hobo".

Membership in the "Hoboes of America" was presented to Mr. Kuykendall by Maurice Lowenstein, national secretary of the MPTOA, and president of the Oklahoma MPTO, at the MPTO annual banquet in Oklahoma City's Biltmore Hotel. Mr. Kuykendall was returning to his home in Columbus, Mississippi, from a nationwide visit with exhibitors to discuss their problems, and which ended in Hollywood, where he told producers that pictures are now "too arty, too costumy, too morbid".

"The perpetuation of this industry," concluded Mr. Vincent, "lies in better pictures, more better pictures and still more better pictures."

"Mr. Kuykendall's remarks are only too true!" So declared Harry Huffman, of Denver.

"Every great success in the motion picture world is aimed heart-high, and when you go to extremes in either direction it decreases in the same proportion the possible appeal to the greatest number of patrons. Attest—the first Grace Moore picture. It had musical harmony and an interesting story while its numerous operatic scenes and songs minimized its appeal and it was not a universal success. Lawrence Tibbett in 'Metropolitan' is handicapped in the same manner, and 'Midsummer Night's Dream,' while a magnificent production, will also suffer for this reason.

"The motion picture," continued Mr. Huffman, "is intended for all peoples, and all peoples are brothers under the skin when it comes to heart-high entertainment. The masses want humanness and naturalness, and when pictures go 'arty,' then both producers and exhibitors will suffer.

"Producers certainly know this, because their many experiences have given them monuments to somebody's 'great production' and, alas, they have been monuments in fact! Why do they continue to do it?"

From H. A. Griswold, operating the Sewanee Union theatre, a University of the South enterprise, at Sewanee, Tenn., came a denunciation of Mr. Kuykendall's "down-with-high-type-pictures" criticism.

Mr. Griswold declared that "it is difficult for me as a lone independent exhibitor to remain adamant."

The University of the South, he explained, operates the theatre because of the unusual situation of the institution. Sewanee is atop the Cumberland Mountains about midway between Chattanooga and Nashville. The entire village is owned by the University, which in turn operates all its utilities. The audiences of the theatre are not, however, made up exclusively of University students and professors. Many of Mr. Griswold's best customers, he said, are from small nearby towns and also from the coves surrounding the mountain. Many have not even been privileged to have had a high school education.

"Therefore," he concluded, "it is safe for me to say that this theatre (though not large) has an audience that represents an accurate cross section of American life—it is an audience not likely to be taken in by the socalled 'arty' or 'highbrow' stuff."

Nevertheless, Mr. Griswold found that "there is more and more of a demand for the dramatization of the classics and for the creation of films the appeal of which is artistic beauty rather than crude sensationalism.

"Mr. Kuykendall is quoted as referring to 'arty,' 'costumy' and 'morbid' pictures. In what way," asked Mr. Griswold, "can these epithets apply to 'Little Women,' 'David Copperfield,' 'Anna Karenina,' 'Great Expectations,' 'Metropolitan,' 'Here's to Romance,' 'Three Musketeers,' 'Last Days of Pompeii,' ad infinitum?

"Admitting perhaps that up to recent years the great American public supported films which were sensational, morbid and sometimes indecent, late box office returns show that this taste, admitting it ever existed, has been changed, and the demand now is for films of a higher order. Can it be that Mr. Kuykendall is advocating that producers lag behind the popular taste of the hour?

"It is with lament, I believe, that Mr. Kuykendall's ideas should get so iarge a

New Santa Fe's Own Gibraltar Is One-Man Epic of Southwest

Showman Bags Wild Turkeys, Then Burns Midnight Oil on Theatre Affairs

by TERRY RAMSAYE

SANTA FE, NEW MEXICO

This old Santa Fe, with streamlined traffic flowing through streets where the ancient pueblo and adobe culture stand fused with the mission borne influences of medieval Spain and today's America, is several kinds of a city, highly variant kinds.

For some 85 per cent of the population this is still and shall be always La Villa Real de Santa Fe de San Francisco de Assisi, where the loitering hours are measured only by the Cathedral bells for the faithful and the slow march of the blue shadows beginning with dawn over the Sangre de Cristos. These primitives in some fashion scratch a living out of the mountain desert with little patches of garden, goats and handicrafts, producing mostly souvenir wares for the rich, mad, hurrying tourists who come flitting through. All the day they hear their radios, mostly musical, and bringing them neither interest nor contact with the United States.

The other fifteen per cent of the population are the tradesmen, the politicians, the tourists and the few who live by mines and great ranches. The "artists colony" numbers some four hundred persons of intermittent, but fairly continuous residence for most the year.

That fifteen per cent minority holds the vast preponderance of the buying power of the region. Santa Fe has in effect no middle class representation of the great American commonalty which is the audience of the screen. In Santa Fe the motion picture must deal with difficult problems and such a divergence of tastes as is to be found in effect in few other regions. And the customers being as few as they are, the screen must get them all to survive.

On the motion picture map Santa Fe is the southernmost province of the aggressive federation known as Gibraltar Enterprises, Inc., and is bounded on the South by Hoblitzelle and on the east northeast by Elmer Rhoden.

Santa Fe is the Salmon-Greer town, with their two Gibraltar theatres, the Lensic and the Paris operating with pictures and the old Rialto dark, save for intermittent and now rare roadshows or local theatricals by the local talent of the artful artists.

Gibraltar includes some twenty-three theatres, a coalition of independents, in Wyoming, western Nebraska, Colorado and New Mexico. The headquarters of this Rocky Mountain picture dominion are in Denver, where Charles R. Gilmour, president, offices, and operates the buying mechanism of the combine.

> —From Terry Ramsaye's Article

Gibraltar was brought into existence a few years ago at a meeting in the strenuous office of the strenuous Nathan Salmon at the Lensic theatre in Santa Fe.

The story of Nathan Salmon is another of those one-man epics of the Southwest. He was born way over on the other side of the Mediterranean in Syria in 1866 and reached the United States in 1887. He was 25 years old, with a bride and seventy-five cents, when he arrived in Santa Fe in 1891 and decided to grow up with the country.

Mr. Salmon put his faith in real estate, and his name is on the titles of many a property in the city of Santa Fe and thereabouts.

Along about 1908, now twenty-seven years ago, Mr. Salmon saw and admired a theatre in Albuquerque, and returned to build one just like it—the Paris, which continues in operation today, Santa Fe's second string house.

When a few years ago he and his associates and son-in-law, Colonel E. John Greer, decided to ornament Santa Fe with a new and bigger theatre, the sentimental Nathan announced a contest for a name for the theatre which should be made up of the initials of his six grandchildren. "Lensic" won the award, but as Mr. Salmon announced from the stage that night, he really wanted a Spanish sounding name, so that it properly should be "Lensico." He expressed hope that a seventh grandchild might supply that. The seventh is not yet, but the prospects are that if when and as the name will be either Oliver or Olivette.

Incidentally, in tribute to the standing of Mr. Salmon and his family in the life and affairs of New Mexico the Lensic theatre was dedicated with an address by former Governor Arthur Seligman.

Robust and strong with the color of the outdoors upon him, Mr. Salmon continues at 69 active in the affairs of his businesses, after the fishing and the shooting have been attended to. The other evening he came in from a day fifty miles out in the wilds, with three wild turkeys in the bag, and sat up until midnight with the affairs of his office.

He and Colonel Greer, treasurer and director of Gibraltar, also president of the Greer Loan Company, are still convinced of the merit of real estate, and still investing in it in Santa Fe.

The conduct of the Lensic and the Paris is entrusted to J. R. Smith, an occasional contributor to Motion Picture Herald's Round Table section, and of former experience with Publix and Warner theatres.

Mr. Smith estimates that there are fifteen thousand persons in the territory served by the Santa Fe theatres, and that they play to about 4,000 regular patrons.

Chief reliance in selling the show is placed upon the screen, using ten minutes of trailers in every two-hour show, upon the local radio, where the theatre announcements are tied to the time bulletins, and third, newspaper space. A small mailing list for programs and announcements is maintained, and curiously enough some of the names listed are sixty-odd miles away in Albuquerque. It seems that when the movie patrons of New Mexico locate a picture they want to see they step out and drive to it, regardless. They call it an hour's drive to Albuquerque, unless of course one is in a hurry.

Because of competition with the six Hoblitzelle Interstate theatres in Albuquerque the Lensic in Santa Fe is playing much of the product ahead of what New York calls release dates, before press books are printed and exploitations devised. That tends to make Mr. Smith a close reader of Gus McCarthy's "In the Cutting Room" advance notes on Hollywood production.

The Lensic, along with a surprising number of other theatres of the region, runs ten minutes of advertising pictures, devoted chiefly to the wares and offerings of local merchants and distributors, served by the Alexander concern in Denver.

"Yes," admitted Mr. Smith, we do now and then get a protest from an occasional patron about the use of the screen by advertisers, but the number of such objections is not enough to make us feel that the policy is doing important damage, and the revenue is important. In many of the smaller theatres out in this country it has been the revenue from advertising on the screen that has kept them alive through the hard years.

"The screen itself is the best medium of them all, especially when we have to sell four changes a week," observed Mr. Smith.

The newspaper situation in Santa Fe, where the local New Mexican is said to have a smaller circulation than the Albuquerque and Denver papers, makes the printed page less useful than in most communities. The Santa Fe New Mexican was the property and organ of the late Senator Cutting. A more aggressive circulation policy may now develop. Meanwhile Santa Fe appears to depend considerably on the radio for its news. It is estimated that sixty-five per cent of the homes have radios, and any casual stroll about the city will make it apparent that most of them are tuned in on something all of the time. Hemmed in by the mountains and in general served by small equipments, Santa Fe hears little from the great national networks, making the local station, KIUJ, an especially effective approach to the audience.

The Gibraltar theatres organization, flung up and down these Rocky Mountains, includes W. H. Ostenberg, managing director of the Midwest Amusement and Realty Company, Scottsbluff, Nebraska; T. F. Murphy, president of Hubbard-Murphy, Inc., Raton, New Mexico; E. J. Schulte, owner and operator of Rialto Theatres, Inc., Wyoming's biggest; W. E. Ward, president of Silco Theatre, Inc., and mayor of Silver City, New Mexico; and Everett Cole, president of the Alamosa Chamber of Commerce and the Alamosa Amusement Company, as you might suspect, in Alamosa, Colorado.

Santa Fe sits at 7,000 feet above the sea, which puts the Lensic about a mile and a quarter higher than the roof of the Radio City Music Hall.

Next week Hollywood.

Idea of 'Punch-Board' Is Applied to Admissions

Patrons at Blank Theatres Take a Chance on Price To Be Paid

by MARTIN J. CHICOINE
Omaha Correspondent

A showman's dream—an idea that completely circumvents the routine method of exploitation—came to Evert R. Cummings, district manager for A. H. Blank theatres in Nebraska and Western Iowa, and it brought him better than normal grosses, for the second time this year.

His latest innovation is called the "take-a-chance" preview.

Mr. Cummings, with the aid of his advertising manager, Charles Schlaifer, and Bill Miskell, manager of the Orpheum, at Omaha, some weeks ago devised "honor system" previews.

The point in both plans is that not only do they attract patrons because of their novelty, but they likewise pay for themselves in exploitation, and in many situations are made into profitable ventures.

In the "take-a-chance" preview, which calls for no outstanding outlay of money or time in exploitation, the house manager merely gets out a large box filled with envelopes containing either tickets or slips of paper with prices written on them and places it near the ticket window on the night selected for the preview.

When the doors open, the patrons dip into the box, draw out an envelope, tear it open and find there the price they must pay for their ticket. A small percentage of the envelopes contains passes. Others contain tickets or pieces of paper on which the price ranges from the low of 15 cents to whatever the house top price may be. The house manager adroitly juggles the price tabs so that, despite the passes and low price tickets, he may come out with a mean average of 25 cents a person.

Mr. Cummings gave the plan its inaugural at the Capitol, Grand Island, Neb., where the house manager is Eddie Forrester. There the price arrangement is typical. The Capitol seats 1,180, and the tickets and their prices were distributed thus: 20 passes; 210 tickets at 15 cents; 350 tickets at 25 cents; 300 at 30 cents; 300 at 35 cents.

The picture at the preview was MGM's "Rendezvous." The following week, the Capitol turned in a high report—much above the average week.

The night of the preview it was noticed that the patrons took particular delight in selecting their own tickets.

The houses which will probably get the experiment next are the Capitol and Princess in Sioux City, Iowa.

Exhibitors in Iowa, Nebraska Hold Annual Meet

Hearty approval of the Production Code Administration, disapproval of the publication of box-office figures in trade and other publications, condemnation of double bills, approval of the legislative program which provides for the introduction and passage in the next sessions of the state legislatures of bills to curb the music tax of ASCAP and the reelection of Leo F. Wolcott as president were the highlights of the annual convention of Allied Theatre Owners of Iowa and Nebraska held in Des Moines last week. At the same time reenactment of the three per cent gross receipts tax for another year upon its expiration December 31 was pledged to Ohio exhibitor members of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio at their third annual convention in Columbus.

Sidney Samuelson has announced he will not run for reelection as president of Allied of New Jersey and exhibitor activities were further heightened during the past week with the calling of a meeting of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware and the Independent Exhibitors Protective Association on December 2 to discuss the proposed merger of the two groups.

Iowa - Nebraska Elects

Besides Mr. Wolcott, the Iowa and Nebraska group reelected H. A. Larsen of Oakland, Nebr., vice-president and both to the board of directors. New members chosen to serve on the board were Phil Marsh, Wayne, Nebr.; William Miller, Ashland, Nebr.; H. A. Taylor, Omaha; Jake Rosenthal, Waterloo, Iowa, and Cliff Niles, Anamosa, Iowa.

The organization also discussed the prohibition of designated play dates, the curbing of the competition of tax-built and tax-supported public buildings, the withholding of product from independent theatres and the inclusion of theatres in the group of businesses subject to the Iowa chain tax.

The high point of the third annual convention of the I.T.O. of Ohio was the announcement at the banquet by Governor Martin L. Davey that his tax program for the coming year provides for reenactment of the three per cent amusement tax, thus dispelling the fear of the return of the 12 per cent levy. The feeling of security engendered by the governor's remarks was short lived, however, for the next day the House Tax Commission refused by an 8-8 vote to endorse the governor's recommendation.

Menches Resigns at Akron

Meanwhile, at Akron, Robert Menches tendered his resignation as president of the Akron Exhibitors Association, a post he has held for the past six years.

Following his refusal at the national Allied convention in Atlantic City last August, Sidney Samuelson has again refused the nomination for president of the organization, but has submitted to the demands of members and will serve until a successor is found.

The Motion Picture Owners of North & South Carolina have again postponed the date of their winter convention, this time from December until some time in January. The location of the meeting has not been chosen, but it will either be Pinehurst, N. C., or Charlotte, according to Pauline Griffith, secretary of the organization.

At the same time the Independent Exhibitors of Massachusetts have set December 10 as the date of their next meeting, in Boston.

A box-office surprise! Because it's being handed to you without ballyhoo, don't get the idea it's something you shouldn't get excited over! It's a sleeper . . . a picture that started out to be a B production and wound up with everybody going nuts about it! We'll agree with you that the cast doesn't mean much on the marquee, but you'll agree with us that they all do a sweet job of entertaining on the screen! Any theatre that lays down on this one is making a serious mistake . . . and that goes for first-runs as well as subsequent runs.

hearing—a hearing which undoubtedly will carry so wide an influence, and, in my opinion, distinctly harmful and misleading and really an insult to the intelligent American public—the public he refers to as the 'masses.'

"When will we hear an end of this vain talk about classes and masses in a country which does not recognize such distinction? True, there are in many of our cities the miss-called 'intelligentsia' who do not share in popular enjoyments. These persons, however, would never fill motion picture theatres. As a matter of fact it is Mr. Kuykendall's socalled 'masses' who have filled the theatres playing the 'arty, costumy and morbid' films. Box office returns must remain the final authority."

Durkee and Lust Uphold Kuykendall

"I am heartily in accord with the declaration of Mr. Kuykendall that 'pictures are too arty, too costumy and too morbid,' and, I might add, 'too operatic,'" said Frank H. Durkee, of Baltimore.

"Speaking only for the circuit I represent, I can emphatically say, with but few exceptions, pictures answering this description are doomed to be dismal failures at the box office.

"While I must admit these 'artistic achievements' have probably attracted some new patronage for these particular pictures, yet they have alienated a far greater number of the masses, the absence of which is sorely missed.

"The masses have always supported the industry and I cannot see the wisdom of severing this main artery," Mr. Durkee added.

Nor does Sidney B. Lust, of Washington, D. C., believe the socalled 'high standard' of pictures has really helped the box office. "Occasionally a costume picture is all right," he continued, "but I don't think it means as much to the box office as other films.

"The middle classes are in the majority and they do not care for 'arty' pictures.

"The crying need today is for clean, wholesome, family pictures—but, of course, I realize these stories are rather hard to get. Nevertheless, they are available."

Mr. Kuykendall's remarks were reported in the news press two weeks ago, after he had expressed himself in Universal City to studio executives of Universal Pictures. Douglas W. Churchill quoted him accordingly in the New York Times.

Mr. Kuykendall's position as president of the MPTOA could be accepted as reflecting significantly the attitude of exhibitors everywhere as to just how all of this "culture" fits in with the ideas of the theatre men of America. His expressions came at the end of a cross-country tour of the principal theatre centers where he had held intimate discussions with owners on their problems and the remedies they suggest to solve them.

It was Mr. Kuykendall who had led part of the exhibitor movement which culminated in the Legion of Decency, from which arose the new standard to produce "better" motion pictures.

Mr. Kuykendall's MPTOA, at its convention in Hollywood, two years ago, set up a board to convey to the producers the ideas of theatre owners on box office values, so that they might be guided accordingly in future production. To what extent this policy has been adhered to by his organization has, so far as is known, never been explained.

Griffith Amusement Expands Holdings

Griffith Amusement Company circuit of Oklahoma City, Okla., have announced the following new theatres, remodelings and construction: McSwain Theatre at Ada, Okla., seating 1,100, opened October 23 after being remodeled and redecorated and new equipment installed throughout. Cost was $30,000. Mr. and Mrs. I. G. Killough, Griffith partners, operate the McSwain. A new class A house will open in Elk City January 1, seating 300, with Tom Davidson in charge. Vinita on January 1 will have a new 500-seat, class B house with Foster Lyman in charge. This theatre will be operated by Consolidated Theatres, Griffith subsidiary.

The Rex, at Wink, Texas, will reopen on January 1 with Joe DeIorio, Griffith city manager, in charge of the Rex and the Rig. The Orpheum, at Okmulgee, Okla., recently installed 300 new upholstered seats on the lower floor as well as new carpeting and drapes throughout. The Rialto, at Chickasha, Okla., remodeled, redecorated, seating 800, was opened November 3 on the same day, the Cozy, in the same city, closed. Ollie Brownie is manager. The Yale, at Claremore, Okla., seating 760, will be remodeled soon.

Micro-Copy Film To Be Simplified

A proposed simplified practice recommendation concerning the width of photographic film used in making micro-copies of documents has been mailed to libraries, educational institutions and others interested, for their consideration and approval, according to an announcement of the Division of Simplified Practice, of the National Bureau of Standards.

The program establishes two widths of photographic film, to aid in stabilizing the development of this specific method of reproducing records, which are 16 mm. and 35 mm. A representative standing committee will keep the recommendation abreast of current technical research concerning the relationship of film width to lens systems, image size, reduction ratio and film emulsion. This study is being coordinated to the end that essential apparatus may be designed, built and distributed with the assurance that abrupt changes will not hamper the users.

Copies of the proposed recommendation may be obtained from the Division of Simplified Practice, National Bureau of Standards, Washington, D. C.

"Classic" Films Gain in Schools

The approaching release of a number of new films of outstanding literary merit has led the motion picture committee of the Department of Secondary Education of the National Education Association to recommend the preparation of additional photoplay study guides of the type that has become increasingly popular with high school teachers and students in recent months.

On the basis of the department's recommendations, Educational and Recreational Guides, Inc., of Newark, N. J., plans shortly to publish study guides for the following pictures, under the general editorship of Max J. Herzberg, of the Weequahic High School of Newark:

- ROMEO AND JULIET—By William Shakespeare.
- A TALE OF TWO CITIES—Charles Dickens' stirring romance of the French Revolution.
- MUTINY ON THE BOUNTY—A dramatic chapter of England's naval history by Charles Nordhoff and James Norman Hall.
- IVANHOE—By Sir Walter Scott.
- CAPTAINS COURAGEOUS — Rudyard Kipling's well-known tale of high adventure.
- KNIGHTS OF THE ROUND TABLE —A saga of the heroic days of King Arthur.
- MARY OF SCOTLAND — Maxwell Anderson's famous stage drama brought to the screen.
- MARIE ANTOINETTE—A dramatization of Stefan Zweig's arresting novel of French court life.
- LITTLE LORD FAUNTLEROY—Frances H. Burnett's ever-popular story.
- QUALITY STREET — By Sir James Barrie.
- THE GOOD EARTH — A unique presentation of Pearl S. Buck's widely read story of life in China.

These study guides are made available to high school students and teachers throughout the country on a subscription basis. Similar study guides have already been completed for four current photoplays, "Les Miserables", "A Midsummer Night's Dream", "The Last Days of Pompeii" and "The Three Musketeers".

The motion picture committee of the department plans also to publish an appraisal of the educational value of these and other photoplays in current issues of Secondary Education, the official publication of the department.

Five-Reel Featurettes Proposed as Solution of Double Feature Problem at the Studio — American Producers Buy Story Market Away from the British — Ten Pictures Are Started, Nine Others Completed

A PLAN to solve the double bill problem in theatres through the production of five-reel featurettes, with wellknown box office personalities presented, is being considered by Edward Small, vice-president of Reliance Productions.

The idea, Mr. Small believes, would not only be a boon to exhibitors but would give Hollywood producers opportunity to devote more time to the making of additional and better Class A productions inasmuch as the cost and production time of the featurettes would not be as great as is now required for Class B pictures being made strictly for dual presentation purposes.

Mr. Small points out that the average program at the double feature theatre is of the following length: first feature 8,100 feet; second feature 6,750, newsreel 800, comedy 1,600, cartoon 630 and trailers 500, or a total of 18,580 feet requiring 206 screen minutes.

"If adapted," Mr. Small says, "my featurettes would be about 4,000 feet long, thereby eliminating more than half an hour from the double bill. At the same time they would give audiences a second feature containing just as much entertainment, if not more, than can be found in a picture of longer footage. It's the old story of good things coming in small packages. The casts would be of high quality, headed by at least two well known names. The pictures would be a new type of screen story of the action, adventure, romance, comedy or musical type.

"The magazine field abounds with good story material, but there is not enough actual story in the average short story for an 8,000-foot feature. I can see the featurettes bringing to the screen, exactly as written, the stories of Paul Gallico, Richard Connell, Rex Beach, Fanny Heaslip Lea and other noted writers.

"The chief reason for double features is competition between neighboring theatres. One of the major troubles, from an audience standpoint, is that the programs are too long because the second or B picture is of the standard length of about 6,500 feet."

Hollywood Captures British Story Market

A year ago American producers were alarmed by the threat of British productions invading the domestic market. The success in this country of such pictures as "The Private Life of Henry VIII" and "Catherine the Great," among others, provided solid substance for their fears. But suddenly our British competitors found themselves on the defensive in their own particular domain.

American producers did not immediately meet the British with their own choice of weapons and establish production in Europe. Rather they did something more subtle. They stole the British story market right out from under the cousins' noses. They bought typical English stories, produced them here to meet with remarkable success in many cases and to confound totally their rivals, who found it necessary to import American talent to write, act in and direct British pictures for strictly British consumption first, but which they also anticipated would arouse American enthusiasm.

WELFARE BOARD APPEAL WINS EXTRAS' PAY FIGHT

As a result of their appeal to the State Industrial Welfare Board, thirty extra girls in Hollywood have been handed checks for $15 each, and have been tendered the regrets of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer over any inconvenience.

The girls appeared in a storm scene for "Riff Raff" and after being buffeted by water and wind machines, felt that they were entitled to stunt workers' minimum of $35 instead of extras' pay. Mrs. Mabel Kinney, commissioner of the Welfare Board, barred press and public from the hearing of the case. The Screen Actors' Guild is interested in the case to the extent of asking why the hearing was secret, and why the girls were not paid the full $35.

Of great importance, yet probably not one of the first of Hollywood-made typically British stories that opened the eyes of Englishmen as to what was afoot, was "David Copperfield," produced by David O. Selznick for MGM. Then in sequence followed American production of distinctively British stories which, in addition to proving generally successful in this country, just about knocked the pins from under the Elstree executives when they checked up on the business they were doing in British theatres. Included among the many pictures, some of which were more successful abroad than here, are "Clive of India," "Vanessa," "The Informer," "Werewolf of London," "Becky Sharp," "The Little Minister," "Dark Angel," "The Last Outpost," "Return of Peter Grim," "Peter Ibbetson" and "Mutiny on the Bounty."

Every one of these pictures paid tribute to British personalities or literature. They were the material which British producers might have locked up for themselves. And then America took England's deified Shakespeare and made "Midsummer Night's Dream."

The future does not promise to ease British embarrassment a bit. "A Tale of Two Cities" and "The Great Impersonation," two typically British but American made, stories are practically ready for release. Selznick has "Little Lord Fauntleroy" started and "Tom Brown's Schooldays" set for quick shooting. Warner has "Anthony Adverse" in work. MGM plans "Romeo and Juliet." Among others to come are "Adventures of Robin Hood," "National Velvet" and "Oliver Twist."

And now MGM, with Ben Goetz at its head, will establish production in London.

Ten Films Start; Nine Are Finished

Adhering to the normal seasonal pace, 10 pictures were started during the past week. In the same period nine were finished. The total number of productions actually in work stands at an average figure. The activity promises to pick up considerably during the next few weeks as production announcements of future schedules indicate busy days ahead for major and independent companies.

MGM started three pictures. In "Three Live Ghosts" will be seen Richard Arlen, Cecelia Parker, Beryl Mercer, Claude Allister, J. M. Kerrigan, Charles MacNaughton and Dudley Digges. H. Bruce Humberstone is directing. The second picture, "Wife vs. Secretary," adapted from a Faith Baldwin novel, will present Clark Gable, Myrna Loy and Jean Harlow. Clarence Brown is directing. The third, "Three on a Bench," is a Hal Roach production. It will have Jimmy Savo, Isabel Jewell, Leon Errol, Edward Gargan, Spanky McFarland, Billie Thomas and Kewpie Morgan. Gus Meins is directing.

Two pictures started at Warner. "Red Apple" has Ross Alexander, Anita Louise, Spring Byington, John Eldredge, Alma Lloyd, Gene Lockhart, Joseph Cawthorn and Dick Purcell in the cast to date. William McGann is directing. With major attention concentrated on trick background shots, work also started on "The Walking Dead," which will feature Boris Karloff and Margaret Churchill. Michael Curtiz is directing.

Independents Active

Invincible Pictures started "Tango." The cast lists Marion Nixon, Chick Chandler, Marie Prevost, George Meeker, Herman Bing, Franklin Pangborn and Virginia Howell. Phil Rosen is directing.

"The Singing Vagabond" went on the stage at Republic Studios. The complete cast includes Gene Autry, Ann Rutherford, Barbara Pepper, Smiley Burnette, Frank Larue, Warner Richmond, Grace Goodall, Niles Welsh, Allan Sears, Bob Burns, Charles King, Celia McCanon, Henry Roquemore and Ray Benard. Carl Pierson is directing.

Twentieth Century-Fox started "A Message to Garcia." Wallace Beery, John Boles,

"PROPAGANDA" BRINGS BAN ON RED FILMS

Detroit Police Refuse Permit for "Peasants"; Hearing on "Youth of Maxim" in January

All Soviet films are apparently banned in Detroit in the future on the ground of Communist propaganda, it is indicated in the refusal of Sergeant Joseph M. Kollar, Detroit police film censor, to issue a permit for the showing of "Peasants" by the Cinema Guild, following recent similar action against "The Youth of Maxim."

Whether the Detroit Cinema Guild in the future will be permitted to exhibit Russian-made pictures, however, really depends on the decision of the Michigan supreme court, to which the Guild has appealed the ruling of the police censor in the case of "The Youth of Maxim." The appeal is scheduled for hearing in January.

Amkino Corporation of New York, the official distributing agency in this country for Soviet films, has finally decided it would be useless to make any further attempts to exhibit Russian films in the motor city pending adjudication of the court appeal. The censor's attitude indicates that no Soviet-manufactured pictures are to be permitted exhibition in Detroit, said Nicola Napoli, assistant to Vladimir I. Verlinsky, president of Amkino, this week. The company, however, does not plan any action against the censor's ruling but will rest its future course on the outcome of the appeal.

None Shown in Two Years

Mr. Napoli said that no Russian films had been shown in Detroit for almost two years, and pointed out that "Peasants" has not been rejected anywhere else. He said the Pennsylvania state censors refused to pass "The Youth of Maxim," but lifted the bars to "Peasants," which Detroit turned down on the ground it glorifies the Soviet method of curtailing the efforts of the individual farmer, shows Communism triumphing over all and endeavors to instill Red ideals in the minds of the audience.

Explaining his action, Sergeant Kollar said this week: "The idea of regimenting and leveling human beings is not the American plan. The Soviet methods in attempting to sell themselves to the masses of this country only curtails progress, which will surely come if only more people will get their minds off Russia and concentrate on this country."

Continue Agitation

While demanding the freedom of the screen for Soviet propaganda films, radical elements continue to agitate against American films, and in the Red press this week there were calls to demonstrations at the Capitol Theatre on New York's Broadway when MGM's "Riffraff" opens soon. The picture deals with longshoremen's strikes on the West Coast. Sympathizers have been enlisted in a boycott move, and several other current and forthcoming releases are included.

The Reds struck at Hearst Metrotone News in Brooklyn, N. Y., last week when they forced the proprietor of a neighborhood store to remove the advertising of Loew's Pitkin Theatre from the wall of the building.

Court Orders Atlas Action To Continue

The appellate division of the New York supreme court last Friday sustained a decision by Supreme Court Justice Edward Dore which denied a motion by Atlas Corporation to dismiss a summons and complaint against the company, its officers and directors which was brought last spring by William F. Walsh, an Atlas stockholder, as a result of the investment company's dealings with Paramount and other companies.

The action charged officers and directors of Atlas with mismanagement and dissipation of assets and asked that, if the charges were proved, that the directors and officers be removed and a receiver appointed. The Walsh complaint alleged that Atlas was venturing outside its investment field in agreeing to underwrite the new $6,400,000 Paramount stock issue and cited its excursions into other film fields as evidences of Floyd B. Odlum's alleged ambition to become an influence in the film industry. Mr. Odlum, president of Atlas, is a member of the Paramount board. His company recently purchased one-half of Radio Corporation of America's investment in Radio-Keith-Orpheum and acquired a three year option for the remainder. It is also reported to own Twentieth Century-Fox and Warner Brothers securities.

In a statement issued following the court's ruling, Atlas described the decision as being without "significance" and indicating only that the action would now be contested on its merits.

"The decision is of no general significance," the Atlas statement said. "Walsh, a holder of 200 shares of Atlas stock, purchased in 1934 shortly before the suit was started, brought a suit which the Atlas management believed to be without foundation. The only transaction complained of specifically resulted in a substantial indicated profit to the corporation. Accordingly, an attempt was made to dismiss the suit on technical grounds. The decision merely means that the suit will now proceed and will be defended on its merits.

"No attempt has been made by motion to procure an injunction or receiver," the Atlas statement continued, "and the question was not even considered by the court. Counsel for the corporation doubt whether such an attempt will be made, and that if any attempt is made, predict that it will fail."

Barbara Stanwyck, William Stelling, Rita Cansino and Alan Hale have the leading roles. George Marshall is directing.

"These Three," title selected for the picturization of the widely discussed "The Children's Hour," was started by Goldwyn Productions. It will feature Miriam Hopkins, Merle Oberon, Joel McCrea and Alice Brady. William Wyler is directing.

Universal began work on "Sutter's Gold." With James Cruze directing it will feature Edward Arnold, Lee Tracy, Montague Love, C. Henry Gordon and Jim Thorpe.

Three Finish Two Each

Three companies each finished two pictures. At 20th Century-Fox, "Professional Soldier" moved to the editorial department. The cast, which features Victor McLaglen and Freddie Bartholomew, also includes Gloria Stuart, Constance Collier, Michael Whelan, C. Henry Gordon, Pedro de Cordoba, Lumsden Hare, Walter Kingsford, Lester Matthews, Rollo Lloyd, Maurice Cass and General Savitsky. Tay Garnett directed. "Whispering Smith Speaks," a Sol Lesser production for 20th-Fox release, also was finished. George O'Brien is starred, supported by Irene Ware, Kenneth Thompson, Victor Potel, Maude Allen, Spencer Charters, Frank Sheridan and William V. Mong. David Howard directed.

Warners Completes Pair

Warner completed "Backfire" and "Ceiling Zero." In the first picture are Ross Alexander, Patricia Ellis, Lyle Talbot, Eddie Acuff, Henry O'Neill, Egon Brecher, Eleanor Wesselhoeft, William Pawley, Ronnie Goxby, George Breakston, Olin Howard and Joseph Crehan. Frank McDonald directed. The second feature presents James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, June Travis, Craig Reynolds, Stuart Erwin, Martha Tibbetts, Henry Wadsworth, Robert Light, Edward Gargan, Garry Owen, Carlyle Moore, Addison Richards, James Bush, Isabel Jewell and Barton MacLane. Howard Hawks directed.

Others Completed

MGM's pair are "Kind Lady" and "Whipsaw." The cast for the first includes Aline MacMahon, Basil Rathbone, Doris Lloyd, Donald Meek, Nola Luxford, Murray Kinnell, Dudley Digges, Ely Malyon, Barbara Shields and Mary Carlisle. George Seitz directed. In "Whipsaw" Spencer Tracy and Myrna Loy are starred, supported by Harvey Stephens, Clay Clement, William Harrigan, Robert Gleckler, Robert Warwick, Halliwell Hobbes, Paul Stanton, Charles Wilson, Don Rowan, Charles Irwin, Irene Franklin, Lillian Leighton and Anthony Hughes. Sam Wood directed.

Universal finished "Silver Spurs," featuring Buck Jones. In support are Muriel Evans, J. J. McGowan, Robert Frazer and Denny Meadows. Ray Taylor directed.

Independent Film Finished

"Hitch Hike Lady" was completed at Republic. Cast names are Alison Skipworth, Mae Clarke, Arthur Treacher, James Ellison, Warren Hymer, Baryl Mercer, Del Henderson, Lionel Belmore, Christian Rub and George Hayes. Aubrey Scotto directed.

Ruling in Erpi-Vocafilm Case

Lewis Landes, attorney, of New York, this week issued the following statement, in the matter of Vocafilm Corporation's suit against American Telephone, Western Electric and Electrical Research Products:

"Judge Knox handed down an opinion this morning in the matter of the Vocafilm Corporation of America against American Telephone and Telegraph Company, Western Electric Company, Incorporated, and Electrical Research Products Inc., which seems to be of far-reaching import.

"The defendants in the Vocafilm action, who are being sued for $65,000,000 made a motion after over a year for leave to amend their answer by setting up various patent infringements and contending that if the patents of said defendants were being infringed, the Vocafilm Corporation would not be entitled to any money. Judge Knox granted the motion permitting the defendants to amend, upon condition, however, that they pay the sum of $10,000 to the plaintiff for the purpose of defending the patent litigation.

"Recently, the American Telephone and Telegraphy Company served a notice upon Colonel Lewis Landes, the attorney for the plaintiff, advising him that they would not serve an amended answer, but at the same time advising that they would offer evidence at the trial of the action showing infringement. Colonel Landes then made a motion to quash the notice upon the ground that the defendants were intending to circumvent the order of Judge Knox so that the plaintiff could not properly fight the alleged patent infringement action. This morning, Judge Knox handed down the following opinion on this motion:

" 'Motion granted unless defendants stipulate that their declared purpose to turn this litigation into a vast patent infringement suit shall be affected by the provisions in reference to a defense of patent infringement contained in my order of May 11, 1935. The notice now given is designated, I have no doubt, to obviate the necessity of compliance with that order.'

"Colonel Landes announces that the case will be ready for trial some time in January, 1936, and that an out-of-town Judge will be required to preside, and also that the case will last approximately eight weeks on trial. The star witness will be Mr. David Hochreich, the the president of the Vocafilm Corporation of America, and various outstanding men in the motion picture industry will also appear."

Hollywood Hall of Fame Seeks San Diego Space

Elated with the success of the 1935 California Pacific International Exposition, when 350,000 saw how motion pictures are made, those in charge of the Hollywood Hall of Fame are negotiating for space in the 1936 San Diego world's fair. The 1936 exposition will open on January 15 and continue until September 9, California admission day.

Will Hays, arriving in Hollywood with Mrs. Hays, Tuesday, for his regular winter visit, announced that 2,000 committees have been organized throughout the country for the Will Rogers Memorial Fund drive. The drive has been extended to December 15, he said.

Brands FWC Dividend As "Fraudulent" Step

Senator William G. McAdoo branded the Fox West Coast $8,000,000 dividend a "fraudulent transaction" at the Senatorial Committee bankruptcy hearing in Los Angeles. William H. Moore, one of the three trustees, testified FWC did not have the cash for the dividend, but had an earned surplus of that amount.

Mr. McAdoo declared that if the transaction had been legitimate, the Government would have been entitled to income tax. Referee Samuel W. McNabb, following Mr. Moore, testified he had no knowledge anything was wrong with the bankruptcy, nor was he aware FWC had turned over its assets to a new corporation a few days prior to entering bankruptcy.

RFC Loan to Roxy Is Not Necessary

With improvement in the financial status of New York's Roxy Theatre, various reorganization plans for the property under Section 77B of the Bankruptcy Act will be abandoned, it is understood, the bondholders' committee now believing that the loan of $750,000 requested from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation will not be necessary.

The theatre has paid $222,619 to the City of New York on account of back taxes, Howard S. Cullman reported in a financial statement filed with the United States district court in making application for an interim allowance of $20,000 for his services as trustee for the year ended June 13, 1935.

Judge Francis G. Caffey set December 10 for a hearing on the application, and at that time, will also hear the requests of Proskauer, Rose and Paskus for $75,000 as counsel to the receiver, and Barrow, Wade, Guthrie and Company, accountants, for $1,769.

Ramish Interested In Universal Deal

Adolph Ramish, who formerly was interested in Fox West Coast, and at present is a participant in the J. J. Franklin Honolulu Theatre Enterprises, is financially interested in Universal with Standard Capital and Charles R. Rogers he told Motion Picture Daily in Hollywood this week.

"I cannot say how much I have invested in the Universal purchase negotiations," he said. "However, I am a financial participant in the deal." He advised, "Watch the list in Universal preferred stock."

Meanwhile, in New York, Standard denied the rumors current in Hollywood that it had offered to William Fiske's and Nicholas Ludington's Western Pictures Corporation a participation in the option to purchase Universal. J. C. Cowdin also denied that the American Telephone and Telegraph Company might become associated with his company in the event the option on Universal is taken up.

Zanuck Rise Is 'Fortune' Subject

"Can Darryl Zanuck do as well with the expensive, polished type of picture that he is now making as he did with the hasty melodramas of his apprenticeship?" asks Fortune, monthly magazine, in its latest issue.

Mr. Zanuck's rise to power rests upon two qualities: (1) the ability to create sensational dramas out of the day's news, and (2) the knack of making paying pictures cheaply, the article states. He has a "flair," says Fortune, "for hard, swift-moving masculine pictures which hold a double appeal for his employers; they shock the public into coming to see them, and they were inexpensive to produce. Zanuck lived up to his reputation for economy by discouraging costly retakes, holding rididly to his production schedules. He keeps one eye constantly on the budget."

"Will Twentieth Century-Fox need another producer with subtler tastes to supplement the peculiar Zanuck talent?" the article continues. "No answer to that question can be made until the box-office returns are in from a variety of sources. For though the cream of the domestic sale of a picture, around 80 per cent, is skimmed within three months after its release, the rest may take another year or two years to dribble in. The British theatres wait a few months and watch how a picture sells at home before they buy it. And then another six months may elapse before they show it."

The question raised by the magazine as to whether or not Mr. Zanuck can make the subtler type picture isn't being taken seriously by Joseph M. Schenck in Hollywood, however. The question has already been answered, he says.

Research Council to Give Sound Course

The Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences in Hollywood has announced a course in the fundamentals of sound recording for studio technicians, to start Monday evening, December 2, and run for a period of thirteen weeks.

The course will be given to 100 technicians, apportioned among the studios and selected by the studio sound department heads. Designed to increase and broaden the knowledge of the men working in the sound departments in their own particular field, the course will be given without charge to those men interested.

Classes will be held in two sections, limited to 50 students each, one section meeting on Monday and Thursday evenings, the other on Tuesday and Friday evenings, at the Hollywood High School.

A. P. Hill, Acoustic and Commercial Superintendent of Electrical Research Products, Inc., will instruct all classes of both sections, having been assigned to assist the council in this activity through the cooperation of his company.

At a dinner, one of the guests, knowing that Boris had been a White Russian and that his aristocratic family today is living in poverty in the Soviet Republic, began taking wide wallops at the Communistic experiment. Instantly young Boris came to the Soviet's defense. "For years I was naturally embittered, but I have learned to respect the extraordinary advances my country is making. The yarn of the crooner, played by Dick Powell, who runs for governor, and is elected, in Fox's "Thanks a Million," is not as far-fetched as it seems. The story, according to Sid Skolsky, was inspired by the career of an orchestra leader who, on a gag-and-entertainment program, ran for mayor of Seattle. One of his slogans was, "A Glass of Beer for Every Passenger on a Street Car." He was defeated, but came back and ran on the Democratic ticket for the office of lieutenant governor of the State of Washington. He's Vic Meyer, and today he is the lieutenant governor of Washington. And it serves him right.

INTERNATIONAL SCOOP!

At first we thought that someone was trying to plant an exploitation idea for Gaumont's new "Transatlantic Tunnel," but New York sources swear there is absolute truth to the extremely closely held diplomatic and Wall Street information that the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics will shortly spring an international surprise with the announcement of completed arrangements for the erection of a railroad that will span the American continent to Russia, the first railroad in the history of the world linking the Old World and the New, in five days running time. And so we pass this information on to the press of the world.

The railroad would be built over the Alaskan Peninsula, jutting out from the Alaskan mainland at the southwestern tip, and on over the Aleutian Islands which densely dot the Bering Sea, thence on to Russia.

Considerable private American capital will be enlisted, underwriting, with Russian money, a huge plan of the Soviets to mortgage a large part of the Republic.

The town of Mai Uece in Ethiopia marks one of the latest advances to be made by Il Doochie. The Italians call it "Mae West," no doubt hoping that Haile Selassie will cumup 'n' see them some time.

Talking about Louise Rainer, actress, the London Daily Express reports that "when Louis B. Mayer saw her, his expensive frame trembled with such emotion as he has not shown since Garbo first thought she'd go home."

"Expensive frame," Mr. Editor? Or expansive?

The well known epithet "Rubinoff and his violin" is no accident. Fight fans gave it to Dave.

Some 20 years ago a Minneapolis factory "enjoyed" the services of an 18-year-old youth from Grodno, in Russia. He did not distinguish himself at work. Before and after hours, however, he indulged in the idiosyncrasy which earned him a new name.

The young man, David Rubinoff, had earned enough money to buy a mediocre violin.

The violin, priceless in his economic scale, loomed the gigantic factor of his life. He took it to work, kept it close at hand all day, and toddled it to prize fights, his one nocturnal extravagance. This removed temptations from kidnapers. His baby stayed with him even in bed!

It was this oddity of habit which won him the epithet—Rubinoff and his violin! Fight enthusiasts so christened him after seeing the small, unknown youth clutch a violin night after night at the fights, the while he shouted, "Sock him on the button!"

Charles E. Jaynes, Jr., five-year-old California evangelist, opened a three-day offensive the other night in Kansas City against "the devil—that sly old fox!"

Little Charlie, a disciple of the four-square gospel of Aimee Semple McPherson, has been preaching since shortly after his second birthday, according to his nurse, Miss Neva Duff.

"Yes, brother," chirped five-year-old Charlie, "I make altar calls. I preached at a devil's dance once, but I left before they started dancing. The devil—he's a sly old fox. He sets his traps. They're cigarettes, cigars and pipes."

Funny he said nothing about the movies.

Pete Egan, in Calgary, Alberta, Canada, asked the stenographer patrons of his Palace theatre whether they would marry their bosses, the idea taking the form of a contest to stimulate interest in "She Married Her Boss." That the gals in those backwoods think none too highly of the romantic potentialities of their office superiors can best be illustrated by some of the answers:

"Yes, I'd marry my boss," wrote Helen F., "because I love the simple things in life, and he's the simplest thing I've ever seen."

And, added Edna G., "if a girl can go through a day's grind with her boss and still think he's the only one, then she should marry the brute."

"Why shouldn't a girl marry her boss," agreed Peggy W., "if the fish is willing?"

Chic-Sale-echoes from the primitive old outhouse days still can be heard loud and long in and around New Haven in Connecticut from the exploitation campaign staged by Columbia Pictures of New York for their Joan Bennett picture, "She Couldn't Take It." In the windows of 17 ordinarily dignified New Haven drug stores they placed bottles of the old, liquid, nauseating form of castor oil under the cardboard caption: "She couldn't take it in this form"; and, along with specimens of the newer concentrated capsule physic another card advised: "But, she can take it in this form."

THE CUTTING ROOM

Advance outlines of productions nearing completion as seen by Gus McCarthy of Motion Picture Herald's Hollywood Bureau

PETRIFIED FOREST

Warner

Because of their work in, and the success of, "Of Human Bondage," the teaming of Leslie Howard and Bette Davis in the leading roles in this picture should be of better than ordinary patron and showmanship interest. While Howard has been away from the American production field since that picture, his appearance in the British produced "Scarlet Pimpernel" has kept him in the public eye. Miss Davis having been more active, her forthcoming "Dangerous" should be the means of centering new interest on her.

The story is action dramatic romance of unusual character, inasmuch as it takes on an adventure tinge and culminates with the hero, Howard, in love with the heroine, Miss Davis, sacrificing his life that the girl's romantic and artistic ambitions may be realized.

Based on a play by Robert Sherwood, with Howard seen in the same role he performed on the stage, the screen play is by Charles Kenyon and Elmer Davis. Direction is by Archie Mayo, recently credited with "The Case of the Lucky Legs," "Go Into Your Dance," "Bordertown" and "Desirable." In the main, the locales are the Petrified Forest in the Arizona desert, a spot which gives promise of exceptional backgrounds that will have both entertainment and educational interest as well as different commercial worth.

While presentation of Howard and Miss Davis might create the impression that the story is sophisticated in character, and in some cases it actually is, actual content is of a vein that should prove interesting to the mass mind. Dealing with a man who has his illusions shattered, it proceeds to tell of a love that both participants know cannot be. With courage he saves the girl from a gang of western bad men and when he knows that she cannot get money rightfully hers, assigns her his insurance policy and goes to his death knowing that he has made someone happy.

The supporting cast is large and includes Charley Grapewin, Humphrey Bogart, Dick Foran, Genevieve Tobin, Joseph Sawyer, Eddie Acuff and Arthur Aylesworth. The picture is being produced by Henry Blanke, who supervised "Dangerous."

THE GETAWAY

(Tentative Title)

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

In theme, with relative production values embellishing the idea, this is action, adventure, thrill drama. It is totally devoid of romantic love interest as that quality has come to be commonly accepted. The producers do not claim that it will be a great picture. They believe, however, that inasmuch as it provides patrons with entertainment and personal elements for which they have evidenced a desire, it also affords exhibitors something to sell in concentrating on action-thrill drama in which there is a vein of human interest.

The story is about a boy, his dog and a gang leader, the yarn of a gangster's regeneration wrought through the influence of the boy and his pet. It is being produced in a series of action sequences in which gun roaring chases via automobiles and airplanes figure to achieve the adventure quality. Constantly in danger, the boy and his dog go through it all. In the finish, as rebellious gangsters battle, the boy and his dog are saved by the courage and sacrifice of the regenerated gangster who, before he dies, shows the boy's father how his child can be made happy at home.

The story is by Florence Ryerson and Edgar Allen Woolf. Direction is by Chester Franklin, whose "Sequoia" is remembered both by audiences and showmen. The technique which he showed in handling animals in that picture should be favorably reflected in the manner in which the dog is treated in this.

Joseph Calleia, previously seen as the gangster in "Public Hero No. 1," is again the mobster. He shares the leading roles with Jackie Cooper, whose most recent picture is "O'Shaughnessey's Boy." The third principal the dog, is Rin Tin Tin, Jr. The supporting cast includes several wellknown and a few not quite so familiar names. It lists Lewis Stone, Robert Warwick, Robert Greig, Edward Pawley. who becomes the menace to Cooper and Calleia; Mischa Auer, Wally Mayer, Dwight Frye, William Tannen, Willard Robertson, Robert Livingstone and Sidney Bracey.

WHIPSAW

MGM

No doubt the showmanship feature of this production of which exhibitors will make most capital is Myrna Loy. The star of "The Thin Man" has had controversy with executives during the past several months which has made her more of a front page news figure than if she had been actively engaged in a series of hit shows. Yet Myrna Loy and publicity are not, by any means, all that this production offers to excite the interest of showmen and the public. It provides a whacking action thrill-packed story.

Spencer Tracy is cast in the role opposite Miss Loy in a yarn that bristles with romance—romance at times somewhat racy, but nevertheless a fetching love interest. There are dramatic situations which build suspense. Comedy, resulting from the drama and romance, is potentially promising of being just as important a commercial entertainment feature as was the comic quality of "The Thin Man." The story moves—it has nearly a dozen interesting locales from England to all over eastern and midwest America. Though most of the interest centers upon Miss Loy and Tracy, there is an adequate supporting cast.

Set up of yarn indicates its story in addition to name values. Two bands of crooks are after the same jewels. Loy is a member of one. Insurance people and police are wise as to what may happen. A fake arrest is staged in order to get the G-man hero in alliance with the girl. The two bands of crooks still after the gems, result in a series of sudden shifting chase scenes that take Miss Loy and G-man Tracy riding and flying about the country until the eventually stolen gems are recovered and restored to their owner, and Miss Loy decides that being a cop's wife is better than being the pal of a gang of crooks.

Included among those in support are Harvey Stephens, Clay Clement, William Harrigan, Robert Gleckler, Robert Warwick, Halliwell Hobbes, Charles Wilson and Irene Franklin.

FOLLOW THE FLEET

Radio

Though the patron popularity of Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers is the factor in this production on which showmen will first concentrate, there are many other things more worthy of exploitation attention. A Pandro S. Berman production, being directed by Mark Sandrich, who handled the previous Astaire-Rogers pictures, the intention is that this shall be of the same production scope as were the others. Probably the greatest difference will be found in the character of the story. That, in line with title significance, is a comedy love story of gobs and girls and while the love interest angle promises to be well taken care of with a proper balance of light drama and suspense and that vein of conflict that is always common to such type story, it is also planned to give comedy contrast a broader swing in dialogue, action and situations and the substantiating relative chorus singing-dancing production effects.

Of further showmanship worth is the fact that the musical numbers are the product of Irving Berlin, whose numbers were featured in "Top Hat" and that the screen play is by Dwight Taylor and Allan Scott, who functioned similarly on that picture. Added dialogue is contributed by Dorothy Yost.

The supporting cast, with the exception of one new personality, is composed exclusively of known screen names. The newcomer is Harriet Hilliard, erstwhile radio performer, who with Astaire, Rogers and Randolph Scott is the center of action and interest.

With production settings for the spectacular singing and dancing sequences in the finale of the same good looking, impressive caliber as in the previous Astaire-Rogers features, there will be plenty of singing and dancing by these two and also some outstanding mass group settings.

BACKFIRE

Warner

Title sense signifying story character, this production is an action melodrama, contrasted by romantic love interest, both of which are pepped up by comedy. The whole of it in nature is semi-topical. It's about a girl who, in love with a small town reporter, becomes the decoy of a dangerous bandit. Her fear for her sweetheart's life causes her to tip the bandit off as to the whereabouts of a pursuing posse of G-men and ace newspaper reporters, and puts both in a dire predicament. When the girl finds out that the bandit and his gang plan a real bit of bank robbing, officers and reporters deride her. With the aid of an old ex-sheriff, the hero frustrates the villains, scoops his big shot rivals, and with the reward money marries the girl, meanwhile spurring offers for crack big city jobs to remain as the editor of the small town sheet.

The locale, the midwest area made famous by the exploits of the James and Dalton boys, has its topical counterpart in the fact that the modern bad men are composites not only of those legendary characters, but also the modern Dillinger, Nelson and Karpis mobs.

Production is based on a story by Earl Felton with screen play by Roy Chandlor. Direction is by William Clemens, who has handled several of this company's recent secondary features.

The cast features William Gargan and Marguerite Churchill, long absent from the screen, in the lead roles. Ricardo Cortez is the bandit and Chic Sale the sheriff. Other prominent personalities in the story are Claire Dodd, George E. Stone, Joseph Crehan, Joseph King and Maude Eburne. Minor players include many of the producing company's stock player cast.

PROFESSIONAL SOLDIER

20th Century - Fox

For primary showmanship consideration this production presents Freddie Bartholomew, boy star of "Copperfield" and "Karenina"; the professional soldier Victor McLaglen of "What Price Glory," "Cockeyed World," "Lost Patrol," and more recently, "The Informer," and the director, Tay Garnett, the man who made "China Seas." There is also the fact that the story is by Damon Runyon, noted news and magazine writer, whose screen contributions, notably "Lady for a Day," and "Little Miss Marker," are favorably remembered. It is being produced by Darryl Zanuck, who is confident that the picture will take a place among his most important features.

In theme the story is comedy alternating with drama, plus intrigue that brings on battle. Having a mythical European principality for its locale, it is substantially an adventure picture of a nation in revolution. A hard boiled American soldier of fortune finds himself the protector of a young king. For love interest it has a comedy romance involving the soldier and the young king's shrewish, nagging nurse, which is the soldier of fortune's greatest menace. Also it carries a legitimate romance of young love, between Gloria Stuart, who has been seen in several pictures, principally Universal's, and a newcomer, Michael Whelan.

Production values being of the class which the producers think the importance of the feature justifies, the name value of the cast, in addition to those mentioned, is supplemented with Dixie Dunbar, soon to be seen in "King of Burlesque"; Constance Collier, C. Henry Gordon, Pedro De Cordoba, Lumsden Hare, Walter Kingsford, Lester Matthews, Rollo Lloyd and Maurice Cass. In addition to these the picture also will present a group of widely publicized professional soldiers of fortune, headed by General Savitsky.

SHOOT THE CHUTES

United Artists - Goldwyn

For ready showmanship purposes of more than ordinary exploitation availability, this Eddie Cantor annual provides much in addition to the value of his name. A comedy, with music and dancing, it is adapted from a recent Saturday Evening Post serial, titled "Dreamland," by Clarence Budington Kelland. This possible contact exploitation angle, which can be adapted to stimulate patron interest, is furthered by the fact that Kelland also authored Harold Lloyd's last picture, "The Cat's Paw."

Adapted by Frank Butler, the screen play is by Francis Martin and Walter DeLeon. Music and lyrics are by Harold Arlen and Lew Brown, and dances and ensembles were directed by Robert Alton. Direction is by Norman Taurog, whose most recent comedy romance singing and dancing pictures are "Big Broadcast of 1936," "College Rhythm" and "We're Not Dressing."

The story is that of an humble little college tailor who gets mixed up in a comedy gangster-tinged outdoor amusement racket. Metamorphosing from a spineless worm into a hectic man of action, he transforms the sludgy amusement center into a hectic hive of hilarity. Outwitting the mobsters at every turn, he makes a fortune for the park owner and wins the girl for himself.

The supporting cast is made up of many familiar and several not so familiar names. Ethel Merman is the heroine whom he respectfully adores and Sally Eilers the menace to his romantic ambitions. Cantor's radio stooge Parkyakarkus appears as his bodyguard, and Helen Lowell is the amusement center owner. Important featured players are Gordon Jones, previously seen in "Let 'Em Have It"; William Frawley, Jack LaRue and Brian Donleavy. Minor roles are handled by a large number of players, the most familiar being Edward Brophy, Charles Wilson, Charles Richman, Lucien Littlefield and William V. Mong. The vaudeville teams, Chilton and Thomas, dancers, and The Flying Kitchins will be seen in park episodes which also present the Goldwyn girls, singing-dancing beauty chorus.

Reduced Insurance Rates Credited to New Invention

A reduction in insurance rates of twenty per cent on those buildings housing projection equipment which is protected by the Hawkins Projector Safety Device has been obtained through the efforts of the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences as a result of tests during the last three months at the RKO Radio studios in Hollywood.

The device, consisting of a specially adapted sprocket fitted to the projector, with the necessary electrical relays and switches, operates to stop the projector motors and shut off the arc light whenever a break occurs in the film.

New Booking Combine Started in Philadelphia

With Charles Segall reported slated to head the organization, Associated Theatres of Pennsylvania, regarded as a booking combine, has been organized in Philadelphia. The group is reported to embrace more than 20 theatres, principally within city limits. Ben Golder, former congressman and attorney for independent exhibitor plaintiffs in the recent double feature test case against distributors, is expected to be the organization's counsel.

New Fox Studio Camera Used for First Time

A new type of motion picture camera, developed and patented by the Twentieth Century-Fox studios, was put into use for the first time on the production, "Show Them No Mercy," which is scheduled to be released soon.

The camera, designed and built by Grover Laube, C. M. Miller, R. C. Stevens and E. A. Kaufman, studio technicians, is rifle shaped, compact and minus the familiar "blimp" or "noise blanket" formerly used to eliminate the sound of the motor. The new machine is mechanically silent, making the old type and cumbersome hood unnecessary.

First Division Ready To Start New Lineup

Announcement of the completed nationalized First Division Exchanges distribution setup is expected late this week or early next week, following a meeting of the board of directors of the company.

GOVERNMENT SUSPENDS FILM TRUST INQUIRIES

Decision to Hold Up Actions Pending St. Louis Civil Suit Follows United States Defeat in Recent Criminal Action

The United States Government has suspended all its widespread activities and secret investigations directed against distributors on charges of possible conspiracy in violation of the anti-trust laws, pending determination of the civil suit in St. Louis against Warners, Paramount and RKO, in the Harry-Arthur Fanchon and Marco case.

And, defeat of the Government in the St. Louis civil action would, Washington believes, bring to an end, for some time at least, efforts of the Department of Justice to "clean up" the motion picture industry.

The Department, which was defeated three weeks ago in its effort to find Paramount, RKO and Warners guilty on a criminal-indictment conspiracy charge, has in hand dozens of complaints from independent owners against various distributors, particularly from southern California and Texas. All these will now be "pigeonholed" pending the outcome of the St. Louis civil action, through which the Government will seek to enjoin the defendant distributors from alleged refusal to provide first run pictures to the Ambassador, Missouri and New Grand Central theatres as was complained of in the criminal-indictment complaint.

Judge George H. Moore, in St. Louis federal court, who presided over the criminal-indictment jury trial, this week voluntarily disqualified himself from sitting in the Government's civil suit. His disqualification had been asked by the defendant Warner, RKO and Paramount companies, on grounds of prejudice. Judge Moore overruled their affidavits on Monday and then disqualified himself. Judge Kimbrough Stone, presiding justice of the United States circuit court of appeals, must now select another justice to hear the Government's plea.

Misunderstanding on Procedure

Furthermore, there seems to be some misunderstanding as to just what the legal procedure will be in connection with this equity case.

Russell Hardy, special assistant to United States Attorney General Homer Cummings, who directed the prosecution of the criminal anti-trust conspiracy case, proposed late last week to Judge Moore that the court could act immediately on the temporary restraining order upon presentation of the affidavit that the situation covered by the testimony in the criminal case continues. This affidavit would be supported by the transcript in the criminal case. Mr. Hardy has taken the position that the verdict of "Not Guilty" has no bearing on the equity proceedings. However, his view is not accepted by attorneys for the defendant corporations, who hold that the equity case was blown out of the water also.

Should the new judge decide to grant the preliminary injunction, there would still remain the question of whether this injunction should be made permanent. If that stage is ever reached it will mean that the entire situation must be gone into very thoroughly once more. The Government would have greater leeway and probably could introduce testimony touching on developments in the situation after Jan. 11, 1935, the date when the criminal indictment was voted by the grand jury for the federal court.

Mr. Hardy has not yet dismissed the criminal charge against Abel Cary Thomas, secretary and general counsel for Warner Brothers. In view of the jury's verdict, Mr. Thomas stands in the unusual position of being accused of having conspired alone.

Pressing to Conclusion

Speaking frankly this week of the importance which he attributes to the case, Attorney General Cummings, at Washington, declared that the Department would press it to a conclusion.

The Attorney General's discussion is seen in Washington as evidencing a determination by the Department to be guided by the result of this case in planning its future operations with respect to motion picture distributors. Until it is settled, Mr. Cummings said, nothing will be done on other film complaints pending.

Coming on the heels of a smashing defeat in its criminal case, an adverse verdict in the civil suit is seen as effectually halting any ideas the Department may have had of a "front page" drive against practices in the industry, but may lead to recommendations from other sources that Congress give serious consideration to block booking legislation. Such a verdict also would afford the distributors ammunition for their fight against the legislation.

Conversely, a favorable verdict is seen as reassuring Department officials that they were on the right track in the criminal proceedings and might result in bringing similar suits in other jurisdictions.

A second defeat would be viewed generally as a blow to the Department's prestige.

Buffalo Decision Waited

Meanwhile, in Buffalo, attorneys and principals awaited Judge John Knight's decision on a plea to amend the complaint in a suit charging conspiracy in restraint of trade brought in federal court there by the Reliance Theatre, of Lockport, N. Y., against Schine Chain Theatres, Inc., and most of the large distributing companies. Instituted on April 18th, the suit asks $750,000 damages, and originally contained a clause from the now defunct NRA code. In oral argument, attorneys last week sought to have this clause removed from the bill of complaint.

Cummings Says Government Will Press Civil Case; New Defeat Would Quench Any Idea of "Front Page" Drive

Peter Grafiades, president of Reliance and his attorneys, Thompson and Thompson, are pressing the suit for the plaintiffs. Defendants include J. Meyer Schine, John A. May, both of Gloversville, N. Y., Vitagraph, Inc., Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Distributing Corporation, United Artists Corporation, Columbia Picture Corporation, Universal Film Exchange, RKO Distributing Corporation, Fox Film Corporation and Dominion Operating Company.

The plaintiffs allege that the Reliance is the biggest and best equipped theatre in Lockport, where the Schine circuit owns two houses, the Rialto and the Hi-Art, latter now closed. The circuit has conspired with the distributors, according to the complaint, to prevent the plaintiff from getting first-run pictures.

The defendants also have sought to have the lease of the Reliance terminated by threatening to open the Hi-Art, according to the charges.

In a plea before the NRA board, Reliance previously won an order compelling the defendants to release 17 first-run pictures.

Film Bookmarks For All of U. S.

"Motion picture bookmarks," a service provided by the Cleveland Public Library to Cleveland citizens for the last 12 years, will now be made available to citizens throughout the United States by the Office of Education, United States Department of the Interior, on its weekly radio program of "Education in the News."

Motion picture bookmarks are short lists of books which promise interesting reading in connection with current film hits based on famous novels, biographies, or historical episodes. The Cleveland Public Library selects from coming Hollywood releases the pictures most likely to create a demand on the library. Then experts select books interesting to those who are going to see the picture or who have seen the picture. In connection with "Alice Adams," the motion picture bookmark listed not only Tarkington's book, "Alice Adams," but four other books in which there were to be found other Tarkington heroines. Also the bookmark listed four other books on manners which would have helped Alice in her social problems and might even help modern Alices faced with like problems.

Arrangements have been made by the Office of Education and the Cleveland Public Library for sending bookmark lists in advance to Washington. Here they are prepared for radio presentation on the weekly "Education in the News" program.

CLOSED SHOP FOR SCREEN PLAYERS SEEN EARLY MOVE OF NEW GUILD

Equity Points to Closer Cooperation with Screen Actors' Guild; Unionizing Efforts Defeated Several Times in Past

A unionized Hollywood with players, organized through the Screen Actors' Guild, dictating employment and salary terms to the studios, was foreseen this week by Actors Equity Association, the national legitimate actors' union with headquarters in New York, as Equity officials spoke about a closer tie with the West Coast organization. Such matters as a vote of confidence, competition from motion pictures and WPA theatrical projects also engaged their attention.

The cooperation between the East and West actors' groups, which has been close in the past, will become more definite in the near future, it was said at Equity. While the producers several times in the past years have defeated Equity's attempts to force a closed shop upon the studios and have resisted the demands of the Guild and have dealt with non-contract talent through the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, both Equity and the Guild regard the Academy as "a company union", and Equity predicted that the time is not far off when the West Coast union "will be a factor to be reckoned with".

The position sought by the Guild and the power wielded by Equity, which is in effect a closed shop of actors, are of more than academic interest to the motion picture industry, because of the growing interchange of talent between the screen and the stage and since this year the film companies are investing on an unprecedented scale in backing plays on Broadway.

Additionally of interest are these developments of the week:

Warner in Hollywood completed arrangements to finance 15 stage plays in New York, all eventually to be made as films, as other companies also were in the swim.

A motion picture unit to expand film activity in the CCC camps in New York state has been launched under the WPA federal theatre project.

Equity's administrative officers and policies were upheld at a meeting of members at which the future course of the organization was at stake.

From Hollywood came word that the prospect of closer cooperation between the Guilds and Equity in Great Britain and America in the fight for producer recognition was disclosed by Laurence Beilinson, attorney for the Screen Actors' Guild, at a Guild directors' meeting. Mr. Beilinson has returned from England and the East, where he campaigned for the enlistment of players for what he termed "the impending clash."

Many of the Guild members are also affiliated with Equity, and in New York it was said that the Coast group shortly is to inaugurate a method whereby Equity members in Hollywood would retain their memberships through payment of dues through the Guild.

The motion picture companies' interest in what happens in the actors' ranks has been enhanced this season on the eastern front by the heavy investments made in stage productions. Warner's plans for additional Broadway plays will go into work immediately, said Jack L. Warner, production head, with Gilbert Miller putting on George S. Kaufman's "All Are Victorious" as the first, and "Libel" as the second. Among other producers will be Brock Pemberton, Herman Shumlin, George Abbott and Alex Yokel, who staged "Three Men on a Horse" in which Warner has a profitable interest.

Broadway will be used as the testing laboratory for the Warner studio, and even if the plays fail—as the Warner-backed stage productions have this season—the writers will have an opportunity to see their faults for correction in the film productions, said Mr. Warner.

Paramount, meanwhile, has withdrawn its backing from "There's Wisdom in Women", which has been on Broadway since October 30. Since the play has run more than three weeks, the film company has established its right to share in the proceeds from the sale of the screen rights.

Fanchon and Marco, known as theatre operators and producers of stage shows for film houses, are preparing to launch their first legitimate venture in 14 years in a musical revue which has been partly tried out on the road.

MGM Financing

"First Lady," with Jane Cowl, which opened Tuesday night in New York, is a Sam H. Harris production with MGM financing, increasing the number backed by that company to four. Warner is partially financing "Boy Meets Girl" which opened Wednesday after a Philadelphia tryout, and among other of the Warner-financed plays it is expected "Hamlet" will be staged in March with Leslie Howard, Warner contract player. Warner's fourth play to close after a short run this season was "For Valor," which withdrew Saturday night.

The WPA motion picture unit to be established in 129 Civilian Conservation Corps camps in New York state has as its function the placing of visual education instructors and projectionists in the camps, and will provide employment for some 200 persons from the home relief lists. Mrs. Marion Beaufait, formerly in charge of the Visual Education Department of the CCC camps and in educational and instructional film work for 22 years, will continue as supervisor of the unit and will cooperate in coordinating the educational activities in the CCC camps with a film program.

Members of National Advisory Committee Named by Mrs. Flanagan; Free Concerts Turmoil Points to Storm Ahead

Elmer Rice, regional director of the federal theatre projects for New York, emphasized that the relation of the theatre project to the showing of films in the camps is merely that of supplying projectionists and instructors. Most of the expenditures for equipment will be borne by the camps, through a motion picture fund set up from the surplus accumulated at camp exchanges.

Rotating stock companies under the auspices of the WPA project are planned for cities in New York outside the city proper.

Members of a National Advisory Committee appointed by Mrs. Hallie Flanagan, national director of the federal theatre projects, met for the first time in New York on Tuesday. The committee consists of persons long experienced in the theatre.

Among members of the large committee are such figures as Brooks Atkinson, dramatic critic of the New York Times; Burns Mantle, critic of the New York Daily News; Marc Connelly, the playwright; Walter Prichard Eaton of Yale University; Frank Gillmore and Alfred Harding, president and publicity director, respectively, of Equity; Sidney Howard, playwright; Eugene O'Neill, and Lee Shubert, the producer.

Protest Free Concerts

What theatres may be up against when the federal projects get underway shortly after the first of the year is indicated in the turmoil caused by free concerts given by WPA orchestras. While the New York Philharmonic Symphony Society, regarding the concerts as competition, has asked that admissions be charged, the American Federation of Musicians has served an ultimatum that if the WPA institutes paid admissions the union will call a strike December 5 to enforce union wages on the relief projects. Delegates at a conference called by the Associated Musicians of Greater New York among other things opposed the placing of WPA actors and musicians at WPA wages in theatres now dark.

Although the officers and the policies of Actors' Equity were given a vote of confidence at a mass meeting, Monday, by a ballot of 349 to 138, the strife between the parent organization and the Actors' Forum, insurgent minority group, appeared to remain unsettled. Frank Gillmore, Equity president, and Paul Dullzell, executive secretary, had announced they would resign unless the members repudiated the Forum. The Council decided to forego disciplinary action.

Decision on the federal projects comes up next month. In Hollywood a meeting on the WPA problem awaits Mrs. Flanagan's arrival next week.

The Katharine Cornell Foundation, Inc., was formed this week, with the chief purpose to encourage and further the kind of theatre toward which the star has worked during the past several years.

NEIL AGNEW SUCCEEDS SCHAEFER; PARAMOUNT SIGNS NEW B. & K. DEAL

Committee Approves Seven-Year Contract for Balabans to Operate B & K; A. H. Blank Arrangement Continued

Company Anticipates 25 Per Cent Increase in Rentals; Chicago Sales-Gathering Is Limited to Two Days

The expected resignation of George J. Schaefer as Paramount's vice president in charge of sales, and the appointment of Neil Agnew as his successor, came this week in an announcement from John Edward Otterson, president, at the corporation's home office at Times Square. Nor will Mr. Schaefer become a theatre operating partner of Paramount's, negotiations with this in view having been called off.

Paramount's home office executives this week effected a new seven-year Balaban & Katz Circuit operating arrangement with the Balabans in Chicago, announced an anticipated 25 per cent increase in Paramount film rental revenue, decided to change the headquarters of the forthcoming sales meeting in Chicago, and watched the outcome of some final reorganization developments in the courts.

Mr. Schaefer's resignation is to take effect immediately, and already the corporation has negotiated Mr. Agnew's election to the vice presidency of Paramount Pictures, Inc., which post was formerly held by Mr. Schaefer. While Mr. Schaefer has been general sales executive, the working duties and title of general sales manager have been in the hands of Mr. Agnew for some time.

There has been some discussion recently of the possibility of Mr. Schaefer's taking a partnership interest in Paramount's theatres in the Minnesota district, but such plans are no longer in mind.

"I have no definite plans for the future," Mr. Schaefer said. "Until today, I had expected to work out a partnership arrangement in Paramount theatres, but that did not develop. I shall leave Friday for a hunting and fishing trip to Mexico and will be away for several weeks."

Mr. Agnew, designated in Mr. Otterson's announcement as "Mr. Schaefer's right-hand man in the Paramount sales department," started as a member of the corporation's sales organization in 1920, serving, after an exchange apprenticeship, as branch manager at Milwaukee and Chicago, and later was made district manager. In 1933 he was promoted to the post of New York division manager in charge of the western sales territory and assistant sales manager under Mr. Schaefer. For the past 18 months he has filled the post of sales manager.

Mr. Schaefer, born in Brooklyn, New York, 47 years ago, started in motion pictures with Lewis J. Selznick, as secretary, in 1914, after working in the automobile industry. Remaining with Selznick Pictures until 1916, he became assistant sales manager of World Film Company, and the following year he was promoted to district manager.

In 1920 Mr. Schaefer likewise joined Paramount, as New York booker, and one year later was promoted to the New England district managership. He was appointed sales manager for district Number 1, in the east, in 1926, and then became general sales manager and general manager, emerging from the reorganiztion last year as Paramount vice president in charge of sales.

NEIL AGNEW

The executive committee at Paramount, in what is understood to have been a decision arrived at in record-breaking time, has approved and signed a contract vesting in John and Barney Balaban the operation of B & K, a wholly-owned subsidiary, and Great States Theatres, for the next seven years on a participating basis. Toledo and South Bend are embraced in the deal.

B & K, representing an investment of millions, was one major Paramount theatre unit which escaped receivership and bankruptcy. It has been continuously managed by the Balabans, recognized as among the first showmen in America, with Sam Katz, since inception of the circuit, first as an independently maintained company and later as first, a partially and later a wholly-owned Paramount subsidiary. However, since the Paramount bankruptcy, the Balabans, while in charge, have been functioning without a contract. The deal just closed climaxes efforts and negotiations for over a period of three years.

At the same time, a deal by which A. H. Blank will continue as operator of Paramount theatres in Iowa and eastern Illinois for a minimum period of 18 months and with provisions for the extension of the agreement to July 1, 1940, was approved by the executive committee.

A 25 per cent increase in Paramount film revenue on 32 pictures to be released before May 1, 1936, is anticipated by the distributor in comparison with the same release quota for two preceding years on the same basis of an analysis completed last week by Mr. Schaefer.

The analysis covers the indicated returns on the forthcoming Paramount sales drive which gets underway January 1, as compared with results of the corresponding sales drives for the two preceding years. The 25 per cent anticipated rental increase is based on contracts already signed and the quality of the 32 Paramount pictures included in the drive, the company stated.

The estimates received by Mr. Schaefer from exchanges on the "A" pictures, of which there are 13 in the total of 32 to be released, indicate that sales possibilities of this group are two to one in favor of this year's drive over last year's, Mr. Schaefer said.

In the matter of the number of pictures to be released, providing the schedule is unchanged during the four months' sales drive, Mr. Schaefer estimates that Paramount is 40 per cent stronger this season than last year and 35 per cent stronger than the year before.

Attorney Samuel Zirn, who has been opposing the Paramount reorganization moves, has served a consolidated record on attorneys for the company indicating that he is appealing to the appellate division in the Robert S. Levy New York State supreme court actions in which he seeks to abrogate the Film Productions Company deal and the sale of Paramount's half interest in the Columbia Broadcasting System effected several years ago.

Meanwhile, Paramount executives are watching an appeal from a decision by Federal Judge Alfred C. Coxe denying a motion to vacate a subpoena for Sir William Wiseman, Kuhn, Loeb & Company partner, obtained by the Paramount trustees in their action to recover from former officers and directors of Paramount for participations in an employees' stock purchase plan, which is being taken to the United States circuit court of appeals by Mr. Wiseman's attorneys.

The decision to appeal from Judge Coxe's ruling results in postponement to December 10 of a preliminary examination of Mr. Wiseman which had been scheduled for last week before special master John E. Joyce. In objecting to the subpoena Mr. Wiseman contended that the trustees were without authority to conduct an examination of the defendants since Paramount has been reorganized and the new company is now in operation.

Sidney R. Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox, is the only other defendant in the trustee's action who has been subpoenaed thus far for the examination.

INDEPENDENTS, FEW MAJORS, ACCEPT U. S. INVITATION TO CODE MEETING

MGM and RKO Alone of Large Companies Agree to Attend Sessions in Washington on December 9th; Action Seen

Participation of the motion picture industry in the Government—called discussion, December 9th, as to the desirability of new legislation to keep the existing NRA organization alive with a possible view to effecting voluntary codes, will be largely confined to the independents—both exhibitors and distributors. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Radio Keith-Orpheum are the only majors which so far have accepted the invitation to attend.

And while a difference of opinion was developing within the industry over the likelihood of effecting self-regulation, as proposed by Edward L. Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, Mr. Kuykendall himself was reported to view the possibilities with optimism following his nationwide trip during which he discussed the matter with exhibitors.

Despite reports that clearance and zoning will be taken up during the film session of next week's Government code discussion at Washington, to be presided over by George L. Berry, President Roosevelt's coordinator for industrial cooperation, it is not believed that the individual problems of any one industry will be given consideration except in such small group meetings as may be held on the initiative of the individual industry, and at which members of an industry will meet to work out their program for discussion with Mr. Berry later on the open floor.

Unless the Berry conference goes on record as favoring further federal control of industry, its conclusions will be discarded entirely. This was made clear by coordinator Berry himself, who promised that the meetings would be free of Governmental interference, but at the same time said that the Roosevelt Administration did not consider itself obliged to accept or even consider any recommendations that may come out of the discussions.

Has Own Ideas

In other words, it is declared by Washington observers, the Administration has its own ideas as to the future of the NRA and codes under it and will accept no recommendations or suggestions that do not coincide therewith.

Mr. Berry's warning is seen as an effort to head off a torrent of opposition which threatened to turn the conference into a protest meeting instead of the grand "Hurrah for the NRA" which he had confidently expected.

In the face of announcements by important industries, such as steel, automobiles and lumber, that they would do nothing to enable further federal control, Mr. Berry said that a majority of the replies to his invitation to participate have been highly favorable to more NRA. The majority of replies may have been to that effect, it is said in other Washington quarters, but in most instances they come from small operators who found in the codes a convenient method of checking their larger competitors; most of the big companies which send representatives to the meetings will do so, it is said, to prevent anything being "slipped over."

See Roosevelt Favorable

Indications that President Roosevelt is desirous of continuing the NRA organization at least in its present limited form, after next March, and is developing plans for new legislation to be presented next month to Congress to make its continuance effective, are seen in the reported failure of the Federal Trade Commission to obtain from the White House funds with which to proceed against various industries which are said to be still continuing the monopolistic practices permitted under former NRA codes.

Mr. Kuykendall, on behalf of the MPTOA, and David Palfreyman, exhibitor contact for the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, have concluded a series of conferences with exhibitors in the South on Mr. Kuykendall's proposal to effect voluntary self-regulation in the industry through the medium of a system of tribunals in each exchange city, the membership of which would be composed equally of exhibitors and exchange managers. The exchange representatives would be given full power to act by their distribution managements in New York, according to the plan of the MPTOA president.

The exact nature of the reaction of theatre owners in the field to the idea will not be known until Mr. Kuykendall reports in New York to MPTOA's executive committee.

At least 80 per cent of both factions in each key city would need to participate in the plan to make it effective locally, according to Mr. Palfreyman, who returned to the Hays organization's New York headquarters last weekend. Rejection in one territory, however, would not necessarily interfere with adoption of the idea in another.

Mr. Kuykendall is now at his home in Columbus, Mississippi, studying the data collected and preparing a report.

Voluntary arbitration boards would be created to settle differences arising locally between exhibitors and exchanges.

Hays organization members in New York were said to have held informal meetings to study the possibilities of the plan, and its relation to the anti-trust laws.

Selznick Signs Additional Aids

David O. Selznick continues to round out his producing organization in Hollywood and has signed William Tuttle to head his make-up department and Beth Langston to supervise the hair dressing staff.

Foreign Theatres Planned by MGM

Determined to establish its own overseas show windows where the company regards current representation inadequate, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is mapping plans for the construction of five new theatres in as many foreign key cities. Arthur M. Loew, head of the organization's foreign sales, has stated the sites and amounts have not been determined as yet, but it is believed each one of the five will seat about 1,800 and cost approximately $250,000 to build. Mr. Loew refuses to reveal in what cities the new theatres will be constructed, however.

Tokyo will be one of the world capitals in which MGM will operate its own first-run and negotiations are reported under way which probably will result in the construction of a theatre by local interests in the city, but operated by MGM under a long-term lease, it is reliably reported.

The company also is considering its own house in Paris, where for years it operated the Madeleine, it is said.

About a year ago the MGM board of directors approved the plan to build where the company's product was not being given adequate representation. A budget of approximately $1,000,000 was authorized at the time for the construction of theatres in Santiago, Chile; Lima, Peru; Montevideo, Uruguay; and Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. Prior to the adoption of the policy the company had started construction on its own theatre in Calcutta, India.

The latter house will be ready on December 6, and Sam Burger, MGM roving foreign representative, will be present at the ceremonies.

Mr. Loew plans to make a tour himself of all new theatres shortly. He is expected to take six months to cover the entire situation.

He is also said to be contemplating calling an international convention, their first since 1928, on the coast late next year.

Rogers Fund To Go To Ailing Children

Handicapped children of the nation will be the principal beneficiaries of the Will Rogers Memorial Fund, it was decided at a meeting of the memorial committee of the fund commission, held in New York. Owen D. Young, chairman of the operations committee of the fund, announced that the theatrical world has contributed $1,500,000 to the fund and said it included a million in property, on which stands a sanitarium, at Saranac, N. Y. This was donated by the National Variety Artists Fund, Inc. The remaining $500,000 was the cash gift of five major theatre circuits: Fox West Coast Theatres; Loew's, Inc.; Paramount Theatres Service Corp.; Warner Brothers Theatres Circuit; and Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corp. The sanitarium will be known as the Will Rogers Memorial Hospital.

THE KEYSTONE OF YOUR FUTURE

TELEVISION NOT NEAR, SAYS A.T.&T.; SIX MONTHS AWAY, OTHERS CLAIM

Quite Distant, Says Jewett of Bell Laboratories; Old Equipment on Empire State Building Is Being Dismantled

A. T. & T. Officials at Rehearing Offer Strong Resistance to Turning Over Use of Coaxial Cable to Others

The future status of commercial television emerged this week none the less speculative than the uncertainty with which it has been marked in the past.

Testimony that practical television "is still quite a distance in the future" was received at a Federal Communications Commission hearing at Washington, on Monday, while, at the same time, from other sources the prediction was freely voiced in Philadelphia and New York that television is due within six months.

Strong resistance to any requirement that it turn over to others the use of the coaxial cable which it proposes to construct between New York and Philadelphia was offered by officials of the American Telephone & Telegraph Company before the Federal Communications Commission at a rehearing of A. T. & T.'s petition for permission to build such a cable.

Possibilities that the company is preparing to launch broad experimental work upon a television system of its own were seen in the admission by company witnesses that it had a system of sorts which could be transmitted over a 1,000,000-cycle cable, such as it proposes to build. It was contended that a 1,000,000-cycle cable would not be suitable for general television broadcasting, which, it was said, required a 2,000,000-cycle cable.

Interested in Television Plans

Members of the Commission were highly interested in the television aspects of the company's plans, rather than in its statements that the new cable was to be used for telephone, telegraph, teletype and general broadcasting development, and asked numerous questions as to the willingness of the telephone concern to permit its use by others.

In its petition for a rehearing, filed last month, the company indicated that it would be willing to permit some use of the cable by television experimenters, but at the hearing it was said that the only application for such privileges so far filed had come from the Radio Corporation of America.

Telephone company officials emphasized the need for protecting the property rights in the cable and contended that orders permitting its construction should be amended to provide necessary safeguards.

While the company now plans to construct a 1,000,000-cycle cable, it is said the frequency readily could be changed, and indications were seen that the company is seeking to obtain a revision of the construction permit so as to limit the use which may be made of the installation by outside parties.

Efforts by the company to exclude testimony dealing with the commercial aspects of the installation failed.

C. M. Bracelen, A. T. & T. general counsel, protested the commission's decision to hear this evidence, declaring that the proposed installation would be "a purely experimental project in its entirety."

The commission in July authorized laying of the cable, but the company asked a rehearing on conditions under which the permission was given and on the question of the commission's jurisdiction.

The examination Monday was conducted by Albert Stephan, of commission counsel, who asked Frank B. Jewett, head of the Bell Laboratories, questions regarding an asserted meeting of A. T. and T. officials in April.

Jewett Takes Exception

At that meeting, Mr. Stephan sought to show, it was decided to emphasize the television rather than the telephone possibilities of the cable. Mr. Jewett said he had no knowledge of such a session and asserted that the cable still is in an experimental stage.

He testified that Radio Corporation of America has approached A. T. & T. regarding the use of the cable for experimental television purposes and is conducting some field tests. He denied that RCA has any exclusive claim on the facility for television purposes.

Asked whether the cable was designed primarily for television, he replied:

"It would be an absurdity to spend the money primarily for television. Television is still quite a distance in the future."

He added that the use of the cable for television "will be small in the next ten years."

William H. Bauer, another of the commission's counsel, asked Mr. Jewett if it was not true that the cost of the coaxial cable had been borne by A. T. & T. operating companies, but the question was withdrawn on objection by company counsel.

Mr. Bauer then asked whether A. T. & T. would not hold all patents resulting from experiments with the cable. Mr. Jewett said he was not qualified to answer.

Farnsworth Optimistic

Meanwhile the news press reported that television by the end of the next six months, at least in its earliest preliminary stages, was declared probable by Philo T. Farnsworth, one of the country's authorities in television research.

At a private demonstration in which both live objects and motion picture films had been reproduced in two receivers, one operated by wire line direct and the other via radio, Mr. Farnsworth was reported to have said:

"At least four television stations will be operating experimentally in the east by that time under a limited program schedule.

"No doubt two of these stations will be in Philadelphia and two in New York. They will use the ultra short waves. Once television enters on a commercial basis, it will move forward so fast it will be like spontaneous combustion.

"At the present time I can see no real technical obstacles to television."

Dismantling Old Equipment

And in New York it was likewise reported in the press that engineers of National Broadcasting Company and Radio Corporation, "working in secrecy," are dismantling the old television equipment atop the Empire State Building preparatory to installing modern apparatus. It was said that the new installation will be completed in January, and that after preliminary engineering experiments, the metropolitan area will be used as an outdoor laboratory, probably about April 1.

The RCA-NBC plan is understood to provide for the manufacture of 500 television receivers of four different designs. They will not be sold publicly but will be distributed to research outposts and homes of observers to facilitate a complete check on the behavior of the images. After three or four months of observation the experts hope to be able to decide which type of receiver is most practical, also what improvements are necessary in the receivers and transmitters to make television a utility in the home. Then the "bugs" will be ironed out of the system and the way will be cleared, it is hoped, to offer a "foolproof" receiver to the public, possibly in time for the Christmas trade in 1936. It is expected that other manufacturers will do likewise.

The images will be hurled into space by a 12 or 15-kilowatt transmitter operating on the six-meter wave, which will carry both the picture and associated sound across a radius of 30 miles.

Pictures 9 by 10 Inches

The pictures, approximately 9 by 10 inches, are described as "very clear," especially since a new fluorescent material has been discovered for the receiving "screen" on the flat end of the cathode ray tube, or kinescope, as it is known. The pictures, under the influence of this new substance, are said to be greatly improved and are cream colored, although eventually the engineers expect that they will be black and white.

One of the main problems faced in launching television was said to be servicing of the instruments, which will be more complicated than a standard radio set. During the outdoor tests next spring thorough analysis will be made of the servicing riddle.

The prices of the receivers are expected to range from $250 to $500. If a larger picture is desired the cost increases; however, those working on the New York project believe from their research experiments that a nine-by-ten picture can be viewed from a distance of three feet in the home and that it will have considerable entertainment value because its clarity is said to compare favorably with the motion picture.

A meeting was reported to have been held last week by representatives of the various groups organized to develop the plan to give New York television in the springtime. It was reported that plans have gone ahead so far that a "dead line" has been established, so if the engineers make any further advances the present work will no longer be delayed to take advantage of them. They will be incorporated in later instruments.

Loew-Skouras Pool To Divide Profits

Pooling negotiations between Loew's and Skouras in Astoria, Long Island, when completed, will provide for a profit sharing arrangement according to net earnings of each of the five houses embraced, it is said.

Indications are the plan will not go into effect until after the first of the year. Under it Loew's will retain management of the Astoria and TriBoro while Skouras will continue to operate the Broadway, Steinway and Grand. Division of product will be agreed upon before the pool becomes operative, it is stated.

10,000 BRITISH FILMGOERS PLACE LAUGHTON FIRST OF MALE PLAYERS

High Ranking for Hulbert, Walls and Harker, Distinctively English Stars, Complicates Production Aimed at U. S. Mart

by BRUCE ALLAN
London Correspondent

Ten thousand British filmgoers, voting in the "National Film Investigation" conducted by London Film Productions have ranked Charles Laughton first among native born male film stars by a majority of 4,994 points more than those earned by the second choice, George Arliss.

Entrants were asked to pick their favorite three players, points being given for second and third as well as for first selections. The first twelve, and their points, are:

Charles Laughton	11,909
George Arliss	6,915
Cedric Hardwicke	4,339
Robert Donat	3,793
Jack Hulbert	3,370
Leslie Howard	3,120
Tom Walls	1,972
Jack Buchanan	1,636
Gordon Harker	1,611
Conrad Veidt	1,592
Leslie Banks	1,588
Clive Brook	1,587

Several interesting deductions as to British, and inferentially American, film tastes can be made from this result, while giving due recognition to the fact that the value of the vote, due to its small scale, may rest chiefly in its "straw" indications. Leaving aside the enormous preference shown for Laughton, which undoubtedly reflects the equally enormous success of "The Private Life of Henry VIII," the most striking feature of the ranking lies in the high places accorded Hulbert, Walls and Harker. These are distinctively British artists; Harker plays "Cockney" roles which must be almost unintelligible in America, yet he is placed ahead of such internationally famous players as Veidt, Banks and Brook.

Make for American Market First

The prevailing tendency in serious British production is to make for the American market first, and the prominence in this list of Laughton, Arliss, Donat and Leslie Howard seems to support the general theory that stars who please America will also please England. On the other hand, it is very plain that England has a number of players who are first class box office here but read like more doubtful propositions elsewhere.

Just what will be done about it when the British producer budgets as a matter of course for an American release is an interesting question. It is true that American producers miss fire in England with some of their most effective home stars—Will Rogers was a case in point—but the loss of the U.K. market on an occasional picture is a much less serious matter than the loss of America by any British firm which has got to the stage of expecting revenue there. It is also true that British producers cannot do without such proved box office draws, in England, as Walls, Hulbert and Harker.

REPUBLIC SURVEY PRODUCTION GUIDE

In an effort to gauge style, tempo, effect and the type of product most desirable, Republic Pictures has sent out a twelve point questionnaire to its accounts.

The dozen questions are:

1. What stars, outside of the big contract players, are considered real box-office names at this time?
2. What names continue to hold their own?
3. What names seem to be up-and-coming, perhaps future star material?
4. What stars are slipping?
5. What names are "poison" to the box-office?
6. What supporting stars would you like to see included in casts?
7. What types of pictures have no value at the box-office?
8. What types of pictures do the most business for you?
9. When you think of musicals, do you prefer a revue, a comic opera, a musical comedy, an operetta, or what?
10. Who are the most popular western stars in your town, in order of their popularity? Please name three or four.
11. If you don't run westerns, why?
12. If you run serials, what type is preferred?

Production Race Seen Between Korda and Wilcox on Sequel to "Scarlet Pimpernel"; Union Cinemas Have Vaudeville

The Two Pimpernels

Announcing his intention to star Jack Buchanan in "The Triumph of the Scarlet Pimpernel," Herbert Wilcox appears to have started a controversy with Alexander Korda which may well end in a production speed-trial.

Hard on the Wilcox announcement came a statement from London Film Productions that it planned to produce "The Return of the Scarlet Pimpernel," and that it would be "naturally a United Artists release." Mr. Wilcox, who has a United Artists tieup through British & Dominions, plans his Pimpernel picture as a Herbert Wilcox Productions feature for release through C. M. Woolf's General Film Distributors.

London, apart from its natural desire to exploit the big current box office success of "The Scarlet Pimpernel," has had the further encouragement to make another with the same character as a result of its National Film Investigation vote, wherein there was a definitely expressed demand for a "Pimpernel" sequel. Unless peace is signed in the meantime, it will be interesting to watch which of these producers gets his picture out first—a matter on which the progress of the Denham studio and the state of Leslie Howard's engagements may have some bearing.

Bringing Back Vaudeville

Union Cinemas this week publicized the intention of introducing variety acts in fifty per cent of its halls. Union is one of our most rapidly growing circuits. This will be a definite reversal of general tendencies. Paramount, in many of its theatres, puts on big stage shows and the Hyams brothers, in their London supers, have on occasion presented a full operatic show, but even "presentation" acts have been much less frequent than they were.

Union, originally scheduled to come into a Gaumont-British booking circuit, threatened to turn to variety when the G-B deal was opposed by distributors.

Buying Back Television Shares

There was early official confirmation of the statement, first published in New York (Motion Picture Herald, November 23) that interests associated with Electrical Musical Industries, Ltd., were negotiating the return to England of the E.M.I. shares held by Radio Corporation of America. The Treasury here has formally consented to the "repatriation" of these shares and to the transmission to New York of the amount, stated to be £2,250,000 ($12,250,000) involved in the deal.

The official statement is that the Treasury has given this consent "consequent on the desire expressed by some people to buy the shares."

C E A and the Election

The Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association has had its knuckles rapped as a result of a letter from one of its local secretaries asking exhibitors to send cars to the assistance of J. Ramsay MacDonald during his general election campaign. The appeal was based on the services stated to have been rendered by Mr. MacDonald in connection with the reduction in entertainment tax. Straightway it was denounced as a breach of the corrupt practices act, and the election agent of Mr. MacDonald hastily refused the proffered cars, use of which might have invalidated the election.

Warner Earnings Contrasted With Loss of $2,530,513 in 1933-34; Loew Profits Are $55.44 a Share on $6.50 Pfd.

The full effect to date of the marked upturn in motion picture earnings was reflected this week by earnings reports of two of the largest corporations in the business. Loew's, Inc., Nicholas M. Schenck, president, reported net profits of $7,579,744, and Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., Harry M. Warner, president, reported net profits of $674,159—both for the year ended August 31st, 1935, and covering the entire 1934-35 motion picture season.

The improvement in Warners' earnings was proportionately greater, by far, the company's $674,159 net comparing with losses of $2,530,513 in 1933-34, and $6,291,748 in 1932-33. The 1934-35 profit, then, was the first entry on the black side of Warners' ledger in years.

Loew's $7,579,744 net last year compares with a net profit of $7,479,897 in 1933-34 and $4,034,289 in 1932-33, and sets a record for net earnings for that company.

$1.05 Increased Earning

The Loew company, parent of the various Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Loew motion picture producing, distributing and exhibiting divisions, earned $55.44 per share on the $6.50 preferred, compared with $54.39 per share last year; $4.53 per share was earned on the common, against $4.50 per share one year ago.

Viewing both reports optimistically, Dow, Jones, of Wall Street, reported that the new year is well ahead of last year from an earnings standpoint, and that "the industry's aim, indicated by the comments of theatre critics, has apparently been to win the theatregoing public's support by placing emphasis more on the quality of the screen story being told, rather than by emphasis on novelties of technique and spectacle pictures which had a vogue in the past."

Loew's Has $7,094,984 Cash

Loew's $7,579,744 net was after giving effect to depreciation, amortization, interest, federal taxes, subsidiary preferred dividends, minority interest and such.

Current Loew assets as of August 31st, 1935, including $7,094,985 cash and United States Government securities, amounted to $42,962,494, and compared with $12,527,649 cash and U. S. securities and $42,282,192 current assets the preceding fiscal year.

The $42,962,494 current assets on hand in August were equal to a four-and-a-half to one ratio to the $9,115,910 in current liabilities.

Loew's gross income, from theatre admissions and film rentals, etc., mounted during 1934-35 to $100,611,243, an increase of $3,733,570 over the $96,877,673 gross of 1933-34, and an increase of $15,672,589 over the $84,938,654 gross of 1932-33.

erating expenses of $85,587,392 for 1934-35; $81,792,960 for 1933-34, and $73,997,954 for 1932-33.

Dividends paid out by Loew's in the past three years totaled some $10,376,926, including $2,672,426 in preferred dividends and $7,704,500 in common stock dividends as follows:

Year	Preferred Dividends	Common Dividends
1934-35	$888,531	$3,316,737
1933-34	890,480	1,096,944
1932-33	893,405	3,290,819
Totals	$2,672,426	$7,704,500
GRAND TOTAL		$10,376,926

After paying $888,531 in preferred dividends and $3,316,737 in common stock dividends, Loew's, Inc., had a surplus of $41,088,279 on August 31st, 1925. Surplus at the end of the 1934 fiscal year was $37,667,062, and in 1933 was listed at $33,700,322.

Total assets of $129,271,696 last August 31st, were only slightly less than the $130,996,000 in assets listed in 1934, but were considerably more than the $123,697,000 reported in 1922.

Inventories of films in process, completed and released (after amortization), books and rights, accessories and theatre and studio supplies, were worth $32,504,979, a considerable increase over 1934's inventories of $26,713,000 and 1933's inventories of $22,171,000.

Nicholas M. Schenck, as he passed through Chicago this week en route to New York from Hollywood, said for Loew's and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer that the company was in its best condition in years and that the production outlook was bright.

Reports that he had negotiated a new ten-year contract with Irving Thalberg were denied, Mr. Schenck adding that the present agreement still stands.

Warners' net income of $674,159 likewise reflected earnings after the payment of amortization of film costs, depreciation, interest, federal taxes, minority interest and the like, and was equivalent after allowing for annual dividend requirements on 103,107 shares of $3.85 cumulative preferred stock, on which unpaid dividends to and including September 1, 1935 amounted to $1,389,367, to seven cents a share (par $5) on 3,701,090 shares of common stock, including 100,254 shares held by the company.

During the year ended August 31, 1935, discount realized by Warners on the redemption of optional six per cent convertible debentures and bonds of subsidiaries in the amount of $1,022,480 was credited to the deficit account.

Current assets as of August 31, 1935, including $3,312,593 cash, amounted to $18,328,919, and current liabilities were $14,212,423. This compared with cash of $4,664,138, current assets of $17,551,032, and current liabilities of $11,704,294 on August 25, 1934.

Total Warner assets last August were $168,471,829, practically the same as in the two previous years.

The corporation reduced its deficit from $19,547,005 in 1933, to $16,346,563 in 1934, and to $14,961,310 on August of this year.

Warner Reports to Stockholders

By order of the board of directors, Harry M. Warner, president, in a statement accompanying the annual financial report, informed stockholders that, "In addition to the operating profit there has been a net credit to deficit account in the amount of $711,094, and capital surplus has been increased by $325,020.42.

"On August 31, 1935 cash amounted to $3,312,592, after the payment of $957,720 debenture interest due September 1, 1935. This compares with cash on August 25, 1934 in the amount of $4,664,137, before payment of debenture interest due September 1, 1934."

"The company has filed certain detailed reports and will also file additional reports with the Securities and Exchange Commission at Washington, D. C.," Mr. Warner explained. "Therefore, it has been considered practical to have the balance sheet in a form consistent with the reports to be filed with the Commission. In this connection there has been included under current liabilities serial bonds, sinking fund requirements and mortgage installments maturing within one year, which items were included under funded indebtedness in previous balance sheets.

"On September 10, 1935 the company retired $1,300,000 principal amount of its optional six per cent convertible debentures, thereby fulfilling the purchase fund requirements due on August 1, 1936.

"The operations of your company for the current quarter show a substantial improvement over the preceding quarter and the corresponding quarter last year.

"Recent changes in Pennsylvania laws authorize Sunday operation of motion picture theatres in certain communities in that State. Undoubtedly this will have a beneficial effect on the future operations of your company," concluded Mr. Warner.

Some 22 stars, 54 featured players and 20 directors were listed as being under contract to the company.

Production Plans

At the same time, production plans of Warner Brothers Pictures, Cosmopolitan and First National Pictures, Inc., for the first six months of 1936 were outlined in a statement by Major Albert Warner, vice president of Warner Brothers, who had just returned from a trip of several weeks to the coast.

"All signs point toward the greatest year of achievement and prosperity in the history of the screen," declared Major Warner. "At our studios the three affiliated companies—Warner Brothers, Cosmopolitan and First National—are at the peak of production activity, and shortly after the first week in January we shall have six of our most important films of the 1935-1936 season under way.

DUAL POLICY MADE ENDURANCE CONTEST

When double bill policies in this country grow to the proportions that they have assumed in New Zealand, even Eddie Golden, their staunchest defender in these United States, will probably holler quits.

New Zealand's Rivoli theatre in the city of Auckland, shows as many as 15 motion pictures on a single bill for one admission — "A Picture Panic", they call it, as they advise patrons to bring their lunch — "The sooner you come the more you see":

Will Rogers in State Fair, feature.
The Airmail Mystery, serial.
Felix the Cat, cartoon.
Aesop Fable, cartoon.
Metrotone News.
Paramount Pictorial.
Goofy Movies, comedy.
Screen Souvenirs, novelty.
Grantland Rice Sportlight.
Holland in Tulip Time, travelogue.
Cartoon.
Charlie Chase comedy.
Mickey Mouse, cartoon.
Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy, comedy.
Every Woman's Man, feature.

"Marion Davies, with Dick Powell, will be starred in 'Glorious' (tentative title), with a supporting cast including Charlie Ruggles and Edward Everett Horton. This will be a Cosmopolitan release, following 'Captain Blood,' which is to be released around Christmas.

"Bette Davis and Warren William will be co-starred in 'The Man With The Black Hat.'

"Another will be 'Stage Struck,' a musical comedy in which James Cagney and Ruby Keeler will be co-starred.

"Kay Francis's 'I Found Stella Parish' will be followed with 'Lovely Lady,' first of a new series now being planned for Miss Francis.

"Then there will be 'Three Men On a Horse,' and an all-star film on the biggest theatrical hit of the present year on Broadway, based on Lloyd Douglas's novel, 'Green Light.'

"The number of films now ready for release," continued Major Warner, "sets a new record for our three companies. One of the most important of them is Paul Muni's 'The Story of Louis Pasteur.'

"Among other pictures ready for release or now in the cutting room are 'Dangerous,' starring Bette Davis; 'Freshman Love,' with Patricia Ellis, Warren Hull and Frank McHugh; 'The Murder of Dr. Harrigan,' with Kay Linaker, Ricardo Cortez and Mary Astor; 'Man Hunt,' with Marguerite Churchill, William Gargan, Chic Sale, Claire Dodd; 'The Petrified Forest,' starring Leslie Howard and Bette Davis; 'Prison Farm,' with Donald Woods and Kay Linaker; 'Ceiling Zero,' starring James Cagney and Pat O'Brien; 'Song of the Saddle,' with Dick Foran and Alma Lloyd; 'Colleen,' musical starring Ruby Keeler, Dick Powell, Joan Blondell, Jack Oakie and Hugh Herbert; 'Backfire,' with Ross Alexander, Patricia Ellis and Lyle Talbot; and 'The Widow from Monte Carlo,' with Warren William and Dolores Del Rio.

"In addition," said Major Warner, "we now have 'Anthony Adverse' in production with Fredric March; also 'Walking Dead,' with Boris Karloff and Marguerite Churchill and 'The Singing Kid,' starring Al Jolson; and we expect to put 'The Green Pastures' into production early in the New Year, as well as 'Over the Wall,' which is the story of Alabama Pitts written by Warden Lewis E. Lawes of Sing Sing Prison; 'God's Country and the Woman,' from the novel by James Oliver Curwood; 'Invitation to a Murder,' 'The Adventures of Robin Hood,' 'Angel of Mercy' (the life story of Florence Nightingale) and others.

Points to Studios' Cooperation

"One gratifying development in Hollywood during this past year has been the increase in good will and co-operation among the various studios," declared Major Warner. "This co-operation has manifested itself notably in the borrowing and lending of players for special productions to which their personalities are especially suited."

Hearing on Martin J. Clougherty's minority stockholder's move to prevent Warner stockholders from confirming a stock agreement with the Warners at their annual meeting, was postponed last week by Federal Judge Mortimer W. Byers in Brooklyn, the Warner meeting in Wilmington will be held on December 9th.

Mr. Clougherty had applied for an injunction to prevent the holding of the Warner meeting. Judge Byers issued an order for Warners to show cause why this stay should not be granted.

Norman Johnson, Warner stockholder, filed suit in the U. S. district court, New York, Wednesday for an injunction preventing the consummation of a compromise agreement reached between the Warner brothers' Renraw, Inc., and another stockholder, Max Goldberg, who filed suit against them in New York supreme court for an accounting.

A total of 20,958 shares of Warner Brothers six per cent optional convertible debentures were acquired by Albert Warners' holding company "A" during September, according to reports filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission and made public this week.

Reports filed with the commission show that at the end of the month Major Warner held 63,260 shares of Warner Brothers common directly and 5,988 shares through holding company "A"; 10,618 shares of $3 cumulative preferred stock directly and 4,786 shares through holding company "B," and 1,565,333 convertible debentures directly and 260,478 through holding company "A."

Non-Theatricals Defended By Midwest Churchman

Exhibitors Wrong in Their 'Unfair Competition,' Says Dr. Jenkins

Motion picture theatre owners are entirely misguided in their belief, now widely prevalent, that film showings in churches are unfair competition to established theatres when the subjects have been in distribution among theatres for a year.

This is the opinion of Dr. Burris Atkins Jenkins, noted militant churchman of Kansas City despite his 65 years, who this week defended his 20 years of consistent free shows in his church by coming out in defense of the practice, against growing exhibitor antagonism toward the spread of so-called "non-theatrical" showings. These screenings have long been a subject of dispute between theatre owners and film exchanges which rent pictures to the churches.

Dr. Jenkins, pastor of the Community Church at Kansas City, a national figure in church activities, and a novelist of wide recognition, said frankly that he established a Sunday afternoon and evening film policy to draw attendance to his church sermons and services.

Biblical Subjects Scarce

When he first adopted the policy, in 1915, he found it impossible to obtain sufficient Biblical pictures for his audiences, and impossible to get audiences for scenic pictures, and so he began and has continued to select regular theatrical dramas.

"We have no difficulty in securing pictures that have dramatic and cultural significances suitable for presentation in the church, and never have had," Dr. Jenkins said.

Pictures used, he explained, and for which the church pays regular rental, are at least a year old before being played and have been shown at all the theatres, including neighborhoods. Regular theatregoers are not attracted to church shows, in his opinion, since they already have seen the picture if they cared to; or, if they do come, they do so largely out of a desire to help, financially and morally. While admission is free to the three performances each Sunday in Dr. Jenkins' 1,700-seat church, collections are taken after the shows. These were and still are small compared with the size of the audience. Even so, the project paid its way all the years up to last, when it fell behind a little. But whether the project pays for itself is not important to the minister.

Criticism disappeared as people saw the benefits, explained Dr. Jenkins, who added: "When the depression came, many could no longer afford to attend movies. Fathers were out of work, mothers were overworked. There were youngsters who had never seen a show. And it was difficult for the church to make the necessary changes over to sound."

Dr. Jenkins has championed motion pictures as a cultural influence ever since their inception. He has taken the stand that they should be judged by their best side, and has defended the industry against attack and criticism, against discriminatory taxes and legislation. He regards motion pictures as the entertainment of the people.

Frequently he refers to pictures in his sermons and occasionally he takes one for a whole sermon. Titles are advertised a week preceding in church bulletins and programs, outside the building and in newspapers. The other Sunday, for instance, he devoted a full hour to a discussion of "The Crusades," as a picture, as history, as significant sociological phenomenon.

Film Men Enthusiastic

Film men point to Dr. Jenkins' effort as having brought amazing returns in increased interest in motion pictures throughout the midwest by removing prejudice and getting people to judge them on their merit as entertainment. Theatre men admit they could not have purchased these results, and yet what Dr. Jenkins has done has been divorced from any opportunity or purpose of profit. It has not been "special pleading." He has done what the motion picture producers are urging exhibitors to do—teach people to forget their worries at the movies.

And film men recognize the leadership of Dr. Jenkins. Cecil B. DeMille spoke at the Community Church not so long ago. Will H. Hays has sent representatives to deliver lectures on motion pictures. Local theatre and exchange men point to Dr. Jenkins and his church as an outstanding national example of a sane and healthy, a Christian and helpful attitude for improved relationship of the church and the motion picture. When he first proposed showing films in his church, Dr. Jenkins recalled, outside critics termed his Community Church "a three-ring circus." The board of his own church opposed it. But he refused to go "sensational" in the pulpit. But a more significant reason to him was that he believed in motion pictures and encouraged his congregation to do so.

Mary Pickford Takes Post As Adviser in Youth Work

Mary Pickford, this week, formally undertook duties as a member of the Los Angeles County Advisory Committee, of the National Youth Administration. "The National Youth Administration is a sincere effort to help the young men and women of America," Miss Pickford told 14 other committee members at the first meeting of the organization.

The administration has the following program: Aid for needy students in high schools and colleges, work projects to give jobs to youths between the ages of 16 and 25, who are from relief families; vocational guidance to enable young people to adjust themselves to the economic problems of the day and community activities to assist in the constructive employment of leisure time.

KANSAS CITY THEATRES TO ADVERTISE CHURCHES

A feeling of friendliness and cooperation on the part of Kansas City churches toward film business was evidenced there when Arthur Cole of Paramount was called into a conference of the Chamber of Commerce and the Kansas City Council of Churches preparatory to a "religious emphasis week."

Churchmen want people in their churches again and Mr. Cole expressed a willingness on the part of theatres to show trailers on their screens, provided the trailers were furnished by the churches.

Lord Tyrell Is Appointed Head British Censor

Lord Tyrell of Avon has been named chief censor of England, to succeed Edward Shortt, who died recently. The new appointment was made by the Kinematograph Renters' Society, the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association and the Incorporated Association of Kinematograph Manufacturers, Ltd., in London.

Lord Tyrell was British Ambassador to France from 1928 to 1934 and previously had been Under-Secretary of State in the Foreign Office. His appointment came as a surprise, forecasts having indicated the choice was to be Sir Vivian Henderson, Sir Herbert Samuel or Sir Ian MacPherson.

Lord Tyrell, 69 years old, will see films through the eyes of the man on the street, he said after learning of his appointment.

"I have been a film fan ever since there have been films. I go to the pictures perhaps once, perhaps twice a week. I have seen many hundreds of talkies and old silent films right back to the Biograph days," he said.

"I have no particular taste; in fact I like all pictures," Lord Tyrell added.

"Ecstasy" Appeal Denied by Court

The appeal by Eureka Productions from a district court decision holding the Czech picture, "Ecstasy," to be obscene and immoral was denied by the New York Circuit Court of Appeals. The court did not comment on the morals of the film.

Assistant District Attorney Edward J. Ennis of New York said the decision was based on the fact that the print shown the court was not the same as shown the jury originally. It was said Eureka may seek a new trial, using the new print.

MEXICAN SITUATION REMAINS UNRAVELED

Meeting of Government and Industry Representatives Splits Gulf Wide Open

by JAMES LOCKHART
Mexico City Correspondent

Mexico's much tangled film situation continues as unraveled as it was in the beginning, although worthy efforts are being exerted toward leveling things out to please, and benefit, everybody. Just when it was anticipated that there would be a settlement of at least one phase of the mixup, that concerning the differences of foreign distributors with the government over the income tax and import levies, propositions made at the meeting of the mixed commission the finance ministry appointed, with representatives of the government and the industry, split the gulf wider than ever. The commission won't meet again until early in December, after the autumn holidays of federal government executives and employees from November 20 to 30. This is a new kind of Mexican Maze.

No settlement is in sight of the strike against the eight major American producers' offices in Mexico City by white collar help and labor who want more money. This strike began on September 27. Since then, cinemas in Mexico have toddled along. But that's about all. The neighborhoods are apparently riding the seas of supply shortage like mallard ducks, but some of the first-run shops have been hard hit, although there is an increased number of independent American, British, French and German pictures on the market right now.

One big Mexico City house suffered a drop in revenues from about $12,000 in September to $4,720 in October. Another front liner has dropped at the rate of from $75 to $125 a day since the paucity of first grade American pictures set in.

Abolition of Income Tax Quota

The finance ministry's committee of experts submitted the following propositions to the mixed committee, which also includes representatives of the Mexican producers:

Abolition of the progressive income tax quota for distributors, starting January 1 next, and substituting a straight impost of 6 per cent on their gross receipts, a levy that would be much lower than the present one, but still about thrice as high as that which was in effect up to January 1, 1934.

A straight gross income tax of but 2 per cent for Mexican producers to enable them to weather foreign competition.

Fixing a maximum annual import quota of 70,000 meters for each distributor, with a duty of $6.95 per kilogram (2.2046 lbs.) up to that amount and of $13.90 the kilogram over that quota. The present maximum annual quota per distributor is 100,000 meters at $9.75 per kilogram up to that amount and $20.50 for each excess kilogram. Importers are obligated to post $30.25 with the finance ministry for every kilogram they import—$9.75 representing the duty within the quota and $20.50 to guarantee payment of duties on the excess. If the quota is not exceeded, the $20.50 per deposited is refunded at the end of the year—a long time to have money tied up, the distributors complain.

Import More Prints

Furthermore, the experts demanded, distributors must bring in more copies of pictures to assure a wider distribution throughout the country.

Through their spokesman, Arthur H. Pratchett, Paramount representative in Mexico, the American distributors told the ministry that they didn't like the propositions. These distributors ask a straight import levy of $2.80 per kilogram within their quotas, and a quota of up to 100,000 meters a year, with a proportionately higher duty than the $2.80 on kilograms over the maximum quota. These distributors also desire that only amounts they send to their home offices be subject to income tax. At present, this impost is figured on the gross receipts of distributors from exhibitors.

Representatives of European distributors asked that the distributors' income assessment be 4 per cent instead of the proposed 6 per cent of the gross. Mexican producers surprised everybody, especially the ministry, by opposing the 2 per cent tax on their gross, saying that they just didn't like this preferential taxation.

Ministry officials expressed surprise at the disagreements at the meeting and asserted that the most sensible income tax suggestion made was that of the Europeans.

The Union of Mexican Motion Picture Exhibitors, which has national ramifications, has elected the following officers:

President: Alfonso Acevedo; vice-president: Eduardo Chavez Garcia, and treasurer: Guillermo Haller.

First Division Deals Up to Pathe Directors

Approval of a number of new franchise deals throughout the country in line with nationalization of First Division exchanges were among the important matters scheduled for Wednesday's meeting of Pathe's board of directors. Monthly sessions will be held on the last Wednesday of the month instead of the last Tuesday. Arthur Poole, former member of the board and treasurer, has resigned, with Willis Bright succeeding.

Dickstein Attacks Importations

Importation of foreign talent for the stage and screen was attacked by Representative Samuel Dickstein at the Cheese Club in New York. Mr. Dickstein said that there was enough talent on Broadway without bringing over players from abroad. He added: "There are too many Chevaliers."

We urge you to book it at once!

AUSTRALIA'S FILM PERSONNEL UP 10%

Greater Cooperation of Exhibitors and Distributors Seen; Quota Board Makes Headway

by CLIFF HOLT
Sydney Correspondent

American motion picture companies can look towards Australia with a great deal of confidence henceforth. On every hand there is abundant evidence that prosperity is already returning to the Commonwealth.

In addition to a large wool clip, there has been a keen demand among foreign buyers resulting in a wool cheque more than ten million pounds sterling in excess of last year's. The export trade has never been in a healthier condition. During the three years to June 30 last, surplus exports amounted to 92,618,000 pounds sterling, despite a prolonged period of depressed prices. This enabled Australia to meet every penny of its external indebtedness as it fell due, and, during the lean years, to build up its overseas resources and enhance its credit. To this purpose maturing loans amounting to 161 millions sterling were converted at lower interest rates. In view of the strong statistical position of wool, and in the knowledge that large orders are awaiting execution, business houses consider the outlook for Australia brighter than it ever has been.

Further figures just released by official sources add weight to this belief. The state government statistician estimates that the number of persons in private employment in New South Wales alone increased at an average rate of 45,000 a year between July, 1933, and June, 1935.

10% Film Business Gain

The increase in the building trades has been relatively greater than in any other industry, with the amusement industry holding its own by showing an increase of 10 per cent.

Statistics show that, since 1933, there has been an increase of 24.5 per cent in employment in factories and workshops, 12.4 per cent in retail shops, 13 per cent in the wholesale trade, 10.3 per cent in the commercial and financial industry, 17.7 per cent in hotels and restaurants, 10 per cent in the amusements industry, 27.9 per cent in shipping and other transport, and 3.3 per cent in mining. Furthermore, savings bank deposits in every state are considerably higher than in 1933 and as much as 30 per cent higher than in the most severe years of the depression.

Altogether the trading prospects for Australia are exceedingly bright, and if film producing companies can deliver a quality product in the new season, they can look forward to some healthy returns from this market.

In this connection, the keynote of the distributors' conventions so far held in Sydney and Melbourne for this year has been one of prosperity; and exhibitors are hopeful that the usual promise of a new and improved standard of program for the ensuing twelve months will amount to more than words.

A perusal of the various companies' policy announcements suggests that there is a distinct possibility of this being the case. If such pictures as "Tale of Two Cities," "China Seas," "Captain Blood," "The Crusades," "Mutiny on the Bounty," "Curly Top," "Love Me Forever," "Top Hat," "Becky Sharp," "Modern Times" turn out as well as they read on paper, exhibitors will have to look for some other alibi if the box-office fails to join in the Prosperity Chorus.

Greater Cooperation Seen

The plea for even more cooperation between exhibitors and distributors by Stuart F. Doyle, joint managing director of General Theatres Corporation, and an apparent willingness on the distributors' behalf to do their part towards achieving this aim, presents another happy augury for the outlook for 1935-6. In a general statement to the industry, Mr. Doyle declared that never before was this cooperation so desirable.

"Speaking on behalf of my company," he said, "we welcome the great assistance which distributors themselves can give in exploiting our theatres to the best possible advantage and the attractions shown therein . . . signs have not been lacking with certain of the distributors of a keen desire to work in this direction . . . and I believe that if local distributing managers were given more latitude by their principals to cooperate with the local theatre managers, considerably greater results would be achieved in getting the maximum return from public interest in individual pictures.

"In these days, when most of the bigger attractions are run on percentage, the distributor is virtually a partner of the exhibitor, and it behooves both to use every possible endeavor to keep public interest awakened in all attractions which the various theatres are called upon to show."

Quota in Action January 1, 1936

The Advisory Board set up to govern the regulations of the New South Wales Quota Act and to set the Quota machinery in motion is beginning to make some headway. It now seems certain that the distributors' Quota will come into operation on January 1, 1936. The exhibitors' quota year will commence six months later.

Distributors will be compelled to keep records of quota films released as well as a complete list of all pictures, British and foreign, to pass through their hands. Exhibitors must keep a record of all pictures and enumerate the screenings given quota and other films.

The registration fee is not to exceed £5 ($25) for distributors and £1 for exhibitors and producers. Heavy penalties can be imposed for failure to register, and for providing incorrect particulars. Entry into the exhibition, distribution or production field without registration leaves the offender liable to a fine not exceeding £100, and a £10 penalty for each day the offender is in business without having duly registered.

Upon the recommendation of the Advisory Board, the Minister is vested with the power to modify the regulations and reduce the quota percentages, and his is also the last word as to whether or not a picture submitted for quota benefits is of sufficient or insufficient caliber to meet with the requirements of the merit clause.

Snider Launching Circuit

To carry out a plan for the development throughout the New South Wales country districts of a large circuit of modern theatres, Leon S. Snider has resigned from Hoyts after an executive association dating back to the company's incorporation in 1926.

His career with Hoyts has been an active one. As general manager for NSW before Fox assumed control, he carried through the policy of the city and suburban expansion so successfully that between 1926 and 1929 Hoyts built the Regent and Plaza theatres and gained control of an important suburban circuit embracing 20 houses. He was also responsible for the successful launching of the Brisbane and various interstate Regents, and carried out the plans which resulted in introduction of talking films on the circuit.

Film Rentals Rise

A notable increase in gross film rentals in Australia has brought them to the highest point since 1930-31. The total for 1934-35 was £1,740,315 ($8,701,575), above the previous year by £278,509 and within £421,794 of the record total reached during the boom period of 1929-30.

Last year's increase is especially noteworthy because taxes in the form of customs, duties, primage, and so on, totaled £315,043, the highest amount in the history of the industry.

The figures were made public by Sir Victor Wilson, president of the Motion Picture Distributors Association, membership in which includes M-G-M, Paramount, Fox, Warners, RKO, U. A., Columbia and Universal.

The combined net profits of the Australian companies, after taking into consideration monetary exchange expenses on overseas remittances, were £138,597, against £83,328 in the previous year and £208,509 for 1929-30.

The figures show that of £1,740,315 received for the rental of American films during the year practically £1,000,000 was disbursed in Australia and more than 33 per cent went to the Government. This statement deals only with the operations of distributors. Distributors realize about one-third of their grosses, two-thirds being required for working expenses and taxation.

Lester Tobias Appointed Celebrated's Sales Head

Lester S. Tobias has been appointed sales manager of Celebrated Pictures, Inc., New York. Mr. Tobias has been long connected with the industry, having founded the Film Exchange in New Haven before joining Mutual Film Corporation in 1914. In 1919 he left Mutual for a sales executive position with Universal and later joined Paramount. He has lately been associated with the theatrical premium business and has been distributing in the independent field.

"Amateur Day" for AMPA At Weekly Luncheon

It was "Amateur Day" for the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers Wednesday at Jack Dempsey's restaurant in New York. Eight amateur acts by film company employees had been lined up and a number of professionals also agreed to appear.

One of the features of the meeting was a turkey raffle for the benefit of the Film Daily Relief Fund.

FRENCH INDUSTRY, DEFEATING ONE CONTROL BILL, NOW FACES ANOTHER

New Measure for Government Regulation Is Expected To Be Introduced at Next Session of the House of Deputies

by PIERRE AUTRE
Paris Correspondent

While the Government has permitted the decree for regulation of the industry to die, by refusing to give its approval, the menace has not been permanently removed. A law for Governmental control will be proposed when the new Parliament comes into session, but for the present at least the industry has recovered its breath.

One favorable result of the excitement over the decree, which had to be signed before October 31st to become law, was that the common cause brought together the two competing cinema organizations, the Chambre Syndicale and the Comité du Film. In a joint letter to Pierre Laval, the prime minister, they warned that application of the control bill would have meant disaster for the entire motion picture business.

Following their energetic action, all the French film organizations—provincial exhibitors' associations as well as provincial distributors' associations—send vigorous protests.

Completely United

Never before has the French industry been so completely united in its stand. Many cinema owners had threatened to close. The sponsors of the measure had expected to begin by forcing all cinemas to show a minimum of 30 per cent French films.

Americans would have been restricted on importations and a newly established National Agency would have collected all the money due American companies for rental and the Americans might have been called upon to finance production of French films.

The unanimous protests caused Mario Roustan, minister of national education, to eliminate some of the most severe proposals, such as the National Agency.

Even after compromise, however, the decree would have been a blow to American companies.

Petsche To Present New Bill

With the report that Maurice Petsche will present a new control bill before the new Parliament, there is every need of maintenance of the united front displayed by film interests.

The French Cinema must frame its own plan of reorganization, if necessary; in any case it must avoid, at any price, interference by state and political groups.

Completion of a National Federation of the French cinema, interrupted by the fight against the decree, will now be resumed. The Federation eliminates the old Chambre Syndicale.

One of the articles of the Federation regulations requires that the members must prove that their activity in the cinema industry on French territory does not depend, either commercially or financially, directly or indirectly, on any foreign organizations.

The National Federation sponsors have explained that this rule was not "to eliminate the foreign people who work for the sake of the French film industry, but to avoid hurting the interests of the French workers in consideration of foreign workers."

This explanation does not look very clear. It would seem at first glance that all the representatives in France of foreign companies could not become members of the Federation. But Tobis is a member.

If this article means elimination of French branches of foreign companies, which are now nearly all members of the Comité du Film, the hope of a fusion between the Federation (the former Chambre Syndicale) and the Comité du Film may be definitely given up.

It may develop that the Federation (Chambre Syndicale) will represent the French producers and distributors in the new National Federation and the Comité du Film will represent French branches of the foreign companies and nearly all exhibitors.

Herron in Paris

Major Frederick L. Herron, manager of the foreign department of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, has been spending 10 days in Paris, before visiting other Continental branches of the Hays organization.

"In general what is good enough for the American market is good for the European," Mr. Herron told journalists. "If a film is a box office success in America, it contains the necessary ingredients to make a hit abroad.

"However, a picture successful in America might contain all sorts of faux pas which would make it a disaster abroad. It is the job of our office to inspect and advise on any film destined for consumption abroad or with a setting in foreign countries."

However, Latin countries such as France, Spain and Italy do not always understand American pictures, especially in the provincial towns. "Little Women," a tremendous success first-run in Paris, was a failure in the South of France. Other instances could be easily found.

Pictures which make money in America may make a success in their original in a socalled specializing theatre in Paris, but fail elsewhere in Paris and the Provinces.

The French concern, Radio Cinema, is now assuming entire distribution in France and colonies of the RKO Radio Productions, in the original as well as dubbed versions.

Radio Cinema, which is a part of the electrical organization Radiola, will release about 25 dubbed pictures of RKO Radio in 1936.

Roach Signs Terhune

Hal Roach has signed William Terhune, formerly chief film editor, to a long term directorial contract. Mr. Terhune has been directing two-reel comedies featuring Thelma Todd and Patsy Kelly.

No RKO Studio Changes, Says Spitz

No changes in the RKO studio physical setup are contemplated, Leo Spitz, new RKO president, stated last week upon his arrival in Hollywood from New York to attend studio conferences. He also said that reports that Emanuel Cohen is joining the company are untrue. "I have not seen Cohen for 11 months, which should settle the question," he declared.

Mr. Spitz said he would remain in Hollywood a month, sitting in on any industry difficulties which may arise, and meeting with the heads of other studios. He also stated he would have to see what pictures were in work and scheduled before acting on a reduction or an increase of his company's program.

In discussing the reported immediate merger with Paramount, Mr. Spitz said it was "utterly impossible," pointing out the Clayton Act restrictions against such a move as well as the present financial status of both companies.

Meanwhile, in New York, Keith-Albee-Orpheum is "untouched" by the reorganization under way in RKO, Herbert B. Swope, chairman of the KAO board, said in a staff communication designed to reassure employes in the face of "many unfounded rumors."

Mr. Swope said that KAO "will earn profits this year after several years of heavy losses. The bonus system, which I am glad to claim as my contribution, is working well," the communication continues. "The whole outfit is stepping out with a new spirit. I thank all the men and women in the KAO group for their efforts. Our relations with RKO continue unchanged in a friendly and effective affiliation."

Mr. Swope repeated a statement he made on assuming the KAO chairmanship more than a year ago: "That the company is sound; that the morale has been restored; that our job is to continue to do the best we can with our theatres, and that those who do their work will need have no fears."

The KAO head's statement is believed to be in response to current reports that the Atlas Corporation-Lehman Brothers interests, which recently acquired one-half of the Radio Corporation of America's investment in RKO, would also acquire the Michael J. Meehan-RKO interests in KAO.

Meanwhile KAO is subscribing for the additional 10 per cent of the stock of Metropolitan Playhouses, the reorganized Fox Metropolitan company, to which it is entitled under its agreement with United Artists Theatre Circuit, Inc., attorneys for KAO have stated. The decision to acquire the stock has been made by KAO and the necessary papers are being drawn up, it was said.

The Story of Louis Pasteur

(Warner)

Drama

In this picture the screen makes a great departure from prosaic formula. The story is simple biography in which there is not a single trace of theatrical artificiality. What is seen is drama, expertly acted, directed with feeling and understanding. Its power to create and hold interest immediately gripped the preview audience and kept it in hushed silence all the way through. Enthusiastic, appreciative applause broke out at the conclusion.

The story is of Louis Pasteur, French chemist, whose researches revolutionized theory and practise of medicine and medical science. Moving an aura of deep human interest, it merely tells of a man's ambitions and accomplishments, disappointments and fears of failure, devotion to purpose and the triumph that is his when the heretofore bitterly opposed world of science recognizes him and his works. Concentrating on that theme, it does, probably out of consideration for those showmen and audiences who must have that type of contrast in all pictures, work in a slight thread of love interest involving Pasteur's daughter and a young assistant.

The locale is Paris; the time about 1860 and several decades immediately following. Some measure of repute has come to Pasteur for his efforts in aiding vintners to preserve their wines and liquors. Advocating the theory that unsanitary habits on the part of doctors is the cause of so much death, he maintains that germs are the cause of and not the result of disease. He drives directly at "child bed fever," the result of careless uncleanliness on the part of doctors and midwives, as being responsible for the high infant death rate. Mocked, ridiculed, and reviled by opposing practitioners, who have Dr. Charbonet as their spear head, Pasteur is exiled from Paris and forbidden by the Emperor to permit his theories to again invade the science of medicine.

France depends upon its cattle to pay the enormous reparations imposed by conquering Prussia following the war of 1870. In every department except the one to which Pasteur has been exiled, the herds and flocks are decimated by plague.

Pasteur has developed a serum which keeps his neighbors' flocks healthy. His fame, spreading beyond the borders of France, eventully is brought to the attention of the Academy. Nemesis Charbonnet, under orders of President Thiers, visits Pasteur. A bet is made that inoculation is a visionary illusion. Pasteur's innoculated sheep survive a test that kills all of Charbonnet's. The enlightened scientists of Europe, headed by Dr. Lister, acclaim Pasteur.

While Pasteur is working on a serum to combat hydrophobia (rabies), his daughter Annette, married to Mr. Martel, is about to have a baby. Unable to find a doctor, Pasteur forces Charbonnet to take the case. Another bet is made with the life of Annette, her child and the professional reputations of both men as the stake. He compels Charbonnet to sterilize himself and his instruments. Mother and child live. In the following months, Pasteur devotes himself to finding the anti-hydrophobia serum. He succeeds in curing little Joseph, bitten by a mad dog, who he has made the subject of his first experiment. When a number of Russian sufferers are cured, Pasteur, who in the meantime has become partially paralyzed, receives the honors of the Academy and the world.

Here is a picture the worth of which is almost certain to impress both class and mass alike. It is an unusual feature and can not be treated in usual ways. As such, it might appear that its selling would be a difficult task. Germs, childbed fever, uncleanliness, anthrax and rabies are certainly not pretty things to talk about. Or should they be talked about. Rather present this picture to the public as a feature they must see. In cast names and story content they should be sufficient to inspire first interest. Yet even here ordinary methods are hardly applicable. The exploitation should be of the best showmanship caliber. That news and editorial comment will be favorable is a surety.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

The Littlest Rebel

Melodrama

Shirley Temple in any picture is good news to audiences and showmen. In this, a melodrama of the Civil War, with Shirley successfully essaying her first straight dramatic role, it should be doubly welcome. Nothing the public has come to expect of the child star has been omitted, but much of it never seen before has been provided. She sings three numbers, "Dixie," "Those Endearing Young Charms" and "Polly Wolly Doodle." She dances alone and with Bill Robinson. She portrays with sincere realism the role of a child caught in the turmoil of war. When she is on the screen, her work either in serious or light vein maintains interest at a high pitch. Her absences bring about obviously noticeable letdowns. In general, however, the picture is of a class and caliber that should result in patron popularity.

Drama keynotes the story. When Captain Cary joins the Confederate army some realization of war's horror is brought home to Mrs. Cary and their child Virgie. The reaction is vivid when Cary can visit his family only at danger to his life. It becomes stark when ruthless Yankee invaders sack and destroy the plantation home. This grimness is tempered by the kindliness of Yankee officer Morrison. It is starkly tragic when, her spirit lost, Mrs. Cary dies and, Cary who has slipped through enemy lines, comes home to be with his child in her greatest sorrow. Drama builds as Morrison captures Cary. It takes on a deep human interest tinge when Morrison, hearkening to Virgie's plea, and knowing the personal danger, arranges Cary's escape. Trying to get through the Union lines with the child, Cary is recaptured, Morrison implicated and both men sentenced to death. As natural humor interludes to ease the tension, Virgie with Uncle Billy gains an audience with President Lincoln. Her simple telling of how her father came to be captured and Morrison's part in attempting to aid his escape, blending smiles and tears, influences Lincoln to pardon both men and give promise of reunion when peace comes.

Aimed at stirring the more tender sympathetic sentiments, the picture is not an out-and-out tear jerker. The abundance of comedy precludes that. Yet with due consideration of supporting players' contributions, it puts the job of selling the picture squarely on Shirley Temple's shoulders. Past experiences have taught exhibitors how to proceed in such a case.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Comedy Romance

Backgrounded by the fun and excitement of an amateur radio broadcast hour, this is familiar rich girl poor boy romance in theme. The motivating plot, pursuing the formula standard, chief audience and exploitation interest rests in the amusing antics of the several known stage and radio personalities featured. Average in caliber, it is hardly of the grade in story, cast or production values as required by the larger first-run houses.

In the yarn, Marion Keller, musically ambitious daughter of wealthy soap maker, Calvin, sponsor of the "Kello" hour, wants to make good on her own abilities without benefit of her father's influence. In sequences featured by the never-say-quit clowning of Pagano, Marion meets equally ambitious ice cream peddler Eddie Warren as both apply for time on Chief Edwards' program. Though initial appearances are gonged, it's love at first sight for the pair. Failing as individuals, Edwards presents them as a team, and though their number is cut short, fan mail arrives in a deluge. Meanwhile, as Pagano, Benny Baker, the kid pianist, and an unnamed girl stutter singer and Dave Chasen contributed their specialties, Eddie, finding that Marion is not the five and ten cent length, but bright story values, variety of incident and deft direction have produced really good light entertainment, with a dash of American characterization and a number of attractive song numbers as additional merits.

Mickey, a soprano, is one of an American trio working a cabaret act in London. Among other things she helps to manipulate the figures in a marionette turn. Because of the attentions of the foreign owner of the cabaret, she decides to get out and take up posing. An agent's confusion of names leads to her arriving at the town house of the widower Lord Sheldon, where ladies are being interviewed for the post of governess to Sheldon's young son. Somehow or other Mickey gets the job, but she has to promise her old partners, Joe and Lil, that she will continue to play her part until they can find someone to replace her.

The curfew hour for governesses is 10 a. m., but Mickey manages to obtain a key which lets her out, and in, through the kitchen door. Her titled employer visits the cabaret with his very fashionable fiancee, Sheila, and a party, and recognizes his governess in the stage performer, a fact which increases the interest he has already felt in the young lady. Sheila also in due course discovers Mickey's double life and denounces her to Sheldon, but when she demands that he turn the girl away, with the alternative of terminating the engagement, it is she herself who is shown the door.

Incidental scenes, effects and songs make the development of the simple story always amusing. The puppets are a bright spot and Chick Endor and Charlie Farrell are good names. The exploitation angle appears to be the girl who wanted to be an artist's model and became a model governess, but it is not a topliner to talk big but a support feature which should please most audiences.—ALLAN, London.

Three Subjects

In this, the latest release of the series, the subjects have been reduced to three, from the usual four, and are presented in the manner of all previous member of the group.

The first is the story of Pearl Louis Bergoff, for years in the business of supplying industrial interests with strike-breakers. The camera goes into Mr. Bergoff's Fifth Ave. office in New York as he explains how he gets his strike-breakers among taxi-drivers, park bench warmers and strong arm individuals with an ability to crack skulls, whether of men, women or children. The last half of the episode tells of how the strike-breakers ran into difficulty when Governor Talmadge of Georgia called out the troops to throw the brutal brood out of his state.

The second deals with the efforts of the government to preserve wild bird life. Produced in collaboration with the United States Biological Survey, it graphically tells the story of "duck butchers" and their slaughtering.

The third, titled "G. O. P.," fastens attention on the forthcoming Presidential election and is composed of intimate and public views of prospective candidates such as Herbert Hoover, Borah of Idaho, Vandenberg of Michigan, Knox of Illinois, Landon of Kansas and ending with a breakfast shot of James Farley predicting a victory for the present incumbent, Franklin D. Roosevelt. Running time, 20 minutes.

Custer's Last Stand

(Stage and Screen Attractions)

Fair

This serial, taking the first three chapters as a criterion, has enough of virile, hectic action to satisfy those who are not too exacting in their demands.

The background of the picture is the old west, in the days of General Custer, Sitting Bull and Rain-in-the-Face, when the United States Cavalry fought the combined great Indian tribes led by the Sioux.

In this setting we find a wagon train of pioneers plodding westward and being harassed by the redskins. In a fight a valuable "medicine" arrow falls into the hands of the white men and since it tells the location of a cave of gold it naturally becomes the object for which both factions fight. Up to the end of the third episode the action has progressed, following several skirmishes between the indians and wagon trains, with the cavalry thrown in now and then, to the point where the arrow is still in the possession of the white men as General Custer sets up his headquarters at Fort Henry to resist the indians who are gathering for a one last stand—which terminated in the general's annihilation.

Rex Lease, Lona Andre, William Farnum, Reed Howes, Jack Mulhall, Joseph Swickard, Frank McGlynn and Nancy Caswell are cast in the leads.

Average length of episodes, two reels.

The BLUEBOOK School

By F. H. RICHARDSON

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 290.—(A) Asked by P. R. Dalton, Charleston, S. Car.: "Will you tell us what the effect of increased illumination of the film sound track is. I have had an argument, claiming each such increase raises the level of such noise as there may be and brings in new noises. Am I right or wrong?" (B) Asked by T. Ballinger, Ashland, Wis.: "I am afraid I am going to ask a hard one. It is this: It is claimed by sound men that a theatre patron can differentiate between sound coming from a loudspeaker immediately beside the screen and one back of it. Now that seems unreasonable to me. I have made a good many tests trying to locate sound direction exactly and find I cannot do so. I wish, therefore, to ask the engineers whether or not they have ever made such a test."

Answer to Question No. 287

Bluebook School Question No. 287 was: Disregarding large deluxe theatres, what points are for and against the smaller, less elaborate and therefore less costly sound equipments?

This one was frankly side-stepped by some of the engineering groups on the ground that it "had too much dynamite"—might lead to lengthy arguments, in which some of the items of argument could neither be proved nor disproved. Only two answers from engineers are available. Here they are:

"Perhaps we may, by analogy, best point out some of the reasons why we hold the use of deluxe sound equipments to be best, even in small theatres. First, we may safely say they are all made by thoroughly reliable manufacturers, each of whom has a reputation to uphold. The service and guarantee of such corporations mean something. They have real value, which same may be quite true also of some manufacturers of the cheaper sound equipments, but not of them all.

"Second, if one buys an automobile merely for transportation, caring nothing about comfort, probable length of service, etc., then perhaps it might be advisable to seek the cheapest car to be found. But if the purchaser also desires smooth performance, riding comfort and reliability, he then pays the higher price.

"Similarly, if an exhibitor desires merely to fill his auditorium with sound; if reliability of performance means nothing; if durability has no value, then certainly the lower the price of the equipment the better. On the other hand, if it be desired to fill the auditorium with the perfection in sound his patrons have the right to expect when they pay admission at the box office—sound that will make for a pleasing show—is it not reasonable to presume the chances lie heavily in favor of the deluxe equipments? In the very nature of things, its higher price enables the manufacturers of such system to use better materials, plan their systems with greater care, make more careful tests and give, in general, superior service.

"While an exhibitor may 'get by' with mediocre sound presentations, eventually such presentations will in the end operate to lower box office receipts. In the deluxe sound equipments it is reasonable to suppose that greater care is taken to secure extended frequency range than is done with the cheaper equipments, which means that the delicate overtones—that mean so much to musical selections, can be brought out. Moreover, we may assume that the deluxe equipments will have greater volume range, which is of high importance—in fact, absolutely essential in dealing with musical productions, some of which require tremendous power. Without such excess power there will inevitably be distortion.

"Of equal importance with that of quality reproduction is reliability of the apparatus in continued service. It may be expected that deluxe apparatus will be built with greater precision than will be the cheaper ones. That is only natural. Better materials will be used and greater factors of safety provided."

Some of these arguments may or may not be correct. That is for my readers to decide, after considering the other side of the matter:

"In answer to Bluebook School Question No. 287, the small and medium size theatre often finds that the installation of less elaborate, less costly sound systems results not only in substantial economy, but also, for reasons herewith explained, in an actual improvement in sound quality.

"Considering the question of economy first, the less elaborate sound system costs very much less than does its more complicated rivals; also, the cost of installation is correspondingly less. These systems use commonplace radio receiving tubes, available from any radio supply dealer at from 50 cents to $1.50 per tube, and other parts, such as transformers, condensers, etc., at correspondingly low prices. These systems therefore cost much less to maintain than do their blue-blooded brothers.

"These economical equipments often will produce real superiority in sound quality in the circumstances in which the small or medium-sized theatre must operate. Sound quality is not entirely a matter of the sound machine. It also is largely one of auditorium acoustics, and acoustical treatment is inherently expensive because of the physical dimensions of the surface to be plastered, draped or otherwise treated. Less money for the sound system itself often leaves more for proper acoustical treatment of the auditorium, and this may easily result in better over-all results.

"Another thing: The very low cost of many present day sound systems of the less elaborate type permits the addition of improvements or modifications to those systems that will produce improved results. For example, the necessary high-frequency and low-frequency speakers for extended frequency reproduction can be included in the less elaborate sound systems at much lower cost than will be involved in the use of the more elaborate system without these improvements. Similar considerations apply to the question of maintenance and of unfailing operation. The low cost of tubes and component parts used in them relieves theatre managements of much of the temptation to skimp upon replacement parts, and to hesitate about supplying them until the part in use actually fails, or taking the chance of using any undersized part, instead of an oversize for added safety.

"It should, however, be noted that the purchase of less elaborate sound equipment imperatively demands that the purchaser know enough about sound to select the equipment intelligently."

There were a few replies from projectionists that contained very good points, but there is no space for them.

Family Pictures Set Record

The number of motion pictures suitable for the family trade set a new record the past month, when 43 out of 48 releases, or 90 per cent, were given a "family" rating by the review committee of the National Board of Review. The previous high mark established last February, was 88 per cent.

The Farthest Milestone in Motion Pictures!

NEWS NOTES FROM CHICAGO SECTOR

A CHECK-UP on film sales in the Chicago territory for this season shows that the number of deals completed at this time is considerably ahead ot last year. Practically all exchanges have completed the circuit deals for the coming year and are finishing up the independent deals which have been hanging fire.

MGM, Paramount and Fox have closed practically 90 per cent of the available accounts. Fox has but one circuit deal hanging fire and this probably will be closed by the time this story is off the press. Universal, RKO, Republic and Warner have just about finished their selling campaigns and United Artists, which got a late start when the Balaban and Katz circuit deal misfired, is going by leaps and bounds and is headed for a healthy bit of business.

Independent exhibitors also are doing a good piece of business despite the fact that double bills are not the policy here. Many theatres dark for years are open and business is on the upgrade. Lack of enough strong product at the present time for the smaller houses has also helped the independent exchanges and they are having a good demand for their pictures.

The settlement of the B & K fight for an extra seven days clearance opened up the selling in the Chicago city territory and for the past four weeks sales have been higher than any time for several years. All companies report extra heavy activity during the past week with prospects that every worthwhile deal will be okayed by Christmas.

This year no fights mark the selling. Metro's difficulties of last year have been removed, the Great States-Alger feud, downstate, has been cleared up satisfactorily and all unpleasant entanglements have apparently been removed. Business is so good the theatremen are not having time to complain. All they want is box office pictures.

Of major interest here this week was the opening of "Midsummer Night's Dream" for a two-a-day engagement at the Apollo theatre. The picture was booked in rather hastily compared to the time given to preparations before opening in other cities but despite this fact it proved a good draw and with Bob Collier, ace exploiteer, out from New York to arrange many excellent tieups, the picture looks like it will have a successful run for two or three weeks.

The opening was staged on a charity affiliation with the Olivet Institute charity fund. Society leaders who sponsor this charity paid ten dollars a seat for the premiere. Present top price for the picture is $1.50. Movie and society editors gave the film opening plenty of space in the reviews and notes of who attended the opening. Business over the week end was good, nights especially.

Collier has arranged for tieups with both public and private schools.

Holiday Competition Strong

Competition in the loop for the Thanksgiving holiday week was the strongest in months. "Mutiny On The Bounty" at the United Artists is doing nothing less than sensational record-breaking business. Jack Hylton on the stage and "Three Musketeers" on the screen is going great at the Palace. "Dream" at the Apollo, "Thanks A Million" at the Roosevelt and "Old Kentucky" at the Chicago are other houses with plenty of drawing power.

The State-Lake with a stage revue "La Folies de Paree" and "I Live For Love" on the screen is doing the best business in weeks. Stage revue attractions draw exceptionally well in this house which usually features a straight vaudeville policy. Next week the State-Lake will feature the latest "Miss America" on the stage in person and following that another revue "La Vie Nudite", a unit produced in Chicago by Leo Salkin.

Opening at the Chicago Friday will be "Mary Burns, Fugitive". Paramount is giving this picture a special advertising campaign such as was used on "Peter Ibbetson". "So Red The Rose" which was slated for the house on that date probably will be set in the Roosevelt following "Thanks a Million."

George Clifford, Jr., of Oak Park, son of George Clifford, formerly with Quigley Publications, was seriously injured in an auto accident on the way to the Chicago-Illinois football game Saturday. Mr. Clifford suffered a broken leg and internal injuries.

Famous film folk galore stopped over in the Windy City last week while waiting for trains to and from the Coast. Will Hays was among those headed for the coast while Pat O'Brien, Arthur Kelley and Buck Jones were en route east. Nicholas Schenck, returning to New York from Hollywood, remarked as he got off the Santa Fe Chief, that the rumor Irving Thalberg was to get a new ten year contract was merely a rumor, that production at MGM is going strong and that film business everywhere is on the upgrade.

So great was the demand for tickets to the B & K Employees Club "Midnight Mix" that it was necessary to hold the affair in the 3,000 seat Oriental instead of at the Roosevelt, which can accommodate a thousand less. "A Night At the Opera" with the merry, mad Marx brothers starred, provided the screen entertainment while banknight, screeno and other attractions helped make the party a huge success.

Frank Clifford has been nominated for business agent of the local projectionists' union in the forthcoming election. Other nominations are: Peter Shayne, for president, Glen Sweeney, vice-president, Neal Bishop, secretary-treasurer. Election of officers, the first since the killing of Thomas E. Maloy, is set for Dec. 5.

Clyde Eckhardt has been commuting from Chicago to New York the past few weeks. Big business deals at the home office are the cause.

Edward Wolk, equipment manufacturer, has just returned from an eight weeks tour around the east and south. He reports business on the upgrade every place he visited and says that many new theatres are being built around Dallas and there's much building and renovating also in Florida.

John Joseph, the chap that tells the midwest RKO theatre patrons about coming attractions, put over a nice bit of work last Sunday when he arranged for Jack Hylton to play the score from the new Lily Pons picture, "I Dream Too Much," on his nationwide radio broadcast.

More than 70 prints of "Top Hat" are being shown in this territory. The picture is now playing in the smaller neighborhood houses and the past few weekends have found every available print in use. Business on the picture is very good despite the fact that it played in the loop for six weeks to capacity business.

George Kruger, in all his sartorial splendor, was a film row visitor last week. George reports that business at his Hinsdale theatre is very good and he has not had to resort to any giveaway games to promote business.

The weekly showing of pictures for Fox employees on Thursday afternoons is now on a commercial basis. A fee of 10 cents is charged to all who attend. The money goes to the welfare fund of the office. So many outsiders attended the affair that the management thought the dime admission advisable.

Unit number two of the Major Bowes Amateurs will play at five B & K houses during the next ten days. The Congress, LaGrange, Century, Norshore and Marbro have the unit booked for appearances. This unit played the Chicago theatre seven weeks ago.

The Armitage theatre, after being thoroughly remodeled and redecorated, reopened last week. It is now one of the smartest theatres in this district.

Zina De Valdi, ballet dancer at the Chicago theatre who is seriously ill, was presented with a purse of $1,600 by employees of the B & K organization. The money was raised in six days. A Monte Carlo party provided most of the fund.

Shaindel Kalish, prominent young Chicago actress and her husband, Charles Freeman, leave this week for Hollywood where both will start work for Universal.

Wayne King and his orchestra have been booked by RKO for many theatre appearances during January. Opening in Cleveland Jan. 3, the radio-dance band will play in Cincinnati, Detroit, Chicago and Minneapolis during the month. In February the group is scheduled to appear for RKO in Boston and other eastern cities.

Also scheduled for the RKO theatre stages are Clyde Beatty and his 24 "cats," who will open their engagement here the later part of January.

Felix Mendelsohn, of MGM, on the sick list for a few days. With the appearance of warmer weather Felix found things more pleasant and is now back at his desk okaying Metro contracts.

READERS' OPINIONS

PROBLEM OF DATES ON NEW PICTURES

To the Editor of the Herald:

Don't faint because I'm really sending in some reports on pictures and after so long a time when I just rode along on some other exhibitor's efforts to keep us all informed about current releases.

Last spring we had a very disastrous fire and it takes a lot of time to get back to the original mark. Every spare minute has a chore waiting and I am just beginning to take it easy, the rest of the details can wait until winter's cold, when I can't get out and the theatre will be a good place to loaf or work.

I note that other exhibitors are having trouble getting dates on the new pictures. What good does a big advertising campaign do, if the picture is forgotten before it gets to the smaller situations. We all cash in on the metropolitan advertising to a certain extent and want to have these pictures on our monthly calendars so that our patrons will know that they are to be shown in the local theatre, but it takes us from two to three or even more months to get these pictures set. The chains are allotted their prints, the key towns that are independent, if there are any, get theirs and then it's time for the suburban runs, so we wait. A few more prints are not so costly and anyway our rentals are based on prints and handling, so why not see that the powers that be are notified that there is a shortage and that it is not all the fault of the booker. I'm for more prints and playdates that are closer to release dates.

I was sure sorry to hear about Mrs. J. C. Jenkins' death and hope that the Colonel gets back on the job soon because I enjoy him column. It's pretty nice to call on an exhibitor and talk about J. C. and the Herald, then cuss and discuss all the little difficulties that are current in this business of motion picture with sound.

I'll try to keep up on my reports from now on and that's a promise.—Ray W. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan.

OPENING A SECOND THEATRE IN FLORIDA

To the Editor of the Herald:

Am taking on the Pompano theatre in addition to the Dixie Crystal theatre at Clewiston. I built the first theatre in Hendry County in La Belle, which Fred J. Case is now operating. The Clewiston theatre is the second theatre I built in this county. Have just sold my newspaper La Belle, which I ran for 12 years.

You'd laugh if I could describe the opening of the first theatre in this then pioneer cattle range country of the "Big Cypress" Seminole wilderness. The house was packed with an audience of ranch cowboys in "ten gallon" hats. We had a Tom Mix silent western. Tom was persecuted by a terrible crook who met his Waterloo in La Belle. When the villain galloped wickedly across the screen after poor Tom and Tony, believe it or not Mr. Ripley, two shots rang out in my theatre. The villain was shot through the heart, and two little bullet holes in my silver screen bear mute evidence to the fact.

I am opening the Pompano theatre Thanksgiving. Thanks for the good wishes.

Your Herald is a mighty good, helpful effort, especially for us smaller exhibitors.—Mary Hayes Davis, Clewiston, Florida.

CALLS 'LA MATERNELLE' A MASTER OF ART

Just a word about the picture that we are reporting on "La Maternelle" (See "What the Picture Did for Me"). I just cannot say enough about it. It really has made history for us and I cannot see why it would not. Other film exhibitors and I want to let people know about this outstanding master work.

A picture like this is a master of art. It should not be lost in the every-day shuffle of ordinary films. It should stand out among the others and people will flock to see it. I would like to replay it if I find time later in the spring and I know that I would do a fine business, just as well as the first time.

I want people to know about this great cinema because it is a milestone in the motion picture industry and it should not be cast by as an unseen thing, here today and gone tomorrow.—Albert Hefferan, Owl Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich.

Steinhof Sees Cuts In Color Film Cost

Color films will not be much more expensive than black and white and in the near future all commercial films will be made in color, in the opinion of Dr. Eugene G. Steinhof, color expert now in Hollywood.

Dr. Steinhof has been a scenic designer in Europe and has lectured on color in architecture at Carnegie Institute.

He has also developed a new makeup for players and intends to use it in the first film in which he is color director.

Dancers on Theatre Tour

Kathryne Hankin, Lucylle Keeling, Earlene Heath, Mary Ellen Brown, Jean Joyce and Anita Camargo, specialty dancers who appeared in Paramount's "Collegiate," have left Hollywood for an eight weeks engagement in Middle Western theatres. The dancers were chosen by LeRoy Prinz, Paramount dance director, and will be known as the LeRoy Prinz Paramount Girls. Their first appearance will be in Minneapolis.

New Boston Exchange

The Academy Pictures film exchange in Boston will start actively releasing pictures in about three weeks, according to Phillip Smith, circuit operator and premium distributor who is about to open New England's newest exchange. The company's offices have been opened but no sales force has been named as yet.

Simplified Practice Plan for Photograph Paper Revised

The standing committee in charge of Simplified Practice Recommendation, Photographic Paper, has submitted a revision of the recommendation, and the Division of Simplified Practice of the National Bureau of Standards in Washington, D. C., has mailed copies to all interests for consideration and approval. The original recommendation, which became effective March 15, 1929, and which limited the stock sizes and varieties of photographic paper, was approved at a general conference of the industry held in 1928.

The current revision covers the elimination of one size and the addition of five sizes to the present recommendation. The revised schedule, when adopted by those at interest, will remain in effect until it again is revised by the Standing Committee of the industry.

Copies of the revision may be obtained from the Division of Simplified Practice, National Bureau of Standards, Washington, D. C.

Telephone Suit Delayed

Hearing on damage suits by a number of New York independent exhibitors against the American Telephone & Telegraph Company was postponed until December 13 by Federal Judge John C. Knox when attorneys for the defendants filed a motion for a bill of particulars. The damage suits allege monopolistic practices on part of the A. T. & T. to restrain trade.

Sixth Edition of

A PRACTICAL GUIDE TO GOOD OPERATING AND QUICK TROUBLE-SHOOTING

A new Bluebook by Richardson is always an event of signal importance to the motion picture industry. It is being issued at this time to meet the truly urgent demand of thousands of users of the old Bluebooks for an accurate, modern evaluation of the changes and refinements in the art and science of sound reproduction and projection including all the apparatus. Richardson's expert knowledge of the craft he has taught and followed for more than three decades makes this latest treatise, in the opinion of leading authorities, the most comprehensive, most useful projection manual ever published.

1 IN ONE HANDY VOLUME

The new Bluebook is complete in one handy volume. It is a great improvement over the former expensive and cumbersome three-volume sets.

2 COMPLETE and UP-TO-DATE

The new Bluebook does a three-fold job: (1) it gives a detailed description of the construction, wiring and functioning of every piece of sound and projection apparatus used in a modern projection room. (2) It gives all the instructions for the operation and maintenance of this equipment and (3) it contains a complete trouble-shooting department as a first-aid in breakdowns.

3 QUICK-FINDING INDEX

An extremely simple but comprehensive indexing system makes the new Blue Book a truly great aid to working projectionists. Whatever problem comes up in the day's routine is covered on the instant with hardly more than the twirl of your thumb. Projectionists of long experience in the projection room will be first to appreciate this remarkable time-saver.

4 QUICK TROUBLE-SHOOTER

And it is, within its 700 pages, a practical trouble-shooter, which alone entitles it to a place in every projectionists tool kit.

700 Pages of Text, Charts and Data

The new Bluebook contains 700 pages and 153 illustrations—photographs and schematics of every description. It is 6 x 9 in size with large readable type for easy visibility in the projection room under all conditions. It is entirely original from cover to cover, not a line of type from any of the many previous editions being used. Its low price of $5.25 and its handiness in one volume are among the many innovations.

Every role in this splendid dramatic romance demanded such expert and finished characterization . . . that only a cast as great as this could do full justice to each part!

JOEL McCREA as "Brighton Larrimore" who wanted wealth.

RUTH WESTON as "Edith Gilbert" who wanted a man she couldn't get.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

First National

CASE OF THE LUCKY LEGS, THE: Warren William, Genevieve Tobin—Pleased a lot of people who follow the adventures of Perry Mason. Drew well and they asked for more of this type. Played November 11-12.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

OIL FOR THE LAMPS OF CHINA: Josephine Hutchinson, Pat O'Brien, Jean Muir—This is a swell one. Everyone pleased even though it is a little long. It certainly boosted Pat in this village, but we do not think anything could boost Josephine Hutchinson. Played October 30-31.—Talisman Theatre, Rosedale, Miss. Small town patronage.

GB Pictures

ALIAS BULLDOG DRUMMOND: Jack Hulbert, Fay Wray—Wow! What a nightmare. Wonder if they (cash customers) will come back.—Reggie Buxton, Strand Theatre, Ransom, Kansas. Rural patronage.

Invincible

GHOST WALKS, THE: John Miljan, June Collyer—A dandy program picture. Excellent for double billing. Holds the interest, and has good comedy material. It sent them out laughing. George Cohan's old motto for showmen was: "Always leave them laughing when you say goodbye." Sound advice for managers. Running time, 65 minutes.—D. M. Reardon, Globe Theatre, Holyoke, Mass. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

AFTER OFFICE HOURS: Clark Gable, Constance Bennett—Anyone who don't like this picture has an ailment. Lots of everything, even dialogue. Gable sure does his stuff and Connie even peps up.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

ANNA KARENINA: Greta Garbo, Fredric March—Didn't draw but you can't blame that on the picture or the stars. Rather slow-moving and not a small town picture. Should have traded it for a re-run or some older picture. Played October 30-31.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

ANNA KARENINA: Greta Garbo, Fredric March, Freddie Bartholomew—This is one of the best shows we have shown in the past year. We had several customers to come to see it two times. Acting superb. No over acting. Right length. It will certainly please your public. Played November 3-5.—Talisman Theatre, Rosedale, Miss. Small town patronage.

BARRETTS OF WIMPOLE STREET, THE: Norma Shearer, Fredric March, Charles Laughton—This picture, as we all know, although old, should do business. If it don't it will please those that come and do you a lot of good. We did about average business and received many favorable comments.— Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

BONNIE SCOTLAND: Laurel and Hardy—Just a glorified two-reel comedy. Of course, they have a certain following that comes to see them, but it its problematical how long they will last; they are too much of a type.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia, City, Ind. General patronage.

CALM YOURSELF: Madge Evans, Robert Young—Robert Young is just what his name implies, young, yes, yes, and much too young. My patrons like the men in early thirties. Story very light; not the usual Saturday night trade. Running time, 70 minutes. Played September 20.—Angelo Chiarenza, Grand Theatre, Cambridge City. Ind. Small town patronage.

CHINA SEAS: Clark Gable, Jean Harlow, Wallace Beery—Had just the usual Sunday night crowd, a better Monday and Tuesday business, but not as big as I expected. Beery is a draw in this town, but Gable and Harlow, washouts. Running time, 80 minutes. Played October 27-29.—Angelo Chiarenza, Grand Theatre, Cambridge City, Ind. Small town patronage.

1790 Broadway, New York

ESCAPADE: William Powell, Luise Rainer—Sophistication to a large degree; one that the higher class will like very much. Luise Rainer is tops in this one. She did a swell job in her first picture; of that there is no doubt. But it will not be a big draw in the smaller towns is my opinion, judging from our own experience, which is, that it did not do normal business. The picture is there for a high class picture, and again I will say that Miss Rainer is good, especially in the scene where she got slightly "lit." She seems to have a flair for comedy, and that, in my opinion, is how she should be cast in future pictures.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

ESCAPADE: William Powell, Luise Rainer—Bill Powell always accepted in this town; customary Sunday business. Lots of curiosity seekers to see Rainer for her firt appearance; don't think they were disappointed. Lots of compliments on story; and a better Monday night patronage due to verbal advertising of Sunday night patrons. Running time, 85 minutes. Played September 22-23.—Angelo Chiarenza, Grand Theatre, Cambridge City, Ind. Small town patronage.

FORSAKING ALL OTHERS: Joan Crawford, Clark Gable, Robert Montgomery—A four star picture with us. Had bad show weather but crowd comment very complimentary. Here is a special that is all the word implies. A finished product with masterly direction. And the star? Ask any of the fair sex over fourteen years of age. Running time, 84 minutes. Played October 11-12.—D. M. Reardon, Globe Theatre, Holyoke, Mass. General patronage.

IT'S IN THE AIR: Jack Benny, Una Merkel—Fair program picture that didn't gross expenses. Not much to it and Jack Benny disappointed a lot of his radio fans by his lack of familiar wisecracks. Made a mistake in running this three days. It is a good bargain night or double feature show. Played November 13-15.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

MURDER MAN, THE: Spencer Tracy, Virginia Bruce—Leo didn't roar very loud about this one. Double it or sell it at a bargain price because it won't please very many.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

MURDER MAN, THE: Spencer Tracy, Virginia Bruce—A very good picture with Spencer Tracy.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MURDER MAN, THE: Spencer Tracy, Virginia Bruce—While only fair business, the ones that came praised Spencer Tracy's acting. Clever lines, but not appreciated by the small town patronage. Running time, 85 minutes. Played October 25-26.—Angelo Chiarenza, Grand Theatre, Cambridge City, Ind. Small town patronage.

NAUGHTY MARIETTA: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy—A great singing picture and Eddy's songs are recorded better than any I have ever heard. "I'm Falling in Love with Someone" was particularly fine. On account of blizzard weather we had only small house, but everyone was pleased. A picture you will enjoy "hearing" the second time, and there are not many in that class. The public is getting to appreciate more and more the better class of musical shows. Played November 8-9.—O. Ingmar Oleson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town patronage.

O'SHAUGHNESSY'S BOY: Wallace Beery, Jackie Cooper—Good business first night; not a three night picture by any means. Beery always accepted by small town patronage. Very spontaneous acting by all stars; many comments on Jackie Cooper's acting. Circus setting always accepted. Commonplace situations good for small town patronage. Running time, 90 minutes. Played November 10-11.—Angelo Chiarenza, Grand Theatre, Cambridge City, Ind. Small town patronage.

O'SHAUGHNESSY'S BOY: Wallace Beery, Jackie Cooper—A pretty fine show. Not as pleasing as Beery's other shows. Fair crowds, but it won't pack them in. Played Oct. 29-30.—Talisman Theatre, Rosedale, Miss. Small town patronage.

PUBLIC HERO NO. 1: Chester Morris, Jean Arthur—Always a good turnout for Chester Morris. With a worthwhile story such as this and its newspaper publicity, I was not surprised at the good turnout for the first night. The second night better yet. Jean Arthur was charming as a co-worker of the public enemy, as well as the lover of the G-man. Running time, 85 minutes. Played September 11-12.—Angelo Chiarenza, Grand Theatre, Cambridge City, Ind. Small town patronage.

SEQUOIA: Jean Parker—One of the best and most entertaining pictures we have shown. The photography was a gem, but I still don't believe it, yet I'll guess I'll have to. If you lived in a deer paradise as I do, you'd know what I mean. Played September 13.—Frank Sabin, Majestic Theatre, Eureka, Mont. Small town patronage.

VANESSA, HER LOVE STORY: Helen Hayes, Robert Montgomery—Good star in poor story with poor title. Result, poor box office. Running time, 70 minutes.—D. M. Reardon, Globe Theatre, Holyoke, Mass. General patronage.

Monogram

HEALER, THE: Karen Morley, Ralph Bellamy—If you want a picture that will provide an evening of good entertainment for Mr. and Mrs. General Public and their families try this one. It has sterling merit as a family picture, is well cast and is a fine human interest story. Best of all the price is fair and you will not be worried to death about percentage. If you should chance to make ten dollars or so above expenses, it's yours. Ralph Bellamy and Karen Morley are sincere, convincing and entertaining in their roles and Judith Allen as the vamp-selfish uses her lure with near devastation. The ailing children at the healing pool and the thrill of a great forest fire with scurrying wild creatures will be enjoyed by all adolescents of 7 to 70.—Mary Hayes Davis, Dixie Crystal Theatre, Clewiston, Florida. General patronage.

KEEPER OF THE BEES, THE: Neil Hamilton, Betty Furness—Here's one for those who like the more simple things of life. A few of the younger set panned it, but the bulk of the trade enjoyed it, and last but not least, it clicked well at the box office. Played October 20-22.—Reggie Buxton, Strand Theatre, Ransom, Kansas. Rural patronage.

Paramount

BIG BROADCAST OF 1936, THE: Jack Oakie, Burns and Allen—The poorest turn-out in months. These musical comedies are getting to be a nuisance. Gracie Allen cute; Jack Oakie, a washout as usual. Running time, 97 minutes. Played October 27-28.—Angelo Chiarenza, Grand Theatre, Cambridge City, Ind. Small town patronage.

COLLEGE RHYTHM: Joe Penner, Jack Oakie, Lanny Ross, Lyda Roberti, Helen Mack—Silly, but most entertaining. I love Joe Penner's Goo-Goo. All in all, good popular entertainment. Played October 25.—Frank Sabin, Majestic Theatre, Eureka, Mont. Small town patronage.

DEVIL IS A WOMAN, THE: Marlene Dietrich, Cessar Romero, Lionel Atwill—This pleased nobody. We played it on bank night and even the man who won the money was dissatisfied.—Talisman Theatre, Rosedale, Miss. Small town patronage.

EVERY NIGHT AT EIGHT: George Raft, Alice Faye—Very entertaining comedy drama, with plenty of good music and a romantic angle. Drew and pleased. Running time, 80 minutes. Played November 3-4.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

EVERY NIGHT AT EIGHT: George Raft, Alice Faye, Frances Langford, Patsy Kelly—Even the chronic kickers agreed that this was a fair show. Not the best nor the worst, but good clean entertainment. Every cash customer praised Frances Langford's singing. Those easy to make laugh smiled at Patsy Kelly. Played Nov. 11-12.—Talisman Theatre, Rosedale, Miss. Small town patronage.

HANDS ACROSS THE TABLE: Carole Lombard, Fred MacMurray—A beautiful production which did

QUALITY PLUS

OF ALL the reasons for adopting a new raw film, photographic quality... what the audience sees on the screen... ultimately stands supreme. That explains why the great majority of today's motion pictures are being made on Eastman Super X Panchromatic Negative. EASTMAN SUPER X top business here. This is a running mate for "It Happened One Night." Paramount can be proud of this "sleeper," for it certainly is a credit after their failures. Running time, eight reels. Played November 3-5.—Earl J. McClurg, Grand Theatre, Preston, Idaho. Small town and rural patronage.

HOP-A-LONG CASSIDY: William Boyd, Paula Stone—Only one objection, too short. A well-directed, entertaining out-of-door story from Mulford's tale. William Boyd makes ideal "Cassidy" and Paula Stone and Jimmy Ellison good in their parts. Running time, 59 minutes. Played November 15-16.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

LAST OUTPOST, THE: Cary Grant, Gertrude Michael, Claude Rains—Good picture that will please. You fellows who ran the Paramount picture "Grass" years and years ago will recognize scenes from that picture that have been inserted into the picture. It's good.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. General patronage.

LAST OUTPOST, THE: Cary Grant, Claude Rains—This picture did a S.R.O. business, but that drum, drum music nearly drove everyone mad. A very beautiful piece of photography spoiled by drum, drum music. Running time, seven reels. Played November 8-9.—Earl J. McClurg, Grand Theatre, Preston, Idaho. Small town and rural patronage.

LOVE IN BLOOM: Joe Morrison, Dixie Lee, George Burns and Gracie Allen—Fair only. Will get by on double bill. Played with "Bahoona," which same seemed to bring the cash customers. Running time, 75 minutes.—D. M. Reardon, Globe Theatre, Holyoke, Mass. General patronage.

MEN WITHOUT NAMES: Fred MacMurray, Madge Evans—Fred MacMurray a coming box office attraction. Business good. These gang war pictures are good drawers and Madge Evans has quite a following. No glamorous settings, but action clever and rapid. A real Saturday picture. Running time, 80 minutes. Played November 8-9.—Angelo Chiarenza, Grand Theatre, Cambridge City, Ind. Small town patronage.

MEN WITHOUT NAMES: Fred MacMurray, Madge Evans—This is an ideal Saturday show for the country exhibitor. Will please customers from town and the surrounding country. Lots of action. The only thing wrong with it is Madge Evans. Played November 8-9.—Talisman Theatre, Rosedale, Miss. Small town patronage.

MISSISSIPPI: Bing Crosby, Joan Bennett, W. C. Fields—Fine entertainment. Featured Joan Bennett. Crosby all washed up with our patrons. Can't explain it. Mushy crooners get the birdie nowadays. The directors are more or less to blame, methinks. Three day run. Closed week. Running time, 74 minutes.—D. M. Reardon, Globe Theatre, Holyoke, Mass. General patronage.

MRS. WIGGS OF THE CABBAGE PATCH: Pauline Lord—The title drew the crowd and Miss Lord's acting supported the picture all the way through. I'd call it a real good audience picture. Played September 27.—Frank Sabin, Majestic Theatre, Eureka, Mont. Small town patronage.

SHIP CAFE: Carl Brisson, Arline Judge—Played this one day and jerked it off. It sure cost me plenty to try pawning this thing off. No cast, no story. Poor Carl Brisson, a good boy. "The proof of the pudding is in the eating." Running time, seven reels. Played November 10.—Earl J. McClurg, Grand Theatre, Preston, Idaho. Small town and rural patronage.

SMART GIRL: Ida Lupino, Kent Taylor—Very clever comedy drama, with Cawthorn, as the old employer, stealing the show. Running time, 70 minutes. Played November 8-9.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

VIRGINIA JUDGE, THE: Walter C. Kelly, Marsha Hunt—What a butchered up job Paramount has done on this one. Poor old Walter C. Kelly played this part on the stage all his life and then turn out a "nose diver" like this. Everyone disappointed. Running time, seven reels. Played November 6-7.—Earl J. McClurg, Grand Theatre, Preston, Idaho. Small town and rural patronage.

High Fidelity

WAGON WHEELS: Randolph Scott, Gail Patrick—This is the big western in sound. Drew like a mustard plaster. Not a "Covered Wagon," but extra good. Played October 11.—Frank Sabin, Majestic Theatre, Eureka, Mont. Small town patronage.

WANDERER OF THE WASTELAND: Gail Patrick, Dean Jagger—A good western picture. Will please western fans. Did S.R.O. business both days on this one. Running time, 60 minutes. Played November 1-2.—Earl J. McClurg, Grand Theatre, Preston, Idaho. Small town and rural patronage.

WANDERER OF THE WASTELAND: Dean Jagger, Gail Patrick—Good enough western, but just lacked something that usually puts over the Zane Grey stories. Either poor directing or lack of known male lead. Jagger O. K., but not yet known to patrons. Running time, 66 minutes. Played October 30-31.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

WINGS IN THE DARK: Myrna Loy, Cary Grant—A different and better airplane picture. Myrna is perfect, as usual. Don't pass it up. Played November 8.—Frank Sabin, Majestic Theatre, Eureka, Mont. Small town patronage.

WITHOUT REGRET: Elissa Landi, Kent Taylor—A good picture for a high type audience, but for working class, no soap. Story rather hard to twist about in mind; gorgeous setting, good acting. Elissa Landi is plain, but Paul Cavanagh is tops with the ladies. Not a Saturday picture. Running time, 70 minutes. Played October 25-26.—Angelo Chiarenza, Grand Theatre, Cambridge City, Ind. Small town patronage.

Republic

FORBIDDEN HEAVEN: Charles Farrell, Charlotte Henry—Played against the toughest competition ever and did a remarkable business all three days. I do not know what did it, as I did not like the picture very well myself, but what does that matter if the public likes it. Play it, it will do you good. Running time, 87 minutes. Played October 27-29.—Earl J. McClurg, Grand Theatre, Preston. Idaho. Small town and rural patronage.

MELODY TRAIL: Gene Autry, Ann Rutherford—Would like to buy 100 westerns as good as Republic's "Melody Trail." Has everything a small town and country patronage house could ask for in a western. Played November 9.—Harlan C. Dodd, Charlestown Theatre, Charlestown, Ind. Small town and country patronage.

RKO Radio

ALICE ADAMS: Katharine Hepburn, Fred MacMurray—As an approach towards a universal human appeal—highbrow, lowbrow, city and small town, this is Hepburn's best. Heretofore her work has been for the cultured classes more than for the human heart and mind regardless of cultural opportunity. Everyone who saw this picture liked it—sophisticate and day worked. Friends were made for Katharine Hepburn and my theatre.—Mary Hayes Davis, Dixie Crystal Theatre, Clewiston, Florida. General patronage.

ALICE ADAMS: Katharine Hepburn, Fred MacMurray, Fred Stone—We were led to believe that at last Hepburn had made a show that would please us country hicks and how we were surprised. This pleased nobody, not even the deadheads. Fred MacMurray looked like the proverbial "fish out of water." A few more like this one and he will be finished. This did a horrible first night and the second night was a tragedy. Played Oct. 14-15.—Talisman Theatre, Rosedale, Miss. Small town patronage.

ARIZONIAN, THE: Richard Dix, Margot Grahame—An exceptionally good western and much better than the general run of horse operas. Drew better than most of the later action pictures and pleased more patrons. Played October 25-26.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

ARIZONIAN, THE: Richard Dix—I even liked it myself. Presented in a realistic manner. A real western and no mistake. Everyone liked it but the preacher, and he wasn't there.—Reggie Buxton, Strand Theatre, Ransom, Kansas. Rural patronage.

CAPTAIN HURRICANE: James Barton, Helen Westley—Why they ever made this picture and asked an exhibitor to pay rental for it is more than I can see. This is about the poorest picture we have had from any company at any time. Absolutely nothing to it. If you have it bought, pay for it and leave it on the shelf. You will do your patrons a justice. Played November 12-13.—W. J. Carter, Maxine Theatre, Croswell, Mich. Small town patronage.

HIS FAMILY TREE: James Barton, Maureen Delany—The actors did their best, but the story was light. No draw at all. Running time, 69 minutes. Played November 13-14.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

LAST DAYS OF POMPEII, THE: Preston Foster—A very good spectacular entertainment. Excellently done and has good drawing power.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

OLD MAN RHYTHM: Buddy Rogers, Betty Grable—If I had had a mortgage on the "Old Homestead" I would say this was the only one in this dull month that yielded enough above expenses to make a payment. George Barbier as Old Man Rhythm was a "howling success" in the eyes of my fans. Betty Grable's dancing and spontaneous sweetness were above average. Good cast well balanced. Buddy Rogers didn't steal the show, but was liked. Good songs and dances. The popeyed waiter was a wow. But why analyze. They came, they saw, they want away happy.—Mary Hayes Davis, Dixie Crystal Theatre, Clewiston, Florida. General patronage.

POWDER SMOKE RANGE: Hoot Gibson, Boots Mallory—All of our old favorite stars boiled into one western. The actors were O. K., but director had too much drinking interspersed. The old-timers, assisted by Miss Mallory, included among other, Harry Carey, "Hoot" Gibson, William Farnum, William Desmond, Franklyn Farnum, Bob Steele, Tom Tyler. Running time, 74 minutes. Played November 10-11.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

POWDER SMOKE RANGE: Hoot Gibson, Boots Mallory—"Powder smoke gets in my eyes." Here is a western that is a western. And boy! Did they eat it up here. Played to packed house first night in midweek. Patrons told us this was one of the best westerns we have had. It really has some good acting and a good cast. I'll bet that there was enough powder burned in this one to make the Italo-Ethiopian conflict look like a Kentucky back-woods feud. If Mussolini sees this one, he will hang his head in shame and disgrace. However, it is still one of the best westerns we have played. Play it; it will pay you. Played October 30-31.—Charles Summers & Son, Elite Theatre, Seiling, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

STAR OF MIDNIGHT: William Powell, Ginger Rogers—This is a nice mystery-comedy that is carried along with whimsical and amusing comedy. Ginger Rogers and William Powell do right by the picture. The acting is swell. The picture is just a bit long for the action. Had plenty of pro and con comments. Played October 27-28.—Charles Summers & Son, Elite Theatre, Seiling, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

THREE MUSKETEERS, THE: Walter Abel, Paul Lukas, Margot Grahame, Heather Angel, Ian Keith—Not up to silent version in entertainment value, but should draw well in college communities and with high school trade. Did above average Tuesday-Wednesday business for me. Played November 12-13.—H. A. Griswold, Sewanee-Union Theatre, Sewanee, Tenn. University patronage.

TOP HAT: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers—Whatta picture! Whatta picture! One of the best I have seen for a long time. It has everything. I don't see how anyone could go wrong playing this one. Didn't draw so good for some reason, but it's a darn good picture and anyone that says it isn't should be "killed to pieces." Fred Astaire is, without a doubt, the top dancer anywhere; he is even better in this one. Ginger Rogers is grand, as usual. They should change the name, "dancing" to "Astaire-ing." You're all wrong if you don't play it. Played November 6-7.—Charles Summers & Son, Elite Theatre, Seiling, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

VILLAGE TALE: Randolph Scott, Kay Johnson—A title that doesn't mean a thing at the box office, but a picture that will give complete satisfaction in small towns. Much better entertainment than many of the socalled specials. Running time, 80 minutes.

Played November 15.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

VILLAGE TALE: Randolph Scott, Kay Johnson—Here is a typical small town picture; plenty of action and a mighty fine story that will please any small town audience. We had many compliments on this one. Played November 5-6.—W. J. Carter, Maxine Theatre, Croswell, Mich. Small town patronage.

Tapernoux-Metropolis

LA MATERNELLE: Madeleine Renaud, Alice Tissot, Paulette Flambert—Well, the Owl has just done its biggest business since its opening six years ago. "La Maternelle" is one of the best pictures that I have ever played. It is marvelous, great and powerful. A picture that is playing the 55th St. Playhouse in New York right now. We stood them in line for tickets. All seats were reserved and we never in our lives saw seats sell so fast. We opened on a Friday, playing a twice daily policy, but by Saturday morning we had to change to three and four times a day. And then we could not seat them. It took Grand Rapids by storm. Talk about your box-office hits, here is one right under your nose if you know how to handle it. We got the Teachers' Art Club to sponsor the picture in that they would help us to sell tickets and get behind it. Well, you know how schools are on pictures, but it seemed that they pushed like it was a class assignment. They extended reading credit to the students. They even let school out early if they would buy tickets. So one can see how it went. We were so busy that we did not get time to eat. People came from a radius of sixty miles to take in this picture. All that I cay say is that it is wonderful. The picture is beyond words to express. It is all that the news people say it is; they can't praise it enough. We played it just as Time Magazine and the Literary Digest had full page articles on the picture. The story is about the children of Montmartre. No great drilled acting; just the children from the streets played the parts, simple, no mike training, just the simple way any child would talk. It was no spectacle or pageant. It was just real life in a children's day school just as they really are, not dressed up or fixed up as the Hollywood stars are. It is simple but yet powerful in its simplicity and filming. The story is about a little girl whose mother leaves her and she attaches herself to the maid in the school and then when the maid gets married, Marie, the little girl, thinks that she has been deserted, and tries to commit suicide. But it ends well as Marie sees that the maid, Rose, still loves her and they take her to live with them It really is food for thought; it is a cinema master work. A picture that will never die as it is taken from truly real life and portrayed in all sincerity. All the talking is in French, but dialogue titles are in English. Play this picture as it is an asset to the industry of fine art. It will never die. Running time, 93 minutes. Played November 15-18.—Albert Heffernan, Owl Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. Students of French and adult patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BABOONA: Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson—Fine animal picture. Something different. They are still talking about the baboons and the fighting monkeys. Played to a fair house, with men predominating. Friday and Saturday picture. Capacity. Running time, 72 minutes.—D. M. Reardon, Globe Theatre, Holyoke, Mass. General patronage.

BRIGHT EYES: Shirley Temple, James Dunn—Exhibitors' reports on this one led us to choose it in preference to some of Shirley's more recent productions; and we are glad that we did, for it went over 100 per cent. I saw plenty of tears mingled in between the numerous laughs. The men got a great kick out of the antics of the spoiled rich kid, a part which Jane Withers played to perfection, but their hearts were delivered on a silver platter to Miss Temple! Running time, 83 minutes. Played November 16.—J. A. Reynolds, Recreational Director, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

BRIGHT EYES: Shirley Temple, James Dunn—Golly! This was a swell picture. I'd like to see it again. The lollipop song was the highlight. Jimmie Dunn can do no wrong, and Shirley—she's adorable. Played October 18.—Frank Sabin, Majestic Theatre, Eureka, Mont. Small town patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN IN PARIS: Warner Oland—Just another Chan story, but we must admit we like them. Swell Apache dance. Cold weather spoiled the box office. Played November 1.—Frank Sabin, Majestic Theatre, Eureka, Mont. Small town patronage.

HELL IN THE HEAVENS: Warner Baxter—Another better than average air war story. Lots of action, and Baxter on his toes, as usual. Played October 14.—Frank Sabin, Majestic Theatre, Eureka, Mont. Small town patronage.

IN OLD KENTUCKY: Will Rogers—I ordinarily run two shows a day at three and seven-thirty, but for this packed them in at two, four, seven and nine with the standing room only sign out at two, seven and nine o'clock. Leaving aside the commercial angle, Will Rogers' death leaves not only the theatre but all mankind without one of its best friends. Played November 16.—H. A. Griswold, Sewanee-Union Theatre, Sewanee, Tenn. University and general patronage.

LIFE BEGINS AT 40: Will Rogers—What a pity this star has gone West. One of the very few stars making ace pictures with the sex angle a side issue. He had no competition in pictures or in radio. This was one of his best pictures. Running time, 79 minutes.—D. M. Reardon, Globe Theatre, Holyoke, Mass. General patronage.

METROPOLITAN: Lawrence Tibbett, Alice Brady, Virginia Bruce—While this film may fail to register in the average small town, I feel it a great tribute to my clientele to have pushed the gross on this 25 per cent above the average Thursday-Friday business. An intelligent audience will thank you for playing this picture. Played November 7-8.—H. A. Griswold, Sewanee-Union Theatre, Sewanee, Tenn. University and trade patronage.

MYSTERY WOMAN: Mona Barrie, Gilbert Roland—Far fetched spy story but holds interest, nevertheless. O. K. for the middle of the week on double bill. Second day (Thursday) up. Running time, 69 minutes.—D. M. Reardon, Globe Theatre, Holyoke, Mass. General patronage.

ORCHIDS TO YOU: Jean Muir, John Boles—A good program picture. Did only fair business, but had plenty of favorable comments. The plot is well mixed and sprinkled with Butterworth's comedy. The story concerns a flower girl and a handsome lawyer, his errant wife and her big moment. The story is well handled and has a mixture of all the ingredients for a good picture. Play it. Played November 3-4.—Charles Summers & Son, Elite Theatre, Seiling, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

ORCHIDS TO YOU: Jean Muir, John Boles—Not good for anything but a time-waster. Jean Muir is not well enough established to have a following and John Boles doesn't make enough pictures to be kept on the list of stars. Light story. Running time, 70 minutes. Played October 23-24.—Angelo Chiarenza, Grand Theatre, Cambridge City, Ind. Small town patronage.

OUR LITTLE GIRL: Shirley Temple, Joel McCrea—Although we were late with this one it drew very well and pleased. Don't think it was quite up to Temple standard, but our patrons were pleased and said so. Played October 27-28.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

OUR LITTLE GIRL: Shirley Temple, Joel McCrea Like all the rest of the Shirley Temples, this was good at the box office. Story not quite as good as some of her previous pictures, but good enough to please any audience. Played November 2-3.—W. J. Carter, Maxine Theatre, Croswell, Mich. Small town patronage.

OUR LITTLE GIRL: Shirley Temple, Joel McCrea—Mediocre story for the Fox ace star. They come to see Shirley and she never disappoints. Not as good as "Little Colonel," however. James Dunn and Lionel Barrymore are best support for Shirley. Running time, 63 minutes.—D. M. Reardon, Globe Theatre, Holyoke, Mass. General patronage.

SERVANTS' ENTRANCE: Janet Gaynor, Lew Ayres—We liked this picture a whole lot. Foreign setting. The story held interest from start to finish. Played September 6.—Frank Sabin, Majestic Theatre, Eureka, Mont. Small town patronage.

SPRING TONIC: Lew Ayres, Claire Trevor—This is a new low even for Fox. On the second night we grossed an even $1.50 and were glad to get it. If you can get out of playing this one, you had better do it. Played October 23-24.—Talisman Theatre, Rosedale, Miss. Small town patronage.

STEAMBOAT ROUND THE BEND: Will Rogers, Anne Shirley—A very good picture and a fitting tribute to one of the screen's most able entertainers. Drew very good for three days, but didn't do the business here that similar situations claimed. Will satisfy all you can accommodate and fill your house at least once each evening. Don't be afraid to advertise and run a matinee for the old folks because they'll appreciate it and come in the afternoon. Played November 6-8.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

THANKS A MILLION: Dick Powell, Fred Allen, Ann Dvorak—An interesting and well timed plot especially in view of the current interest in politics. A different type musical with Fred Allen of radio fame making an auspicious debut in films. Should be a natural for Powell fans. Did not draw as well as I expected, however. Running time, 80 minutes. Played November 14-15.—H. A. Griswold, Sewanee-Union Theatre, Sewanee, Tenn. University patronage.

UNDER PRESSURE: Edmund Lowe, Victor McLaglen—A he-man picture. A little brutal for the ladies. Played on Friday and Saturday. Running time, 65 minutes.—D. M. Reardon, Globe Theatre, Holyoke, Mass. General patronage.

UNDER PRESSURE: Victor McLaglen, Charles Bickford, Edmund Lowe—How did they ever come to make a picture like that. This ain't good grammar but it ain't a very good picture. However, Fox was very nice when they heard my squawk. In fact, Fox is always nice, and they have real pictures. Played September 20.—Frank Sabin, Majestic Theatre, Eureka, Mont. Small town patronage.

UNDER THE PAMPAS MOON: Warner Baxter, Ketti Gallian—We just do feel justified in calling this one mediocre. Warner Baxter is a fair drawing card but everyone got tired of this one. His "I theenk" gets monotonous and "we theenk" you won't brag much about this one either before or after. Played October 25-26.—Talisman Theatre, Rosedale, Miss. Small town patronage.

WELCOME HOME: James Dunn, Arline Judge—Did very well on a double bill. Not a special, but a good program picture that will please most of the cash customers. Played November 1-2.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

WHITE PARADE, THE: Loretta Young, John Boles—I can only echo the sentiments of other reports in "What the Picture Did for Me." A masterpiece. One of those what you'd call one hundred percenters. Played October 4.—Frank Sabin, Majestic Theatre, Eureka, Mont. Small town patronage.

United Artists

CALL OF THE WILD, THE: Clark Gable, Loretta Young, Jack Oakie—Played the Baer-Louis fight pictures with this picture and did an exceptional business. Don't know whether it was the fight pictures that got them in or not, but the feature was approved 100 per cent. A good picture for a small town. Jack Oakie practically steals the picture. Played November 9-10.—W. J. Carter, Maxine Theatre, Croswell, Mich. Small town patronage.

Universal

BRIDE OF FRANKENSTEIN: Boris Karloff, Valerie Hobson—Drew very good on one night, Hallowe'en. We darkened the house and let them fret for a while, then turned this on. It made them like it and is a good show for any midnight frolic. Played October 31.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

DIAMOND JIM: Edward Arnold, Binnie Barnes—Life of "Diamond Jim" Brady, rather famous figure of by-gone days. Splendidly acted, but with a sad ending. However, seemed to satisfy. Played October 20-21.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

GOOD FAIRY, THE: Margaret Sullavan, Herbert Marshall—Sold as a special. Title killed it. Folks expected nursery tale and stayed away. Just as well perhaps. Running time, 95 minutes.—D. M. Reardon, Globe Theatre, Holyoke, Mass. General patronage.

IMITATION OF LIFE: Claudette Colbert, Warren William, Louise Beavers—Let me give my friends, the Exhibitors of America, a little good advice. Pick up this picture and run it over and over again. Everyone knows it's one of the ten best of the year and will make any exhiibtor a lot of money on repeat runs. Women will see it over and over again. Run it as a double bill so there will be a variety for those who have already seen it. I made more money second run than first and it will do the same for you. Don't be afraid if everyone in your town has already seen it. They will come back time and time again. It's one of the best pictures of all time and you owe it to your patrons to let them see it over again.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. General patronage.

IT HAPPENED IN NEW YORK: Lyle Talbot, Heather Angel—I didn't see the picture but received very mediocre comments. If you have a selection to pick from better pass this one up.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MANHATTAN MOON: Ricardo Cortez, Dorothy Page—Fair sort of entertainment picture; however, like a good many others, the stars mean nothing to our public. Which meant the box office went hungry. Played November 3-4.—Reggie Buxton, Strand Theatre, Ransom, Kansas. Rural patronage.

MISTER DYNAMITE: Edmund Lowe, Esther Ralston—Good crook story. Friday and Saturday business O. K. Thank you, Uncle Carl. Running time, 70 minutes.—D. M. Reardon, Globe Theatre, Holyoke, Mass. General patronage.

RAVEN, THE: Boris Karloff, Bela Lugosi—Don't care for these horror pictures, but the patrons seem to get a kick out of them. So must not be too critical. Good three day box office. Running time, 74 minutes.—D. M. Reardon, Globe Theatre, Holyoke, Mass. General patronage.

SHE GETS HER MAN: Zasu Pitts, Hugh O'Connell—Poor. Just a poor picture. It's too bad to star Zasu in this kind of a picture. My people love Zasu Pitts and it's too bad to give her stories so poor.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. General patronage.

Warner Bros.

BROADWAY GONDOLIER: Dick Powell, Joan Blondell, Adolphe Menjou, Louise Fazenda—This brings them in alive and they stay that way. The

A GREAT HELP

DO YOU KNOW to the penny your exact profit for a given month or year? Do you laboriously waste time or do you follow the one famous, easy method now used by most theatre owners for recording receipts and expenses and allowing for all fixed and current charges?

WHAT WOULD YOU GIVE to know the exact status of your theatre, accounting-wise, when the tax man comes around? There is only one way to be sure that you don't overpay—only one way to prove your return. That's day by day accounting.

IT WILL SAVE you money, time, and aggravation. It is detailed even for the weather and temperature, and yet is notable for its utter simplicity.

ITS HARD COVER keeps the heavy bond pages like new throughout the year and is sufficient to care for twelve months' records.

NOW IS THE TIME to check what available space you still have left in your old book. No doubt you will find it running low. Reorder now so that you can continue your important daily entries without interruption.

squawkers do not get a chance with this one, even though it is not up to Dick's others. You will be proud to play it and the box office will be proud you did play it. Played October 21-22.—Talisman Theatre, Rosedale, Miss. Small town patronage.

DR. SOCRATES: Paul Muni, Ann Dvorak—Here are the gangsters in a little different role and it's as noisy as the Fourth of July in spots, but the cash customers will eat it up and ask for more. Paul Muni does very well as a doctor and Barton MacLane is a tough egg what is tough. Play it where you want action. Played November 4-5.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

FRONT PAGE WOMAN: Bette Davis, George Brent—Great in every scene. What an actor this Brent is! Bette Davis plenty good, too, in her role. It is a relief to see an upstanding actor as is this man Brent, that looks the he-man role and is. He is no matinee idol, but he has what it takes for both sexes. Good story, good direction and moves at a fast pace. I can stand a lot more of them that will lay off the dialogue and give some action, gangland or no gangland.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind.

FRONT PAGE WOMAN: Bette Davis, George Brent—Did satisfactory business and seemed to please. Enough action to keep the customers awake and that's something.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

FRONT PAGE WOMAN: Bette Davis, George Brent—Everyone disappointed in Bette Davis. Every customer complained that the show was too long and drawn out. Was a fair crowd first night but the second night terrible.—Talisman Theatre, Rosedale, Miss. Small town patronage.

I LIVE FOR LOVE: Dolores Del Rio, Everett Marshall—Not much, but this Marshall can sing and that means you'll entertain some of the musically inclined. Didn't draw any SRO. Played October 21-22.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

PAGE MISS GLORY: Dick Powell, Marion Davies—Just fair. Dick Powell seemed to be miscast. Davies does fair work; clever in her impersonation of dowdy maid, and then blossoming into Miss Glory, around which the picture revolves. But it lacked something, as it flopped the second day. Mostly the impossible story, I think.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

PAGE MISS GLORY: Marion Davies, Dick Powell—Failed to register at the box office. The picture is just fair so far as entertainment is concerned. Beautiful sets and lots of money spent on the production. Miss Davies just does not fit in the part and we were all disappointed in Dick Powell. As a program picture it is O. K. but not as a big special. The picture just misses for lack of entertainment.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. General patronage.

SPECIAL AGENT: George Brent, Bette Davis—Good. Will satisfy and draw even if you do have some gangster stuff, but then the papers are full of it so a little on the screen couldn't do much harm. Played October 23-24.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

STRANDED: Kay Francis, George Brent—Pleased the general public. Did no business on the second night, however. All right for a week night.—Talisman Theatre, Rosedale, Miss. Small town patronage.

Short Features

Educational

BOUNDING MAIN, THE: Song Hit Stories—A fine single reel of sailor singing. Different.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

DAME SHY: Tom Patricola, Buster West—A good two-reel comedy that should please old and young. Running time, 20 minutes.—G. W. Harttmann, Armour Theatre, North Kansas City, Mo. Small town patronage.

DAME SHY: Buster West, Tom Patricola—One of the best slapstick comedies we have played. Our audience was in an uproar.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

E-FLAT MAN: Star Personality Comedies—Got a few laughs but didn't break any records.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

FOILED AGAIN: Paul Terry-Toons—Another cartoon that is O. K. for kids.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

KING LOONEY XIV: Terry-Toon—Pretty good cartoon. Running time, 7 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

MAGIC WORD, THE: Tom Howard, George Shelton—I ran this with Rogers' "Steamboat Round the Bend." Very good—in fact excellent comedy. Keeps the audience in an uproar. Put this on your best days. Running time, 17 minutes.—George E. Hall, Rose Bowl Theatre, Franklin, Neb. Small town and farming patronage.

PALOOKA FROM PADUCAH: Buster Keaton—A little different from the usual two reeler. Story is wound around a family of hill billies, their mountain homelife, and a wrestling match. The latter gives one a fairly good idea, to a ridiculous degree, of course, of the present day mat game. Running time, 20 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Recreational Director, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

STYLISH STOUTS: Tom Howard—I'd like to see the guy who thinks that this fellow is funny. He isn't and he never will be, to me.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ALIBI RACKET: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—Pleased more than most of the comedies. Really interesting and they watched every foot of it.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

CALICO DRAGON: Happy Harmonies—Nice recording and color. Pleased the kids.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

FOOTBALL TEAMWORK: M-G-M Sports Parade—Nice program filler. Invited High School football team to see it and drew a blowup. However, got it next day but that doesn't help. Metro service on shorts is poor.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

HISTORIC MEXICO CITY: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Pretty and what a trip for two bits.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

HOW TO SLEEP: M-G-M Miniatures—Had it set two or three times; finally did get it as a substitution and it is pretty good.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

LITTLE PAPA: Our Gang—Good enough. Wish all comedies were as good as the "Gang's."—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

LITTLE SINNER: Our Gang—Very funny. So rare that you wonder how come. This Gang Comedy is funny and gets a lot of laughs.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

NURSE TO YOU: Charley Chase—Where is the fun, Charley? You used to do it.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

SLIGHTLY STATIC: Todd-Kelly—Terrible for this pair whom we have come to look upon as program savers and they even let us down.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

TRAINED HOOPS: M-G-M Miniatures—Good. You'll like this and so will the customers.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

TWIN-TRIPLETS: Todd-Kelly—Patsy tried hard but she just couldn't make them laugh. It was very unfunny.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

GOING ON TWO: Dionne Quintuplets—This did business, especially in a 70 per cent French town. The mothers and grandmothers turned out 100 per cent.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MARCH OF TIME: This may be a great program for the radio, but my patrons do not seem to care for it. Just a newsreel stretched to a two-reel subject.—G. W. Harttmann, Aromur Theatre, North Kansas City, Mo. Small town patronage.

OCEAN SWELLS: Blonde and Red Head Series—Not so hot. Not enough action and dancing. Only a fair two-reel musical. Running time, 19 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

SOUTH SEASICKNESS: Edgar Kennedy—Not so hot.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln Kan. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century - Fox

WEST INDIES CRUISE: Along the Road to Romance Series—Traveltalk or geography lesson and I quit school a long time ago. Why do we have to pay for somebody's travels?—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

THREE LAZY MICE: Cartune Classics—A real good color short which adds to any program, even if they are mice.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

TOWNE HALL FOLLIES: Oswald Cartoons—My, how these cartoons are improving. This one is a dandy.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Warner Vitaphone

BILLBOARD FOLLIES: Merrie Melodies—Another fine colored cartoon. Characters on the billboards put on the show.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

BUDDY, THE GEE MAN: Looney Tunes—Cartoon that maybe pleased the few kids who were present.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

DUBLIN IN BRASS: Morton Downey—Pretty good.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

HUSBAND'S HOLIDAY: Hobart Cavanaugh—A waste of time. Not a funny minute in all twenty.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

KEYSTONE HOTEL: Old Timers—They said it was a special and I can't understand it. Guess the reason was because it had a few laughs in it. Really better than the other Big V Comedies. Still not bragging.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

MERRILY WE ROLL ALONG (new title: BILLBOARD FROLICS): Merrie Melodies—These colored cartoons are all good and this is no exception. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

MERRY OLD SOUL, THE: Merrie Melodies Series—Entertaining cartoon in color. Lot of new ideas on how to handle the tiny tots.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

NO CONTEST: Ruth Etting—The general opinion was that this is one of the most unique and best assembled shorts ever shown here. Ruth is always popular with male audiences, and her name brought a good hand the moment it was flashed on the screen. Running time, 21 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Recreational Director, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

NUTVILLE: Radio Ramblers—Pretty good.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

OH, EVALINE: Hal LeRoy, Eleanor Whitney—I can get a kick out of seeing this boy do one dance and so can most of my patrons so we all like his comedies.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

PHIL SPITALNY ALL GIRL ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Good band act that pleased. All girls and they can toot plenty.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

SMOKED HAMS: Big V Comedies—A two reel comedy that's pathetic. Put extra insurance on yourself before playing this one. It's the worst attempt of a comedy I've ever seen.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

WATCH THE BIRDIE: Bob Hope—Twenty minutes without a smile.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

MORE THAN A "MOVIE"

There should be little disagreement with the statement that the success of many a civic project depends upon participation and cooperation of local theatremen. This being so, then it is time to re-evaluate the standing of the motion picture theatre in the community and to look upon the theatre now as something more than a place that exhibits motion pictures.

Ample evidence is at hand to confirm these observations and as an instance one need go no further on this score than the current Thanksgiving Day celebrations which were highlighted in so many situations by the "canned goods" matinee. This entirely laudable manner of charitable work undoubtedly owes its success to theatre participation and it is also to be noted that showmen cooperate enthusiastically even in the absence of any cash return at the box-office.

The Hallowe'en theatre party is another recent development of this willingness on the part of theatremen to further civic aims. What Herb Grove did in Rock Island, Ill., is typical of what theatremen in all parts of the country have done voluntarily and without profit to abate a serious nuisance.

On the cultural side, encouragement given various photoplay study movements by showmen has aided materially in popularizing these educational endeavors. The Boston University School of Education is among the latest to join up, sponsoring a series of film lectures and demonstrations at George Kraska's Fine Arts Theatre.

It has long been our conviction that the motion picture theatre should be referred to with the same civic pride as is the portion of schools, churches and other like institutions. That highly placed local organizations now turn eagerly to the theatre for support in solving civic problems and advancing community interests is indication enough that the motion picture theatre has definitely outgrown its "movie" classification.

SPARK, FUEL, COMBUSTION

Among the things the general membership could no doubt stand less of on this bright sunshiny afternoon is what seems to these old ears the continuous sounding off here, there and otherwise of the much abused term "manpower". Days are few indeed when to our attention there does not come some declaration expounding on the value, need or possession of this highly regarded asset.

The importance of manpower obviously does not need a great deal of further stressing from this pen, for we have pounded upon the necessity of its development, maintenance and protection. But power will not generate without spark, fuel and combustion, and these accessories must be supplied.

Yes, they are being supplied and generously in many situations and from these sources come the declarations on manpower that command respect. But there are others, unfortunately, who call for power and more power, expecting it in exchange for nothing more effective than high pressure "pitches" and veiled threats.

Theatremen cannot function as high powered motors unless they are given the same attention and consideration.

MANAGER-PHOTOGRAPHERS

In increasing numbers, Round Tablers endeavoring to stay within ad budget limitations and still forward photos of exploitations with their campaigns are turning to their own cameras for these reproductions. And, as to be expected, the standard of photography is not uniformly perfect, due in most instances to lack of savvy on what to do and how.

It is for this reason we are publishing on a following page some practical pointers on taking clear photos that will reproduce well. The article by Mr. MacFarlane was written especially for the benefit of our contributors and it is to be anticipated that this information will not only result in a general improvement in the snapshot department, but will serve also to encourage the amateur photographer-manager.

THE MANNER OF SELLING

The exploitation barrages laid down in recent weeks on Paramount's "So Red the Rose" and MGM's "Mutiny on the Bounty" evidently contained enough whiz-bang to allow all objectives to be reached swiftly and successfully. The numerous campaigns reported on these pictures were colorful, practical and effective at the box-office.

Of course, these two fine productions lend themselves to exciting exploitations, but it is to be noted that the background of their selling to the public embraced zest, sparkle and verve.

Though every picture cannot be a "Mutiny" or a "Rose," there are other worthy attractions that are ready to give rich milk after a shot of the same zingo and zip. Enthusiasm in selling oft times brings out a box-office color that at first appears to be entirely lacking.

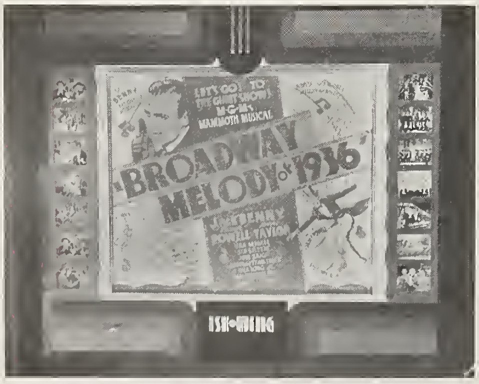
Photoplay Guide Issued On "The Perfect Tribute"

Reported the first time for a short subject is the photoplay study guide issued by Dr. William Lewin, on MGM's "The Perfect Tribute," having to do with the career of Abraham Lincoln, interpreted on the screen by Chic Sale. In his foreword, Dr. Lewin said the purpose of the guide on the short was, in part, to encourage the production of a greater number of worth-while short films.

The picture had its world premiere recently and fittingly in Springfield, Ill., at the Orpheum, under the supervision of Ralph Lawler, who did this as one of his last jobs before going to his new assignment at the Newman in Kansas City.

Topping everything was the presence of Chic Sale, who was the guest of Governor Horner during his stay. The Governor participated in many of the stunts put over by Lawler, including a reception dinner at the Executive Mansion in honor of the star, and radio appearances.

Among the other things done were young orators' contest put over with local daily. Entrants, high school students, were required to recite the Gettysburg address from the stage of the theatre for a cup presented by Sale. Lincoln displays were arranged at schools, proclamation by Governor, and showing of Lincoln relics on mezzanine floor were also highlighted, these attracting constant crowds during showing.



LOBBY DISPLAY. This attractive setpiece was used for "Broadway Melody" by Johnny McManus, Loew's Midland, Kansas City, Mo. Note collection of stills.

Sobler Earmuffs Ushers In Newspaper Ad

A. W. Sobler of San Diego's Spreckles Theatre pulled an unusual ad slant on Warner Bros.' "We're in the Money," which he states gathered plenty of giggles. His two-column ad showed a full-face of one of his ushers with ear-muffs clamped on him. In large type, the ad announced "We've had to put earmuffs on our ushers" and explained that due to the side-splitting humor of the film the ushers were unable properly to discharge their duties.

Mayor Starts Projection Machine for Ayer on "Night"

Mayor George G. Birdsall of Colorado Springs, started the projection machine in motion for Ralph Ayer's "Two for Tonight" campaign at the Ute Theatre. Stunt broke papers with stories and photos.

Ralph contacted tours headquarters and by giving passes to drivers of cars exacted promises from them to plug picture to tourists. Leading men's haberdasher devoted window to display of men's formal attire, tying in with picture. Contacting the studios, congratulatory wires on opening were received from stars and made into one-sheet display for lobby. Civic club presidents were invited to opening and Western Union printed jumbo reproductions of wires received from stars.

6000 Pupils Attend Halloween Matinee

Conceded to be one of the most effective safe-and-sane Halloween cooperations between schools, civic organizations and theatre was that promoted by Manager Herb Grove, Fort, Rock Island, Ill., wherein over 6,000 boys and girls were guests at a special Saturday morning show.

Contacts were made with school officials by means of Halloween pledges furnished to every school room in the city, private and parochial institutions included. Pledge copy which was a promise to refrain from damaging property ran as follows:

"I promise to refrain from destroying, harming or removing property, or doing anything that is not good, clean, harmless fun during the Halloween Season. In consideration of my good behavior I will be allowed to attend the free show at the Fort Theatre, Saturday morning, November second, through the courtesy of the Fort Theatre. I understand that if I break this pledge I will not be entitled to attend this show."

Each pledge sheet contained spaces for 40 names, school, teacher grade and class. Signed pledges were returned to theatre and exact number of tickets were sent to each school with time printed on each ticket designating time of individual show children were to attend. As thousands of children were taken care of, three complete shows were given, at 8:30 for high schools; 9:30 for students closest to theatre, and 11:00 for students from schools in outer districts. Program included a George O'Brien and cartoons and theatre employees of all classifications donated their services .

Local organization such as PTA, Chamber of Commerce, civic authorities and merchants cooperated unanimously. The Mayor issued statements for the papers which also ran daily stories on the build-up and actual performances.

Payoff was by actual checkup of police and fire departments also cooperating, damage done by Halloween pranksters in Rock Island was considerably less than in adjoining towns where no shows of this kind were put on.

Matinees were the second annual Halloween party put on by Grove the success of which has of course considerably heightened Tri-States prestige in that sector.

Film Course Given At Boston Theatre

A series of eight lectures and demonstrations of various films has been arranged by George Kraska, maestro of the Fine Arts Theatre, sponsored by the Boston University School of Education under the title "The Place of the Motion Picture in Our National Life."

The first lecture, all of which are to be given at the theatre on Saturday mornings, was on "The Social Influence of the Motion Picture: its mass appeal, effect on current thought, manners, speech, dress, relation to changing social standards." The second lecture was on drama in motion pictures, with special attention to "Midsummer Night's Dream."

Some of the other discussions of the series are titled, "The Motion Picture As An Art Form," "The Motion Picture in Education," "Developing Appreciation of Motion Pictures," "The Motion Picture and American Culture."

The course extends credits for students attending the series, the charge being $10.50 for the eight lectures. For those attending but not studying for credits the fees are about half.

Fishkin Uses Lucky Number Contest to Plug "Top Hat"

For "Call of the Wild," Louie created an atmospheric lobby with snow shoes, pine trees, stuffed dog, logs, etc. Enlarged photos of Gable and Young graced the display. Assistant Harry Kriegman aided in putting over the campaign.

Further Campaigns On "So Red the Rose"

Montgomery, Alabama, celebrated its "So Red the Rose" campaign with a swell newspaper sheaf. Bill Wolfson, manager of the Paramount Theatre there, directed his advance to the papers with the result that local sheet ran a daily story for two weeks ahead and carried its review of the picture on the front page. The front of the Paramount was decorated with a rose trellis effect, using simulated flowers and leaves for display.

For the opening, roses were promoted from florist for each lady attending, florist newspaper space to tie in. The entire block on which the theatre is located was decorated with bunting and flags. Wolfson also staged an atmospheric prologue.

Little Rock - U.D.C. Tieup

Little Rock, Arkansas, went to town for the Arkansas Theatre, managed by Ralph Noble. Noble was fortunate in securing the cooperation of Mrs. William D. Massey, President General, United Daughters of the Confederacy, who received. Governor Futrell and Mayor Overman also attended the premiere, as did many social and political people. Noble staged a lobby broadcast. He netted publicity and photos with the attendance of the three oldest living Confederate veterans.

Jackson's Autographed Script Stunt

The Majestic Theatre, Jackson, Mississippi, put on a campaign under the supervision of Manager Henry Seel, which resulted in a gala premiere. Governor Connor attended. Seel presented an autographed script of "So Red the Rose" to the Jackson Daily News and was rewarded with a laudatory editorial for the picture. Roses were distributed to ladies at the opening and the local school band was promoted to play selections in the lobby.

Baton Rouge Premiere

Baton Rouge, historic Confederate capital and present state capital of Louisiana, put across a campaign for "So Red the Rose" that had repercussions in New Orleans. C. E. O'Donnell, of the Paramount Theatre in Baton Rouge, had a lobby broadcast at the premiere over a local station which brought all important persons attending the premiere to the microphone, including Governor Allen. The New Orleans press sent representatives covering the crowd, story and reviews. The ballyhoo consisted of an elaborately decorated theatre front, a band outside, the usual flashlights, and crowds.

All of the openings were supplied by the Paramount Home Office advertising department with a card giveaway containing a piece of sound film of the love scene between Margaret Sullavan and Randolph Scott.

WINDOW DISPLAY. An attention attractor was Roscoe Drissel's, Loew's Parkway, Wilmington, Del. "I Live My Life" window display which was lit at night.

Warner's "Dream"

A campaign of dignity which began six months ago preceded the opening in Memphis of "A Midsummer Night's Dream." Unprecedented newspaper breaks included editorials in all newspapers. Sponsored by fashionable Nineteenth Century Club and endorsed by Better Films Council membership, which includes 75 civic groups. The opening was a gala occasion, with entire block floodlighted and broadcast over WHBQ, with photographers reporting notables in attendance and with Congressman officially opening theatre. Opening attended by society and notables in formal attire. Posting was most comprehensive in local history, blanketing fifty-mile area in three states. Radio included numerous speakers, sketches enacted by Little Theatre Players, announcements and featuring of Mendelssohn music. Speakers appeared before school assemblies, luncheon clubs and women's clubs. Opera and road-show mailing lists and Better Films Council mailing lists used for letters. English teachers, Shakespearian groups, music schools and groups and dance schools contacted. Giant banner at strategic downtown location. Displays on school bulletin boards and in branch libraries. Displays of formal attire in department store windows tying in with grand opening, traveling box-office to schools in advance and personal sale of tickets in advance in all schools. Fraternities, sororities, clubs and fraternal organizations contacted for group theatre parties, book store windows and displays, stills on display in windows, stories in all school papers and country papers. Programs placed in all hotel rooms, elaborate advance lobby panels and impressive front display. Ministers and Rabbis contacted and several of them speaking of the production in their regular services. Railroad excursions to Memphis arranged and cards placed in all towns in drawing radius. Inserts placed in letters mailed by stores and in telegrams delivered. Arrangements made to have symphony orchestra feature Mendelssohn music in concert poster contest in art department of school and posters placed on display in downtown windows.

WORKABLE CHRISTMAS IDEAS

What Theatremen Did Last Year to Stimulate Grosses During the Christmas and New Year Periods

With the holiday season right around the corner, showmen already are planning what to do to hold up their end before and during the festal period. The ideas listed here are from Round Tablers who found them of assistance last year and offer these slants again for the information of our readers.

Lobby and "Santa" Slants

Francis Deering, at Loew's State, Memphis, planted a compo board Christmas tree beneath which was placed boxes and packages to simulate holiday gifts, lettered with titles of coming pictures. Caption was "Our Christmas Gift to You."

Deering also hooked in with local paper to film pictures of Santy arriving via plane and annual Xmas parade, reel to be shown at the State. Paper paid all expenses and plugged the tie-in strongly. With another paper, Francis cooperated to place huge tree in lobby with public invited to deposit gifts for needy.

Toy Angles

Annual affair is Frank La Falce's tie-in with local sheet for toy matinees in all Warner Washington houses, children admitted for new toy or article of wearing apparel. These are turned over to Community Chest for distribution tie-up is highly successful with as many as 30,000 toys reported collected on one of these drives.

Standard Theatres of Oklahoma City also stress the toy matinee, J. M. Schoeppel, Midwest Theatre, having worked successfully with local fire department to repair broken toys brought to the theatre as admissions to the special show.

The above two tie-ins are typical of what has been and what is being done generally for underprivileged children. Newspapers, civic associations, lunch, women's clubs, etc., can always be depended upon to cooperate.

Free Shows for Poor

Ruly Kuehn, while at the Fabian, in Hoboken, N. J., put on a special show for the youngsters in conjunction with local business men's association which paid for all expenses including special tickets distributed through mayor's office to schools, etc. Each child was given small gift basket and escort to and from theatre was furnished by police department.

Howard Waugh, in Memphis, arranged with local paper to sponsor series of special matinees for folks living at city Transient Bureau. Morris Rosenthal, at the Majestic, Bridgeport, Conn., also put on matinees for children on welfare lists and arranged the broken toy-fire department tie-up.

Other Holiday Shows

Starting the Sunday opening Christmas Week and continuing matinees daily the day before Christmas, Fred C. Souttar, at the Lincoln, Belleville, Ill., put on a series of "Fairy Book" shows, talent supplied by dancing school. Fairy tale characters familiar to children were presented.

E. C. Grady, at the Hoosier, Whiting, Ind., in conjunction with his regular kid club Christmas party gave a lot of gifts away from his Christmas tree on a lucky number idea.

Julius Lamm, at the Uptown, Cleveland, Ohio, puts on an annual stage show with local civic club which cooperates on a percentage basis, club members selling tickets to friends, Julius giving special prizes to those disposing of most tickets and is successful in promoting lots of the talent.

Louis Lamm, at the Capitol, Elyria, also puts on annual party for the kids Saturday before Christmas, talent obtained from dancing schools. Youngsters are given gifts with tree supplied by cooperating florist and presents from local merchants.

New Year Slants

Last New Year's Eve Fred Souttar put on a stage wedding of a colored couple. This is one he has used before and finds it a reliable clicker. On same bill he put on an old-time movie show with silent film, song and ad slides, film breaks, piano and drum for the music.

Tableaux of baby 1936 chasing Old Man 1935 across stage as clock strikes midnight; "happy new year" lettered on old drops or cut-out of compo, flittered and suspended have also served to announce the new year as music of "Auld Lang Syne" is played with audience invited to join in.

Other Seasonal Angles

Among the ideas that have paid their way are those that tie-in with stories, such as checking service for Xmas purchases at theatre while patrons are seeing the show. Milt Chamberlain, at the Plaza, New York, has been advertising this in his programs addressed to early shoppers.

Gifts of special books of tickets, 12 in a book, are also plugged by Chamberlain, cost of these about 20 per cent less than regular prices.

Stores this year are going stronger than ever for toys of the better known cartoon comics and managers are supplying large cut-outs of these and other fitting advertising on tie-ups.

Santa Claus, in person, is still the big draw at stores, theatre matinees and where stores tie-in with theatres to exhibit toy displays in foyer, mezzanine, etc.

"Shop Early" stickers with theatre copy for use on packages at stores was also used, as was imprinted sticker tape containing theatre and store advertising.

Harry Botwick, at the State, Portland, Me., likes the lobby information booth presided over by girl who gives information on train schedules and answers questions of general interest including perhaps different sales advertised by stores, etc. Arrangements can be made for appointments at theatre and where the booth idea can be carried out effectively, girl and phone might be promoted from transportation company or cooperating merchants.

Free coffee or tea service in the mezzanine is another aid, managers advertising the comfort and relaxation angle at the theatre to break up the shopping tour.

'MUTINY ON BOUNTY' SCORES

Theatremen from Portland to Texas Employ Many Exploitation Angles to Put Over MGM Special

Matching the strength of the production with a host of ingenious and effective slants in advance of their dates, showmen in various parts of the country went to town to put over MGM's "Mutiny on the Bounty." Among the angles used the ship's model contest arranged by Billy Ferguson and tieins with living descendants of Fletcher Christian helped to roll up a tremendous publicity score.

Fort Worth to Pitcairn Island

Discovering that Mayor Wall, of the nearby town of Grapevine has been for 20 years a close friend to the natives of Pitcairn Island, Manager Frank Weatherford and publicist Charley Carden, Worth Theatre, Fort Worth, Texas, contacted the official for cooperation on the date. Mr. Wall supplied a comprehensive display of various articles made by the islanders which were shown in the lobby, these being forwarded by the Pitcairners to the city official for sale.

Publicity highlight of the campaign was a two-column interview on the mayor's experiences with the islanders, topped by a cut of some of the living Christian descendants. Caption carried full mention of the theatre.

Ship Model in Racine

Not one of the two originals being toured by MGM but an exact model of the original "Bounty" constructed after five years of labor by a neighboring citizen was one of the standouts in the drive put over by Manager Owen McKivitt, Venetian, Racine, Wisc., with exploiter Morris Abrams.

In addition to display of the model, builder also delivered lecture describing it in full detail.

Man-on-the-street broadcast was also effective, passersby being asked three questions regarding the picture and another topper was benefit tiein with women's university club with over 6,000 tickets sold. Ship model contest also was put on.

Saunders Promotes Islander

Bridgeport, Conn., also lays claim to an original Pitcairn Islander, a Miss McCoy, who was promoted by Manager Matt Saunders, of Loew's Poli, to loan for exhibit at the theatre, a lot of island articles. Featured was a model of the "Bounty" made at Pitcairn some 50 years ago.

Saunders received another neat break with the discovery that a Bridgeport youth had recently returned from a tour of the South Seas during which he had visited Pitcairn. Matt used this slant for a feature story of the lad's experiences, including, of course, full mention of the picture.

What Saunders reports one of the strongest plugs given a picture locally was editorial in leading paper boosting the attraction and the better quality of pictures now being released.

Contests in Portland

It was Ted Gamble, at the United Artists, who planted contests with two leading dailies, one the ship model idea with extra prizes given by the paper. The other consisted of running a daily list of characters in the picture with highlights of their individual characteristics together with a photo each day of one of the players. Prizes were given for those best casting the players according to the characteristics.

Seized upon by Gamble was another break wherein house safe was tapped, being brought to public notice with page one stories and a cartoon ad tying it to the picture. Ad received so much comment that insurance company was reported to have investigated whether robbery was authentic or stunt for the picture.

Helpful too was variation of the street car bally, tieup being made with traction company to supply car for the purpose of transportating patrons free of charge to the theatre. This information was lettered on both sides.

Tremendous newspaper campaign, including extra large punch displays of art and a nine o'clock opening instead of the usual time helped to convince folks in that sector on the importance of the production. Exploiteer J. A. Schiller assisted.

Indianapolis Merchants Cooperate

Manager Ward Farrar, working with Fred Bartow, arranged another angle of the ship's model contest by a tiein with eight leading merchants wherein stores would act as headquarters for the contest distributing pamphlets and blueprints in addition to devoting window space to theatre displays especially made up by theatre art shop. In addition, each merchant took space in two separate co-op pages, ads all carrying copy on the picture and contest. Stores also contributed cash prizes for local prizes.

Top street stunt was display of traveling ship's model under supervision of Capt. Rodney Phifer planted in front of vacant store adjoining theatre and which also was brought to stores of merchants cooperating on the contest.

Louisville Store's Workshop

Exclusive headquarters for the model contest was granted boys' department of leading Louisville department store by Manager George Hunt, of Loew's Theatre, store setting up workshop for use of children entering contest. Special department was arranged for information, blue prints, entry blanks, special knives and building sets, store taking large ads to announce the tiein.

Hunt also hooked up with head of Young America Clubs to syndicate publicity on this in various newspapers, local paper sponsoring club playing contest up strongly until termination. Editor is giving ten local awards and school superintendent cooperated with special letters to teachers requesting they mention contest in classes.

For street bally, Hunt dug up flat truck and had designer build it up to resemble the Bounty. Large lettered mats on the sides with sails and bowsprit projected in front added atmosphere. Costumed girls distributed heralds and Tahitian love flowers.

HOW TO TAKE YOUR OWN PHOTOS

Mechanics of Taking Inexpensive And Effective Pictures Explained Comprehensively by Cameraman

by JOHN W. McFARLANE

For publicity purposes pictures should be interesting enough to command attention. They must also be up to a certain photographic standard to make good half-tone reproduction possible. While these photographs are often made by a professional photographer, they can be taken fairly well by the manager himself, if he has or can borrow a suitable roll film camera. The subjects of interest are: 1. The theatre marquee and its decoration. 2. Individual displays under the marquee. 3. Displays in the lobby. 4. Traveling displays on the street.

The most desirable camera for most of these subjects is one which makes pictures at least 2¼ by 3¼ inches, and preferably larger. The lens should be one of the "faster" types; that is, its marking should be f 8, f 7.7, f 6.3, f 5.6, f 4.5.

The Theatre Front by Day

Set the camera at about eye level on a stepladder, diagonally across the street from the theatre. Choose that time of day, if any, when the theatre front is in sunlight. Set the focusing scale for 100 feet, the diaphragm at f/8 and the shutter speed at 1/25 (25 on the scale). Make the exposure while no cars are passing the theatre.

If the theatre is so situated that the sun does not strike it, set up as before, but take three different pictures, changing the exposure as follows: 1. Diaphragm wide open (whether f 8, or f 6.3 or f 4.5, etc), shutter speed 1/25 second. 2. Diaphragm wide open, with short "bulb" exposure. Set the shutter speed at "B" on the scale and press the exposure lever for about a quarter of a second. The timing need not be accurate, but it is very important that the camera be held firmly on the ladder, to prevent camera motion. 3. Diaphragm at f 11, "bulb" exposure of about two seconds, made as before.

If possible, pictures 2 and 3 should be made with neither traffic nor pedestrians moving. These pictures can be made any time before sunset. One of these three pictures will be good, varying light conditions make it impossible to say which. The film expense for the other two is very small, and the photo finisher can be instructed to print only from the best of the three.

The Theatre Front at Night

The same camera can be used, after the crowds leave. Set up the camera as before with all the theatre lights on, expose the three negatives as follows:

1—f/11½ seconds (on the "B" setting).
2—f/11 3 seconds (on the "B" setting).
3—f/11 15 seconds (on the "T" setting).

If you wish pictures of the activity in front of the theatre at night, it is beyond the camera used so far. The best thing is to use some miniature camera fan with an f/2 lens. He can secure pictures at 1/50 of a second under a brightly lighted marquee.

Displays under the Marquee

Such displays are rarely in direct sunlight. By daylight, use the three negative method, again on the ladder. The subject distance will be from six to 15 feet. Measure the distance from subject to lens, and set the focusing scale accordingly. The exposures should be:

1. f/11 ¼ second.
2. f/11 2 seconds.
3. f/11 10 seconds.

If there are actors in the display, they must "hold it" for the exposure time.

By night, displays under the marquee and lit by it, can be photographed in the same way as by daylight, but the exposures should be:

1. f/11 1 second.
2. f/11 5 seconds.
3. f/11 30 seconds.

If there is action in the display, or spectators present, it is more practical to photograph it using a photoflash lamp in a hand reflector. These lamps give one flash lasting about 1/50 second. To use them, the camera is set on a support, the diaphragm set at f 11, the shutter is opened (using either the "B" or "T" setting), the flash fired and the shutter closed again.

Displays in the Lobby

As the lighting level in the lobby is very much lower than that under the marquee and varies more widely, it is more practical to use a photoflash lamp. As before, the camera should be set on a ladder or other support, the focusing scale set for the distance measured from subject to camera lens, and the Photoflash lamp fired while the shutter is opened at f/11. It pays to make more than one picture of a display in which people are active, to secure an appropriate pose.

Traveling Displays

Arrange if possible to have sunlight on the display. Try for a background that is not distracting, so that telephone poles will not appear to sprout from the actors' heads, or the like. Measure the distance, set the focusing scale, set the diaphragm at f/8, the shutter at 1/25 second, and expose while holding the camera as still as possible, or, better yet, place it on a support.

While sunlight will produce the most pleasing picture, the display may be photographed in shadow if necessary, following the procedure for theatre marquees in shadow.

Right Kind of Prints

If the picture size is smaller than 3¼ by 4¼, an enlargement, either five by seven or eight by ten can be used. Such an enlargement, on glossy paper, is desirable in any case, for these reasons: in making such enlargements the more careful photo finisher so handles the printing that all parts of the subject are shown up to best advantage. He also goes to considerable trouble in retouching defects. Also, it is easier for the photo-engraver to work from an enlargement than from a small contact print. Point out to the photo finisher that the picture is to be used for reproduction.

Henger Stages "Lucky Legs" Contest at Criterion

George Y. Henger, city manager Standard Theatres Corp., Oklahoma City, Okla., reports excellent box-office results through his "lucky legs" contest planted in local daily in connection with "The Case of Lucky Legs" at the Criterion there.

Announcement of contest was carried under four-column head in paper with art work and offer of $100 in cash to winner with hosiery to runners-up. Contestants submitted photos of themselves in bathing suits to reveal shapes of legs and from these entrants were selected to appear at theatre in person opening night.

Curtain was lowered about 24 inches from floor, revealing legs of girls with audience applause deciding winners. Contest gained loads of free space in papers and proved mighty successful.

Telescope Plugs "China Seas" Date for Gates

As part of his advance campaign on "China Seas" at Loew's Park, Cleveland, Arnold Gates stationed a telescope on busy street intersection inviting all to look at the stars. Inside copy on lens read "Gable-Harlow-Beery now at," etc., etc. Another street bally was bannered ricksha pulled by man in Chinese costume.

Through tieup with radio station, song guessing contest was arranged, tickets awarded first twenty submitting correct titles. Contest ran for week with theatre and picture getting plug. Pressbook "Seas" contest was planted with leading shoe store, stories and art run in papers and store's announcements.

Local ballroom cooperated, featuring a Harlow Waltz contest, cash prizes awarded by owners to first three winners and runnersup getting tickets to picture.

Paper Doll Contest Planted By Walsh for "Love Me"

A Grace Moore paper doll contest was planted in the Sunday Times by R. D. Walsh, New Lafayette, Buffalo, N. Y., on "Love Me Forever" in which silhouette figures of the star were run together with costumes. Tickets were awarded those submitting neatest jobs of dressing the "doll," mounting her on cardboard and coloring it.

Through tieup with leading ladies' apparel shop, window display was arranged (see photo) with dress department offering photos of the star. Still another store featured a Moore coiffure using cut in ads.

Salmon Inaugurates Popeye Clubs at Houses

Monty Salmon, district manager for the Quaker Theatres, Upper Derby, Pa., has organized Popeye clubs for the Tower, Roosevelt and Nixon Theatres there. Membership cards are given each kid and for each card that is punched 10 consecutive times, free ducats are given. Managers of the houses give brief talk on Saturday matinees covering goodwill, etc. Popeye costumes and dolls are given away every week.

For "Annapolis Farewell," Monty contacted the American Legion for their bugle band which paraded through main thoroughfares followed by Legion officials in cars covered with flags, pennants, banners, etc.

Schools Cooperate With Lampe on "Harmony Lane"

Gaining cooperation of schools, Gus Lampe, Eckel Theatre, Syracuse, N. Y., for "Harmony Lane" distributed biographies of Stephen Foster's life to pupils, while singing classes dedicated certain days to "Foster days" and read material regarding the picture. Reporter from local daily interviewed superintendent of schools on life of the composer, carrying stories in paper.

Sound truck toured streets playing melodies from picture, music stores distributed heralds and plugged tunes.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Running times are those supplied by the companies. Asterisk indicates running time as made known by West Coast studio before announcement by home office in New York. Variations also may be due to local censorship deletions. Dates are 1935, unless otherwise specified. Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1935- 36 season.

GUINEA PIGS AND PEARLS

IT looks confusing. The stage evolves its material in metropolitan workshops and tries it out on city-bred audiences from Baltimore to Boston. The motion picture takes over the end product, puts it through the Hollywood process and then by pre-view tries it out on the sublimated super-hicks made up of the climate refugees from the plains country colonized between Long Beach and Whittier. At each end of the product is a very different breed of guinea pig, but where does the United States get representation?

And, reflecting on audiences, a conversation with Mr. Michael Balcon of Gaumont-British at the Twentieth Century-Fox plant the other day brought up considerations more interesting than enlightening. It was observed by Mr. Balcon that in Britain as here the double bill policy was dominant.

"Now why," we asked, "if the public so insists, as supposed, on a long bill and a lot of entertainment, does the stage get along with plays at their typical length?"

We did not get the answer. But it may repose in a number of facts. The play audience is presumably made up of persons who come from the higher brackets of buying power and can afford a number of things to do to kill the evening. Also the stage producer is not subject to the temptation of the movies where the prints stand resting in the can, ready to go into cutthroat competition any moment.

The DeBeers syndicate keeps the price of diamonds up by keeping them off the market, but the pearls of the screen go out in job lots.

WHAT IS "ADULT"?

SOMETHING of the internal, lingering, diehard opposition of some factors of the Hollywood community to the self-regulatory measures of the Production Code find expression in references to it as "censorship," more often than not as "Hays censorship." These expressions are commonly behind hand and whispered, but now and then erupt in indiscreet public audibility. A typical manifestation recently appeared in the contributions of Mr. Lloyd Pantages, who writes for the Los Angeles Examiner.

Said Mr. Pantages in substance, there was something to be thankful for in that newsreels did not come under "the Hays censorship" and that therefore in newsreels at least the screen might achieve "adult" material.

It so happens that since most of the affairs which the newsreels have occasion to record are public affairs, a certain common decency that pertains to the public in public tends to prevail. It also so happens that the men who make newsreels are perhaps continuously more in contact with, and responsive to, American mores than their confreres of the fiction industry under the pepper trees and palms. Anyway, the newsreels require little regulative attention. Apart from that it might be observed to Mr. Pantages, scion of the house of Pantages and born into the show business, that all of the newsreels are under the banner of signatories to the Production Code. It is the comment of his contemporaries in the Los Angeles newspaper field that his copy has to pass two editors—maybe a third is indicated.

But that phrase "adult entertainment" especially protrudes. Not a few other screen commentators, mostly erectile young blades, prate about it. Examination of the pratings inevitably reveals a confused state of mind that can not tell an adult from an adulterer.

The tedious truth is that mostly what these yearning young contenders would have specially licensed for the "adult" screen pertains to manifestations of adolesence, a toying exploration of matters that betrays immaturity, regardless of the age at which the manifestations appear. Much that passes for sophistication is most exactly unsophistication.

The true sophisticate knows about it and is therefore not concerned. It is the itch of naivete that wants to bathe in it.

The screen could do with some adult commentators.

RADIO'S NEW WELL

THE retirement of the Radio Corporation of America from the motion picture field through its recent sales of interest in both American and overseas enterprises is another demonstration of the ancient axiom, or what should by now be an ancient axiom, that "possession of the tools does not mean possession of the art."

There is a vainglorious boast of various pioneers that their court wars defeated the Patents Company. The fact is, however, that the Patents Company's defeat was on the field of performance and the issue was really decided by products, not court orders.

Meanwhile, not much remains to support the oft repeated assertions in RCA quarters of the unity of interest of Radio and the Screen.

There is no unity. There is a common and competitive purpose of delivering entertainment, of merchandising the same entertainers.

As the RCA goes out of the movies, simultaneously its National Broadcasting Company makes ready to open a great air studio plant in Hollywood to tap the reservoirs of talent created by the screen in its production center.

It is a method well understood in the oil fields, too.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S

Union Fireworks

Flaring into open warfare, the bitter jurisdiction fight in Hollywood between the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers assumed serious proportions this week when the IATSE ordered all of its theatre workers to be ready for an immediate strike at all Paramount theatres, and, possibly, to strike at other theatres throughout the country. The immediate cause was Paramount's supplanting three IATSE production workers with IBEW unionites.

The strike actually became effective in Paramount's theatres in Illinois, Iowa and Nebraska, but it was short lived, pending further discussions between the union's high powers and Paramount's executives in New York.

However, the IATSE ordered all IBEW men employed in theatres over which the IATSE has jurisdiction, to be summarily dismissed and supplanted by IATSE electrical workers and maintenance men.

The union flareup—a fight between two rivals which finds the motion picture business "sandwiched" between them, is described on page 51.

Expanding

That a period of intensified expansion is coming in all branches of the motion picture industry in Britain is indicated by announcements this week of ambitious plans by two and possibly three leading circuits.

Theatre issues of $15,000,000 each are the immediate plans of Union Cinemas and County Cinemas. It is reported that a similar issue is to be projected by the Oscar Deutsch group of Odeon theatres.

While no production tieup could be traced in the County and Union plans, British production is at the moment at the crest of great activity and a large request for public money is expected. The new companies' activities are straining the existing resources of British studios, says Bruce Allan, of the HERALD's London bureau. The article is on page 71.

Memorials

At the meeting point of the New York-Montreal and New York-Boston airways, the Manhattan tower of the George Washington Bridge, an airway beacon of 1,800,000 candlepower was dedicated last Saturday to the memory of Wiley Post and Will Rogers. Its alternate white and red flashes will be visible twelve times a minute to airmen for a distance, in clear weather, of 64 miles.

Governor Harry W. Rice, of Maryland, was the principal speaker at the special broadcast over WBAL, radio station for the Will Rogers Memorial Fund, last Saturday, the broadcast being sponsored by Morris A. Mechanic, president of the New Theatre, Baltimore, where Rogers' last picture "In Old Kentucky," is now playing.

The Will Rogers Memorial Fund was officially launched in Cleveland last week when Charles A. Otis, fund chairman, spoke from the stage of Warners' Hippodrome. Young girl volunteers will be placed in all large department stores, banks, and places where crowds gather, to gather in the voluntary contributions.

Big Grosses

A meeting of Paramount executives, held in Chicago, Monday and Tuesday, heard John E. Otterson, president, and Adolph Zukor, board chairman, report on the progress made by the corporation since the reorganization last June, and the company's plans for the future. Ernst Lubitsch, production general, predicted that theatres in this country in 1936 will gross some $1,040,000,000 in admissions. See page 42.

Feist Contract

Renewal for a long term of Felix F. Feist's contract as general manager of sales and distribution of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer was announced Wednesday by Nicholas M. Schenck, president. The announcement said:

"Mr. Feist, who has been with MGM for eleven years, has in that time perfected a nationwide sales organization that has been in a considerable measure responsible for the unusual record made by that company since the merger of Metro-Goldwyn and Louis B. Mayer.

"The new motion picture season has to date marked a record for sales under the Feist leadership and the forthcoming product is such as to warrant even greater strides in the balance of the season."

New Ascap Position

A consent decree rather than government prosecution of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers may be the channel through which exhibitors and others will obtain relief from burdensome music taxes, it was indicated in Washington this week.

The probable change in strategy on the part of the Department of Justice arises from the Warner secession which on December 31st withdraws 11 music publishing firms from ASCAP.

In a turmoil, song writers were threatening court action against Warner to protect their interests, while Warner refrained from indicating how the situation would affect exhibitors. The developments are detailed in the story on page 16.

'One Big Union'

The "one big union" of stage and screen players, and the "closed shop" for Hollywood, took a step forward this week with the ruling that Actors' Equity members employed in studios must join the Screen Actors' Guild and submit to its jurisdiction.

Frank Gillmore, Equity president, believed his dream of years for a strong actors' union in Hollywood was just around the corner to realization.

The Government meanwhile is proceeding at a slow pace with plans to put thousands of actors to work on WPA theatre projects, though plans are fairly well advanced in New York. See page 38.

NEWS SUMMARY COVERING THE SCREEN WORLD

Blames "Fog"

Vigorously condemning the "high-pressure" counsel of the defense for their court room "performances," Allied States Exhibitiors, through Abram Myers, general counsel and board chairman, this week charged that the jury which acquitted Warner, Paramount and RKO of criminal-indictment conspiracy charges in the St. Louis case, were not only "in a fog," but were swayed by the defendants' expensive counsel, "and not by the facts and law."

At the same time, Mr. Myers explained the basis of the proposed plan by which Allied would become involved in an independent producing plan. He also announced an annual board meeting, to be held at Washington, in January, and sounded the keynote for the forthcoming Congressional session in its relation to theatre owners.

Mr. Myers' long tirade against the St. Louis decision in the Harry Arthur Fanchon and Marco case, is reported on, along with Allied's other late activities, on page 54.

Production Cue

Citing production already this season of 15 pictures costing $1,000,000 or more as the cue to the trend in Hollywood toward large budget screen entertainment, Edwin Schallert, writing in the Los Angeles Times explains that grosses are increased from 40 to 50 per cent by three "big money" pictures, and for this reason Hollywood will further expand its plans in this connection. See page 61.

Newsreel in Color

Pathe News is planning to come out entirely in natural color within a year, it was disclosed by Courtland Smith, president of the newsreel, this week.

It is inevitable that the screen will go to color, Mr. Smith believes. He pointed out that sound came into the industry through the newsreel, and he believed the same medium will bring about the transformation to tints.

The newsreel is conducting research to determine the process to be used.

Speed

An electric sound "camera" which automatically, and in a few seconds, makes a picture record of the quality of tones and sounds within most of the range of human hearing has been built at the Cruft Laboratory of Electric Communication Engineering, Harvard University, Dr. Harry H. Hall, instructor in physics, announced. Older methods required many days to make the sound pictures which can be produced in four seconds by the new apparatus.

Through these tone pictures, the sound of musical instruments can be studied, and minute differences in tone between very fine and ordinary instruments can be discovered and scientifically analyzed. In analyzing a sound, the apparatus built by Dr. Hall makes a picture of the relative loudness of all its parts, including the fundamental pitch, the overtones and incidental noises such as the scratching of a violin bow. The apparatus records sounds within the range of 50 to 10,000 cycles. The limit of human hearing is ordinarily fixed between low pitches of about 20 cycles and high squeaks of 15 to 20 thousand cycles.

Understanding

Motion picture producers should attempt to gain an understanding of foreign life and traditions if they would circumvent repercussions abroad against some of our films, believes Major Frederick L. Herron, manager of the foreign department of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

Difficulties of this sort add to the worries over restrictions, he said, and we are fortunate in having a State Department that is willing to "go to bat." The Major, returned late last week from a survey in Europe, is interviewed on page 60.

Fewer Shorts

With Educational devoting all future short subject production to New York, the company has reduced annual programs from 42 subjects to 28, the reduction being attributable, it is understood, to double featuring.

E. H. Allen, Educational's Hollywood studio manager, becomes Coast representative.

Edward Small, Winfield Sheehan, Sol Lesser and David Selznick are understood to have submitted bids for Educational's Hollywood property, with Mr. Sheehan said to have the "inside track."

Granted

Judge Henry W. Goddard in New York federal court Wednesday granted a petition of Emelia and Morris Sharaf to intervene as minority stockholder co-plaintiffs in an action brought by Norman Johnson against Warner Bros.

Conciliation

Conciliation boards for resolving trade conflicts, rather than arbitration, is what is wanted by an overwhelming number of exhibitors, Ed. Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, has determined as a result of his eight weeks of sentiment sounding in the field.

More flexible in procedure, conciliation would permit of broad dealing with practices such as overbuying and clearance and zoning, it was held, while arbitration would be limited in scope.

The industry, meanwhile, was represented as giving "very weak support" to the business conference called for Monday in Washington as what is regarded a "trial balloon" for revival of the NRA in the next Congress. And Allied States Association assailed the move in a manner reminiscent of its attitude during the stirrings of the original Blue Eagle. The story starts on page 49.

Spanish Hopes

Now that the reduction of the gross turnover tax in Spain from 7½ to 4 per cent is nearer realization, American companies operating there are hoping for further help from the pending commercial treaty. Importers want lower duties and a share in the stamp revenue privilege.

Several newly established Spanish producing companies, on the other hand, seek restriction on importations and a complete prohibition of dubbed pictures.

Other developments in Spain are reported on page 72.

Stock Buying

The acquisition by S. P. Friedman, of New York, a director in the company, of 5,000 six per cent optional convertible debentures of Warner Brothers Pictures, has been reported in Washington by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

At the close of the month, Mr. Friedman's report showed, he held 41,000 debentures and 600 shares of Warner common.

Reports were also filed for directors of Loew's, Inc., showing that David Bernstein, of New York, on October 26th acquired 2,000 shares of common, bringing his holdings to 11,890 shares.

A report was also filed last month by J. Robert Rubin, of New York, showing that during the month his holding company disposed of 500 shares of Loew common and had 350 shares of $6.50 cumulative preferred.

SYNTHETIC SHINER. A harmless way of getting a punch in the eye, effected by Joe Bonner, Warner cosmeticians, acting as proxy for Jack Oakie, whose fistic aim in "Colleen" is supposed to have the results here noted upon Dick Powell. What Bonner did to Oakie's is not divulged.

THEATRE CIRCUIT GIVES BANQUET. Members of the Gibraltar Enterprises organization and guests attending dinner at which the circuit was host to nearly 100 film men and theatre supply dealers. Among those present were Charles R. Gilmore, president of the company, and six directors: E. J. Schulte, Casper, Wyo.; E. John Greer, Santa Fe; Everett Cole, Alamosa, Colo.; Thomas Murphy, Raton, N. Mex.; W. H. Ostenburg, Scottsbluff, Neb.; and Eddie Ward, Silver City, N. Mex. Gibraltar Enterprises, which operates 24 theatres in the Denver territory, has made the banquet and annual affair. This was the second.

MORE PAINTING IN. And like its predecessor across the page, a technical demonstration from Warner. This one, however, involving more constructive matters. Involving, as well, Eunice Healey, a new Warner contract player. Only 19, they say. Comes to the screen from the New York stage—a dancer.

DEBUT EPISODE. In which Lily Pons marks the opening of her first film, RKO Radio's "I Dream Too Much," at Music Hall, New York (where she also made personal appearances) with autographed photos for (left) M. H. Aylesworth, president of NBC, and W. G. Van Schmus, director of the theatre.

A COLUMN OF FIGURES. Calculated to draw attention to current fashions in a new Educational short, "Perfect Thirty-Sixes." With the perfect thirty-sixes themselves are shown Niela Goodelle and Earl Oxford, singers, who are featured in this release, which was produced by Al Christie at Astoria. The picture also features Fred Lightner and Nell Kelly.

ASSIGNED FEATURE ROLE. Priscilla Lawson, one of Universal's "junior stock" players, who has been cast in one of the feminine leads of "Dangerous Waters," which stars Jack Holt. This study of her indicates her favorite sport.

GRID HEROES FROM HAWAII. Once America knew Hawaii best for its wicki-wacki-wooing. The lads here shown on a visit to the Warner studio instruct us differently. They came to the States to demonstrate their newly acquired skill at football, against California teams. Pictured with them are the Warner players, Joe E. Brown, Joan Blondell and Hugh Herbert.

CHAPLIN RIDICULES REDS' CLAIM FILM AIDS "CAUSE"

Comedian's Well Known Independence Is Answer to Soviet Attempt to Gloss Over Cool Reception of Its Commission

Soviet Article Quoting Shumiatsky "Reads Terrible Social Meaning" Into What Comic Considers Funny, Says Reeves

by TERRY RAMSAYE
in Hollywood

"Production No. 5," by, with, and of Charles Chaplin, just now called "Modern Times," is, as it nears completion, by way of becoming a subject of international discussion, by reason of the zeal of Reds and the red and pink press which would have us believe that the picture has by Russian influence been converted into a document for their cause.

This is not precisely a service of Chaplin interests.

Mr. Chaplin, nursing a broken thumb, squeezed in a car door, and a testy humor, is sweating with some sixty-five musicians at United Artists studio, trying to complete cutting and scoring and as usual racing a deadline.

Policy, habit and showmanship prevent him talking about his picture.

Chaplin prefers to have everybody wonder.

Meanwhile he will talk most anything else, a little. For instance, the other evening in one of those interludes at a preview he strayed far enough into politics to say that he preferred Roosevelt's New Deal to Fascism, that he thinks it has prevented the rise of Fascism in this country.

"Modern Times" will be late. It will not, almost surely, be ready for the announced and projected opening the third week in December in London, and it is likely to reach New York, barring this and that, close to Christmas week.

Chaplin Annoyed by Reds' Attempt to "Use" His Film

Mr. Chaplin is not at all pleased with the story that comes out of Moscow, but he lets Alf Reeves, his studio chief and confidant of these twenty-and-odd years, do the talking about that.

The Russian reports have come from Moscow in correspondence to The Daily Worker, New York Communist organ, quoting an outgiving in "Pravda" over there from Boris Shumiatski, head of the Soviet screen industry and of its recent commission expedition to the United States. He seeks, it would seem, to tell Russia at least that Chaplin is a social militant who has been brought to see eye-to-eye with Shumiatski.

> "The Soviet picture commission appears to be seeking for home propaganda purposes, as reflected by Pravda, to make much of little and thereby in some degree to cover disappointment at the lack of access and attention from the organized motion picture industry on the occasion of their American visit and their especially cool sojourn in Hollywood."—TERRY RAMSAYE.

This is the occasion of Mr. Chaplin's second publicity annoyance about his new picture. Nearly a year ago the late Karl Kitchen emerged from Hollywood with a story about "No. 5" announcing that the subject and title would be "The Masses." Mr. Chaplin quickly and somewhat acidly denied all.

Mr. Chaplin is no little of a philosopher, a none too optimistic philosopher, but he is first of all a showman—with a large bourgeoise fortune to prove it.

The secrecy of the present moment concerning "No. 5" is showmanship. The more wondering the more interest, the more money at the box office.

Mr. Chaplin has always maintained secrecy concerning his productions. It is a policy acquired and set by necessity in the earlier days of his career when every slapstick comedian was an imitator and a purloiner as far as practical of Chaplin's material.

It is interesting to interrupt this consideration for the moment and reflect on the obscurity of those imitators of yesteryear. It is difficult now to remember even who they were. Only one survives as a screen name of today, and that because he became something else.

Sees Move to Cover Chagrin At Coolness to Commission

The Soviet picture commission appears to be seeking for home propaganda purposes, as reflected by Pravda, to make much of little and thereby in some degree to cover disappointment at the lack of access and attention from the organized motion picture industry on the occasion of their American visit and their especially cool sojourn in Hollywood.

If it can be made to appear to Moscow's populace that Shumiatski and Chaplin are a couple of chummy and artistic propagandists, the rest of Hollywood might be considered implied.

"The Russian story," observes Alf Reeves, "reads deep, terrible social meanings to sequences that Mr. Chaplin considers funny.

"I can assure you that this picture is intended as entertainment, and perhaps it might be said, too, that Mr. Chaplin's purpose in making this picture is to make money."

The Moscow story in The Daily Worker says:

> Lively discussion with the members of the Soviet Cinema Commission which recently visited the United States has prompted Charlie Chaplin to make drastic changes in his latest film, according to Boris Shumiatski, head of the Commission, who continues his impresssions of the meetings with Chaplin in a recent issue of Pravda.
> In earlier issues of the Pravda, reprinted in the New Masses, Shumiatski described Chaplin's "excellent, exciting and tragic film," and recounted the arguments with Chaplin and their objections to the windup of the picture. "We argued with Chaplin," Shumiatski recounts, "and for a long time he would not yield. But at our departure he shook our hands firmly, and said: 'I am very pleased we met. But this meeting will cost me many weeks of labor on my film.'

Sees Film a Capitalistic Satire

> "Chaplin, the great artist of the screen, the gifted individual, realized his mistake. Only he was wrong about the time. It took him two and one-half months to alter his film. And now we hear from Hollywood that Charlie has changed the conclusion of his film as well."
> Chaplin, Shumiatski writes, is a subtle conversationalist. "He seems jolly and buoyant, but through his laughter, through his unforgettable Chaplin mimics, one can see the solitude of Ivar Kareno" (the chief character in Knut Hamsun's play, "At the Gates of the Kingdom," which portrays the tragedy of a solitary thinker and artist in the capitalist world).
> Chaplin's latest film, according to Shumiatski, "is a sharp satire on the capital system in which he derides capitalist rationalization, crisis, the decrepit morality of bourgeois society, prison and war." The Soviet film chief summarizes Chaplin's new picture thus:
> "After having gone through the horrors of the Ford conveyor system, unemployment, prison, hunger and all the woes of crisis and through another war—the heroes of the story meet once again. She, a Red Cross nurse, found 'a place in life'

amidst the sufferings and horror of war, and can no longer return to Charlie, and the once 'romantic' world of the hobo and the slum. Her course is the mire of urbanism; she is tired and wants to rest. He, an eternal failure, accepts this betrayal with resignation and withdraws to his old joyless life, a shrunken, bent and solitary man.

"The fatalistic endings of all of Chaplin's films, the individual's withdrawal to a position of resigned hopelessness, was in this film even more sharply pronounced than in all the others. The retreat here stood out in contrast to the trenchant satire on the capitalist system, emphasized by the betrayal of the only one who loved him.

"According to the changed version of the film, when, after the privations and sufferings of the war, the heroes finally meet, they promise each other never again to part from one another. They decide to work and fight together against the 'machine of time,' a euphemism for capitalist society—and walk off, hand in hand, into the 'blue distance.'"

This change in the film, Shumiatski asserts, "must be understood not as a mere substitution of one scene for another. It must be taken as a stage in the ideological growth of a remarkable artist, a master of the screen, a gifted poet who sings of the tragedy of the solitary man. Chaplin emerges with the conviction that it is necessary to fight for a better life for all humanity, with a conviction of the necessity for active struggle."

Shumiatski concludes:

"And from the depths of our hearts we hope our friend Chaplin finds, in his future films, the path of this struggle—as thousands of others are now finding it in the western world."

"It is true," says Mr. Reeves, "that we are concluding the picture on a somewhat more optimistic note than was first designed—but it is not true that anybody can ever tell Mr. Chaplin anything about such matters—he, as you know, has very much his own way and he has his own ideas—always."

One who can remember the days of Chaplin's Lone Star - Mutual productions, when the "Easy Street" set was built over night to his order, only to stand for six months while the comedian dallied with other notions, is prepared to agree that Mr. Chaplin's independence of mind is more fact than fun.

Mr. Chaplin's social thinking is very much his own, engendered of experience that began in the slums of London, regimented in an orphanage home, laboring in a toy factory pouring lead soldiers, seeing life in the grubby sordid pubs, backstage in tawdry music halls. Then came the strange miracle of the motion picture in this fantastic America and to Chaplin fortune and its own special woes and problems. What he thinks of life and the race are not likely to be much conditioned by the Soviet and the principles of the Internationale. Chaplin is the lone man.

Meanwhile it is for showmen to remember that while the sum total of Chaplin and his experience have ever been reflected in his screen expression, his philosophy of the tragic negative triumphs of the dumbbell was never of consciously recognized meaning to the adolescent millions with whom he achieved world fame.

Life is not full of meaning to the box office millions, and neither is Chaplin. He'd rather be as funny as he sees them and their lives to be.

Loew's Net in Boston Shows Rise to $109,545

Loew's Boston Theatres Company reports a net for the year ending August 31 of $109,545 after depreciation, dividends on common stock of State Theatre Company and other charges. This is equal to 70 cents a share on 155,249 shares. For the previous year the net was $93,185, or 60 cents a share.

State Theatre Company (Mass.) reported a net for the same period of $97,525 after all charges. This is equivalent to $42.29 per share on 2,306 shares of eight per cent preferred. For the previous year the net was $8,724, or $1.61 per share on the preferred stock.

Du-Art Laboratories Sues Yates Company for $500,000

Du-Art Film Laboratories, Inc., has filed a suit against Herbert J. Yates, Jr., for $500,000 alleging Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., was instrumental in influencing Universal to cancel a contract by which Du-Art handled the distributor's newsreel and foreign prints.

Supreme Courts Uphold Two State Sales Taxes

Two state supreme courts, in Missouri and Ohio, last week upheld the constitutionality of sales taxes in their respective jurisdictions.

In Kansas City, Circuit Judge Sezier upheld the Missouri one per cent sales tax by sustaining the demurrer of Collector Forest Smith in the suit brought by a Joplin, Mo., cafeteria, which charged the tax was a property and not a sales levy. The demurrer held the tax was an excise measure.

The Ohio state supreme court at Columbus held the constitutionality of the three per cent sales tax by concurring in the opinion of the Summitt County, O., appellate court. The decision was based on a suit by Michael Fox, a farmer, who charged that the law was discriminatory, and, therefore, unconstitutional, in that he was compelled to take out a vendor's license and collect sales tax when delivering farm products to customers, whereas, farmers who sold their produce at their farms were exempt from tax collection. He has another suit of similar nature pending in the Summitt County courts.

Bank Night Wins New York Ruling

The box-office "stimulant" known as "Bank Night" this week won its most important decision to date in connection with establishing its legal status when it was officially sanctioned last week in New York by Assistant District Attorney James J. Smith, who recommended dismissal of an action brought against the Skouras operated Academy of Music.

Elsewhere in New York, two of the more important Loew's circuit houses, the Paradise and the Valencia, introduced Screeno to its patrons last Monday. In the future the Paradise will feature the game every Tuesday night while the latter theatre will continue to use it on Mondays.

In recommending dismissal of the Bank Night case, Mr. Wilson told Magistrate Anna Kross in Essex Market Court:

"Here is my attitude and here is the law as I see it.

"The charge being one of lottery, we cannot, of course, decide this by hysteria and by the popular clamor—that is, not popular clamor, but the clamor of certain factions in the community. We must decide this on the law.

"It is my opinion that this comes squarely within the advertising methods business is using these days, in order to attract business.

"Bank Night is a system by which theatres throughout the country are using a copyrighted system to attract business. In many states in the Union, Bank Night has been declared legal and public authorities have seen fit to copyright the schemes. This stamps it with some degree of legality.

"Considering the fact that no state in the Union allows a lottery, lotteries are illegal in all states, yet many of the states where similar cases have been tested have decided in favor of its legality.

"Now, New York State is not going to be behind in following the trend of the times. Business houses today are obliged to resort to certain methods to attract business. If they keep within the law we should not criticize them, even if we don't like their methods."

Meanwhile, in Boston cash giveaways are being held responsible for the action started against theatres by the Department of Public Safety for practices of overcrowding, blocking exits, encumbering lobbies with displays and the like. Dr. Thomas O'Connell, vice-president of the Brookline Hospital, was found guilty of running a lottery in connection with a Beano party sponsored by the hospital. He has appealed the $50 fine imposed by the court, however.

In Denver and Los Angeles the practice of chance games in theatres is continuing to spread while in Providence, R. I., there is a wave of strong ecclesiastical opposition to all giveaways as practiced by theatres.

Court Refuses Restraining Order on Shirley Temple Film

An attempt to prevent the distribution and exhibition of the new Shirley Temple picture, "Captain January," Twentieth Century-Fox release, failed in New York last week in the United States district court when Judge John C. Knox denied an application by L. C. Page & Company, Inc., publishers, of Boston, for a restraining order directed against the producers of the picture and Rural Pictures Corporation.

The suit charged that the Boston publishing company, which claims partial ownership to all motion picture rights on the novel, was disregarded in production plans.

National Listing by Legion of Decency To Go to Dioceses

A National Legion of Decency List is to be prepared in New York and issued from here to Catholic dioceses throughout the country, in accordance with arrangements decided upon at the recent general meeting of Bishops held in Washington.

This action marks the first establishment of a national Legion of Decency list and, it is understood, it is intended to supplant various local listing activities which have previously been carried on.

Definite arrangements for the preparation of the New York list have not been announced, but it is learned that in all probability the reviewing work will be done by the Motion Picture Bureau of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae, which organization has been active for many years in reviewing motion pictures. During the past 10 months the Bureau has prepared the classification of pictures which has been issued by the authorities of the Archdiocese of New York.

Under the new national list motion pictures will be classified as follows:

A—Not Disapproved.
B—Disapproved for Youth with a Word of Caution even for Adults.
C—Disapproved for All.

This designation of pictures, it is explained, being a general list, is intended to confine itself to "negative commendation" where pictures are not disapproved. It is to be left to the authorities in the various dioceses to give positive praise to worthy pictures if they see fit to do so.

The list is to be made available regularly to the press. Local councils of the Legion of Decency have been asked to support the national program and to depend upon the new national list of pictures to the exclusion of all others.

Buffalo Council Urges "Family Night" Programs

A letter urging Buffalo, N. Y., theatres to hold "family night" programs two nights a week, when pictures especially suitable for children will be shown, has been sent to the managers of all the houses in the city by Dr. Edward S. Schwegler, diocesan director of the Legion of Decency. The letter, in part, said:

"National investigation has shown that the most popular days for youthful moviegoing are Saturday, Sunday and Friday, in that order. We have decided to concentrate on Fridays and Saturdays.

"The problem we are trying to solve is one that crops up continually in all meetings of socially-minded people who are interested in the motion picture; and I am convinced that, if some voluntary program such as we advocate is not adopted, legislation of a strict type, and of official classification of pictures by public officials will be the only solution."

The Case of "Musa Dagh"

ABOUT a year ago a great motion picture story, "The Forty Days of Musa Dagh," was published in the United States. The story immediately attracted the attention of motion picture producers, who are, of course, constantly combing over the market for suitable stories. In the case of "Musa Dagh" it developed that due to the alertness of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer literary scouts this story had been purchased when it was originally published in Germany and long before its appearance in this country.

Mr. Irving Thalberg immediately selected the story for production under his auspices, planning to make the effort one of great pretentiousness. All story experts, including Mr. Thalberg, agree that the book has extraordinary possibilities for providing the basis of a great motion picture. However, when the material was in the process of preparation an emphatic protest against its production was lodged by the Turkish Government. Thus far Mr. Thalberg has been estopped in his effort to bring this great story to the screen.

This incident of "The Forty Days of Musa Dagh" brings into sharp focus an exceedingly difficult problem which confronts motion picture producers. The very existence of the motion picture is dependent upon the picturization of suitable story material. Such material is exceedingly scarce. There are instances of stories which contain excellent dramatic situations which must be sacrificed because of lack of suitability for the general audiences which comprise the patronage of motion picture theatres. There are other stories which are essentially acceptable but for which no suitable treatments are to be found. In "Musa Dagh," however, the material is of right character and it is a story that readily lends itself to motion picture treatment. In addition, it has been one of the famous best sellers of recent years. But the Turkish Government says, "No."

The objection of the Turkish Government is based on the fact that the story portrays Turkish persecution of the Armenian people—an historical fact which is about as plain as, say, the German invasion of Belgium in 1914. Yet the Turkish Government, brushing aside the plain facts of history, ignoring the essential truth of the story, simply introduces arbitrary objection to which, of course, is added at least an intimation of exerting the full measure of its influence against the producer in event the story is produced.

In view of the negligible importance of the Turkish market, and other markets directly influenced by Turkish authority, it would be easy for M-G-M to ignore the protest and proceed with the picture. But the complication does not end here. The Turkish Government happens to be on friendly terms with the Government of the United States. In view of precedent it is to be assumed that this Government would accept the protest of the Turkish Government, the outcome of which might very conceivably be that the State Department would forbid the picture in the United States. And, further, every foreign government which is friendly to Turkey might also accept Turkish representations and exclude the picture.

The situation obviously makes unfair and unreasonable imposition upon the motion picture producer. Under the circumstances no test of truth and accuracy is applied against the story. The process is simply one of arbitrary exclusion, based only on the selfish wish that a skeleton which has long reposed in the closet of a nation shall not be rattled.

It is not too much to say that if existing circumstances are allowed to go on indefinitely it will not be long before the producer becomes so hemmed in in his selection of story material that the result will be a severe curtailment in the interest and entertainment value of the motion picture.

It seems idle to speculate on what should be done to meet the situation because no one of the courses open to action is likely to be followed. M-G-M might go ahead, make the picture and fight out adverse developments as they appear. This is a program which in all probability must eventually be followed by some producer in order that the motion picture may not become hedged in with even more impossible restrictions. But when a picture calls for a very substantial investment it is easy to see that any producer will think twice before plunging into a lot of inevitable difficulties. In this case the State Department might well receive the protest politely and then, because of its complete lack of justification, proceed to forget about it. But even such cooperation from our State Department would not solve the producer's problem in foreign markets where political and expedient alliances count so importantly.

MUSIC TAX RELIEF FOR EXHIBITORS IN SIGHT THROUGH CONSENT DECREE

Secession of Warners' 11 Companies from Composers' Society Indicates New Turn to Government's Anti-trust Suit

Relief in music royalty fees for exhibitors and others who have borne the burden of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers' $4,000,000 annual collections may come in the form of a consent decree, it was indicated in Washington this week, as Department of Justice officials and the National Association of Broadcasters were studying the situation arising from the announced intention of Warner to withdraw its 11 music publishing subsidiaries from ASCAP membership at the end of this month.

Secession by Warner was regarded in Washington as placing a new complexion on the Government's anti-trust suit against the Society. What effect the withdrawal will have on the pending action has not as yet been determined, and may not be until the actual withdrawal occurs, but it was said that it might be considered as paving the way for a consent decree ending the case. Recessed last June, the suit is now scheduled to be resumed in the United States district court in New York on January 7th.

In New York at the same time, Warner failed to give any indication as to what its policy would be with respect to the performance of its music in motion picture theatres, and what fees the broadcasters would be expected to pay. It developed also that ASCAP is not contemplating any reduction in the music tax to exhibitors even though the Warner resignation will shrink its available catalogue of compositions by as much as 40 per cent.

Disregarding Warner's sharply worded statement of last week which was generally accepted as making the breach with ASCAP complete, some of the leading music industry figures were predicting that there would be a reconciliation before the month's end. The song writers, however, apparently regarded Warner's announced intention as an accomplished fact, and Irving Caesar, song writer and member of the ASCAP board, and others were threatening Warner with litigation.

Washington advices were that while the Government's prosecution is based upon practices which have heretofore been followed by ASCAP, it has not been the policy of the Department of Justice in the past to press such suits where the matters complained of are dropped. With Warner out, the impression remains that ASCAP could not be considered a monopoly, and it is believed that the charges will have to be revised.

In New York motion picture circles, however, there was a definite feeling that the prosecution is not to be dropped, because the matters complained of were committed in the past. In these quarters it is pointed out the Government never contended that ASCAP was a 100 per cent monopoly, since there always has been available a wealth of music not in the Society's repertoire.

The Government charges ASCAP with violation of the anti-trust laws in restraint of trade, and not necessarily with being a monopoly, it is recalled. The Government also is suing for an injunction to restrain the Society from continuing certain practices, and if the new developments alter the situation the requested injunction could be made to cover resumption of these practices instead, according to film sources.

PETTIJOHN IN COUNCIL AS OPPONENTS QUIT

Charles C. Pettijohn of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America will be town councilman of Harrison, N. Y., after all, and his Republican opponents have retreated from the field of battle.

Mr. Pettijohn, abroad during the election, made his campaign speeches in the form of a trailer and displayed endorsements of his political ability from such Hollywood luminaries as Jean Harlow and Mae West. Evidently the support of Hollywood deeply affected Harrison natives for they returned Mr. Pettijohn the victor. His opponent, however, claimed the Pettijohn residence in Westchester County was not the property of the victor and that on this technicality his election was voided.

With his customary readiness for a fight, Mr. Pettijohn hopped the first steamer for home intent on proving he not only owned his house but that there was not even a mortgage on it —a real phenomenon in Westchester.

Out of the discussions of the situation which are going on in various quarters these facts emerge:

More than three weeks are yet available for a settlement of the Warner-ASCAP controversy in such a way as to keep Warner in the organization;

The Government can make no decision as to its future course with respect to the ASCAP case until it is definitely learned whether Warner is in or out;

The radio broadcasters can take no steps with regard to the use of Warner music or the negotiation of new contracts until they learn whether they will have to subscribe to one or two catalogues. The Society formally notified the broadcasters they may cancel their contracts.

Stalemate Reached All Around; Moves by Government and Broadcasters Await Next Step by Warners

Thus a stalemate has been reached all around, according to word from Washington, for neither the Government nor the broadcasters can move and nothing can be done until Warner demonstrates definitely whether it is going ahead with its plans for an independent music licensing organization. The situation is scheduled for discussion at a National Association of Broadcasters directors' meeting in New York on Monday.

Broadcasters generally were up in the air this week, unable as yet to visualize the situation as it would affect them. Nor will they be able to do so, it was said in Washington, which is headquarters for the organized radio broadcasting industry, until Warner has made some move indicating how users of its catalogue are to be assessed. In the meantime there is a strong belief among broadcasters that ASCAP will make an effort to compromise the controversy.

Radio stations will have to deal with both ASCAP and Warner if the split becomes permanent, since it was admitted by leading broadcasters that both have music which must be used if popular demand is to be met. This will mean an increased cost, even though each may fix what it considers a moderate royalty.

Since Warner's idea in breaking away from the central organization is to get what it considers a fair return for the music it is contributing in radio programs, it is generally considered that it can be tempted back by a rearrangement of payments. The publishers' classification committee of ASCAP is meeting continuously in an attempt to devise an improvement in the present method of revenue distribution which would appease the discontented elements.

In justification of its stand that the exhibitors' music tax would not be lowered even though its catalogue of music is considerably reduced by the Warner resignation, ASCAP this week said it believed that with or without the Warner music its fees were not excessive. The ASCAP board was to meet Thursday to discuss the situation.

It was learned that Warner has withdrawn from the Musica Internacional Downey, Ltda., the company which handles the music for all distributors in South America. Performing rights for theatres or other places using music are not involved.

ASCAP has received from SACEM, the French society of composers, authors and publishers controlling performing rights, the sum of $122,899, which has been distributed on the basis of $116,671 to writers and $6,227 to publishers.

Most of the revenue from foreign collections for American music goes to the writers, it was said by ASCAP, while most of the American publishers also share in royalties paid by foreign publishers, under a reciprocal arrangement.

M. B. Comerford Dies After Crash

Injuries suffered in a motor accident Saturday were fatal to Michael B. Comerford, general manager and treasurer of Comerford Theatres, Inc., who died in Mercy Hospital, Scranton, Pa., Monday night. Mrs. Comerford was slightly injured.

Funeral services were to be held Thursday morning from the home in Scranton, with many friends among film and theatre men from New York and elsewhere in attendance.

Mr. Comerford, with his wife and a party of friends, were motoring over the Pocono Mountains on the way to the Army-Navy football game in Philadelphia when the car collided with a coal truck, near Daleville. He was 52 years old.

Mr. Comerford for 17 years was associated with the chain of theatres in northeastern Pennsylvania and lower New York state controlled by his uncle, M. E. Comerford. Born in Larksville, Pa., he received his early schooling at St. Vincent's Academy, Plymouth, Pa., and Stroudsburg Normal College, Stroudsburg, Pa., and attended the Wharton School of Finance of the University of Pennsylvania. He taught in Pennsylvania schools, and later was connected with the construction of many of the roads in the state. He represented affiliated exhibitors on the Philadelphia NRA grievance board.

His widow, five children, three brothers and three sisters survive.

Solemn requiem high mass was to be sung at the services Thursday morning at St. Paul's church, Green Ridge, Pa., with the Reverend Paul J. Carey, St. Mary's church, Wilkes-Barre, a cousin, as celebrant. Burial was to be in St. Vincent's cemetery, Plymouth.

Pall bearers were Edward Lawler, Judge Arthur H. James of the state superior court; Michael L. Gillepsie, Patrick J. Shevlin, Con Clarke, Philadelphia; Michael McCann, James Clarke, Philadelphia; Arthur Luce, Henry Spiegel, James A. Dougherty, Matt J. Lynott and William R. Lynott.

All theatres in the Comerford circuit remained closed during the funeral services and opened at 1 p. m., two hours later than usual.

Frank C. Walker, director of President Roosevelt's National Emergency Council, a cousin of Mr. Comerford and general counsel for the Comerford Enterprises, came from Washington.

Among the executives from New York who were to attend were James R. Grainger, Frank J. A. McCarthy, Sig Wittman, for Universal; Sam Dembow, Jr., National Screen Service; Leon Netter, Paramount; N. J. Blumberg, Jules Levy and Edward L. McEvoy, RKO; E. C. Grainger, Twentieth Century-Fox; as well as Edward M. Fay, Providence, R. I., theatre executive, and others.

Quintuplets' Unit in Canada

The Twentieth Century-Fox camera unit, headed by director Henry King, has arrived in Callender, Ontario, to film the Dionne Quintuplets for their "parts" in "The Country Doctor."

Department of Decency, Headed By 'Civilizer,' Urged for Business

A Department of Decency for business in general, under direction of a "civilizer" with "authority to civilize," is proposed in an editorial article in last week's issue of Printers' Ink.

Under the heading, "We Start Two New Activities," the article reads in full:

"And has it come to pass that the gilt lettering on that door down the hall of industry needs proofreading? We mean the sign that now reads: 'ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT'.

"From L. E. White, vice-president of Kirgan's Arcadia Farms, Inc., hard by Cincinnati, comes a letter, applauding the sentiments of John P. Cunningham, who, in Printers' Ink of November 14, explained 'How to Conserve the Working Capital of Advertising.'

" 'It's true, remarks Mr. White, 'that many women object to advertising's manners.' And further: 'Just offhand, there quickly come to mind three products we are using in our home, the use of which—if we felt there were other brands of equal quality—would be discontinued immediately, purely on account of our resentment against their advertising. It does seem a shame to handicap a good product with advertising that inspires antagonism and ridicule.'

"Yes. Better call in that sign-painter right now. Tell him to rub off ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT and carefully letter in its place: SENSE OF HUMOR.

"And if the present incumbent can't fill the job, get a new incumbent. In what appears to be the humorless world of business, a funny-bone is an enterprise's best insurance against looking foolish in public. One comedian, just sitting tight and not emitting a wisecrack a month—but keeping an eagle eye on what goes out in print—could protect acres of copy against those annoying spots of silliness that, to the advertiser's astonishment, cause the consumer-readers to hoot. For the point, you see, is that any man with more than a dime's worth of humor in his soul knows in advance what not to say.

"And while the sign-painter's in the house, tell him to letter a sign on that vacant room next door. In there, we'll establish a civilizer. Business has needed one for a long time. Set him up in there and give him authority to civilize. His sign will read: DEPARTMENT OF DECENCY."

Philadelphia Exhibitors Complete Proposed Merger

A merger of the Independent Exhibitors Protective Association and the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware was ratified this week by each association at separate meetings. It was decided that George P. Aarons, MPTO secretary and general counsel, will function in the same capacity for the combined organization.

Affiliated theatres which are members of the MPTO and MPTOA will be allowed to remain in the new association until an issue arises to prevent continuance of these relations. Committees representing both units will meet late this week to work out details of the merger and a general meeting of members of both organizations is planned for next month.

Sabath Committee To Probe Fox Film Merger

The Sabath Congressional Committee, studying reorganizations, will probe the Fox-Twentieth Century merger when it returns to Los Angeles in January. The Chase National Bank's activity in the film industry will also be studied, in New York, in two weeks.

A major Sabath hearing, pooling those conducted over the country, is to be held in Washington next March

Universal Asks for "A Bill of Particulars"

A motion for a bill of particulars was made by counsel for Universal in New York Supreme Court in connection with a suit brought by B. S. Moss Broadway Theatre Company, Inc., for $130,752. The complaint explains that the action is for alleged injuries to the standards, good name and reputation of the plaintiff's theatre and building which the defendant had leased from the plaintiff. The plaintiff is also seeking expenses allegedly incurred in repairing and renovating the theatre and for the loss of rental value of the premises.

The defendant is charged with the removal of certain fixtures and equipment from the theatre. The premises involved in this action were known as the B. S. Moss Colony theatre building on Broadway. The defendant has filed a general denial to allegations of the complaint.

J. E. Hazzard Dies, Comedian and Author

John Edward Hazzard, a comedion on the Broadway stage for thirty years, creator of the once popular catch phrase "Aint it awful, Mabel?" died at his home in Great Neck, New York, December 2.

Mr. Hazzard was a constant figure on the New York stage from 1901 to 1931, when he retired to write.

Brokerage Syndicate Would Buy Chase's Fox Stock

Wall Street's narrow financial canyons, and the motion picture byways that run east and west from Neon-lighted Times Square are echoing these December afternoons the discussions of high powers over the how and the when Chase National Bank will dispose of its costly investment and control of the wideflung Fox producing, distributing and exhibiting structure which in its comparatively new form is known as Twentieth Century-Fox Film.

It is a matter of common knowledge that the Chase banking system has been under pressure from federal banking authorities to dispose of its holdings in Fox at the first reasonable opportunity. This is in keeping with the law of Congress, enacted at the last session, at the "suggestion" of the Administration, dictating that banks must engage in the banking business alone and not at the same time in the investment business. Accordingly, Chase is no longer qualified to hold the Fox type of security.

In recent weeks a powerful securities brokerage syndicate has been formed by the Chicago investment brokerage firm of Lawrence Fish Stern, Mr. Stern operating unostentatiously as Lawrence Stern and Company and Manhattan-Dearborn Corporation. This new syndicate has sought to arrange the purchase of the Chase holdings in Fox. It is not, however, an Atlas-Lehman enterprise, despite the widely persistent rumor that Chase has or is about to dispose of its holdings in Twentieth Century-Fox to an Atlas-Lehman group.

To the contrary, if Floyd B. Odlum's Atlas investment trust and Lehman Brothers banking firm participate at all in the purchase of any of the Chase-Fox holdings, they will only be permitted to buy a part of the Chase's Fox stock as two of a number of investment houses. The reason for this is that the present ownership interests in Twentieth Century-Fox, together with the management, under the Sidney Kent-Joseph Schenck-Darryl Zanuck leadership, together with Chase itself, do not want control, or even substantial holdings of the Fox Corporation to fall into the hands of Atlas-Lehman, which is now substantially interested in Paramount Pictures and also controls RKO.

Under the plans that have been formulating, the new investment syndicate that was created by Chicago's Lawrence Stern, would purchase, for purpose of resale, both the preferred and common Fox stock now held by Chase, or as large an amount of both of these stocks as they can obtain finances to purchase.

The understanding is that in the event any such arrangement is effected through the Stern group, this syndicate will agree to generally distribute the Fox securities on resale within 90 days. The Chase block of Fox stock, then, or a substantial part of it, would not be allowed to rest in some single control—such as Atlas-Lehman, or another.

The Schenck-Zanuck interests, as chief owners, aside from Chase's ownership, would acquire the common stock, Schenck-Zanuck, through arrangements created by themselves, acquiring a large enough ownership interest to insure continued control in the hands of the present Kent-Schenck-Zanuck management. On the other hand, the preferred stock would be distributed generally.

Some few days ago an arrangement such as that which has been outlined looked favorable. There was a breakdown in negotiations, however, and at present the discussions are virtually at a standstill in their specific application to this plan. However, it is quite likely that either this deal will be revived, or some similar arrangement will be effected, because the Chase National Bank, under the law of the United States, must dispossess itself of the Fox film stock within a reasonable length of time.

The New York Evening Journal, on Tuesday, reported that Chase had admitted that its Fox holdings were for sale, and that "a number of offers had been received." However, "no deal was imminent, it was added, with intimation that bids were not sufficiently attractive," said the newspaper.

Distributors Are Facing Another Anti-Trust Suit

Columbia, Fox, RKO, Universal and Warners were named defendants in a federal court suit filed at Oklahoma City by Loretta Momand, who charged a refusal by the distributors to supply her Odeon Theatre with film. She asked for an immediate injunction to restrain distributors from canceling contracts in favor of her competitors.

National Allied Men Will Go to Bermuda

National Allied directors and officers of other Allied units will attend the New Jersey six-day convention aboard the Queen of Bermuda which sails from New York Saturday.

A feature will be the election of a successor of Sidney Samuelson as president. Approximately 100 members and guests are expected to be on hand.

Expunge Paramount Claim

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals has affirmed a decision by Federal Judge Alfred C. Coxe expunging the $225,000 claim against Paramount of the 15th Street Investment Company and the 16th Street Realty Company, Denver corporations.

RKO Victor On "Top Hat"

RKO won another victory in connection with the non-delivery of "Top Hat" as an asserted 1934-35 release when a New York arbitration group this week voted three to one in favor of the distributor. On the board were Henry Randel, Brooklyn Paramount exchange manager; Harry Decker, Warner Brooklyn branch head; Dave Snaper, New Jersey independent circuit operator, and Jack Unger, another exhibitor from New Jersey.

The complaint was brought by Louis Gold, of the Rivoli, Newark. Louis Nizer represented the distributor and Sidney Samuelson, head of Allied organizations, represented Mr. Gold.

Mr. Gold declared that during his negotiations with Robert Wolff, RKO branch manager, and Edward Carroll, salesman for the company, representations were made to him that "Top Hat" would be a 1934-35 release.

Clarifying the third run situation in Los Angeles, Superior Court Judge Frank Swain granted a permanent injunction restraining RKO from violating a contract with the Cameo and whereby the theatre gets third run of all the company's product in the downtown district.

Ruling Reserved in Pathe Case Appeal

Arguments on an appeal from a New York Supreme Court order approving the recent Pathe plan of reorganization were heard by the appellate division, which reserved decision following the hearing. The appeal is being taken by Henry Chesterfield, administrator of the estate of Ben Hilbert, a Pathe stockholder, who opposed the plan in the lower court on the grounds that it unfairly discriminated against certain classes of stockholders.

No action was taken last week by Pathe's board of directors on franchise deals made by First Division with a number of local independent exchanges. It is understood several deals remain to be worked out before the board ratifies the nationalization plan.

With distribution setups being held up temporarily in Kansas City, Omaha, Denver, Salt Lake City, Minneapolis and Des Moines, First Division is withholding announcement of country-wide hookups until franchise deals in the six spots are consummated. This is expected in a few weeks.

Emphatic denial was made in Boston by J. C. Johnston, counsel for American Film Exchange, Inc., that this exchange has been, or is to be, turned over to Pathe as a result of court action. Mr. Johnston says the recent suit won by Pathe was directed against Selective Pictures, Inc.

"Mutiny" Breaks Records In Key City First-Runs

"Mutiny on the Bounty" has smashed box-office records in the 56 key cities in which it opened simultaneously, according to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. In New York, alone, box-office receipts, it is claimed, reveal a new all-time record for the picture which is now completing its fourth week. The picture was held over in 46 of the cities.

18 months of research before a camera turned. Paris and London reproduced exactly as they were in French revolutionary days. Cast of 6,000 including ELIZABETH ALLAN, EDNA MAY OLIVER, BASIL RATHBONE, BLANCHE YURKA, REGINALD OWEN, HENRY B. WALTHALL, WALTER CATLETT, FRITZ LEIBER, H. B. WARNER, MITCHELL LEWIS, CLAUDE GILLINGWATER, TULLY MARSHALL.

EARLY IN 1935, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer presented "David Copperfield." You know what happened—what critics said, how the public crowded the doors of every theatre where it was shown, how thousands and thousands of ardent lovers of Dickens went to see the picture, hoping almost against hope that it would be a true and sincere dramatization of that great work . . . and came away hardly able to keep their enthusiasm within bounds . . .

It is said that "success brings success"—but it also brings obligations . . . and difficulties. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has just completed the filming of another Dickens classic—"A TALE OF TWO CITIES." At every step in its making, the success of "David Copperfield" stood as a challenge to cast and director, to scenic designers and camera men—to the entire M-G-M studio force . . . It is now ready for you to see and judge. You will compare it with "David Copperfield" . . . Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer accepts that comparison—urges you to make it—and awaits your verdict with sincere confidence.

FILM DAILY says:

One of the outstanding pictures of the year. David O. Selznick, who did so well with "David Copperfield," has given this other Dickens classic a painstaking production, while Jack Conway brings the drama of the story to the screen in a masterly way. Ronald Colman is splendid.

HOLLYWOOD REPORTER says:

M-G-M's "Tale of Two Cities" great picture. Certain Box-Office! Immortal story brought to the screen with an overwhelming power and beauty that make that world-shaking chapter of history a living and shattering reality. This distinguished work is the second Dickens story David O. Selznick has fathered as producer within a year. By reason of its subject his "David Copperfield" is outdone and he leaves behind a monumental money-maker. For there is not a box-office in this country, and few in other lands, that will not be enriched by this presentation. In the whole cast of twenty-four credited parts with almost as many bits, all are shrewdly individualized, alive and interesting. Such a roster of celebrated names, of which at least eight are stars, is something to talk about. From Ronald Colman down it it is an illustrious assemblage.

"WILLINGLY I WOULD GIVE MY LIFE . . to keep the life you love beside you"

NOW, out of the glowing pages of another great Dickens classic comes a motion picture to take its place with "David Copperfield" among the masterpieces of the screen . . . The moving drama of a handsome ne'er-do-well who rose to supreme heights of sacrifice for the woman he loved . . . played against the seething background of London and Paris in the Reign of Terror . . . Sincere and authentic to the last detail, it comes to you with all the robust tumult, tender passion of the great original . . . Eighteen months of preparation, two years in production. Special studio staffs established in London and Paris to reproduce revolutionary relics. The dreaded Bastille, La Force prison, London's Newgate prison, and its famous courtroom, Old Bailey, duplicated with microscopic precision. Proudly Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer presents "A Tale of Two Cities", as the one picture of 1936 of which we are confident you will say "It is as fine as 'David Copperfield.'"

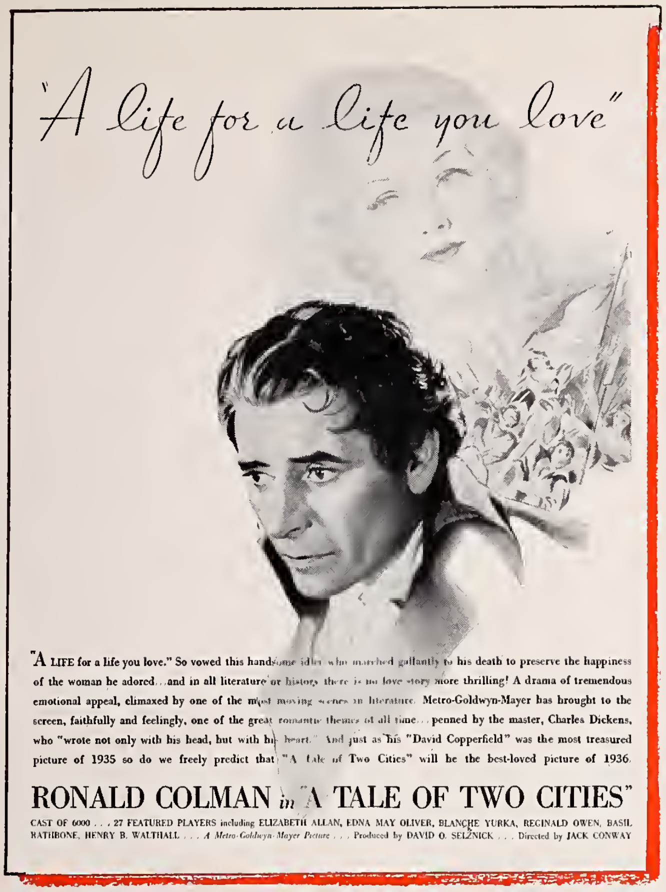
SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW says:

Better than "Copperfield." Dickens' story mounts to epic proportions. M-G-M, sweeping the country with many fine productions, have added this stupendous story to their growing list of successes. It will be hard to equal for real entertainment. It has powerful scope and many dramatic moments. This Dickens story is interestingly told and vividly portrayed by a cast that could not be better and all can be proud of their contributions.



"A life for a life you love"

"A LIFE for a life you love." So vowed this handsome idler who marched gallantly to his death to preserve the happiness of the woman he adored . . . and in all literature or history there is no love story more thrilling! A drama of tremendous emotional appeal, climaxed by one of the most moving scenes in literature. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has brought to the screen, faithfully and feelingly, one of the great romantic themes of all time . . . penned by the master, Charles Dickens, who "wrote not only with his head, but with his heart." And just as his "David Copperfield" was the most treasured picture of 1935 so do we freely predict that "A Tale of Two Cities" will be the best-loved picture of 1936.

DAILY VARIETY says:

With high thrill, heroic terror and beauty has Charles Dickens' "A Tale of Two Cities" been brought to the screen to bid for the highest artistic and box-office honors. Altogether one of the finest expressions of screen and profoundly emotional incitements yet offered. Ronald Colman gives a great performance. Role scores tops for Colman. One of the finest of year's impersonations. Feel of being historically authentic, and production magnitude gives it an epic sweep.

HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Six Pictures Start, Five are Completed in Holiday Week — Max Factor Celebrates 26th Year in Hollywood by Opening New Studio — Balcon Sees MGM's Entrance Into British Production As Route to Quota Solution

Slow-up

Due to the Thanksgiving holiday breaking in on the week, production naturally slowed up a bit. As six pictures were started, five finished. All the product is credited to major studios. Of the new work, MGM and Radio each started two pictures, with Paramount and Selznick International each contributing one to complete total. Radio finished two, and MGM, Paramount and Hal Roach are credited with one each.

Probably the most interesting picture to start was "Little Lord Fauntleroy." First for the new Selznick unit, it features Freddie Bartholomew and returns Dolores Costello Barrymore to the screen. Other players currently listed are Guy Kibbee, Aubrey Smith, E. E. Clive, Henry Stephenson, Mickey Rooney, Ivan Simpson and Eric Alden. John Cromwell is directing.

Starting

MGM started "The Voice of Bugle Ann" and "Three Godfathers." The first will present Lionel Barrymore, Spring Byington, Charles Grapewin, Henry Wadsworth, Dudley Digges, Claude Gillingwater, Maureen O'Sullivan, Eric Linden and Billy Newell. Richard Thorpe is directing. Leading players in "Three Godfathers" are Chester Morris, Walter Brennan, Lewis Stone and Irene Hervey. Richard Boleslawski is directing.

At Radio work began on "Don't Bet on Love." With Leigh Jason directing, it will feature Gene Raymond, Wendy Barrie, Helen Broderick and Erik Rhodes. In the second picture, "The Indestructible Mrs. Talbot," Ann Harding, Herbert Marshall and Margaret Lindsay are featured, supported by Walter Abel, Ilka Chase, Edward Ellis and Hobart Cavanaugh. Stephen Roberts is directing.

Paramount put "Timothy Quest" before the cameras. Being directed by Charles Barton, it will present Eleanore Whitney, Virginia Weilder, Dickie Moore, Elizabeth Patterson, Samuel Hinds and Sally Martin.

RKO Finishes Two

The two pictures finished at Radio are "Chatterbox" and "Two in the Dark." In the first will be seen Ann Shirley, Phillips Holmes, Edward Ellis, Erik Rhodes, Margaret Hamilton, Granville Bates, Allen Vinvent, Lucille Ball and George Offerman, Jr. Dudley Nichols directed. The second picture, formerly titled "Two O'Clock Courage," will present Walter Abel, Margot Grahame, Erick Blore, Addison Randall, Alan Hale, Phyllis Brooks, Ward Bond, Ray Mayer, Erik Rhodes, Wallace Ford and Arthur Hoyt. Ben Stoloff directed.

At MGM "The Getaway" (tentative title) was finished. The cast lists Joseph Calleia, Jackie Cooper, Lewis Stone, Robert Warwick, Robert Craig, Edward Pawley, Mischa Auer, Willy Mayer, Dwight Frye, William Tannen, Willard Robertson, Robert Livingstone, Sidney Bracey and the dog Flash. Chester Franklin directed.

"The Bohemian Girl," Hal Roach production for MGM release, also was completed. It features Laurel and Hardy with Antonio Moreno, Thelma Todd, Jacqueline Wells, Mae Busch, James Finlayson, Darla Hood, William P. Carleton and Edgar Norton. James Horne directed.

Anniversary

As more notables than were ever before gathered attended, Max Factor celebrated his twenty-sixth anniversary as Hollywood's foremost makeup artist and opened his new studio. The building, designed by S. Charles Lee, noted theatre architect, is the last word in modernism. In it are complete facilities for the manufacture of the more than 250 cosmetic products which Factor markets in more than 70 countries. Outstanding is the battery of scientific laboratories in which are analyzed and tested all the ingredients.

Among other interesting features are the powder making plant, capacity of which is 20,000 pounds of powder daily. The mechanical and scientific efficiency of this department, in which everything is done by machinery from preliminary mixing to final packing in ornate cartons, contrasts with the wig making section. Here, with only natural human hair being used, about a dozen girls, all experts, work with incredible speed in making the hundreds of different wigs required by studios and for special commercial orders. Each hair, separated individually from a hank, is sewed into the fabric base.

Under the personal guidance of Max Factor more than 600 employees are housed on the four floors, which occupy an area of nearly four acres. Mr. Factor, who first came to Los Angeles in 1908, when the industry of moving pictures was in its infancy, has seen his business grow from a one-man proposition to international proportions.

Beneficial

Michael Balcon, president of Gaumont British, welcomes the entrance of MGM into the field of British and Continental production. He predicts that the efforts of the unit to be headed by Ben Goetz will become a potent influence in elevating the character and worth of English and European pictures. He sees it as a sound, practical means which will work to the ending of the bothersome quota picture question.

"Obviously," said Mr. Balcon, "the coming of such an outstanding organization as MGM to London will have a beneficial effect upon European production. The benefits will be felt on both sides of the Atlantic. No one can doubt for a moment but that Mr. Goetz will make first-class pictures. I am sure they will find a ready market with our public in English theatres.

"As these contemplated pictures are certain to provide a grade of competition never before experienced in our efforts to preserve our domestic market as well as maintain the position we have so happily attained in the world's cinema field, I am sure that the pictures which Mr. Goetz will make will be a source of inspiration to British production. Certainly with MGM making pictures in England, probably using many of its finest stars and using typical British and Continental stories and giving prominence in them to British players, writers, directors and technicians, it is but logical to assume that other American companies will follow suit. As the MGM plan is more generally adopted, with its worth in assuring more good pictures not only directly for the British market, but also this country and the world, it will automatically solve the quota picture problem, which, fortunately for us, has been quite trying to the American producer. If it succeeds only in doing this, it will be a distinct advance in elevating the character of productions which are available to the British public. Naturally the artistic improvement should have a favorable commercial reflection."

Vaulted Fortune

There is a fortune gathering dust in film vaults. And there is a ready-made audience sitting at home by the fireside reading a good book. A few clever exhibitors recently have been cashing in, and handsomely, on these facts. All indications point toward increased interest in carefully chosen reissues during the coming year.

Dave Biedermann of Selected Pictures, which is the coast affiliate of Atlantic Pictures, drew a loud and long laugh from managers of subsequent-run houses when he refused to sell reissues of the five Howard Hughes films "until a first-run is signed." That was last March, when he had one print of each picture. Today he has six prints of each film working. Leading circuits have been sold, including the Golden State with its 80 theatres and the Balaban and Katz string, and independent exhibitors are finding hearty audience interest in the reissues.

By September, the reissue fever was mounting. RKO-Radio cleared 69 old features in that one month. Paramount had 62. Fox had 40. United Artists was offering

FILM MONEY IN HIGH TYPE PLAYS NOT HARMING STAGE, SAYS CRITIC

Richard Lockridge of New York 'Sun', Quoting 'Herald' Article, Sees No 'Get-Rich-Quick' Scheme in Financing Moves

Foresees Possible Theoretical Danger, but Finds No 'Base Use' of Funds When Placed in Aspirations Meeting Failure

Any danger to the legitimate stage through participation of the motion picture in the financing of Broadway plays is rather theoretical, wrote Richard Lockridge, dramatic critic, last Saturday in the New York Sun, in commenting upon the article in Motion Picture Herald issue of November 23d, in which it was reported that film interests since September have invested $700,000 in 14 of 44 productions.

In an indirect fling at the stage's own waverings from the "aspiration which it . . . holds toward something which is a little better than the greatest entertainment for the greatest number," Mr. Lockridge said: "The thought of such uncouth persons [Hollywood] getting hold of the stage, which is always devoted to higher things, like 'Strip Girl' [short-lived play concerning a burlesque queen] causes us to shiver in our boots."

The critic enlarges upon this with the words, "Any money which is spent in backing such aspiring failures as 'Paths of Glory' and 'Bright Star' is money put, surely, to no base use."

"Theatre Easily Scared"

Mr. Lockridge's article, captioned "Hollywood on Broadway," follows, in full:

"Several thoughtful admirers of the legitimate have recently discovered new cause for alarm in the participation by Hollywood in the producing of plays, the participation taking the somewhat important form of putting up the money. We of the theatre are, of course, rather easily scared in such matters. It is our conviction that out of Hollywood no good can come. We visualize the average motion picture producer as a man who says, almost constantly, 'I can answer that in two words. Im—possible.' The thought of such uncouth persons getting hold of the stage, which is always devoted to higher things, like 'Strip Girl,' causes us to shiver in our boots.

"The Motion Picture Herald, a magazine devoted to this strange industry and hence on its side, gives us facts and figures on which to base our alarm. Fourteen of the forty-four productions which had come in when the current edition of that magazine went to press had movie money back of them. The total investment was estimated, already, at $700,000, with more to come. A cool, to us a frigid, million was expected to be the grand total, and a grand total it surely is. Warner Brothers was in it up to the neck, having backed four productions, of which a mere three were complete failures. Mervyn Le Roy, evidently a movie company, had put up the money for two shows, both of which flopped.

"A mere glance at the names of some of the productions so far put on will show how grave this peril is. Metro, for example, is reported to have put $125,000, or more, into 'Jubilee,' which is one of the most charming musical shows of Broadway's history. This is dreadful, but worse is yet to come. The same company is behind 'Pride and Prejudice,' that zestful recreation by Helen Jerome, Max Gordon and some others of Jane Austen's novel of the same title. This, I understand, is what is known as 'fostering the third-rate.' People like Jane Austen get supported. And Metro is also behind 'Winterset'—that concession to the popular taste which has given the theatre its one authentic ring of poetry this season. 'Keep Metro Out' should, I think, be our motto, if we do not wish our taste debased.

Points Specific Cases

"Metro also is behind 'Ethan Frome,' now in production by the same Mr. Gordon. Those who have read 'Ethan Frome' will realize at once how far it falls below such dramas as, for example, 'Satellite.' Mr. Thalberg (MGM) sponsored 'Bright Star,' by Philip Barry, one of the season's failures—that low Mr. Barry, who has never failed but honorably. Warners had money in 'Eden End,' J. B. Priestley's slight and sensitive drama. There was movie money behind 'Paths of Glory,' by Sidney Howard, and it backed 'Most of the Game,' 'Good Men and True' and 'First Lady.' It also, it must be added in honesty, was contributed to make possible the glimpse we had of 'The Body Beautiful.'

"This is, on the sworn word of Motion Picture Herald, the record.

Calls Danger "Theoretical"

"It shows, if I am not mistaken, that the danger is rather theoretical. Make no mistake, that theoretical danger does exist. It is entirely conceivable that the theatre might, touching this gold, forswear that aspiration which it, all too waveringly, holds toward something which is a little better than the greatest entertainment for the greatest number. By and large, over a long enough period of time, the movie industry as it is presently organized must be unduly democratic and direct the major portion of its interest, as well as its capital, toward pleasing those who are not very bright. It is conceivable that, with the tightening of its grip on Broadway, we might have in the theatre only the technically superior vacuity which is now the outstanding characteristic of so many films.

"Reading further I discover that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer had backed three productions, all of which succeeded; that Irving Thalberg had made one shot at it and found that it shot back; that Paramount had tried three times, and succeeded once, and that John Hay Whitney, another motion picture corporation, had put $300,000 into 'Jumbo.' (Mr. Whitney has, incidentally, denied this in the newspapers.) (The article in the Herald explained that the Whitney participation was reported to have been shared with his sister, Mrs. Charles Shipman Payson, on the basis of $150,000 each—Ed.) I learn, also, that this sort of thing had been going on for three years, but is reaching a new high this season. Last season a mere seven productions had movie money behind them. It is evident that something is coming over us; a purse, rather bigger than a man's hand, is rising on the simon-pure horizon which we love.

"That is, obviously enough possible. But immediately, and practically, it is difficult to feel that movie money has done us any harm. Any money which is spent for 'Winterset,' 'Pride and Prejudice,' 'Jubilee,' 'Three Men on a Horse' and, for that matter, 'Jumbo,' is good money and our thanks should be pretty. Any money which is spent in backing such aspiring failures as 'Paths of Glory' and 'Bright Star' is money put, surely, to no base use. It is obvious that backers intent only on packing them in, and to hell with art, would not have chosen to pay for either Sidney Howard's dramatization of Humphrey Cobb's novel or Mr. Barry's drama of a man's emotions. Putting up money for 'Winterset' is not my idea of a get-rich-quick scheme, either."

GTE Plan Filed In Wilmington Court

Plans and agreement of reorganization of General Theatres Equipment, Inc., have been filed in the office of the register in chancery court, Wilmington, Del. The plan recently was approved by Chancellor Wollcott.

The filing was accompanied by a certificate signed by Ralph E. Morton, secretary of the reorganization committee, and a group of debenture bondholders. The original is now on file with the City Farmers Trust Company of New York, depository for the reorganization committee.

Academy Course Postponed

The opening of the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences' course in the fundamentals of sound recording, scheduled for last Monday at the Hollywood High School, Hollywood, was postponed a week due to the illness of A. P. Hill of Electrical Research Products, Inc., instructor.

Holiday Parties In Offing

Members of the Independent Theatre Owners of America held a regular meeting Wednesday to discuss the annual ball to be held at the Astor Hotel in New York January 11. Harry Brandt is chairman.

The Motion Picture Salesman, Inc., will hold a meeting late this week to plan for the annual New Year's Eve affair to be held in the New York at the Plaza Hotel.

THE CUTTING ROOM

Advance outlines of productions nearing completion as seen by Gus McCarthy of Motion Picture Herald's Hollywood Bureau

Desire

Paramount

Among the several features of this production which its sponsors believe will be important in stimulating exhibitor and patron interest is the fact that it again teams Marlene Dietrich and Gary Cooper in the leading roles. Both were seen in "Morocco," the picture which marked Miss Dietrich's American screen debut and was highly instrumental in establishing her popularity. Both have been seen subsequently in many pictures. Whether or not the advisability of referring to previous pictures is good judgment, it does seem that in this circumstance it would not be bad showmanship to make some note of the previous association in calling attention of the public mind to this feature.

Other production credits also in the opinion of the producing company have value. Direction is by Frank Borzage, who numbers among his more recent pictures such commercial and entertainment successes as "Shipmates Forever" and "Flirtation Walk." In other years he has done "A Farewell to Arms" and "Bad Girl." Also during the picture's lengthy production schedule Ernst Lubitsch has kept in close personal touch with every detail. Worth of this fact as an exploitation quality may be noted in the prominence which the producing company gives his name whenever he is associated with a picture.

Only secondary to the importance of the feature names is that of the supporting cast. Included are John Halliday, currently in "Dark Angel" and also to be seen in "Peter Ibbetson"; Allan Mowbray, William Frawley, currently in "Ship Cafe," Ernest Cossart, Akim Tamiroff, Effie Tilbury and Alden Chase.

Localed in Europe mainly in France and Spain, the picture story is drama into which romance, mystery, comedy, music, suspense and action are woven. It features Miss Dietrich as a suave and accomplished jewel thief. Cooper is involved to fall in love with her, then attempting to get her to break with her accomplices, in sequences which are accompanied by an atmosphere of personal danger to both and convincing Dietrich to give up her adventurous life and come to America as his bride.

Backfire

Warner

Drama and romance is the essence of this story. The principal background is the construction of Boulder Dam. The yarn heroizes a young fellow who, after killing a man in a fight, becomes a fearful fugitive. Landing at the dam, befriended by a girl, he falls in love with her and gets a job. As background and action shots illustrate the construction of this engineering project, they also serve as an action accompaniment to a triangular romantic conflict, in which the hero first incurs his rival's displeasure to learn that his past is catching up with him, then saves his enemy's life. Confessing his criminal past to the girl and also the boss of the company upon whom he has made a deep impression, he is assured of the backing of the company in his fight to establish innocence and inspired by the girl who promises to wait for him.

The story is an original screen play by Sy Bartlett, Ralph Block and Laird Doyle. It is being directed by Frank McDonald, recently credited with "Broadway Hostess" and "The Murder of Doctor Harrigan."

Ross Alexander, featured in "Shipmates," will be seen in the leading role. Patricia Ellis plays the part of the girl and Lyle Talbot is the third principal. Supporting players included are Eddie Acuff, Henry O'Neill, Egon Brecher, Eleanor Wesselhoeft, William Pawley, Ronnie Cosby, George Breakston, Olin Howland and Joseph Crehan.

Basically an action drama, the production features several hand-to-hand fights, and in addition to this mass appeal asset, the climaxing thrill in which suspense is concentrated is the hero's rescuing of his rival high up on the face of the dam as he hangs on to a rapidly disintegrating cable.

The Singing Vagabond

Republic

Contrary to title indication, this is not a musical. Rather it is a western, naturally an action drama, in which the star, Gene Autry, sings as an incident in building his romance with the heroine. The story is by Oliver Drake, with screen play by Drake and Betty Burbridge. Carl Pierson, who has directed Autry in several of his previous appearances, functions in the same capacity.

Name requirements are fulfilled by Autry, Ann Rutherford, Barbara Pepper and Smiley Burnette in the featured roles. Supporting players include Grace Goodal, Frank LaRue, Warner Richmond, Niles Welsh, Allan Season, Bob Burns, Charles King, Celia McCoanon, Henry Rocquemore and Ray Benard.

Preliminary situations being of the character familiar to this type picture, the setup has Autry a soldier, leading forces in the rescue of a wagon train that has been besieged by bandits. Romance developing between him and Ann Rutherford, there is conflict at first. This situation is reversed when, through an error of justice, Autry is convicted as a horse thief. Autry escapes and, aided by several of his buddies, goes in pursuit of the wagon train. Arriving just in time to prevent annihilation by a band of marauding Indians, the culprit who stole the horses confesses. Autry, cleared of suspicion, joins the train to clear up the situation with Miss Rutherford.

While the theme is but little different from that which has been done many times before, principal showmanship interest appears to be best available in the action counterpart. This movement, built mainly about the two attacks on the wagon train, seems capable of providing showmen with ideas to arouse the interest of western fans.

Woman Trap

Paramount

Basically this story is of the melodramatic action adventure character. In gist, it tells of the depredations of a gang of thieves who seek the sanctuary of interior Mexico to evade the arm of American law agencies. Involved with them are a young American heiress who is being held for ransom and a newspaper reporter who is striving to run the gang down. This situation is the premise for the show's ensuing drama, romance, comedy, adventure thrill and personal danger action, which in view of the none too business influencing quality of the cast is the angle upon which the producers are centering their bid for exhibitor and popular interest.

The story is an original screen play by Charles Brackett and Eugene Walter. It is being directed by Harold Young, who handled "Without Regret."

Gertrude Michael will be seen in the role of the abducted heiress, and George Murphy, currently in "Anything Goes," as the composite sleuth and newspaper man who actually are the central figures in the story's melodrama and action. Of some note is the fact that Akim Tamiroff, seen in supporting roles in many other pictures, is given his first opportunity at a featured part. Other players to be seen include Dean Jagger, Roscoe Karns, Russell Hicks, David Haines, Julian Rivero, Sidney Blackmer, Edward Brophy, Bradley Page, Henrietta Burnside and Arthur Aylesworth.

That only two women are mentioned in the cast should give some idea of the production's color and character. Concentrating on melodrama and melodramatic romance, direction is so contriving the various phases and situations that the element of suspense as it menaces the lives and fortunes of the heroine and hero that the dramatic worth of that quality is being counted upon heavily to arouse audience and showmanship attention.

Dangerous Waters

Adventure on the high seas is the pitch to which this picture is keyed. Secondarily it is a story of a man's devotion to a wife who was entitled to no consideration. Substantiating these primary qualities, it is a story of courage, heroism and villainy. As such it includes much that has demonstrated its worth as screen material from an entertainment and commercial viewpoint.

The production is based upon the published novel, "Glory Hole," a term synonymous with ships' stokeholds. The screen play is by Richard Schayer and Hazel Jamieson. It is being directed by Lambert Hillyer, who numbers among his recent pictures "The Invisible Ray" and "The Awakening of Jim Burke." Authenticity of production effects as they pertain to life and activity aboard a ship at sea, particularly in the phases where dangers from fire and destructive complicity are concerned, are given realism by the technical direction of Lieut. Francis C. Pollard, J. S. C. G.

The story, in sticking closely to the element of salty dangerous adventure, also includes a thread of jealous romantic conflict. It tells of an officer who, commended for his seamanship and resourcefulness in saving a burning liner, is rewarded by losing his job. His domestic tranquility made turmoil by the activities of his wastrel wife, he gets a new job and, defeating the conspiracies of enemies who would sink his ship, steers it safely to port and is rewarded with a job on a fine new liner after his wife has deserted him and he finds new love with the daughter of his old skipper.

Jack Holt, currently in "The Littlest Rebel," will be seen in the leading role. Grace Bradley nine, including "Around the World in 80 Minutes," "Rain" and "Abraham Lincoln." MGM had six ranging from "Billy the Kid" to "Dancing Lady." These figures are for September of this year only.

Great films of the past are outdrawing, in a good many cases, current product.

Coast exhibitors who have made a success of reissues have stressed the fact that they are offering opportunity to see films which most persons have heard about but which many missed. A strong play also is being made for attention from high school youngsters who were too young to enjoy these films in their first release.

Independent

With the purposeful aim of stimulating independent producers to produce a better class product, Henry Ellman, midwest exchangeman, has completed several days on the West Coast, where he worked on plans entailing the establishment of exchanges up and down the Pacific Coast.

Mr. Ellman is of the opinion that the independents can compete favorably with the class B product of the majors with little or no extra expenditures over that now put into inferior product.

The exchangeman held several informal meetings with all the important independent producers on the Coast and it is understood that most of them plan to fall in line with his drive for better films.

Mr. Ellman expects to return here soon to complete final plans for establishment of his Coast system.

Fox Midwest Is Extending Double Feature Policy

Fox Midwest has instituted double billing in several spots throughout the Kansas City territory, notably in Wichita, and is understood on good authority to be planning an extension of the policy. Two of Fox's first run theatres at Wichita, the Orpheum and Miller, began showing two features late in October and the company's theatres in Winfield and Arkansas City introduced duals early this month. Pittsburgh, Kas., is reported the next city to present two features, according to Fox Midwest plans.

The success of Fox houses on the west coast with double bills has, it is understood, led Spyros Skouras, who favors the plan, to ask for an increased use of it in the Kansas City territory.

Look for Koenig Settlement

William Koenig has discontinued his activities at the Warner studios in Hollywood, although a settlement of his contract has not yet been reached with Jack Warner. Koenig's duties have been divided between Tenny Wright and Joe Gilbert.

Pantages Will Hold Previews

Arrangements have been completed by Samuel Goldwyn and executives of the Alexander Pantages Theatre Circuit, Inc., on the west coast, whereby Goldwyn's future pictures will all be previewed in Pantages houses. United Artist will continue to release the films as in the past, however.

NBC Coast Studio Opening Broadcast

The "wedlock" between radio and motion pictures envisioned by Merlin H. Aylesworth, president of the National Broadcasting Company, in Hollywood as far back as 1932 comes a step closer with the formal opening on Saturday of NBC's new coast studio in the location formerly occupied by Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., at 5515 Melrose Avenue. The project was first broached by Mr. Aylesworth in a general press conference held at the RKO-Radio Studios in Hollywood over three years ago during which he scoffed at any impressions which may have been afloat at the time that radio was a menace to the motion picture industry and gave it as his analysis that a wedding of the two would redound to the mutual advantage of each form of entertainment. He also made public NBC's plan for the broadcasting plant which is about to open and expressed the hope that the coast film studios would take advantage of its facilities.

Leading film, radio and stage personalities will participate in the dedication which will be broadcast over a coast-to-coast NBC-WJZ network from 10:30 P. M. to midnight, Eastern Standard time. David Sarnoff, president of Radio Corporation of America, will speak from New York, while Will H. Hays will extend congratulations from Hollywood. Richard C. Patterson, Jr., executive vice-president of NBC, and Don Gilman, vice-president of NBC in charge of the Western Division, will also take part in the dedication. Ruth Etting will send greetings from Hawaii and others who will appear on the initial program include Gladys Swarthout, Marion Talley, Irvin S. Cobb, Jack Benny, Mary Livingstone, Al Jolson, Wallace Beery, Anne Jamison, Ginger Rogers, Nelson Eddy, Edgar A. Guest, Phil Regan, Bing Crosby, Joe Penner, Stan Laurel, Oliver Hardy and George Jessel. The announcing will be handled by James Wallington, Don Wilson and Sam Hayes.

Mr. Aylesworth is now enroute to California from New York and will arrive Friday, as are Herbert J. Yates, president of Consolidated, whose company was in charge of construction, and W. Ray Johnston, president of Republic Pictures Corporation.

The old Consolidated plant has been completely rebuilt along modern lines and has been made fireproof and earthquake-proof. All construction has been in accordance with the principles followed and developed in Radio City and the latest technical, soundproofing and air-conditioning equipment installed. RCA apparatus is used throughout. The main building is two stories high, houses three studios and various offices and is 140 feet long and 75 feet deep.

Pantages Issue Filed With SEC

The Securities and Exchange Commission in Washington has listed the registration of an issue of certificates of deposit for the first mortgage six per cent bonds, dated June 1, 1926, to a principal amount of $425,000 by the Committee of Depositors of Alexander Pantages First Mortgage Bonds of Portland, Ore.

is his wife and Diana Gibson, making her debut, is the girl with whom he finds romantic happiness. Other principals are Robert Armstrong, now in "Remember Last Night," the veteran comedian, Charlie Murray, Dewey Robinson, Guy Usher and Matt McHugh. Supporting players listed are Richard Alexander, Edwin Maxwell, Edward Earle, Matty Kemp, Billie Gilbert, Lloyd Whitlock and Grace Cunard, one time queen of the serial thrillers.

Whispering Smith Speaks

20th Century-Fox—Principal

This is an action adventure drama story, with romance, told against the background of railroading. In it, while the motivating character retains the wholesome virile appeal for which its star, George O'Brien, is noted, thrill is not lacking even though in attaining it O'Brien discards his bucking bronchos for a careening locomotive cabin.

The story is based upon the character "Whispering Smith," which, as created in novels and short stories by Frank H. Spearman quite some time ago, enjoyed a popular vogue among fiction readers. Adaptation is by Gilbert Wright and Rex Taylor, with screen play by Dan Jarrett and Don Swift. The director, David Howard, previously handled O'Brien in "The Rainbow Trail" and more recently in "Thunder Mountain."

While O'Brien's presence in the production should take care of the necessary name value matter, popularity of the featured and supporting players is something worthy of showmanship consideration. The principal supports are Irene Ware, seen recently in "Cheers of the Crowd" and "The Raven," among other pictures, as the center of romantic and dramatic interest, and Kenneth Thomson, recently in "Broadway Melody," who is the menace to O'Brien's romantic and commercial ambitions. Other players are Spencer Charters and Victor Potel; Maude Allen, recalled for her work in "The Cowboy Millionaire;" Edward Keane, Frank Sheridan, William V. Mong and Maurice Cass.

In the story, the entertainment character of which, as it deals with railroad men and the adventures and perils of railroading not only on the tracks but behind the scenes, makes for action appealing to the popular mind, substantiating production effects are of high caliber, as noted in the climax when O'Brien makes a record-breaking overland dash in a locomotive.

Eugene Zukor Is Club Choice

Eugene Zukor has been nominated, without opposition, for the presidency of the Paramount Pep Club, which holds its annual election on December 10. Joseph J. Dougherty has been named for the vice-presidency, and candidates for the board, two of whom will be elected, are Henry Anderson, Arthur Israel, Jack Roper and Dr. Emanuel Stern.

ASIDES & INTERLUDES

By JAMES CUNNINGHAM

The following item appeared in this pillar two weeks ago:

> Traveling down memory lane for Louie Sobol, George McManus, who has been "Bringing Up Father" for a quarter-century, recalled the day when Dick Carle, 44 years an actor, stood at the bar of the white-stone Lambs Club off Times Square, and ran his CAN across the bar, knocking off all the glasses to the floor. He was expelled from the club for a year. Returning one year later, Carle was standing at the same bar when Wilton Lackaye approached him and expressed his delight at seeing him back at the club. "Why were you expelled from the club?" asked Lackaye, to which Carle answered, "Oh, for doing this," and once again he ran his CANE across the bar, knocking all the glasses to the floor. For which Carle was expelled for another year.

The repetition of the item, of course, is attributable to the net result effected by that ol' debbil, Typographical Error; so, too, are the following pieces of correspondence from readers:

> From M. N. Hillyer, manager, Strand theatre, Creston, Iowa: "By this time, close to 10,000 readers have probably 'ribbed' you about this hilarious error (which may or may not have been intentional). Be that as it may, lest this lallapalooza be forever lost through oversight by all readers, when I read it—I howled!"
> "And not that it really matters, but just for the satisfaction of knowing," Paul O. Klingler, manager of the Rialto theatre, Lewiston, Pennsylvania, wrote to say that he "would appreciate your clarifying one point: Was the object used by Mr. Carle animate or inanimate? Because this article seems to contradict itself."

Everybody has heard about the teeth of a gale, but the first time we ever heard of a concrete instance of the phenomenon happened the other Sunday afternoon.

In the midst of the violent storm and wind which swept down over and through Manhattan's towers, a man whipped up to the RCA Building doorman at Rockefeller Center, with an acute problem. His upper teeth had just blown away. He had opened his mouth to breathe, he said, and the teeth had sailed off just like that. He was under the impression they had swept in the direction of the RCA Building entrance. Had the doorman noticed any teeth rushing by?

The doorman said no, but he would be glad to help look for them. They searched an hour without any luck at all. Finally they both gave up. By now those teeth must be way over the Atlantic Ocean in the first bicuspid non-stop flight.

Bet Shakespeare-specialists Warner Brothers never knew that over the spot in England where William Shakespeare is buried, a marble slab has inscribed thereon this epitaph: "Good friend for God's sake forbear, To diegg the dust enclosed heare, Blest be the man that spares the stones, And curst be he that moves my bones."

"There was increased activity in front of this town of Jitiga today," reported H. I. Phillips' mythical Elmer Twitchell, from his assignment with the Ethiopian Armies-Almost-in-the-field. "Natives were massing in large numbers in full war regalia, including earrings," he added. "Something is believed to be pending—probably another newsreel picture."

"Pajamas can be very beautiful and are perfectly proper under certain conditions," says Dolores Del Rio.

As in the case of fire?

Interrupting the quiet procedure of publishing, an announcement from the lofty headquarters press department of the great Paramount Pictures at Times Square in New York, informing us that:

> "Another best-seller purchased by Paramount—'Let's Have a Baby,' by Howard Buch—will come to the screen under the title of 'Let's Get Married.'"

Joe Breen has been getting in a lick around the Paramount studios, all right, all right.

Instead of flashing a telegram across the land, maybe Louie Mayer cabled the message under the ocean up along the Pacific Coast, to the Bering Sea, thence eastward through the frozen Banks Straight, Melville Sound, Barrow Straight, Lancaster Sound to Baffin Bay and Davis Straight, and then on down the Atlantic Ocean to New York.

Financing, most generously, by motion picture interests made possible the production of "Jumbo," the "super-super spectacle" now on view at the New York Hippodrome, but that does not deter Billy Rose, the bite-the-hand-that-feeds-you producer, from aiming an attack at the motion picture theatres and their price scales.

"Why pay a dollar to see a movie?" shrieked a catchline in bold type display, in large advertising space on "Jumbo" in the New York Daily News, last Sunday. This was typical of other news ads appearing in New York papers.

Then followed this copy: "Do you realize that what Percy Hammond (drama critic) of the Herald-Tribune describes as 'An exciting compound of opera, animal show, folk drama, harlequinade, carnival, circus, extravaganza and spectacle' is being offered New York at the same price as the average movie; that instead of the picture house catch-as-catch-can seating scramble, you can buy an excellent reserved seat for as little as forty cents to see what Walter Winchell of the Daily Mirror calls 'The town's outstanding entertainment.'"

Mr. Billy Rose's anti-motion picture theatregoing campaign may be of interest to John Hay (Jock) Whitney, president of Pioneer Pictures, and director of Selznick International Pictures and of Technicolor, who is "Jumbo's" and Billy Rose's chief backer, to the reported extent of nearly $300,000. And it may likewise interest Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Herbert Bayard Swope, chairman of the board of Radio-Keith-Orpheum, who are likewise "angling" the production of "Jumbo." Too, it will no doubt interest those New York exhibitors who are trying to make a living with Mr. Whitney's Pioneer motion pictures, the while Billy Rose and his "Jumbo" as backed by Mr. Whitney urge entertainment seekers to attend the Hippodrome rather than the movies.

Oh, the Hippodrome is back again
With circus acts so swell—
With elephants and lions and
The same old-fashioned smell!

There's real life drama in this little advertisement in Motion Picture Daily:

> OUTSTANDING OPPORTUNITY

> Jewish-owned leading movie theatre concern in Germany, free of debts and producing a large income, for exchange against any going American business, preferably motion picture theatres, property or cash, at small percentage of actual value.—Box 777.

And in Italy motion picture exhibitors are probably burning—though privately, very privately—over Il Doochie's new order calling for an earlier curtain and earlier closing at all theatres, this to enable the populace to get long nights of sleep to strengthen them to resist the "iniquitous sanctions" laid down by the League of Nations in the Ethiopian matter. Too, Mussolini has ordered that his subjects must eat earlier meals, explaining that earlier eating, earlier entertainment and earlier retirement would mean economies in light and gasolene.

Starkly and startlingly prophetic of things that were to come, is the ending of "In Old Kentucky," the last Will Rogers picture. Through the production, Rogers is his usually jolly self, but at the fadeout he is left alone—in the rain, forsaken, crying for help.

Toward the end of his life's journey, he must have had a forsaken feeling of that sort—there on the barren tundra near Point Barrow in the frozen north, when the Winnie Mae airship crashed in the woods.

And from Red Kann's newsy Motion Picture Daily we hear the laugh about a woman patron at RKO's Palace, in Cincinnati, who, upon leaving the theatre, remarked to the doorman that she thought the new system of thanking patrons was "just dandy."

She was referring to the message: "THANKS A MILLION" that was emblazoned in large box-car letters on a banner strewn across the inside lobby facing customers as they exited from the auditorium. What the patron failed to notice, however, was the inscription, "Next Attraction," written in small letters directly above.

Pilgrim's Progress in Hollywood, as observed by Philip Scheuer: In Edward Peple's "The Littlest Rebel," staged in 1911 with William and Dustin Farnum, little Virgie Cary (played then by Juliet Shelby, later known as Mary Miles Minter) interceded with General Ulysses S. Grant (William B. Mack) for the life of her father, a Southern captain.

In Twentieth Century-Fox's 1935 version of the "Rebel," Shirley Temple, portraying little Virgie Cary, passes up General Grant cold and goes straight to the Capitol at Washington to President Abraham Lincoln.

"Who are your favorite movie stars?" queried a reporter of Dorothy Thompson, "the perfect chorus girl."

"Bing Crosby, Mae West, Gary Cooper, W. C. Fields and Claudette Colbert, of course," she replied.

"Why 'of course?'" probed the reporter.

"Because," she answered, "they are working for Paramount and I am working for Paramount. I also think that Ernst Lubitsch is the greatest of film executives. He works for Par——"

EQUITY SAYS 'ONE BIG ACTORS' UNION' WILL GET INTO ACTION JANUARY 1

Equity Members Working in Hollywood Studios Will Be Required to Join Guild and Keep Enrolment in Both Units

PWA Tryout Theatre Project in New York About to Begin; Activity Slow in Chicago and Los Angeles, Critics Claim

Advancing the dream of Actors' Equity Association for "one big union" of actors embracing the legitimate stage and motion picture production, Equity in New York and the Screen Actors' Guild in Hollywood this week claimed that "the closer tie" they have been talking about is on the way to achievement.

It is scheduled to be inaugurated January 1, when Equity members working in Hollywood studios will be required to join the Guild and maintain their memberships in good standing in both organizations.

Members of Equity were receiving orders this week to adhere to this arrangement and submit to the Guild's jurisdiction of West Coast studios, or be faced with expulsion from the actors' union if they return to the stage.

"We expect a closed shop in Hollywood very shortly, and we are on the way to it now," declared Frank Gillmore, battle-scarred president of Equity, in New York.

Await WPA Projects

In the meantime actors without work because they are not members of Equity or because of the dying condition of the stage, were looking forward to the start of the Works Progress Administration theatre projects in which steady employment at a "living" wage would be made for them out of the Government's $10,000,000 earmarked for the purpose. Major developments were:

The tryout theatre project in New York was announced as about to begin, and Uncle Sam was primed to launch his career as a showman with three theatres under lease in outlying sections of the city as Equity announced it would protest to President Roosevelt against government red tape hindering the employment of jobless actors.

Slow in Chicago, Los Angeles

In Chicago and Los Angeles activity was proceeding slowly, but plans were shaping up.

Mrs. Hallie Flanagan, the national director, was busy in the field answering criticism and attempting to speed the program.

The Screen Actors' Guild has been more vocal than any other group in firing brickbats at the projects, being fearful of the effect on employment at the studios and zealous about such things as professional standards and wage scales. The Guild fears the WPA is going to train a new army of actors willing to work for less than professional salaries, at a time when unemployment among talent is high.

That may have been an element spurring the Guild to drive its campaign for a "closed shop" in Hollywood, with Equity's help.

Equity headquarters explained that last year when the contract was signed giving the Guild jurisdiction over the film production center, it was agreed that Equity members engaged in motion picture work would affiliate with the Guild. Only recently, Laurence Beillinson, attorney for the Guild, conferred with the Equity Council in New York and obtained certain modifications. While they were not officially announced, it is understood they pertained to an arrangement on cooperative payment of dues and punitive measures for Equity members refusing to join the Guild.

SEE "NEW DEAL" IN BRITISH QUOTA

A "new deal" for the American motion picture industry in Great Britain is seen in the proposed quota laws which, according to indications, will be more favorable to the United States than those in force now.

The new legislation, said the office of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, furthers the existing splendid cooperation American film companies are receiving from the British Government, and as ushering in a new era of good feeling in Anglo-American film relations.

Under the amendment to the Equity-Guild contract, the dues paid to the West Coast union will cover the dues for the other organization as well, the Guild remitting Equity's share. The ruling applies only to those actually employed in the studios, and not to legitimate actors appearing on the Coast, and will immediately affect about 200 players now in Hollywood who are not affiliated with the Guild. The number will fluctuate, depending upon the studios' demand for talent.

See New Equity Drive

Hollywood believes the working agreement is the opening wedge of a new drive by Equity to gain control of all actors engaged in film production. The Screen Actors' Guild is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor through a charter granted by Equity.

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences pursues its traditional policy of silence, broken but once, with respect to matters involving the Guild, but it remains the entrenched organization for actor-producer relations, and presents the biggest bulwark against realization of the Guild's aspirations. The Academy not long ago successfully negotiated a producer-player standard contract over the Guild's cries that the Academy is a "company union," producer-controlled.

The Guild demands producer recognition as the representative union of the players in the studios, and in the past has been ready to call an actors' walkout to enforce its demands.

Equity's attempts to gain a foothold in Hollywood go back some 15 years. Its last invasion, in 1929, was led by Frank Gillmore, then Equity's newly-elected president. It ended in disaster. The New York Times last Sunday, describing Mr. Gillmore's career, suggested what may be in store for the producers, in this wise:

"In the founding of the Screen Actors' Guild was a hint of a Gillmore comeback, and in the affiliation of the Guild and Equity last January the goal was obvious. The Guild is autonomous, but 80 per cent of its voting members belong to Equity. When and if they strike, and the film producers send to New York for actors, Mr. Gillmore will see that none go out. He will have his closed shop then—closed at both ends."

The Guild's controversy with the WPA meanwhile has reached Washington, and word from the capital this week was that Mrs. Flanagan, in a swing around the country would in Los Angeles try to compose the row raised by Equity-Guild leaders over the alleged relief of amateurs while professionals receive scant consideration. There were other differences which the actors were to take up with the national director. She was in Chicago Monday, and left for the Coast.

Mrs. Flanagan said that establishment of the federal theatre project on a nationwide basis must await the launching of the units in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles, where the need is most acute. It is expected the New York projects already lined up will provide employment for the 3,200 theatre people on relief in that section.

Attention will later be turned to other sections, but where it is found that not enough theatre folk are on relief, no funds will be allocated, she said.

Houses Leased by WPA

The Teller Theatre, Brooklyn, the Willis in the Bronx and a third in Queens are houses leased by the New York WPA for six months beginning January 1 for tryouts of plays. Because of Equity's objections, no unit will be located in Manhattan, where it would compete with established theatres.

In Chicago, the WPA is negotiating for a Loop theatre and a large neighborhood house for the presentation of old as well as new plays, these first projects to employ about 350 actors and technicians. Ten vaudeville units have been formed.

Typical of numerous situations, the theatre project in Philadelphia is having difficulty getting started because there are only a handful of persons eligible to enroll. No one experienced in the professional legitimate theatre who needed relief could be found.

Pons Film, New Musical Recipe At Start, Returns to Formula

But "I Dream Too Much" Brings Sparkling Personality to Screen, Says O'Sullivan

by JOSEPH O'SULLIVAN

THE debut of Lily Pons in pictures is an event that merits serious consideration on the part of the exhibitor, the motion picture public, and that limited coterie of serious observers of the development of screen musical productions.

When the influx of grand opera stars to the screen began, it was reasonable to assume that the influence of the high-hat vocalists would result in some distinctively new form of movie-musical entertainment.

These expectations have not been realized. While each of the productions starring a noted songbird has introduced musical sequences indicating the possibilities of the screen media, these are but details in a structure that remains fundamentally the same since films first became lyrical.

For the exhibitor whose credo is "Give me something that will get the biggest hand from the greatest percentage of cash customers," Miss Pons' initial venture, "I Dream Too Much," fills the specifications handsomely. The movie-musical public (and there is now a definite clientele of this class) will acclaim the voice of our foremost operatic coloratura as the more limited operatic public has acclaimed it, while the mass of film patrons will welcome La Petite Pons as a new and sparkling personality.

Although the story of "I Dream Too Much" is built around the musical and romantic career of a little French girl born to be a great singer, the scenarists have modified the formula that has been too frequently used in opera-star screen productions. They have made the opera-career ambition virtually null and void (at least so far as the heroine cares) and the love element—a yearning for a hubby, a baby and a home—paramount.

This concession on the part of the producers to the public clamor for unadulterated romance relegates the operatic triumph angle to a subordinate position in the dramatic scheme, even though the heroine has the opportunity of putting her best brand of vocal gifts on display in the brilliant operatic arias, the Bell Song from Delibes' "Lakme," the Caro Nome from "Rigoletto," and also in a scene from the opera composed by the hero which she revamps into a musical comedy success, "I Dream Too Much," the music by Jerome Kern with lyrics by Dorothy Fields.

BELL SONG from "LAKME"—Marks the triumph of Annette (Miss Pons) in the big Paris Opera House, in one of the most brilliant and colorful operatic scenes brought to the screen.

THE JOCKEY ON THE CARROUSEL—Sung by Annette (Miss Pons) as she rides on a merry-go-round in Paris. Annette has found something of the gay life she seeks and makes the most of it. (© T. B. Harms Co.)

But this deviation from the formula does not retard the musical motivation in the unfolding of the romantic story. The big operatic musical scenes are simply highlights that bring into sharper relief the principal theme—the yearning of a young girl for the pure joy of living—and give point to the lighter lyricism in the several musical numbers contributed by Jerome Kern and sung by Miss Pons at significant periods in the picture.

The most apt and original of these musical sequences is The Jockey on the Carrousel. Annette Monard (Lily Pons), who has gone to Paris with the young American musician she had met and married after a gay night at a carnival in her home town, is poor but happy with her ambitious would-be grand opera composer-husband. It is only when he discovers her perched on a merry-go-round singing to a small urchin she has picked up, the chanson of The Jockey on the Carrousel, that he realizes what a wonderful voice she has and determines to go to work and make enough money to have her voice trained.

Annette's triumphal debut in "Lakme," in which she is revealed in the famous Bell Song scene, provides one of the most brilliant and colorful operatic scenes yet brought to the screen. This most exacting aria and the one which is said to have first set La Pons on the road to fame, is rendered with the artistry that has established her as the most popular of our operatic coloraturas.

Up to this point the romance of Annette and Jonathan seems destined to tread a new and uncharted course in film musicals; but when Annette becomes a great artist and then breaks with Annette when he as an operatic composer, sinking deeper and deeper into the mire of despond, and then breaks with Annette when he discovers that the production of his opera is being financed by Annette, the good old formula of opera-star musicals bobs up serenely. However, this recipe is discarded when Annette, after a triumphal tour of Europe, discovers Jonathan in Paris driving a taxicab and steps out with him in a series of escapades which land them in jail.

Another violation of the accepted code is when Annette, in London to fill an important engagement, rearranges his opera into a musical comedy and prevails upon Darcy to produce it with her in the starring role. Jonathan turns up for the opening, disgusted at being considered a popular composer. Art for art's sake is forgotten when the show proves to be a big hit and Jonathan basks in the limelight, while Annette achieves her real ambition of becoming just a wife and a mother.

The musical comedy ending with Annette scoring in a big scene from I Dream Too Much, climaxes a musical screen production that does not overtax the proletariat while affording many delightful moments to the intelligentsia.

$28,000 week at the Penn. As a result of this great take, the picture was held over at the Warner, which will give it three weeks downtown.
The Stanley was the only other house in town to make any sort of showing, due principally to the bolstering influence of Mary Small,
Molasses 'n' January and Cross and Dunn on the stage. They supported
"Rendezvous" for an exceptionally fine $21,000. At the Alvin, "She Couldn't Take It" took it on the chin, getting just about $3,200, while
"Barbary Coast" was a disappointment at the Penn, at $10,000.
"Metropolitan" held for three extra days beyond the regulation week at the Fulton and caught a fair enough
$2,000.
Total first run grosses were $47,200.
Average is $41,000.
Estimated takings for the week ending Nov. 21.

"Mutiny" Gains in Portland Holdover

PORTLAND, Nov. 26.—"Mutiny on the Bounty" secured even a larger take in its second week at United Artists than it did the first week, with $8,5 registered, or over par by $3,500.
"In Old Kentucky" in its first week at the Paramount brought in $7,5 or $2,500 over normal, and indications point to a large second week.
Total first run business was $31,
Average is $24,700.

Denver, Nov. 12.

'Mutiny on the Bounty' is smashing house records and looks good for $15,000 at the Denver. House is on a steady grind that kept it open till 3 a. m. Sunday morning and 2
a. m. Monday. Film is set for at least three weeks.

Broadway (Huffman) (1,500; 25-week at the Denver. Stood them up over weekend and looks like $2,- 000. Last week 'Shipmates Forever' (FN), after week at Denver, broke house record for Sunday and did $2,000, just about double average for this house.

Denham (Cooper) (1,500; 25-35-ifying business, with $6,000 likely.

Last week 'Hands Across Table'
(Par) slightly above average at $4,500.

Denver (Huffman) (2,500; 25-35-on first week and looks good for at least three. Last week 'Rendezvous' (MG) finished with fine $7,500 and was moved to the Broadway for second run

Buffalo on Upbeat, 'Mutiny' Smash Ditto

Buffalo, Nov. 13.
(Best Exploitation: Great Lakes)

Grosses are uniformly seeking higher levels this week with at least two outstanding spots. Armistice Day helped takings and a spell of bad weather over the weekend also boosted the figures.
'Mutiny' got under the wire to some of the best business seen here in a long time. 'Hands Across Table' at the Buffalo is also doing nicely, while 'Transatlantic Tunnel,' in its second week at the Lafayette is showing strength comparable to some of the best holdovers the house has had
'Bounty' provided a natural for exploitation. Two newspaper contests, series of tie-up items, distribution of thousands of handbills and circulars, radio contests, billboards and merchandise tie-ups were highlights. Both News and Times (evening) went for kid contests, the former with identification of the names of articles on a full sailing rig copping the prize and the latter with a color contest using pictures of the Bounty. A department store tie-up was good for complete advertising coverage throughout all departments of the store and distribution of heralds and posters to customers every day.
Radio copy was strong on two stations. Extra twenty-four sheets, window and display cards were used. Trailers of the picture were shown at all seven Shea neighborhood houses two weeks ahead of opening. The historical angles of the picture were stressed in letters to over a thousand teachers. Magazines and library books were planted with bookmarks.

"Mutiny" Tops Heavy Pickup In Pittsburgh

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 20.—Last week was the biggest downtown Pittsburgh has seen in years, the Army-Pitt football week-end, the Variety Club banquet and the Armistice Day holiday bringing into town thousands of visitors bent on spending. As a result, grosses everywhere skyrocketed and the five first runs doubled average.
At the Penn, "Mutiny on the Bounty" smashed all sorts of records, rolling up a phenomenal $28,000.
Because this house has more product than it can use, "Mutiny" wasn't held over here, but was sent to the Warner for a run at the same scale.

'MUTINY' LEADS NEWARK, $21,000

Newark, Nov. 25.
(Best Exploitation: Loew's State)

Business centers around 'Mutiny
On the Bounty' at Loew's State this week, and nothing will come near touching it. Will probably take all the house can under its present scale, judging from the mob-jamming the opening. With the holiday should run over a terrific $21,000.
Holds over, of course.
Loew's State is doing a lot of publicity for 'Mutiny.' Ship model contest has been carried in the Ledger for nine days with two-column art and daily stories. Also carried and displayed in three big department stores, with stores also taking co-operative ads. Several stores used windows.

Loew's State (2,780; 20-30-
75)—'Bounty' (MG). Presumably biggest draw of year and best since
'Copperfield.' Should beat awe
$21,000. Last week 'Couldn't Take not hold after week-end, but okay at over $14,000.

by far since reopening three weeks ago.

Estimates for This Week

Minnesota (Publix) (4,200; 25-35-

Length of show preventing usual turnover but nevertheless plenty of

'Live My Life' (MG), $13,000 good but below expectations.

Lyric (Publix) (1,300; 20-25)—

(Best Exploitation: Midland)

When a picture theatre turns customers away, nowadays, its news, and that's just what Loew's Midland is doing this week with 'Mutiny on the Bounty.' Lines started to form early on the opening and two ticket sellers could not break them at times.
Because of the length of the feature, house is opening at ten in the morning and show is not over until 12:30 midnight. Sure looks like old times.

Midland (Loew) (4,000; 25-40)—
'Mutiny on the Bounty' (MG). One of the best openings house has had in weeks and the payoff looks like $25,000, great. Last week 'Metro-good but less than anticipated.

PLENTY OF B.O PEP IN PROV., 'BOUNTY' 20G

Providence, Nov. 12

Plenty of action in town this week. No alibis being heard, except in one or two cases. Attractions generally oke. Strand and Fay's only two spots with weak programs.
Cyclonic action at Loew's where 'Mutiny on the Bounty' is the attraction. Aided by ideal weather midnight show Armistice Eve, and Armistice Day holiday (legal this year for the first time in Rhode Island) the pace looks like a record-breaker. House is safe on banking a $20,000 gross, and more if things break right.

The publicity staff at Loew's certainly worked overtime to ballyhoo
'Mutiny.' Keen rivalry between
Loew's and the Albee, but Chris Wilbert of Loew staff plastered the town. Ordinarily, Albee's campaign would loom large. Olsen and Johnson worked plenty hard to keep up with the publicity department, and grabbed off some rare publicity, but the Loew's drive was of a spectacular nature and detracted attention from anything else in town.

Estimates for This Week

Loew's State (3,200; 15-25-40)—
'Mutiny on Bounty' (MG). Turnaways daily, and pace indicates a holdover. $20,000 is highest house has reached since the depression.

Eyes are on three film attractions this week in this town: 'Mutiny on Tremendous weekend response makes 'Mutiny' look like a sock grosser at the two houses to tune of $45,000—maybe breaking a house record (under this season's straight film policy) at the Orpheum.

Estimates for This Week

State (Loew) (3,200; 25-35-40-50)
—'Mutiny on Bounty' (MG). Single, day and date with Orpheum sailing in $22,000 breeze. Hefty advance bally wised up the ticket buyers long before it hit the screen. Last week satisfactory $14,000 with 'Barbary Coast' (UA) and 'Bishop Misbehaves' (MG), dual.

Orpheum (Loew) (3,000; 25-35-40-50)—'Mutiny' (MG). Shapes up as most important attraction here since the house went straight sound this season. Will hit a gorgeous $23,000 and may break the attendance record. Will almost certainly hold over here, and possibly at both houses. $14,500 last week for 'Barbary' (UA) and
'Bishop' (MG), dual, oke.

"Mutiny on the Bounty" continues to set the pace on Broadway. After chalking up a $76,300 gross for the first week, the M-G-M special garnered $59,000 during its second stanza at the Capitol.

"Mutiny" Again Held

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 22.—"Mutiny on the Bounty" will be held over at the Warner again, its second week here but its third downtown. The picture opened at the Penn where it did a sensational $28,000, then was moved to the smaller Warner at the same scale and turned in $10,000, more than double average, during its first week there.

The only reason the Penn didn't keep it was because of a product jam there, something that also faces the Warner now. If many more holdovers develop in the near future, it's likely that Warners will be forced to reopen either the Davis or the Aldine to straighten out the picture situation

Held in Atlanta

ATLANTA, Nov 22—"Mutiny on the Bounty" was held over for an additional six-day run at Loew's Grand.

Metro and the Capitol strongly touted 'Mutiny,' spending $25,000 on the campaign and well advertising the event. Of the ad budget around $15,000 went for newspapers.

Estimates for This Week

Astor (1,012; 25-55-83)—'It's In the Air' (MG) Proving best entry Joe Plunkett has run here, first week $11,000 ending tonight (Wed.) and stays second week. 'Lucky Legs' (WD), in ahead, fairly good $7,000.

Capitol (4,620, 25-35-75-85-95 $1.25)—'Mutiny' (MG). Away from the barrier like a bolt and has a long lead on competitors for a first week of $70,000 or better. All that keeps picture from going further is the load it's carrying in the form of long running time. Second week of 'Rendezvous' (MG) limped to under $20,000.

BILLION DOLLAR YEAR FOR EXHIBITORS, LUBITSCH TELLS PARAMOUNT STAFF

Will Have 65 Features Next Year, Says Otterson at Chicago; Zukor Tells of Progress Since Reorganization

With post-reorganization uncertainties replaced by a definite program of future procedure—corporately, managerially and from a product standpoint—the management of Paramount Pictures this week explained the program in Chicago to the greatest concentration of executive manpower assembled by the corporation from studio, field and home office since John Edward Otterson assumed the presidency and Adolph Zukor the board chairmanship, last June.

Mr. Otterson disclosed that already plans are well under way for next season, when, he said, the company will have a schedule of 65 features, 10 of which will come from Walter Wanger, and including 33 "specials," an unusual number of that type. "Roadshows" or "classical pictures" will not be produced by Paramount, he said, and added that complete harmony exists in studio matters, under Ernst Lubitsch.

Adolph Zukor disclosed the progress made since the reorganization.

"America is going to spend more than one billion dollars to see motion pictures during 1936, and Paramount is launching its greatest production program since 1930 to attract the lion's share of that huge sum to the theatres showing its pictures," Ernst Lubitsch told those present at Chicago's Drake hotel for the two-day meeting, which opened Monday morning.

And to further insure a return of its share, Paramount will spend $500,000 in the first three months of 1936 in newspaper advertising, Neil Agnew added.

Mr. Otterson headed the home office delegation, which, besides Mr. Zukor, as board chairman, and Mr. Agnew, newly-elected vice-president in charge of sales, included R. E. Anderson, vice-president; Russell Holman, eastern production head; Robert M. Gillham, director of publicity and advertising; Eugene Zukor, George Weltner and Albert Deane, representing the foreign department; Alec Moss, advertising manager; Al Wilkie, publicity manager, and Don Velde, ad sales manager.

Agnew Combines Duties

Mr. Lubitsch, managing director of the studio at Hollywood, led the production forces, which included Watterson Rothacker, George Bagnall, George Arthur and Chandler Sprague.

Also present were Paramount's district sales managers from the United States and Canada, as follows: J. J. Unger, Charles Reagan, Milton Kusell, Percy A. Bloch, Harry Goldstein, William Erbb, Oscar Morgan, Jack Dugger, J. E. Fontaine, R. C. Libeau, Hugh Braly, M. H. Lewis and Bert Blotcky.

Before departing for Chicago last weekend, home office executives let it be known that Mr. Agnew's promotion to the Paramount vice-presidency, succeeding George J. Schaefer, who resigned last week, will not, for the present, at least, interfere either with Mr. Agnew's duties or his title of general sales manager, a position which he previously had held under and up to the time of Mr. Schaefer's resignation. Later, if found necessary, Mr. Agnew may acquire an assistant, but meanwhile no other executive changes in sales management are contemplated.

80,000,000 Attendance Predicted

Mr. Lubitsch's optimistic disclosure of an estimated "billion dollar" gross admission at motion picture theatre box offices in 1936 was based, he explained, on conclusions just made by the Association of Motion Picture Producers, the Hollywood branch of the Hays organization, which figured that during 1935 the estimated weekly attendance was on an average of 80,000,000, as against 60,000,000 in previous years, and, "with the general business upswing it is reasonable to suppose that the 1936 attendance figures will be even larger."

"But," Mr. Lubitsch continued, "on the basis of the 1935 figures, taking the Association's average of 25 cents for theatre admissions throughout the country, the total to be spent is $1,040,000,000 for the year.

38 Films January to August

"To meet this tremendous box office demand Paramount started months ago on its 1936 production program," Mr. Lubitsch continued. "Our present schedule calls for 38 releases between January and August of the new year.

"In the early months of 1936 we will see Claudette Colbert in 'The Bride Comes Home,' with Fred MacMurray; 'Anything Goes," with Bing Crosby, Ethel Merman and Charlie Ruggles; 'Rose of the Rancho,' in which Gladys Swarthout will make her screen debut with John Boles; Jack Oakie, Joe Penner and Frances Langford in 'Collegiate'; Harold Lloyd in 'The Milky Way'; Sylvia Sidney in Walter Wanger's production in color of 'The Trail of the Lonesome Pine,' with Fred MacMurray and Fred Stone; 'Millions in the Air'; 'Coronado'; 'Her Master's Voice,' with Edward Everett Horton, and 'It's a Great Life,' with Joe Morrison and Chic Sale.

"Close on the heels of these pictures will follow the Marlene Dietrich-Gary Cooper costarring vehicle, 'Desire,' which Director Frank Borzage is now completing at the studio; Mae West in 'Klondike Lou,' also nearing the end of camera work; 'Give Us This Night,' in which Gladys Swarthout and Jan Kiepura are costarred with an original screen musical score by Erich Wolfang Korngold; 'Rhythm on the Range,' with Bing Crosby; 'F Man,' with Jack Haley and William Frawley, and '13 Hours by Air,' 'Woman Trap' and 'Preview.' In addition are completed Zane Grey and additional 'Hop-A-Long Cassidy' westerns."

"Among outstanding productions definitely scheduled for early filming," according to Mr. Lubitsch, "are 'The Count of Luxembourg,' with music by Franz Lehar; 'National Velvet,' from the novel; 'Poppy,' W. C. Fields' next starring comedy, and 'The Old Maid,' Pulitzer Prize winning play."

Otterson Says He Understands Winfield Sheehan Prefers to Make Four or Five Pictures a Year Independently

Mr. Agnew said that the corporation had decided on a $500,000 advertising outlay in newspapers in the first 1936 quarter, "because newspaper advertising is the most effective selling aid we have." Full-page advertisements will be inserted in leading dailies in cities throughout the country.

The pictures on which the company will concentrate its advertising campaign are: "Desire," with Marlene Dietrich and Gary Cooper; Harold Lloyd's "The Milky Way"; "The Bride Comes Home," with Claudette Colbert; "Rose of the Rancho," with Gladys Swarthout; "Collegiate," with Joe Penner and Jack Oakie; "Klondike Lou," with Mae West and Victor McLaglen; "Anything Goes," with Bing Crosby and Ethel Merman, and "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," with Sylvia Sidney, Fred MacMurray and Henry Fonda.

Ad Budget to Be Maintained

Mr. Otterson explained that Paramount's "years of prestige" will be maintained and that the $500,000 advertising budget for the first 1936 quarter will be continued in other years to enhance the company's prestige as well as to aid sales.

The Paramount president closed the convention Tuesday afternoon after a thorough discussion of general company policies. Six pictures had been previewed from among forthcoming releases.

Mr. Agnew discussed past sales performances and outlined the selling policies for the balance of this season.

Asked if Winfield Sheehan is to become associated with Paramount, as had been reported, Mr. Otterson replied that it was his impression that Mr. Sheehan was not interested in a studio position, but preferred to make four or five pictures a year independently for release through some major company. He added that, as far as he knew, Mr. Sheehan had made no distribution deal for his product yet.

Mr. Otterson said that Mr. Lubitsch in his position as Paramount production manager, is doing a "marvelous" job and "his ability is reflected in all of the new Paramount product."

Mr. Otterson concluded with the observation that the character and personality of the men who comprised the Paramount organization was one of the things about the company which had impressed him the most. Those who lacked those qualities, he said, would have no place in the organization.

Not Interested in Television

The Paramount president explained that while the company was not interested in producing roadshow or classical attractions, he thinks those who did were doing a "grand thing." He said that Paramount was not interested in television and gave as his opinion that the screen had nothing to worry about from that source for a long time.

Mr. Lubitsch gave a detailed outline of product to be delivered by Paramount during the remainder of the season.

In closing the meeting, Mr. Otterson told the sales representatives about reorganization of the company, the set up for the coming year and outlined what he had done and what he planned to do.

Mr. Zukor spoke briefly and gave much praise to Mr. Otterson, saying he and the Paramount president had worked in harmony at all times and that Mr. Otterson was an ideal man for the company at this strategic time.

Mr. Lubitsch explained that "down to earth" pictures were the kind he would make.

Exhibitors Again Pick Wehrenberg

Fred Wehrenberg was unanimously reelected president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of St. Louis, Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois, at a meeting at the Coronado hotel in St. Louis, Mo., Monday afternoon.

Other officers elected are: Vice-Presidents S. E. Pertle, Jerseyville, Ill.; Joe Hewitt, Robinson, Ill., and I. W. Rodgers of Cairo, Ill., while L. C. Hehl, St. Louis, Mo., was renamed secretary-treasurer. All members of the executive committee were reelected.

Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, at the dinner made a plea for industry-wide cooperation against unfair and discriminatory laws and taxes.

Opposes Federal Control

"Our organization feels that there should be some agency in the business to equitably solve our industrial differences," said Mr. Kuykendall. "We don't need any Governmental supervision in that respect. And I believe that this end can be accomplished without interference with local autonomy. Local boards can be set up to adjust various issues without the necessity of going into court."

He repeated his assertion made in Hollywood that the studios are turning out too many costume and historical pictures and that there is a trend toward too much dialogue in pictures. He made it very clear that he is not advocating the entire elimination of costume productions.

His address here was the aftermath of a three months' speaking tour in support of his organization.

Problem of Interest

A number of the exhibitors present agreed that the advertising and exploitation heads of the producers, distributors and exhibitors have not yet solved the problem of creating real interest on the part of many millions in outstanding pictures such as "The Crusades."

Others who spoke included: Reyburn Hoffman, secretary-manager of the St. Louis Safety Council; Mrs. Clyde McNay, president of the Better Films Council of Greater St. Louis; Mrs. Norman Windsor of the Board of Religious Organizations; Mrs. R. Noble, chairman of the Council's Family Night Committee, and Nelson Cunliff, president of the St. Louis Amusement Company.

Sileo Displays Film Stills

Leading the group of film still photographers displaying stills of stars at the Press Photographers' first annual photo exhibit will be Jimmy Sileo, who photographs for RKO, Warners and many of the other film companies. The exhibit will open on December 10, running through December 15, on the mezzanine at Rockefeller Center, New York.

German Director to Speak On Film

G. W. Pabst, Germany's self-exiled film director, will speak about his own "Kameradschaft," when it is screened by the New Film Alliance, on Sunday, at the New School, in New York.

TWO LETTERS AND THE "RED" STATUS

To the Editor of the Herald:

May I have the opportunity of replying briefly to your assertion in your issue of November 2, 1935, that both the National Council on Freedom from Censorship and the Civil Liberties Union are "avowedly Red in sympathy."

The charge against the Civil Liberties Union is old and hoary, but age has not made it any the less false. If the defense of the Bill of Rights is "avowedly Red," then the American tradition stemming back to Thomas Jefferson stands convicted on charges of Bolshevism.

It is new to have the National Council so attacked: you might have mentioned in addition to our protest against the censorship of "Youth of Maxim" in Detroit, our current fight against the attempt of the Commissioner of Licenses in New York City to establish himself as a one-man dictator of decency on the stage through the Republic Theatre burlesque house case, and our offer of legal services to The March of Time to fight censorship of scenes in Chicago and Ohio. Do you remember our early scrap over "Scarface, Shame of a Nation"? There are dozens of such examples. The Council stands ready at any time to challenge the censors in the courts.

Is our program of repeal of the state censorship of motion pictures, of the Wales Theatre "Padlock" law, of opposition to federal censorship "red"?

Where does the Motion Picture Herald stand on theatre and motion picture censorship?—Clifton Read, Secretary, National Council on Freedom from Censorship, New York City.

To the Editor of the Herald:

. . . Since the rejection of the film entitled "Youth of Maxin," the film entitled "Peasants" was presented to me for censoring and was promptly rejected, the subject matter being identical in that it glorifies the Soviet system of dealing with the peasants, curtailing the effort of the Kulak or individual farmer of Russia.

The Motion Picture Herald is to be highly commended for taking such vital interest in this matter.

Thanking you for your cooperation, I am, respectfully yours.—Sergeant Jos. M. Kollar, Film Censor, City of Detroit, Detroit, Mich.

New Motion Picture Writing Class Holds First Meeting

The new course in motion picture writing and also dealing with other technical aspects of the production of pictures was held at the New York headquarters of the Young Men's Hebrew Association under the direction of Louis Jacobs last Monday.

The class, which is open to beginners and advanced students, will continue for fifteen sessions.

Another course, "The Technique of Photoplay," dealing with photography, was also inaugurated last Monday by the association and will be given daily except Saturdays and Sundays.

20th Century-Fox Outlets Decided

Twentieth Century product has been sold for 1935-36 to Loew first-runs outside of Greater New York, while only those pictures released under the Fox label are going to Fox-affiliated theatres for first-runs where there is Loew opposition, it was confirmed in New York this week.

The separation of the Twentieth Century-Fox program was explained by John D. Clark, general sales manager, as involved in a deal made early this season whereby RKO theatres acquired Twentieth Century for metropolitan New York. In return, RKO pictures went to Fox Metropolitan Playhouses. In contrast, the entire Loew circuit had Twentieth Century first-run in 1934-35 when the young company was affiliated with United Artists.

The split in product is noticeable in cities where Loew and Fox both have first-runs, such as Kansas City and St. Louis. In Kansas City, Fox Midwest's Uptown is, as usual, the outlet for Fox pictures, while Twentieth Century is showing at Loew's Midland.

The Uptown last week effected a contract for Gaumont British, and is selecting some Republic pictures for first run in the city.

A change in selling in Kansas City has switched Universal from the Tower, independent first-run, to the Uptown. The Tower will get major company product rejected by the circuits.

Critics To Make Best Film Award

Several weeks of discussion resulted on Tuesday in an anouncement of the organization of the New York Film Critics, for the purpose of making an annual award for the best picture released in New York during the calendar year. Awards also are to be made for the best male performance, the best feminine acting job, and the best direction.

The critics will announce their decision for 1934 releases during the first week in January. This is to be known as "The New York Film Critics' Award."

The "most readable script of the year" will also be selected by the critics for publication in book form by the publishing house of Covici Friede, said the announcement.

Reporting the organization, the New York Herald-Tribune said: "The critics make no bones of the fact that they hope to oust the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences of Hollywood from its position of chief judge of what is meritorious in films."

THEATRE OWNERS ASK CONCILIATION BOARDS AS SELF-GOVERNMENT STEP

Final Decision Would Rest with Disputants in Voluntary Curb on Unfair Practices, Exhibitors Tell President Kuykendall

Conciliation boards to mediate trade practice disputes locally, with the final decision resting with the disputants themselves and the element of compulsion entirely eliminated, thus bringing about a voluntary curb on unfair competition, is the method favored by a preponderance of exhibitors for the socalled self-government of the industry.

That was the overwhelming sentiment which Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, said he had found in his eight-weeks survey of the field in which he consulted with representative exhibitors and territorial organizations in about half of the exchange centers of the country.

Almost universally exhibitors are eager for the setting up of tribunals as soon as possible because of the ever-mounting tide of competitive problems demanding solution, declared Mr. Kuykendall, and while exhibitors informed him that they favored arbitration boards, what they really have in mind is conciliation. Arbitration, MPTOA headquarters points out, would be limited in scope in dealing with trade practices, while the exhibitors want a broad procedure capable of solving such problems as overbuying, clearance and zoning and others vital to their business.

The essential difference is that in arbitration the board renders an award based on the evidence presented and the decision is final and can be appealed to the courts only on the ground of fraud, whereas conciliation involves a less rigid procedure and the mediator is a peacemaker who makes no decision himself but assists both sides to reach an agreement, usually through concession and mutual compromise.

Interest Slight in NRA Session

At the same time it was learned that the motion picture industry, representative of the distributors and the broad mass of exhibitors, is showing only an academic interest in the industry conference called for Monday in Washington to determine whether business wants further federal regulation along NRA lines, and how it should be accomplished.

The MPTOA is not sending a representative, it is understood, and Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors this week went several steps farther and assailed the apparent motives of the conference, saying "NRA is anathema in these United States and future plans for industrial cooperation will have to come from other sources."

Distributors' home offices in New York were noncommittal on the extent of their participation in the conference. George L. Berry, the President's coordinator for industrial cooperation, has made provision for the motion picture industry to express its views in group meetings, but so far as could be learned only Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Radio-Keith-Orpheum have signified they would be represented. On the whole, the conference is being given "very weak support" by the industry, it was said in informed distribution circles.

The attitude of industry factors all along has been that if any action toward regulation is desired, it should come of the industry's own initiative, and that participation in Government code writing involves liabilities heavily overbalancing the benefits, as was demonstrated in the old NRA.

Classed as "General Services"

In the 48 groupings of the Washington conference, which will be attended by an estimated 2,500 representatives of industry and labor, theatres and motion pictures have been placed in the classification of general services, under the broad division of public services. The labor sessions, which are to be separate from management, have been aligned in 13 groups in a fashion roughly corresponding to the related industries. One division is devoted to amusements, including motion pictures and radio broadcasting among others. Labor unions will be represented 100 per cent, said Washington reports.

The Washington sessions may or may not have a bearing on the industry's activity for regulatory procedure, but regardless of the outcome Mr. Kuykendall is proceeding to consolidate his finding of field sentiment preparatory to submitting his report to the MPTOA board of directors about January 1. It is considered likely that he will sound out the distributors as well before presenting a crystallized analysis of all-inclusive industry sentiment.

Anything the Government decides on, however, will not prevent early action by the industry if the consensus favors a plan of regulation or mediation, it was said, and if a majority agreement can be had there would be no need to wait for the new selling season before switching on the machinery.

Labor Department Experience

Should conciliation be the method agreed upon, the industry would have the benefit of the accumulated experience of the United States Department of Labor in settling labor disputes.

Because of the many interrelated trade problems peculiar to the exhibition branch of the business, it is felt by many, according to MPTOA headquarters, that this procedure would be the more desirable, since its flexibility permits a wider scope than does arbitration in dealing with both sides of a dispute. By way of example, it is pointed out that grievances over clearance and zoning and giveaways, two of the acknowledged major problems, frequently are consequences of each other. Under arbitration, as under the former NRA code boards, each would be considered as a separate and unrelated problem and the decisions would be made individually. In conciliation, however, the two would be treated as cause and effect, and the dispute could be resolved by one exhibitor agreeing to shorten his clearance if the other abandoned giveways.

Home Rule Wanted Instead of National Appeal Board; Only Slight Interest in Washington NRA Conference Monday

It was conceded that not all grievances would permit of settlement nor all unfair trade practices of being curbed in this manner, but in behalf of this procedure it was said that it would go a long way toward preventing involved and costly litigation or Government interference.

To explain the procedure further, conciliation is mediation between parties in controversy in order to settle or prevent disputes, and there is no previous agreement between the disputants to abide by the decision of a third party. Its aim is to reconcile, and as such is held more applicable in handling trade practice conflicts.

As to how enforcement could be obtained of a voluntary agreement reached through this method, it was said that pressure of public opinion would be the main reliance, and it was emphasized that no exhibitor would want to be branded a "welcher" in the eyes of brother exhibitors.

Mr. Kuykendall's survey also determined that exhibitors want "home rule," as distinct from the settlement of grievances by a national board or an appeal board in New York. The majority also favors voluntary regulation of unfair practices without resort to the courts or to outside agencies such as the Federal Trade Commission. Litigation, it was felt by many, is no solution because judges and juries are ignorant of trade problems, and Government intervention invariably is cumbersome and inept and seldom fruitful of results.

Fancied Grievances

While the need for conciliation machinery is increasing in the field as complaints multiply, it was said that experience with local boards under the NRA and the former arbitration boards in particular showed that many conflicts are due to misunderstanding or lack of knowledge of all the facts, and that many grievances are more fancied than real.

Overbuying is now regarded as the greatest cause of controversy, said an MPTOA spokesman. Any number of such cases, however, it was said, do not concern, strictly speaking, the purchase of an excessive quantity of product, but frequently the contracting for a quality of product that an opposition theatre operator wants even though he may have sufficient for his needs. In this category was placed the St. Louis anti-trust action in which the Government recently was defeated in attempts to convict Warner, Paramount and RKO, involving as it did product which the Fanchon and Marco group was unable to get because of contractual commitments with the Warner theatres.

Myers Issues Warning

Reminiscent of its stand during the drafting of the NRA code, Allied States Association, through Abram F. Myers, its general counsel, this week warned that "any effort by the 'Big Eight' executives or in their interest to wrap the industry into a package and hand it over to those executives or their subsidized satellites will meet with the same resistance that greeted a similar effort under the NRA."

Mr. Myers was referring to the industry conference called for Monday in Washington by Coordinator Berry, and added, "The eagle quivers—feebly." There is no reason to believe, said Mr. Myers, that anyone in the Administration favored this procedure "except Mr. Berry and a multitude of federal employees who look to a revival of NRA for their retention on the payroll."

Further, Mr. Myers went on record, "Despite his disclaimers it is evident that Mr. Berry hoped by his stratagem to restore the NRA with himself as boss. The NRA staff has never forgiven the supreme court for its decision or business for failing to fall into chaos as a result thereof. Business men are suspicious of the kind of governmental cooperation which puts inept, inexperienced and ambitious nonentities in charge of their industries. There will be enough drum-thumping to save the face of the Administration, but that anything concrete will emerge from this revival of Johnsonism is unthinkable.

Urges Voluntary Action

"While no thoughtful person can support the Berry movement, it is still a matter of regret that industries, such as the motion picture industry, cannot rid themselves of unfair and uneconomic practices by voluntary action and within the limits of existing law. All that is required is an impersonal consideration of the problems plus the will to cooperate.

"One can not but mourn the many brave expeditions into the realms of voluntary cooperation that have foundered on the rocks of selfishness. But these failures have left their scars and it is doubtful if any ambitious plan can be launched without reopening the old wounds. As said by Allied following the collapse of the NRA, whatever is accomplished along this line must begin in the territory—at the bottom; must be limited in scope, and must come to the New York executives with a record of accomplishment before they can be expected to show any interest in it."

Word came from the capital that industry representatives regarded Mr. Berry's ultimate objectives as rather hazy, for the plans seem to have shifted from what it had been thought would have been an indication that the Government would take the initiative for the revival of the salvagable parts of the NRA, to what now appears to be the saddling upon industry of the responsibility for producing its own plan. Mr. Berry has plainly indicated that a permanent council of industry and labor is to be set up to deal with their problems.

Other reports were that despite Mr. Berry's protestations that the business conference is not a move to revive the NRA, a new bill with that purpose in view is ready for submission to Congress in January should business show signs of wanting it.

Executive Approval Reported

It was said that President Roosevelt had been advised of the basic provisions of the measure and had approved it in principle. The provisions would restate the power of Congress to regulate interstate commerce and add activities which "substantially affect" interstate commerce; permit application of voluntary codes to businesses engaged in such commerce, and forbid most types of price-fixing in codes.

Designed to comply with the supreme court's findings when nullifying the Blue Eagle last May, this may be pushed as an Administration measure if substantial sentiment develops at the conference in favor of a modified form of industrial regulation.

Edward Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, pleaded for industrywide cooperation against unfair and discriminatory laws and taxes, in an address to exhibitors and exchangemen in St. Louis, Monday. He said the industry has many problems which should be solved from within. He asked all to support the movement sponsored by the MPTOA.

Bara to Mickey In Film Collection

The Museum of Modern Art Film Library has acquired three additional groups of films: one group from Twentieth Century-Fox, composed of 13 pictures produced from 1915 to 1933; a group of animated cartoons from Walt Disney, including "Plane Crazy", the first Mickey Mouse, which has never been released commercially, the first Silly Symphony, "Skeleton Dance", and the first cartoon in Technicolor, "Flowers and Trees"; and the LeRoy collection, an assemblage of motion picture memorabilia which includes old and rare books, photographs, slides, manuscripts, articles, letters and documents relating to the early days of the films, "stills" of motion pictures made in this country and abroad in the 90's and 1900's, and more than 350 films, short and long subjects, produced here and abroad between 1893 and 1910, all of them said to be rare and many of them extremely important as landmarks in the development of the motion picture.

The films from Twentieth Century-Fox are as follows:

A Fool There Was (Theda Bara), 1914.
Carmen (Theda Bara), 1915.
A Daughter of the Gods (Annette Kellerman), 1916.
Cleopatra (Theda Bara), 1917.
Riders of the Purple Sage, 1918.
Sky High (Tom Mix), 1921.
The Iron Horse, 1924.
Three Bad Men, 1926.
Sunrise, 1927.
Movietone Newsreel (Mussolini, Shaw, Tilden), 1927.
Sex Life of the Polyp (Benchley), 1928.
Cavalcade, 1933.
Special Cavalcade film, not issued commercially, taken of the London stage production.

Walt Disney Productions gave the following films:

First animated cartoon made by Walt Disney, produced in 1920 for the Newman Theatre in Kansas City.
Plane Crazy, 1928. First Mickey Mouse.
Steamboat Willie, 1928. First Mickey Mouse in sound.
Skeleton Dance, 1929. First Silly Symphony.
Flowers and Trees, 1932. First cartoon in Technicolor.
The Band Concert, 1935. First Mickey Mouse in Technicolor.

In addition, Mr. Disney has presented the Film Library with material selected to show step by step the various processes in the production of Mickey Mouse and Silly Symphony cartoons. The material includes the original rough story sketch; the scenario suggestions; the scenario changes into final form; scene layouts; completed scenes of animation with exposure sheets, music sheets, and the corresponding completed scenes with backgrounds; and painted celluloid sheets ready for the camera. Two scenes are followed through completely even to clippings from the finished film.

The LeRoy collection was acquired through the courtesy of Mrs. LeRoy, widow of Jean A. LeRoy, American film pioneer, who assembled the collection during a long period of years. Foremost in interest in the collection are negatives and prints of the famous "trick" films of the Frenchman Georges Méliès, whose "highly original and imaginative productions from 1896 onward marked the transition from the earliest foreign motion pictures of scenic views or simple action to the story-telling era," according to the Museum, The Méliès films acquired include the noted "Trip to the Moon" and "Arabian Nights", fantastic film stories produced with many camera and scenic tricks. Other notable old films in the LeRoy collection are the first pictures ever taken out of the kinetoscope and shown on a screen: "The Execution of Mary, Queen of Scots" (1893) and "Washing the Baby;" short reels showing Houdini performing his escape tricks; street scenes and news reels of the 90's, such as the inauguration of President McKinley; early comedies and melodramas; and films showing celebrities of 30 and 40 years ago.

Beginning January 1936, the Museum of Modern Art Film Library will circulate selected programs of noteworthy motion pictures to museums, colleges and study groups throughout the country.

INDUSTRY IN THE MIDDLE OF BATTLE OF HOLLYWOOD STUDIO UNIONS

IATSE Officials Cease Hostilities Pending Discussion with Paramount Executives Dispute Over Union Production Crews

Theatre owners the country over opened their show shops on Monday morning in a state of high speculation over the cause and net results of a sudden emergency order that had been telegraphed over the weekend by the national headquarters of the IATSE projectionists' union to locals in the field to be ready to strike at a moment's notice. The order was especially directed at Paramount's farflung system of theatres and at those independent houses that play Paramount product, and came as the climax to a minor dispute over the union status of but three members of a Paramount production crew.

The strike did flicker on and off in a few hours in Paramount's theatres throughout Illinois, causing closings in that state for a few hours over the weekend, but for a time it threatened to spread nationally. However, officials of the International Association of Theatrical Stage Employees and Moving Picture Operators agreed to cease hostilities pending a discussion in New York with Paramount executives and a talk with all major producers Friday.

IATSE union members in the field were in the dark at first over the cause of the sudden flare-up, as much as were exhibitors. An investigation disclosed that it had emanated in the bitter fight in Hollywood between the IATSE and the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers over their jurisdictional status in California's studios. Both are affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Industry leaders in New York reacted unfavorably to the sudden attack and expressed the opinion that the fight, purely jurisdictional between the two rival unions, once again "sandwiches" the industry in the middle of a conflict not of its making. It was construed as a move by the IATSE to again return that organization to its position of one time power in studio unionism, a position which it lost some several years ago when, during a Hollywood cameramen's strike, there was formed a competitive union that became identified with the IBEW. The IATSE apparently has been smarting ever since under the conditions which were created.

The theatre strike threat immediately renewed the IATSE versus IBEW intra union jurisdiction dispute, and is directly attributable to Paramount's demand that all members of its "Thirteen Hours by Air" production crew who were affiliated with the IATSE resign from that union before accompanying the unit on location to New York. Only three crew members were involved: Dewey Wrigley, cameraman; Neil Buckner, assistant cameraman, and Mike Crowley, stage carpenter.

The dispute between the two factions first flared in the open some two years ago at the time of the Columbia studio strike. Replacing IATSE strikers at that plant, the IBEW got a foothold with the producers and at the same time secured a contract to supply electrical labor for all of the large studios for a long period.

Meanwhile the jurisdictional dispute was brought to the attention of the American Federation of Labor for adjustment, but the AFL apparently did nothing but "stall" the issue. Neither side making headway with the Federation, both began accumulating large sums for "war chests" for the inevitable major battle, which now appears to be in the offing.

Frequent skirmishes between the rivals have occurred of late, usually involving independent producers, with which neither union held labor contracts. The IBEW attempted to negotiate agreements with the independents, but the IATSE held off, because, it felt, the independents planned to try to beat down wage scales by pitting one union against the other.

Independents' Solution in Sight

However, the independents' troubles are expected to be dissolved shortly on the signing of a contract with either one of the other unions, depending upon the outcome of the present jurisdictional fracas. This decision by the independents is the direct result of their several squabbles with either or both of the unions which have cost the producers considerable.

Recently, in connection with the longshoremen's strike along the California coast, the IBEW added fuel to the jurisdictional fire by issuing temporary union working permits to union cameramen, "grip" workers and property men who came in contact with the longshoremen on seaport production locations. The IATSE, seeking the support of the Federation of Labor, refused to issue such working permits, as an aid to the longshoremen strikers.

Other typical skirmishes between the IATSE and the IBEW were the replacement of IBEW men by IATSE crews on Maury Cohen's production that was in work in a Los Angeles theatre, and, again when the IBEW issued working permits at Laguna, Cal., when the Halperins were shooting on location and the longshoremen were on strike. The IATSE again refused such permits to cameramen because the Talisman Studio in Hollywood had been supplying non-union workers to the Halperins.

The IBEW then declared what virtually started open warfare. Its Hollywood officials made known their intentions to replace IATSE men in any strike condition. The IATSE retaliated by issuing a similar order.

Fight Prompted by the Operators Union's Dispute with Electrical Workers Closes Theatres in Illinois for a Time

During all of this time, George Brown, head of the IATSE, has been intrenching the position of his union, lining up solidarity outside of Hollywood, in exhibition, for just such a dispute as the latest Paramount tussle. Taking this as a cue for the opening of a real war, the Brown-IATSE interests this week ordered all electrical workers of the IBEW who are employed in theatres throughout the country where IATSE projectionists are in charge, to be replaced immediately by IATSE electricians.

Federation Undetermined on Stand

The Federation of Labor's position is undetermined at the moment, but there is a keen realization in AFL quarters in Washington that the fight is a "hot potato," and that a decision from it favoring either side would result in open rebellion by the unfavored union against the Federation. The AFL is now nurturing the slim hope that the conflicting groups will settle the dispute amicably among themselves.

George Brown's wire to IATSE locals to be ready to quit projecting at Paramount theatres and Paramount pictures in other theatres came like a thunderbolt last Thursday. He declared that the company's action in forcing the resignation from the union of the three production crew members was unwarranted.

The IATSE then assumed jurisdictional right over all union workers in all theatres, a right that was said to have been given to it at the recent AFL convention in Chicago.

"IBEW men have already been cleared out of Chicago," declared Mr. Browne, and he intimated that similar action will be taken elsewhere. It was taken, immediately, theatre owners in many places receiving word over the weekend that the IATSE will no longer permit members of the IBEW to be employed in any theatre in the United States over which the IATSE has jurisdiction through its projectionists or stage hands. Involved are IBEW maintenance men and electricians.

Chicago theatres got the first intimation that all was not well in theatre unionism when, on Sunday, the screens of all of the Paramount-Balaban and Katz six theatres in the Loop district and 100 theatres in the Paramount affiliated Great States circuit in downtown Illinois, as well as Paramount's theatres in Iowa and Nebraska, suddenly went dark. An hour or two later, the films began to flicker again in some houses, when the midwest locals received sudden orders "from Washington" to return to work.

There had been no advance announcement of the walkout and the managers of the Chicago and suburban theatres in that area, finding their machines unmanned, refunded

ALLIED CHARGES ST. LOUIS JURYMEN WERE 'IN A FOG' AND WERE 'SWAYED'

Myers Says Companies Would "Commit Gravest Folly" Interpreting Verdict as License to 'Exterminate Independents'

That the St. Louis federal court jury which acquitted Warner Brothers, RKO and Paramount of criminal-indictment conspiracy charges in the Harry Arthur-Fanchon and Marco anti-trust case was "in a fog," and was "swayed" by the courtroom performance of defense counsel, "and not by the facts and law," is "perfectly evident" to Abram Myers, who, as general counsel and board chairman of Allied States Association, this week urged independent exhibitors similarly situated not to be "downcast." On the contrary, he added, they should "take heart from the vigorous statement of the law and analysis of the facts by District Judge Moore."

Await Appointment of Judge

Meanwhile, both the defendants and the Department of Justice were expecting daily the appointment by Judge Kimbrough Stone, presiding justice of the United States circuit court of appeals, of another judge to preside in place of Judge Moore, voluntarily disqualified, at the hearing of the Justice Department's application for a preliminary injunction to restrain Warners, Paramount and RKO from continuing to refuse first run motion pictures to Fanchon and Marco's Ambassador, Missouri and New Grand Central theatres, in St. Louis. It was on the complaint of F and M that films were unavailable to these three theatres that the Department filed the original criminal-indictment action.

Judge C. B. Farris, who retired from full-time service in the United States circuit court of appeals, on November 30th, is to date the most likely candidate to hear the equity complaint.

Explaining in an official statement from Allied's headquarters at Washington that sufficient time has elapsed since the acquittal verdict to permit of a review of the St. Louis proceedings and formulation of conclusions in reference thereto, Commissioner Myers now charges that the "numerous high-pressure" lawyers of the defendants, led by former Senator James A. Reed, "resorted to every known device to sway the jury regardless of the pertinent and relevant testimony"; "attacked persons not parties to the transactions in question"; "attacked government counsel, the Attorney General and the Department of Justice"; "and rode the court."

"Masterpieces of Invective"

"The closing arguments were masterpieces of invective and it is perfectly evident that the jury was swayed by this performance and not by the facts and law as revealed in the judge's charge."

Russell Hardy, special assistant to Attorney General Homer Cummings, who represented the United States Government, "was overpowered at the end by sheer force of numbers and eloquence," charged Commissioner Myers.

ALLIED AS SUCH WILL NOT PRODUCE

"It is a keystone of Allied policy to encourage new and independent production in order to relieve the film shortage in congested areas and to neutralize the monopolistic power of the 'Big Eight.' I assure you, however, that Allied as an organization, has no plan to engage in and is not contemplating engaging in the production of motion pictures."

So declared Abram F. Myers, general counsel and board chairman of Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors, in response to an explanation of the considerable to-do in the press in recent weeks about a reputed plan of Allied to enter motion picture production.

That Allied is interested somehow in a cooperative production plan for its members is common Broadway gossip, but, evidently, in view of Mr. Myers' explanation, it appears that the plan is not Allied-sponsored, but, rather, comes from outside of its ranks. The idea still is in the discussion stage.

To aid in the legislative campaign expected when Congress convenes this winter, it has been decided by Allied to hold the annual meeting of the board in Washington in January, on a date to be determined.

Allied this week started an inquiry in reference to the plans of the government to give employment to idle actors by giving shows throughout the country. A report will be made later.

"In view of the importance of the case and the obvious efforts of the defendants to influence the jury by crowding the court room with political and legal luminaries, it would not have been beneath the dignity of the Attorney General or the Assistant General in charge of anti-trust prosecutions to attend the trial, at least for a brief period," Mr. Myers said.

Denies Precedent Established

A study of the record, explained Allied's chief counsel, confirmed the view that the outcome has not changed the law one iota and that it does not establish a precedent which would prove embarrassing in other prosecutions by the Governnment or in efforts of exhibitors to protect themselves in "freeze-out" cases. Contrariwise, "if the charge of Judge Moore has any significance it is to strengthen the law in its application to conspiracies to withhold product from independent exhibitors and give it to the affiliated chains."

The following quotation from the charge to the jury by Judge Moore is cited by Allied as coinciding with "previous conceptions of the law and exemplifies the principles on which the indictment was based."

Judge C. B. Faris, Retired from Full-Time Service in Appeals Court, Favored to Hear Argument of Equity Complaint

" 'You are instructed that while any one of the defendants, either with or without cause, could lawfully have refused to sell motion picture film to the three theatres in question, that it is, nevertheless, unlawful and illegal for any two defendants, either with or without cause, to conspire together to refuse to sell film to these three theatres.

" 'Since the evidence discloses and it is not denied that the defendants did not sell their regular 1934-1935 supply of film to these three theatres, you will, therefore, only have to determine whether the defendants refused to sell this film pursuant to a common design or common purpose or common plan or mutual understanding.

" 'In this respect, any two corporations may conspire, even though one is a wholly owned subsidiary of the other. Thus defendants Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., and First National Pictures, Inc., although all of the stock of the latter company is owned by the former, may, through different officers, conspire to refuse to furnish their respective pictures.' "

"Other Cases Rising," He Says

"This," in the opinion of Allied's Counsel Myers, "is the law as defined by Judge Moore in its application to a typical freeze-out case. Cases similar to that involved in the trial are springing up all over the United States. A chain notifies the distributors that it is building or will operate a theatre at a given place. The distributors then reserve their product in that place for the chain. It is unthinkable that this can happen so often, with such uniformity of results, except by understanding and agreement between two or more legal entities. When that exists there is a conspiracy and a violation of the law."

Mr. Myers further charged: "There was a vast amount of conflicting testimony as to alleged declarations tending to show the existence of a conspiracy. The witnesses Harry Arthur and Jack Partington on the one hand, and the defendants Herman Starr and Gradwell Sears on the other, collided head-on in their testimony.

"The analysis by Judge Moore tended strongly to support the prosecution's view of the evidence. In fact, his charge left no room for doubt that had he been deciding the case, instead of merely instructing the jury, he would have held with the Government. But the decision rested with the jury; they received the case in a fog; and the outcome should not deter either the Government or any sorely pressed exhibitor in future cases of the same general character.

"Certainly any attempt by the Department of Justice to use this verdict as an excuse for not enforcing the law in other like cases would be most reprehensible. It is to be hoped, however, that in close cases the Department of Justice will proceed civilly rather than criminally.

"The major companies," Mr. Myers concluded, "have never been well advised in matters of anti-trust law, as is evidenced by the multiplicity of prosecutions and private suits to which they have been subjected. They will commit the gravest folly if they interpret the verdict of the St. Louis jurymen as conferring on them a license to proceed with the extermination of independent exhibitors by contracts, conspiracies and understandings to supply films only to their affiliated chains and deny it to the independents."

New Judge to Preside

After he has disposed of the petition for the temporary injunction, the new judge to be appointed by Justice Stone will also preside at the fuller hearing to determine whether the injunction, if granted, shall be made permanent.

In pressing for the injunction in the equity case the Department of Justice, through Assistant Attorney General Hardy, has taken the position that the "not guilty" verdict returned November 11th has no bearing on the equity proceeding, notwithstanding that the issues involved in both cases are almost identical, though the time covered by the equity case is more than a year longer.

The necessity for calling in an outside judge arose on November 23rd when Judge Moore, acting on his own motion, voluntarily disqualified himself and declined to hear the equity case, after the defendants had charged him with prejudice.

Judge Faris Agreed Upon

Judge Faris has been agreed to as acceptable by attorneys for the Department of Justice and the defendants, and will in all likelihood preside at the trial provided that he is willing to sidetrack his retirement from duty to that extent.

Mr. Hardy is seeking to obtain immediate action by the court through the filing of a personal affidavit of a Fanchon & Marco official, probably Harry C. Arthur, Jr., vice-president and general manager, supported by a transcript of the evidence in the six weeks' anti-trust conspiracy case.

An Outstanding Jurist

Both as judge of the United States district court for the Eastern District of Missouri, and later as a member of the United States circuit court of appeals for this circuit, Judge Faris proved an outstanding jurist. His name was suggested at the conference by representatives of the Department of Justice and attorneys for the defendant corporations agreed to his designation by Judge Stone provided that he is willing to serve.

Should Judge Faris decline to accept, it is possible that Judge Stone will name one of the four judges from the Minnesota district. They are Judges Bell, Joyce, Molyneaux and Norbye. Other jurists mentioned at the conference with Judge Stone included District Judges Dewey of Nebraska and Munger of Nebraska.

While the question of whether a temporary injunction should issue probably will be quickly disposed of by the judge finally called in by Judge Stone, it is certain that the hearing on whether such an order should be made permanent will take considerable time. If that stage in the equity case is ever reached it is possible that the six weeks' record in the misdemeanor case may be shattered.

American Display Moves Office

American Display Company Monday moved its office to the Paramount annex in New York in order to gain 15,000 square feet of additional space. "The well known depression is definitely showing signs of taking a welcome farewell," says Charles L. Casanave, general manager.

Metal Tape Recording of Sound Considered

Possibility of recording sound on metal tape, to permit of continuous recording of 50 to 100 hours, is being studied, to make possible for example the taking down for history of the complete account of a famous court trial, and even the Congressional Record, may be reduced to sound, said Captain John G. Bradley, chairman of the Film Preservation Committee, the National Archives, Washington, in a recent address before the Pan American Institute of Geography and History.

More than five million feet of motion picture film is now in the possession of the Government, Mr. Bradley estimated, a million of this being of the World War. Concrete vaults have been provided at the National Archives in anticipation of transfer of film to that building and for future footage, he added.

Calls Censorship Helps 'Ridiculous'

While there were producers guilty of offending good taste in the days before censorship, Harlan Thompson, Paramount scenario writer and former newspaper man, believes "they were in the minority. Now the rest of the industry has been made to suffer for it and the methods of censorship have become ridiculous," Mr. Thompson said the other day while visiting Kansas City.

Each of the boards of censorship before which a picture must go before it is released must "take out enough to justify its existence," he said, adding, "you can imagine how the picture may look by the time it has passed the fourth board."

"The whole idea of censorship as it is now worked out in practice," Mr. Thompson asserted, "is based on the false assumption that you can distinguish the moral from the immoral according to a set rule. A picture may be very immoral in tone and yet comply with all the arbitrary standards set up by censors. Contrarily, one may be moral and use many forbidden words and situations."

The situation is absurd and is making it extremely difficult to write a screen play that "means anything," Mr. Thompson continued. Censors might be "trying to force us to write entirely to children. When we write a mature story we are constantly walking the tight-rope among all the taboos that any number of professional reformers have been able to conjure up for the support of their professions."

Yet, Mr. Thompson believes the trend is gradually toward better and more adult films. He regards it as a matter of educating the public. "Pictures good at the box office today would have been considered too highbrow five years ago.

"There is a fairly distinct line between the good and bad picture. The worst 'flops' are pictures that tried to push ahead too fast, those too good to be appreciated generally. Yet frequently the 'flop' does its part in educating the public, and general appreciation moves up just that much."

Unions' Rivalry Hurts Exhibitors

admissions to many thousands of patrons. The Loop houses remained dark for only 20 minutes, but the Paramount theatres and those of its affiliates elsewhere in the territory closed for the night. Principally effected were the Illinois towns of Elgin, Aurora, Joliet, Chicago Heights, Blue Island, Evanston, Waukegan, Peoria, Springfield and Bloomington.

Monday "Zero Hour" Called Off

Indications that the battle and strike would be carried to exhibition at large appeared Sunday, and a conference was arranged in Chicago for Monday night between Mr. Browne and Paramount's home office executives who were in that city on a mid-season sales convention. The "zero hour" was set for six o'clock Monday night, and home office circuit officials in New York began to "dig in" as the situation became tense. Just as suddenly as it started, however, the attack against the theatres was called off after Mr. Browne talked with Paramount's president, John Edward Otterson, and an agreement was made that no strikes, walkouts or other action will be taken pending a conference between Mr. Browne and the heads of all producing companies, in New York.

Meanwhile the IATSE appears to be going after IBEW men in the theatres with earnestness. Five IBEW men were discharged on Monday from the Fox theatre in Detroit at the insistence of the IATSE and were immediately replaced by IATSE maintenance members. All of Fox West Coast, Warner, RKO and other Los Angeles theatres were ordered to similarly discharge IBEW electricians or maintenance men for IATSE workers. The same situation prevailed in St. Louis and in many other large cities and was expected to grow throughout the week as the IATSE extends its attack against the IBEW.

Colombia Duties Cut On Film, Equipment

Colombian import duties on American motion pictures and equipment are to be reduced under the reciprocal trade agreement signed in Washington on September 15 and made public last week by the State Department in Washington.

The treaty is to become effective thirty days after the exchange of ratifications at Bogota, which has not yet occurred.

An analysis of the concessions to be granted by Colombia shows that the rate on prints is to be reduced from 1.60 pesos to 0.60 peso for gross kilo, as is the rate on projectors and parts, a reduction of 62½ per cent. The rates on films for the popularization of scientific or educational matter is to be reduced from 1.60 pesos to 0.25 peso per gross kilo, a cut of 84.4 per cent.

HOLLYWOOD NEEDS UNDERSTANDING OF FOREIGN LIFE, DECLARES HERRON

MPPDA Foreign Manager Proposes Americans Send Resident Representatives Abroad to Learn Reactions to Pictures

Advice of Powers' Highest Ranking Men at Washington Valuable; State Department's Cooperation Is Commended

Major Frederick L. Herron, troubleshooter for the industry in foreign matters, said this week that much of the worry the American motion picture companies run into overseas is due to lack of understanding of foreign life, temperament and traditions.

Returning from a two-months' survey in Spain, France and England during which he conferred with film company representatives and government officials, Major Herron, who is manager of the foreign department of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, reported that while film importations are decreasing because of the multiplicity of restrictions, the world prestige of American pictures is unimpaired, and he ascribed it to their superior audience appeal.

There are two kinds of trouble that make the lot of a motion picture company a difficult one abroad, said Major Herron, naming these as quotas, dubbing, tariffs and the like, and offense taken over film content which hurts the sensitive pride of the nations.

It devolves upon the American producer to take pains to insure that nothing creeps into a picture that might cause repercussions, the Major believed. As one remedy, he suggested that Americans sent abroad as resident representatives go out among the people, learn their reactions to American films, and learn why our industry is quite likely to encounter some difficult situations if we do not guard more closely against possible offense. This is particularly true, he said, of countries which take deep pride in their traditions. Intimate knowledge of a country's life and background, he added, would qualify a film representative to advise his home office on scripts about which there may be some doubt.

Usually Referred to MPPDA

While treatments which are questionable with respect to foreign reaction usually are referred to the Hays office for a check, this is not always done, continued Major Herron, and once in a great while it happens that something a studio considers entirely innocent slips by and causes all sort of havoc that could have been prevented.

In case of extreme doubt, approval is sought from the highest ranking representative of a foreign government in Washington, and while the necessity for such advice is rare, invariably this procedure has worked out satisfactorily, as was the case with MGM's "The Good Earth" (in production) and Paramount's "Farewell to Arms."

The present wave of unrest heightened by the military movements is tending toward the imposition of more restrictions, Major Herron went on, and the concomitant nationalistic feeling is making Europeans all the more sensitive to the manner in which Americans deal with them on the screen.

MUSSOLINI FILM SCENES DELETED IN PORTUGAL

To avoid public demonstrations, film censors in Portugal have been ordered by the government to cut out sections of news and war films which show Premier Benito Mussolini in speech or action, according to reports. However, the government has showed a lack of partisanship by ordering the fad of school children of wearing small Ethiopian flags in their buttonholes discontinued.

Major Herron said that not infrequently it is found that while governments as such are friendly to American film concerns, there may be in key positions three or four officials who, actuated solely by politics, are able to force through drastic import limitations benefiting weak domestic industries at the expense of the foreign companies.

The Major said the American companies may thank their lucky stars that Uncle Sam is willing to intercede for them as much as he does, and more so than for many other industries which are substantial exporters. He gave a great deal of credit in this connection to the State Department and our embassies abroad.

"The Government is behind us not only as an American industry, but because it thinks we are right," said Major Herron, who is a graduate from the consular service and holds decorations from several governments for distinguished service in time of war.

Fares Well in Treaties

"The Department of State will back us up to a certain extent, but there are limits to which it can go. There are domestic matters on which we have no ground to object."

He said that in the half dozen reciprocal trade treaties ratified to date, motion pictures have been included while other important industries have not been as successful in gaining that protection.

"A week after the commercial treaty with Cuba went into effect, that country passed higher duties for all products not included," he continued. "Motion pictures escaped because they were in the treaty. All exporting industries seek this protection."

Industry to be Heard

Twice defeated, the stringent French film regulations are due to come up before the Chamber of Deputies in the near future, although probably in a revised form, and the Major commented that "it is no different from any other legislative proposals which are likely to be revived after rejection." Bitterly protested by the French industry, the decree was first defeated six months ago and more recently its passage was blocked in the cabinet. Major Herron pointed out that the industry would be given an opportunity to be heard in Parliament on the new legislation, whereas the proposals before the cabinet would have become law by edict. So drastic was the proposed decree that had it passed it virtually would have put American companies in France out of business.

A dubbing measure pending for the last six months in Beligium is sponsored by a few small companies who seek to have American shorts dubbed in that country, said the Major. Films brought into Beligium are now dubbed in France.

Contrary to widespread reports, Major Herron said he did not believe that retaliations taken by Italy against countries imposing sanctions because of the Ethiopian campaign would increase Italian imports of American films.

Netherlands Group Acts on Narrow Film

The members of the Nederlandsche Bioscoop-Bond, when obtaining the rights to a film of normal width (35 mm.) shall be under obligation to obtain simultaneously the rights to the narrow width (narrower than 35 mm.), while, as soon as a film shall have been rented out for exhibition in a theatre of a member of the Nederlandsche Bioscoop-Bond the film renter shall be under obligation to guarantee the Nederlandsche Bioscoop-Bond that without the written consent of the managing committee no narrow-width film shall be obtainable in the Netherlands otherwise than from the film renter and therefore shall not be exhibited in the Netherlands without the cooperation of the renter.

Under the agreement, members of the Nederlandsche Bioscoop-Bond shall be prohibited from obtaining or exhibiting a narrow-width film (narrower than 35 mm.) without having simultaneously secured the rights to the normal width without having hired that normal film.

The Nederlandsche Bioscoop-Bond is an organization of all the Netherlands film producers, film importers, film renters and exhibitors.

France Film Changes Name

France Film Company has changed its name to the Franco American Film Corporation, with Robert Hurel continuing as president. The company plans to re-release "Three Musketeers," in French, starting next week.

Late Buying Is Holding Releases

The late buying on the part of major circuits this year has brought about a complex situation for New York exchange managers, and some of them are being virtually compelled to book away early releases of this season's product until deals are consummated with leading independent circuits.

In a few instances some circuits have not started negotiations while in others conferences on work sheets were held for the first time last week.

Several of the branch managers look upon the failure by some prominent exhibitors to start negotiating deals with suspicion, but the circuit men claim this happens to be a mere coincidence and not a concerted action.

The Skouras interests are reported to be shying clear of Paramount, United Artists and Columbia, but Edward Peskay, film buyer for the 50 houses, says he has had preliminary talks with Moe Streimer of U. A. and with Edward Schnitzer and Nat Cohn of Columbia. He also states E. L. Alperson is handling the Paramount deal with Neil F. Agnew. Scouting the reports, Mr. Peskay added, "We buy everyone's product."

Joseph M. Seider of Prudential has declared he has brought several U. A. pictures on an individual basis and is now working on a deal with Columbia. Mr. Seider has been linked with Casey & Wheeler and Century circuits in a reputed move not to buy Paramount, Columbia and U. A. pictures.

These rumors are said to have spread because of Prudential's pool with Skouras in Huntington, Riverhead, Floral Park and Bellaire, L. I. Century has a booking and operating arrangement with Skouras in Hempstead, Freeport, Lynbrook, Valley Stream and Woodside, L. I.

Several small independents have been able to get exchanges to clear pictures in quick order as a result of the pending negotiations. Branch managers hold that by the time the circuits sign up the pictures will be too old, and hence are releasing them as scheduled.

Plan Award for Best Jewish Picture or Play

The Day, Yiddish daily newspaper in New York, has established an annual award for the film or play best interpreting Jewish life, it has been announced by David Shapiro, publisher of the newspaper.

The award will be in the form of a plaque, and will be based on the sincerity and success with which the film or play interprets some phase of current Jewish life. Special emphasis is placed on the significance of the production as a force awakening new interest in creative Jewish endeavor and stimulating American Jewry to greater effort in perpetuation of Jewish culture and Jewish tradition.

15 "MILLION DOLLAR" FILMS SET A RECORD

Studios Reported Expanding "Prestige Pictures" Plans on Basis of 40-50% Rental Gain

Declaring that gross rentals accruing to producers increase from 40 to 50 per cent on "big money" pictures, over the rentals earned on so called "average" box office productions, Edwin Schallert, Hollywood newspaper correspondent, writes in the Los Angeles Times that the studios are expanding their plans in the production of "prestige" pictures, and points to the production so far this season of 15 features costing $1,000,000—"an unequaled record in any year since the depression, and seldom if ever rivaled during any twelve month period before that."

"Even in the hey-day of the silents such a record would have been chanted far and wide," said Mr. Schallert. "Outstanding among costly pictures is 'Mutiny on the Bounty' which is rated as having totaled $1,800,000. Naturally in these totals exploitation of the picture is also included and that often runs into considerable money. 'Midsummer Night's Dream', which had a spectacular campaign with the road-showing and all, is a typical example, and is rated at $1,580,000.

Other Large Budget Films

"'Shoot the Chutes' starring Eddie Cantor, which is in work, looms as a top-notcher in respect to each outlay. Three different companies have been kept at work almost constantly on, respectively, story, dance and gag sequences. There is talk that the film will run well over $1,000,000.

"'Tale of Two Cities,' 'The Good Earth,' which will be at least partly completed before January 1, 'Anthony Adverse,' 'The Green Pastures,' which may start this year, 'Romeo and Juliet,' 'Little Lord Fauntleroy' will run into large money, and already completed and tucked away among the 'heavy costers,' are 'Crusades,' 'China Seas,' 'Becky Sharp.' Also 'Captain Blood' except for possible retakes.

"Bad Luck" Films Not Included

"Though not of the most spectacular order, 'Thanks a Million' and 'Colleen' because of personalities, 'Anything Goes,' 'Klondike Lou,' 'The Trail of a Lonesome Pine' due to color, 'Follow the Fleet' and 'Peter Ibbetson' are rated expensive. Just plain bad luck pictures are not included."

"Records of the early part of the year pale completely in contrast to what is going on now," said Mr. Schallert. "MGM, for example, is to duplicate the agricultural regions of Northern China at a huge outlay for 'The Good Earth' in San Fernando Valley. They will have their own water system, and re-create many Chinese devices used in farming.

"The picture, so long proposed, may even surpass 'Mutiny on the Bounty' in investment. The cast, because of the many native Chinese used, will be less expensive. But more time will be required, and that can be an enormous item. The same holds true of 'The Green Pastures' which will have to be produced with extreme care.

"Producers are no longer holding back on these larger productions," he concluded. "They often exceed the original budget. The idea is to bring in a true prestige film, and if there is any overshooting of the financial mark the European revenue is expected to offset that. A big picture always has a better chance in the international field."

Trans Lux Is Seeking New Listing of Common Stock

An application for the registration of 60,000 shares of $1 common stock on the New York Curb Exchange has been filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission in Washington by the Trans-Lux Daylight Picture Screen Corporation.

The issue is in addition to the 785,160 shares for which registration was asked last May.

The company's statement shows that the only holder of 10 per cent or more of the stock is Rowe & Company, New York, which has 170,577 shares.

The salaries of officers as reported by the company, include Percy N. Furber, president, $32,120; Leslie E. Thompson, president of a subsidiary, $10,360; Percival E. Furber, vice-president, $5,200, and Robert L. Daine, vice-president, $3,780.

The company has two fully owned subsidiaries, Trans Lux Movies Corporation and Canadian Trans Lux Corporation, and one partly owned, Trans Lux Movie Ticker Corporation.

Officers' holdings of Trans Lux stock included 25,330 shares by Percy N. Furber, 6,950 shares by George H. Robinson, 1,503 by Arthur C. Payne, vice-president; 1,050 by Percival E. Furber, and 1,000 by Leslie E. Thompson. Edward Lauder, Jr., director, holds 10,000 shares.

Under a contract with Mr. Furber, Mr. Thompson is to receive 10 per cent of the net profits, with a minimum annual remuneration of $35,000.

Religious Motion Pictures Made at Yale University

Two one-reel pictures, the scenarios for which were written at the Yale University Divinity School as part of the school' experimental work in the use of visual aids for religious education, soon will be released for projection in churches. These films are the result of a program of research carried out under the supervision of Professor Paul H. Vieth, associate professor of religious education and director of field work in the Yale Divinity School.

One of the pictures, "Forgive Us Our Trespasses," is intended for children from nine to 15 years old. The other, "Our Children's Money," is for parent education groups, and provides "a concrete basis for discussion of problems arising in connection with training children in the use of money."

LIONEL BARRYMORE 25TH ANNIVERSARY

Lionel Barrymore celebrated his twenty-fifth anniversary before the the motion picture camera last week upon his arrival back in Hollywood following a one-week visit to New York. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer rewarded him with a new contract in celebration of the occasion.

Mr. Barrymore's first appearance in pictures was in "The New York Hat," filmed at the time he was appearing on the stage with his brother John and with his sister Ethel. In 1925 he joined MGM and has been with the studio almost exclusively ever since.

Warner Managers In Sales Meeting

Andy Smith, Jr., Warner Brothers executive in charge of eastern and Canadian distribution and vice-president of Vitagraph, presided over a conference of the company's eastern district and branch managers on Wednesday and Thursday at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York. Harry Paynter, Canadian district manager, represented Canada at these round-table discussions, which mark the first time any such meetings were called in mid-term by the company.

Addresses were made by Major Albert Warner, S. Charles Einfeld, director of advertising and publicity, and Bob Mochrie, assistant to Mr. Smith.

A discussion of current distribution problems, forthcoming product and other relative matters highlighted the session, in addition to screenings of "Dangerous," co-starring Bette Davis and Franchot Tone, and "The Story of Louis Pasteur," starring Paul Muni.

It is planned to make this divisional conference an annual affair, supplementing the company's regular international sales convention held annually in the Spring.

Attending were Ray S. Smith, Albany; Thomas B. Spry, Boston; H. A. Seed, Buffalo; Nat Furst, New Haven; W. G. Mansell, Philadelphia; Charles Rich, Pittsburgh; Robert Smeltzer, Washington, D. C.; Al Shmitken, Cincinnati; M. Mooney, Cleveland; Fred E. North, Detroit; Oscar Kuschner, Indianapolis; Harry Decker, New York and Brooklyn; Harry Hummell, New Jersey, and H. O. Paynter of Toronto, Canada.

Films To Aid Police In Tracking Criminals

A plan to enlist the aid of motion pictures in tracking down criminals will be ready in three months, said Colonel H. Norman Schwartzkopf, superintendent of the New Jersey State Police, speaking at the convention of the New Jersey State Grange in Atlantic City, N. J., Tuesday.

The Colonel said that three sets of sound pictures would be made in each case, and the films would be available for nationwide showings in theatres. Most New Jersey exhibitors have agreed to cooperate, he said.

DETROIT CENSOR BARS TWO MORE RED FILMS

Amkino Threatens Infringement Action Against "Russia Today," Amateur Soviet Picture

Detroit this week continued as the fighting ground against the exhibition of Soviet propaganda films. Having banned two Russian pictures on the ground they aimed to stir up Communistic agitation, Sergeant Joseph M. Kollar, Detroit police censor, this week stopped the showing of two more, neither of which, however, is a Soviet release.

At the same time, Amkino Corporation in New York, the official film distributor here for the Soviet Union, indicated it might raise an issue of infringement of contract as the result of the showing of an amateur film made in the U. S. S. R.

Police Turn Away Theatre Crowds

Headed by Sergeant Kollar, a squad of police turned away a crowd from Jericho Temple in Detroit which had come to see "Russia Today," a collection of news reels taken by tourists showing life in the Soviet Union, and banned the showing. The picture admittedly was an amateur production, and on 16 mm. stock.

Sergeant Kollar said that he took the action because the proper permit had not been obtained and regulations governing the showing of films to which admission is charged were not complied with. He indicated that the showing would be permitted when the necessary license is issued and provided the police and fire regulations are observed.

On Tuesday, Sergeant Kollar stopped the showing of "Thunder Over Mexico" at the People's Forum, a Socialist organization, because the hall was not licensed to charge admission and exhibit films publicly. No permit had been obtained and fire regulations were violated, according to the police censor.

In neither case, said Sergeant Kollar, was the picture banned because of Communistic sequence, and although he considers them propaganda, he observed they are not sufficiently objectionable to warrant forbidding their showing.

The showing of "Russia Today" was sponsored by the Friends of the Soviet Union. "Thunder Over Mexico" was produced in Mexico by Sergei Eisenstein, Soviet director, and later passed into the ownership of Upton Sinclair, Epic movement leader on the west coast. It has been distributed by the Sol Lesser organization.

Take Court Order as Precedent

The latest action follows a ban on "Peasants," a Soviet production which the Detroit Cinema Guild was prevented from showing. Precedent for the police action was established in the recent circuit court decision in Detroit upholding the ban on "The Youth of Maxim," another from Soviet Russia. Both were rejected as Communistic. The Cinema Guild is planning legal action to restrain the censor from interfering with their film offerings.

In the case of "Russia Today," Amkino in New York, which is releasing a similar film, feels it has ground for protest because it has an agreement with the Soviet Government that all films taken in Russia by tourists and intended for commercial showing are to be released in the United States through Amkino, or with its consent. Tourists are not prevented from taking films, said N. Napoli of Amkino, but Moscow advises them they are not to be released here except under the stipulated conditions. In the case of the Detroit showing, this was not done, said Amkino.

The ban is a recent occurrence and before it was imposed Amkino's "Chapayev" was exhibited in Detroit for two weeks, said Mr. Napoli. However, Sergeant Kollar has indicated that Soviet films in the future are taboo in Detroit.

Huffman Is Subject of Denver Newspaper Article

Harry E. Huffman, leading Denver exhibitor and the town's, as well as one of the nation's, leading exponent of giveaways in theatres, has been made the subject of a personality article in the Taxpayers' Review, daily newspaper published in Denver, in which he is compared in favorable light with the town's other great showmen, Jack Langrishe and H. A. W. Tabor.

The article states, in part:

"The group of theatres under Mr. Huffman's management have no superior in the United States in presentations, service, appointments or equipment. It is a fact that the impressions of a city gained by a visitor are formed from its theatres. In this respect, alone, the Huffman theatres—on which depends Denver's happiness in entertainment—are a civic asset of incalculable value."

AMPA's Amateur Show Receives Loud Acclaim

The Associated Motion Picture Advertisers' first amateur show, held last week in Jack Dempsey's restaurant in New York was a howling success. Among those who participated as amateurs were George Harvey, assisted by his daughter and Charles Alicoate, Sophie Robinson, Frances Liebman, Ruth Roland, Ray Gallagher and Raquel Torres.

Charles Leonard of Universal was the winner of a raffle for a turkey, the proceeds of which were turned over to the Film Daily Relief Fund. He turned the turkey back to the fund for re-raffling. After it had been won again and returned, A. J. Powers got it for an $8.50 bid.

A Tale of Two Cities

(MGM-David O. Selznick)

Classic Drama

Exploitation angles on "A Tale of Two Cities" are many, with appeal to large and diversified audiences.

First: It is considered by many the greatest of Charles Dickens' novels. The theme is one of the most imposing ever chosen by a writer as background for a tender story of love and gallant sacrifice. The contrast of hunger-maddened crowds rising in their rags to turn the crude implements of rebellion against their be-ribboned oppressors with the helplessness of innocent people caught in the vortex of social upset is as new today as when Dickens wrote of the sorrows of a new France.

Secondly: The story is one that never will grow old. The gentle Dr. Manette, imprisoned for 20 years by a heartless Royalist, is released through the efforts of a faithful servant. In England he is won back to health and sanity by the love of his daughter, Lucie. Charles Darnay, nephew of the man whose cruelty imprisoned Manette, leaves France in protest against the treatment of peasants by his family. Darnay marries Lucie, who does not know that his family has been the cause of so much suffering to hers. In order to save an old tutor, Darnay goes back into the very heart of the Terror, not realizing that the vengeful Mme. De Farge has sworn to wipe out every member of his family. The blood-crazed rabble condemns him to death, and he is saved only by the sacrifice of Sidney Carton, who takes his place under the guillotine.

Thirdly: Ronald Colman gives a convincing and thoroughly and thoroughly human performance as the brilliant and drunken barrister whose tongue is sharp and whose eyes are scornful for all but the gentle Lucie. She sees through his disreputable shell to the essential fineness of his character, and it is her belief in him that carries him through the whole story as a cynical, scoffing savior of her happiness. Too much emphasis can not be placed upon the casting of the 26 leading players in the supporting cast. Each is a player of note, and each is well assigned to bring to life the wellknown characters.

Fourthly: The production is comprehensive in detail and in scope. The storming of the Bastille, in which thousands of desperate men and howling women move like an implacable tide upon the grim stronghold, tear off its locks, batter down its doors, set free its imprisoned, is one of the real thrills of the screen. The emotional tension throughout the rabble scenes is poignant, as the drama is a real story of human suffering, desperation and revenge. This is no tale of imagined conflict. This is history brought back for two hours on the screen that pass as one.

"A Tale of Two Cities" is one of those films in which every single element mingles to make a coherent whole. Audiences should be impressed with the fact that this film is of such exceptional historical interest and entertainment value that it must not be missed. Schools should be willing to cooperate to the fullest. The advance campaign is the thing, with confidence that the word-of-mouth advertising will do the rest.—MILLER, Hollywood.

Drama

Unusual drama, this calls for unusual selling campaigns. The quality of its story, acting, directing, the grim manner in which it gets over its striking message, establishes it as entertainment for any kind of audience.

The production takes several radical departures from formula. Essentially it is a demonstration that, under certain conditions, hate and distrust can do more to drive a man to success than love can. The story is told in retrospect, but in such a manner that all is real and convincing. Its drama is sometimes bitter. Yet the romantic love interest contrast, which also steps out of the beaten path, gives it a tone of human interest that should present no difficulty in making a popular impression.

The picture opens with Glen Burton, who, goaded by fear, jealousy and hatred, is on the threshold of achieving his life's ambition election to governor, and rival candidate Dan Elliott, struck down and seriously injured by a runaway truck. Then, in flashback, the story of Burton's life is told. Going to war with Elliott, after he married Alice, Burton is reported missing. Returning, however, he finds himself unable to adjust his life to new conditions. Deserted and divorced by Alice, who later marries Elliott, Burton becomes a dock-walloper. Secretly befriended by Ellliott and Alice, he enters politics. His rise is rapid and he and Elliott find themselves rival candidates for governor. The action brings the picture up to the time of the accident.

The epilogue returns to current time when, with Elliott's death as a result of his injuries, Burton learns that Alice's great love for him was the basis for all his hatred and envy and that she with Elliott had done everything that seemed so mean in order to inspire Burton to the great things of which he was capable. Naturally there is an understanding reunion that makes for a happy ending.

The picture, in cast names and story content, gives exhibitors much with which to work. Title being hardly relevant to theme, much concentration should be placed on the plot and method in which story is told.—McCARTHY, Hollywood.

Bar 20 Rides Again

(Paramount-Harry Sherman)

Outdoor Action

For entertainment purposes this picture provides a soundly contrived story in which the elements of drama, romance, comedy, adventure, action and thrill are competently balanced. Its showmanship is that which takes advantage of that value, plus the worth of established cast names, exploitation of a new character and new kind of bad man characterization that leaps right off the screen practically to steal the show and spreading of information that something different is to be seen in a production which, while preserving all that is worthwhile in the way of popular action adventure, introduces much that is new.

With William Boyd, Jimmy Ellison and Frank McGlynn, Jr., in their familiar roles, the picture is further exploitation of the illustrious Hop-a-long Cassidy in adventures with a new kind of warfare with a different sort of cattle rustler. As the drama of the show concentrates on the conflict between Boyd and Harry Worth, there is a light but pleasing romantic contrast, which has its element of drama involving Ellison and Jean Rouveral and a line of humorous comedy featuring desert rat George Hayes.

Worth is a suave, sinister, bad man with a Napoleonic complex who plans his depredations on a chess board. Determined to steal Howard Lang's cattle and ranch, he is confronted by Boyd, who, in the guise of a flashy gambler, makes his way into Worth's fortress-like natural hideout, gains the thief's confidence and learns his plans. Signaling his mates, Ellison, McGlynn and Boyd head a posse of ranchers into a gun-roaring chase with Worth and his minions that results in annihilation of the desperadoes and death to the suavely vicious Worth at the hands of one of his own dying men as a reward for his cruelty.

The story, told against beautiful scenic backgrounds, moves with speed and conviction. While there is plenty of whoop, holler and gunplay to it, the action is put over in such a way that there is no semblance of artificial or forced theatricalism. It is material for the western

Racing Luck

(Winchester-Republic)

Drama

The racetrack, its sleek thoroughbred horses, crowds, intrigue, excitement and races are tossed together rather haphazardly in this production. Showmen, nevertheless, should find much with which to work and where action, and that alone, satisfies the result of their labors should prove fruitful.

The story, in brief, tells of an honest trainer who is ruled off the turf because his horse has been doped by another man. Seeking revenge, he trains a broken down horse so successfully that in the end he comes back to win out over his old rival. In the meantime he has met the usual young lady and the romance that blossomed during his exile culminates in a happy marriage when he is restored to good standing by the track officials. Through this theme are also spun the various intrigues of the villain and the fight against great odds on the part of the hero. Several fights, thrilling races and intimate scenes of the inner workings of horse training are thrown in for good measure.

Director Sam Newfield paces his direction toward an exciting climax and the photography of Edgar Lyons is good. Bill Boyd and Barbara Worth head the cast composed of George Ernest, Esther Muir, Ernest Hilliard and Onest Conley.

With what appears to be one, and possibly two, wellknown names, showmen might do well to concentrate on the story, action and intrigue along with the background of the picture rather than depending on name values for their draw.

Dan Morgan is ruled off the turf because his horse Life Belt has been doped and all indications point toward Walter Hammond as the guilty one. As he is leaving the track Morgan buys Color Sergeant, one of Hammond's horses that is about to be shot because of a bad hoof. Young Jimmy Curtis' pleading for the horse's life causes him to make the purchase and the two enter a partnership.

Morgan and the youngster then make for the Bayside track where the boy lives with his sister and their one-horse stable. At his new home Morgan discovers the old trick of swimming Color Sergeant to train him while resting his injured leg. The horse quickly regains his form and the future begins to look bright again for Morgan.

When news of Color Sergeant's return to form reaches Hammond he makes an attempt to purchase the horse and in a fight that ensues one of his exercise boys is hurt. Before dying, however, he confesses he poisoned Morgan's horse at Hammond's orders, but the latter wriggles out at the hearing before the stewards. Morgan is reinstated, however, and prepares to bring Life Belt up to the big handicap in top form. A fire breaks out as one of Hammond's men throws a match into Morgan's barn, and he saves Color Sergeant, but loses his best horse, Life Belt.

The big race comes off, after much planning on the part of Morgan and much plotting by Hammond, and much to everyone's dismay Carnation, Hammond's horse, is the winner over Color Sergeant, who Dan ran as his entry. Morgan, however, calls for a can of ether and rubs the winner's nose with a sponge saturated in the liquid. Dye runs off, and instead of Carnation it is Lady Killer, a ringer, standing in the winner's circle. Hammond, trapped at last, is ruled off the turf for life and with the purse money Morgan and Jimmy's sister, June, head altarward.—Baehler, New York.

Romantic Thriller

Here's a show that should interest patrons and audiences whose primary interest is entertainment. While not a big picture, it has an intelligently conceived, acted and directed story for its motivation, and embellishes the entertainment quality of that with some exceptional fire sequences. The picture is still action with romantic love interest. Moving quickly, it eschews much that is unnecessary, essentials that can be understood without being seen, and plunges right into its plot, creates interest quickly and maintains it continuously. With worthwhile substantiating production value, the two phases of the production, the spectacular fire sequences and the love interest, are expertly balanced.

In the yarn Farnsworth is a fire insurance adjuster. On the way to a conflagration his progress is playfully impeded and finally wrecked by flirtatious Betty Marshall. Saving her pet dog from death in a warehouse blaze, a contact of romantic conflict is established. Invited to her Uncle Rawson's country home for a fox hunt, a triangular love interest angle is built involving him, the girl, and his employer, McIntyre, who is also an ambitious suitor. Suspicious of McIntyre and Rawson, Farnsworth learns that they are planning an arson plot. Breaking the news to Betty, he is accused of being an ingrate, but when she forces the truth from her uncle, she dashes off after Farnsworth to be with him in trying to prevent a holocaust. In thrill packed fire sequences, Farnsworth rescues Betty, who has been trapped in the flaming loft, causes the arrest of McIntyre on a charge of arson and attempt to defraud, and wins a reward that enables him to marry the girl.

Elements of entertainment and commercial value, ordinarily pleasing to the masses and particularly action fans, are contained aplenty. While cast names are not of great value, there is much that smart showmen can find in the worth of story content and production values to arouse audience interest, and the production provides wide opportunity for good cooperative contacts with intelligent advance handling.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Kind Lady

(MGM-Lucien Hubbard)

Drama

On paper this production promised much. On the screen it results in so much plot and so little entertainment that few can understand what it's all about. Its showmanship availability is such a minor quality that possibilities for exciting prospective audience curiosity would try the ingenuities of a composite Einstein-Houdini. As screen material, it is a demonstration that if there are to be double bills, there must be double bill pictures.

The story and locale are English; the cast is a mixture of English and American players. In other pictures they have been credited with popular success. Here they are merely going through the motions and it takes them 85 minutes to go through. Undoubtedly some of the picture's faults, eccentricities and shortcomings will be eliminated in final editing. Even so the attraction can be hardly anything other than as initially described.

It's about a kind lady who is the paragon of pollyannaism. She befriends a needy stranger. He turns out to be a mean and vicious crook who repays the kind lady by trying to steal anything she owns. He torments, browbeats and terrorizes her. He brings in a weird assortment of assistant crooks to help him in his nefarious plot. All the way through, he so completely frightens the old lady and deceives her friends that she can't inform any one of her predicament. In the finale, however, she does get news to the outside. Follows the confounding of the crook and his minions, the consummation of some sort of a juvenile romantic love affair entirely irrelevant to the plot and the final triumph of the kind lady as everyone is supposed to understand that, no matter how tough the going, kindness, like virtue, will prevail.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Seven Keys to Baldpate

(Radio-Sistrom)

Melodrama

Whether they've seen it before as a big time legitimate attraction, as a picture, as a stock company standby or as played by hometown amateurs, this veteran comedy mystery melodrama still holds much that is amusing for present-day audiences. The plot and its mechanics are the same; this version, however, has been pepped up and modernized by strictly up-to-date dialogue. Made expressly to be entertaining and without pretensions, it has elements to appeal to the old-timers who like to reminisce and to please the youngsters who may have heard a lot about it but never have seen it.

The picture is not a screen souvenir. Careful attention to production effects and dialogue interpolations have seen to that. Yet the story of "Seven Keys to Baldpate" is so familiar, particularly to showmen, that there is no necessity of repeating in details. It varies from the original in that the prologue and epilogue have been eliminated. Nevertheless, it's still Magee, the author writing his book, and incorporating therein his experiences during an eerie night in what was supposedly deserted Baldpate Inn. All the familiar characters and situations again are paraded, and the comedy which they naturally provide as well as the thrill is reflected in the credulous and incredulous reaction of Magee to the antics of his animated brain children.

The picture, following the spirit of the story, moves fast and is well acted. It doesn't make any bones about acknowledging that audiences will not know what it's all about. Consequently it sticks closely to the original plot. Characterizations are convincing. Those that are supposed to be dramatic are dramatic in the vein of the story; so are those who are supposed to be comic and funny. The suspense that threaded the original still functions.

As before, the picture provides opportunity for tricky and out of the ordinary exploitation and getting audiences into the proper mood. —McCarthy, Hollywood.

Fighting Youth

Action Drama

Football is the keynote of this production. Immense stadiums, All-American players, traditional school rivalry, radical influences seeking to undermine the team and the usual quarrel between the hero and heroine that only ends in a satisfactory reconciliation are all interwoven into the story. Showmen have the valued experience of their past campaigns on pictures of this type to refer to when exploiting this production.

It is a well turned out picture, with authentic and interesting backgrounds, but except for the one novel twist where the authors have worked in a communistic angle, everything appears to have been done before in such films as "The Spirit of Notre Dame," "The All-American" and still later in "Saturday's Millions."

Charles Farrell, Jane Martel, Ann Sheridan and Andy Devine, with Devine scoring heavily with his comedy, are the leading players of name value. Farrell appears a bit too whimsical at times for the virile role he essays to portray.

Hamilton Macfadden, the director has kept the action rolling at a merry clip once the plot starts moving. The photography is good, with the conventional scenes from the big California college games interspersed for illustration.

The picture opens at the beginning of the college year at State, with the campus seething with action as the students, particularly the football heroes, arrive. Larry Davis, All-American star, and his pal Cy Kipp dominate the first few scenes as they greet their old sweethearts, Betty Wilson and Dodo.

Carol Arlington, a new student with pronounced radical tendencies, is secretly taking instructions from Markoff, who is the unknown power behind a radical group seeking to undermine the colleges of the country. To further her plans Carol gets herself elected head of the "Students' League of Freedom," defeating Tony Tonetti, a hot-headed youth who previously carried on the League's activities.

Markoff then persuades Carol that football is a college racket and together they launch a campaign to wreck the college team and the school along with it. Carol manages to vamp Larry, and in spite of Betty's protests he goes to a meeting of the League and promises to resign from the team provided the things told him at the gathering are proved true.

In a subsequent game between State and Manchester, Larry makes two costly fumbles, losing the game. Markoff and Carol spread the rumors that the All-American star has thrown the game, and when Larry is confronted by the coach he vehemently denies the charges. Disgusted with the subsequent tactics of the coach, however, he resigns from the team.

Markoff and Tonetti then seek to obtain some communistic records for mailing, but fear to do so openly. They trap Betty into getting the records for them and then kidnap her. As she identifies her kidnapers later, Tonetti reveals he is really a G-Man assigned to ferret out college radicals. On his evidence Carol and Markoff are arrested.

Realizing his mistake, Larry asks for reinstatement on the team and is refused. In the big game of the year, however, he finally gets his chance and runs wild to win for his team. He is also romantically reinstated with Betty.

Concentration on the obvious features of the picture is the natural line of exploitation procedure.—Baehler, New York.

The Land of Promise

(Zionist Organization of America)

Historical Record

A pictorial account of the rebuilding of Palestine by the Jews this production is neither entertainment in the usual form, as it is devoid of plot and featured performers, nor a travelogue. It is, principally, a historical recording of the changes that have encompassed Palestine during the past two decades brought about by returning Jews in their escape from persecution or by the natural desire to return to the ancient homeland of their people. The opening sequences show Palestine as it was fifteen years ago, a drab and colorless land, peopled by equally drab inhabitants. The Arabs in the market places, the old men before the wailing wall typify the decaying Palestine. The scenes shift to the returning Jews, estimated at 300,000 men, women and children, and their transforming of Palestine into a reborn land of thriving agriculture settlements, busy cities and centers of learning and scientific experiment.

The direction, editing and photography are expertly handled and are the contributing factors which make this a well made, interesting and instructive production. The appeal is primarily to Jews but it is also suitable educative material for a larger audience. The musical score was developed from authentic Yemenite, Arabic and Hebraic themes and the songs, specially composed for the film, are said to be typical of the new Hebrew folk music, part of the spiritual revival of Palestine. The narrative was written by Maurice Samuel, and the narration is by David Ross, noted radio announcer.

A saga of a people's return to the land of their forefathers, "The Land of Promise" is a complete recording of the multifarious activities engendered by a migratory and pioneering people. The camera travels through the fields and factories, the universities and laboratories, the night clubs and entertainment. While no particular player or group of players are predominate and a score of characters are caught by the camera's eye, the studies are for the most part unposed.—Mooney, New York.

Of Interest

In this, number 14 of the series, six sequences are shown, ranging from cormorant fishing in Hangchow, China, to an armless musician in Vintage, Pa. In the Orient the fishermen use trained cormorant birds to catch the fish. In Fort Worth, Texas, Miss Emma Pulliam romps over country roads and city streets for five miles every day to rid herself of rheumatic aches. In Dallas, Texas, an engine runs on water. By dividing water into hydrogen and oxygen and electrolyzing the water sufficient power is generated to run an automobile. At Rouses Point, N. Y., a fort built by the War Department after the war of 1812 and later discovered to be on Canadian soil, "Fort Blunder." In Haute Savoie, France, a beekeeper hangs a queen bee around his neck in a cage and draws a swarm of bees to his person. An armless musician plays the steel guitar and trombone with his toes.—Running time, 9 minutes.

Excellent

An excellent short picture from Universal stars Gus Van and features Peggy Flynn. Miss Flynn is an accomplished comedienne and turns in an engaging and delightful performance. Gus Van, opening his music shop for the day's business, is greeted by Miss Flynn, his first customer. After a couple of songs they give the floor to the two clerks, Seroy and Weaver, who dance. Another customer, Ray Sax, plays two clarinets at the same time. The Mountaineers and the Randall Sisters wind up the program, the Mountaineers being a band and the Randall Sisters a singing trio.—Running time, 20 minutes.

LONDON CIRCUITS PLAN 30 MILLION FLOTATION FOR 250 TO 300 HOUSES

Union Cinemas and County Each Prepares for $15,000,000 Issue and Similar Move by Odeon Group Is Reported

by BRUCE ALLAN
London Correspondent

A period of greatly intensified expansion in all departments of the British field and of capitalization and re-capitalization on the hundred million dollar scale is foreshadowed in the announcement this week of big development plans by two, and possible three, leading circuits. It is a general expectation that these will be followed in short time by more new production projects of a comparable scale. Undoubtedly a new boom is shaping in the U. K. which, in view of the practically limitless money lying idle in British banks, may reach proportions comparing with the biggest figures of America's prosperity years.

Immediate plans include two big theatre issues of, in round figures, $15,000,000 each. One of these will be made by Union Cinemas and the other by County Cinemas. The degree of expansion planned is sufficiently indicated by the fact that County's present authorized capital is £125,000 ($725,000) of which £108,707 ($543,535) is paid up.

Union, of which Fred Bernard is the active chief, has acquired over 70 theatres in little more than a year and is now over 100 strong. County, with C. J. Donada as its active head, had over 30 theatres, of which the majority are modern erections, at the time lists were last published and has been very active since.

Odeon Reported Planning

There is a general belief that the Oscar Deutsch group of Odeon theatres also is planning a public issue on the $15,000,000 scale. The Odeon circuit, practically all new buildings of good capacity, has grown even more rapidly than the other two groups; forty new stations recently were announced, indicating a total circuit of well over 100 in the new year.

Each of these groups of theatres has, comparatively recently, been in the limelight in connection with ambitious, and mostly controversial, plans of trade development.

Union, together with the Hyams (H & G) London theatres, was part of the big plan of Gaumont-British expansion which brought the major circuit into a conflict with the Kinematograph Renters' Society which still continues. G-B proposed to invest in Union and H & G and to book for both groups and, by the action of distributors, was restrained from doing so.

Previous to the official announcement of the Union flotation there was extraordinary activity in their shares on the Stock Exchange. The ordinaries rocketed from 66/3d (shillings) to 115/-- (shillings) and it was the general belief, in face of official denials, that someone was buying for contol. Having in view the old G-B interest in the group, the latter company's name was inevitably associated with these rumors.

County and Odeon were both in the news early in the year in connection with Joseph Schenck's reported plan for a merger with which United Artists was to have been associated. The plan, which aimed to give Odeon and County a security of product they at present lack due to the competition of the Gaumont-British and Associated British producer-circuits, fell through chiefly, it is said, because active control of the merged theatre group was to have been given to Oscar Deutsch, and Charles Donada refused to play second fiddle. There were also certain developments in U. A. a little later.

Production Also Spurts

So far it is impossible to trace a production tieup in the County and Union plans. In itself this is a reversal of recent practice; the average British promoter is, or was, attracted by a project which entails all three branches of production, distribution and exhibition. It is the more surprising in that British production is, at the moment, in the full flood of an activity which suggests an early and large scale request for public money.

A very large amount of City money has been put into recent British production enterprised with, it is assumed, public flotations in view.

At the present moment the activities of these new companies are severely straining the existing resources of British studios and heavily mortgaging space in floors yet to be built. Associated British Pictures, the Maxwell company, recently suspended its own production; it has let the whole of its space at Elstree and the current story is that independent units are "queueing up" for space there.

There is confirmation of this statement of existing conditions in the news from British National that it is extending the plans of its Pinewood studios at Iver—to be erected in partnership with Charles Boot, the builder—to provide 250,000 square feet of floor space. The uncompleted "London" plant at Denham is also heavily booked.

Ben Goetz's visit to London to inaugurate British production for MGM under its own control, and in direct liaison with Hollywood, puts an end to a serial story associating this company, at one time or another, with practically every unattached production organization in the U. K. The most recent rumor declared that Metro would take over the Twickenham output, that concern closing down its own distributive organization, but a deal on these lines is believed to have broken down because Julius Hagen of Twickenham wanted an American release.

Companies' Activities Strain Resources of British Studios; Independents Line Up for Space; MGM's Plans Awaited

Metro's own British films will, according to a statement from Sam Eckman Jr., be definitely planned for U. S. schedule. He declares that MGM will make "English pictures in England and American pictures in Hollywood" and that wherever it produces it has world distribution in view.

Metro's quota commitment in this country is 15 features per annum. Whether it will make all of these, immediately, by its own unit is doubtful but it is definitely planned to take to London, out of Hollywood schedule, "The Wind and the Rain," James Hilton's "Goodbye, Mr. Chips" and John Monk Saunders' "Manners Maketh the Man," to be retitled "A Yank at Oxford." Robert Montgomery probably will come over for the lead. Jean Harlow and Norma Shearer are also slated for visits to London when production is active.

The floor which recently burned at the Twickenham plant will also be reconstructed.

AMERICAN COMPANIES IN SPAIN PIN HOPES ON FORTHCOMING TREATY

Importers Request Lower Duty Rates and Extension of the Stamp Revenue Privilege to Include U. S. Companies

Spanish Producers Want Importations of Films Restricted and Ban on Dubbed Product; One Proposes 10 to 1 Quota

by HARRY CHAPIN PLUMMER

Barcelona Correspondent

With the present likelihood of the gross turnover tax being reduced from the prevailing 7½ per cent to 4 per cent (and on films made in Spain to 1.5 per cent) as reported in earlier dispatches to MOTION PICTURE HERALD (the reduction has been approved but the decree has not yet been published), the American producing and distributing units in Barcelona are centering their hopes now upon the pending commercial treaty between Spain and the United States, which has until the close of the year to be accomplished, due to the two months extension of time limit granted by President Roosevelt.

Here are the salient features of the treaty, as recommended in the report, prepared at a cost of 15,500 pesetas, after several months' research work by the American Chamber of Commerce in Spain and submitted to American Ambassador Claude G. Bowers, at Madrid for embodiment in the protocol, as concerns cinematographic and photographic materials, still and motion picture films and photographic accessories.

Importers request that the privilege granted to France in the shape of lower duty rates for films from pesetas 2, 1.50 and 25, to pesetas 1.25, 1 and 15, be also made extensive to articles of American origin.

They also request that pressure be brought upon the Spanish government to extend the stamp revenue privelege granted to France, Germany, Great Britain, Italy and other countries, also to American articles: that is, to tax packed products on their wholesale value in the same manner as the national production.

There have been established several Spanish producing companies who want the Government to restrict importation of foreign production and to prohibit importation of films dubbed in Spanish. One Spanish producer proposed an agreement whereby the United States would take one Spanish film for every ten American films.

"The new treaty between the United States and Spain will considerably help the motion picture industry," said one of the American companies' representatives. "First of all, we hope there will be no contingent law and that, consequently, there will be a reduction of duty. At one time all pictures paid 15 pesetas gold per kilo, but during the last four years we have been paying 25. While the current exchange favors us, still when the peseta was 13 to the dollar it may be figured what the cost was to the industry, approximately 65c per metre.

All the mighty resources of money and ultra-modern scientific technique at the command of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer organization are being concentrated upon perfection of the dubbing process in a literary as well as in an acoustical and mechanical sense, whereby the English dialogue of outstanding MGM feature films is rendered into colloquial Castilian.

Not only is Jack Edelstein, the general director of the Spanish MGM studios here, giving his personal attention to this phase of production, but a corps of linguistic experts and leading actors and actresses of Old Spain are laboring daily in the silent and darkened projection rooms to perfect the ultimate dialogue in the vernacular of this country.

New Departure

An important development here is the early December release of "Poderoso Caballero" ("The Powerful Cavalier") by the United Artists' Spanish affiliate, Artistas Asociadas, S.A.E., for account of Iberica Films, one of Spain's foremost producing entities. The new picture features Casimiro Ortas, distinguished on the Spanish stage.

The arrangement entered into between Artistas Asociadas and Iberica Films is hailed with particular satisfaction by the former. The move is considered a new departure in the increasing cooperation between Spanish and American film interests.

Dubbed versions of "The Count of Monte Cristo," "The Scarlet Pimpernel" and "Folies Bergere" are among United Artists' latest releases here of English language "hits" from the States.

"Dream" Premiere Christmas

Christmas will see the Warner release in Spain of "A Midsummer Night's Dream," in the original English-language film version as directed by Reinhardt. Only Barcelona and Madrid and the major provincial capitals will have the new production in the first-run houses of each. The picture will not go into the popular theatres until late in the coming year. It will play the Maryland theatre here and the Callao in Madrid.

René Huet, general manager of Warner Brothers-First National Films, S.A.E., aided by his publicity representative, Jose Virós, plans a first night rivaling Hollywood's most brilliant premieres, with the American and British consuls general and their staffs as guests.

Radio Makes Rapid Strides

Radio Films, S.A.E., but a year established in Spain, is making rapid strides in its operating policy in this country. Within a few days the organization will have closed a deal with one of the leading native producing entities of Spain to release in this country the pictures made by that company.

Converting a second-run theatre in the residential section into a first-run house—the Astoria, Barcelona's newest cinema theatre—Radio Films has accomplished a miracle over night and the releases shown there since the change went into effect have realized tremendous successes. "Becky Sharp," in the Spanish-dialogued version, "La Feria de la Vanidad," is due for its early December premiere. The dubbed picture employs outstanding actors and actresses of the Spanish legitimate stage. The Castilian dialoguing, accomplished under the direction of Juan de Carlo, formerly of the Paramount Joinville studios at Paris, features Margarita Robles in the title role, Juan Ariste Eulate as Joseph Sedley; Antonio Rovira as the Marquis of Steyne; Antonio López Estrada as Rawdon Crawley and Jose Barbiera as George Osborne.

Roberto Trillo, general manager of Radio, told the HERALD correspondent that the dubbing, done at the studios of Acoustic, S.A., a new Spanish concern here in Barcelona, was predicated on the idea "not only to give the translation of the original dialogue, but to make the actors feel what they are saying—to eliminate every artificial element." The premiere in Spain will be concurrently at the Astoria here and the Teatro Avenida in Madrid.

Another December Radio offering here will be Ramon Novarro's "Contra la Corriente," in original Spanish dialogue and produced at Hollywood. This will be followed in the same month by "Milagroso Hollywood," the first original Spanish-language "short" made by the new Vericolor process and featuring the Mexican radio singer, Tito Guizar. Another will be "Clemencia," originally dialogued in Spanish and produced in Mexico City by Nacional Productora Pelicula Mejico.

A.A.U. to Aid Short Producer

Arrangements have been concluded between Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and the Amateur Athletic Union whereby all future Pete Smith Sport Parade short subjects, which are produced and distributed by MGM, will be made in conjunction with the athletic association. An official of the union in the Los Angeles district will cooperate with the studio staff in the future and will assist in the technical and story phases.

Warns On Lobbies

Use of theatre lobbies for merchandise displays has called forth a warning from George C. Parsons, chief inspector for the Massachusetts State Department of Public Safety, that no blocking of exits will be tolerated. A warning also has been given on overcrowding, with a threat of revocation of licenses.

The BLUEBOOK School

By F. H. RICHARDSON

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 291 (submitted by an exhibitor who asks that his name and location be withheld).—(A) Assuming the screen to be well protected from light, except that from the lens, and its surroundings to be black for 19 inches, shading into gray and further out not too light colors for 10 feet on either side, with no lights on the front wall, what illumination is recommended for the auditorium? Screen lighting at center, 13 foot-candles. (B) Is or is it not good policy to provide seats beside the motion picture projectors. (C) Is white or light amber color light best for use in the auditorium?

Answer to Question No. 288A

Bluebook School Question No. 288A, submitted by a projectionist of London, England, was: "I have had an argument, the question being what is the relation of the projector intermittent movement to quantity of light passed to the screen? The argument also included the question whether shutters sent out by projector manufacturers always have blades of correct width."

This is a question I do not feel it is necessary to bother the engineers with. Strange as it may seem I still find many men who have passed union and other examinations who have only the most hazy ideas of this very simple matter. Only a short while since I got into an argument with a man in one of our large theatres—not in New York City—concerning this very matter. He wound up with, "So you think you know more about shutters than the manufacturer." I started to answer to the effect that while the manufacturer might and probably did know all about shutters, still he did not and could not possibly know under what conditions any given shutter would be compelled to work, but did not do so.

It is or certainly should be known to all projectionists that the light must all be shut off from the screen while the intermittent sprocket, and therefore the film over the aperture is in motion, save and only for a period amounting to the time required by the edge of the shutter master blade to move a distance equal to about one-third of the diameter of the projection lens, the latter both at start and stop of movement of the sprocket. In other words, when the sprocket starts to move the shutter may still lack about one-third of the lens diameter of full coverage, and when the sprocket stops the lens may still be about one-third open.

Now we of course all know that this means a certain, definite space of time. Naturally if the sprocket of one projector be in motion a longer time than the sprocket of another (one intermittent movement "faster" than another), it is evident that the master blade of the shutter of the first projector may be more narrow than that of the second, since shutters all rotate at a fixed rate of speed; also, it is plainly seen that the more narrow the master blade is, the less time it will cover the lens, and therefore the greater the percentage of the total light will be passed through to the screen.

But this is not all, for since a certain optical balance is not only permissible but necessary to best results (avoidance of visible flicker), as we make the master blade more narrow, we also not only should, but for best results must make all other blades (now usually only one) more narrow as well, hence the light gain is doubled, or in case of a three-blade shutter, tripled.

True, the gains are very small at each shutter blade edge, but they occur many times each second, hence have much importance. The gain is expressed in percentage, but conditions vary widely, and to select any given case and to cypher out the exact answer is quite a task. All I wish to set forth here is the principle involved, which, as I have already said, should be well understood by every apprentice before he presumes to act as projectionist. The following question is not at all a bad examination question.

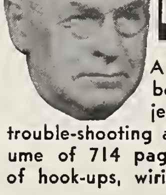
"What relation does speed of intermittent movement bear to amount of light incident upon the screen? Explain in detail."

The "in detail" would go far toward disclosing just how well the one answering the question understood the matter.

If conditions were such that all projectors used the same focal length and the same diameter of projection lens and the same focal length and the same diameter of light condenser (particularly the mirror), the projector manufacturer could then provide exactly the correct shutter blade widths. But so long as one projector must project a ten-foot screen image at, say, 110 feet, while another must project a 20-foot picture at 50 feet (extremes, but nevertheless both conditions named are encountered in practice), it is plainly evident that since rear shutters are located a fixed distance from the aperture, they must "cut" light beams of varying diameter. Consider, for example, a six-inch diameter mirror located 20 inches from the aperture, and an eight-inch one located only 16 inches away. As to front shutters, almost any condition may obtain, including both blade width and distance-from-lens placement. It then is utter nonsense to hold that projector manufacturers can supply shutters able to meet unknown conditions that vary widely, and meet them in the best way.

It therefore is the duty, and an important one, too, of the projectionists to study and very thoroughly understand rotating shutter action and requirements under any and every condition. Lack of such knowledge and its application in practice may, and in many cases does, mean heavy loss of light and added flicker tendency. The unnecessary light loss due to failure to fit the rotating shutters to local conditions may amount to anywhere from one to 15 per cent of the light. It might, in extreme cases run even higher.

I have found very many cases where a superficial examination quickly convinced me that at least ten per cent of the light was being wasted by failure to trim the shutter blades to the width demanded by the work. I have wondered just what excitement might occur did the exhibitor demand that the responsible projectionists pay for the electric power thus wasted.



F. H. RICHARDSON'S NEW
PROJECTION

A new edition of this famous book is now available. Projection sound reproduction and trouble-shooting all in one compact, handy volume of 714 pages, including 153 illustrations of hook-ups, wiring diagrams and schematics.

Experts consider it the most up-to-date and practical projection manual on the market. Contains an extremely simple index system for instant use in emergency breakdowns. A book that should be part of every projection room in the country. ORDER YOUR COPY NOW.

Rebuildings More Numerous Than New Theatres—Shearer

More rebuilding and refurnishing is now going on than erection of new theatres throughout the country, Ben F. Shearer, president of the Independent Theatre Supply Dealers' Association, said last week. The survey resulted from a checkup of directors in New York for the three day quarterly meeting.

Mr. Shearer asserted that the members are highly optimistic over the new business. The men contended that remodeling and refurnishing during the past few years have virtually been at a standstill because of the depression. "Conditions generally look very good," Mr. Shearer said. "Bills are being liquidated and most exhibitors have paid off sound equipment commitments."

CLEAR GAIN

THE photographic quality of Eastman Super X Panchromatic Negative is truly outstanding. Equally important, however, is the fact that the pronounced improvement which has been achieved involves no compromise. It does not mean the sacrifice or impairment of any other desirable or essential quality. It is clear gain for the industry, and for the public. Eastman Kodak Company, Rochester, N. Y. (J. E. Brulatour, Inc., Distributors, Fort Lee, New York, Chicago, Hollywood.)

Albee Theatre, Brooklyn, N.Y., uses RCA Photophone High Fidelity equipment. No matter what the size of your own theatre, it can give your customers the same true-to-life reproduction.

The SOUND is alike IN BOTH PLACES

Visitors to the Albee, Brooklyn always exclaim at the perfection of the sound—unless they have been accustomed to go regularly to another theatre equipped with RCA Photophone High Fidelity apparatus. Such equipment is the best assurance that the sound in the studio will be heard in the theatre exactly as it was recorded. . . . RCA Photophone is the only instrument to give you the unique, patented Rotary Stabilizer, which guarantees uniform motion of the film past the photoelectric cell. This is one of the many vital parts that assure perfect reproduction. . . . By comparing box office receipts before and after the installation of RCA Photophone apparatus it has been proved over and over again that it increases the popularity of any theatre, converting red ink to black, and doubling and even tripling the number of S. R. O. nights. Write for information.

J. C. JENKINS--HIS COLYUM

Chadron, Nebraska

Dear Herald:

We noted in a recent issue of the HERALD that Terry Ramsaye (the man who is largely responsible for the HERALD being a universal favorite) had left the bright lights on Broadway and had set his course westward and on reaching the state line of Indiana made this statement, to wit, "Ahead is the big, broad, level land of the Hoosiers, the Indiana of corn, literature and politics."

Mr. Ramsaye was correct about that, ahead was the big, broad land of corn, literature and politics, and we might suggest that some of the finest literature of the land came from this big, broad land, "Out to Old Aunt's Mary's" and "The Old Swimmin' Hole" and so on, by James Whitcombe Riley, not to mention dozens of others that have been acknowledged to be world classics. And we are not forgetting that "this big, broad land" furnished us with George Ade, Benjamin Harrison, William Henry Harrison, O. P. Morton, Thomas Hendricks, "Blue Jeans" Williams, Charles Fairbanks, Albert Beveridge, Schuyler Folfax, yes, and Will Hays, too, not to mention Tom Taggart and Jim Watson of political fame. Indiana had all of 'em; some got away.

We don't know very much about Indiana literature but, boy, if you want to know anything about Indiana politics ask us. We grew up on Indiana politics, that's how it comes that we are such a hammerhead when it comes to politics. A new boy coming to school in Indiana was first asked his politics and then his name and if he didn't vote with the gang it was just too bad for that kid. A mugwump politician stood about as much show in Indiana as a snowball in Hell-ena, Montana.

We wouldn't mention it at all, as most likely it will not be of very much interest to you, but since Will Pfrimmer of Kentland, Ind., once wrote a little poem on the Kankakee river, and since we grew up on the banks of this famous river, and since your grandchildren ought to have something to recite in school, we are going to quote a few of the verses of this famous poem:

Toward the north a winding stream
Flows through a low and silent land,
Its banks so low they scarcely seem
To rise above the shells and sand
That 'neath the crystal waters gleam
Like jewels on a maiden's hand.

Here, through the long, bright summer days,
The woodduck rears her downy brood,
Here, where the slender cattail sways,
The hermit bittern seeks his food,
So still, so quiet, all their ways,
Scarce broken is the solitude.

I love to float upon its tide
And let my fancy drift at will,
Past moor and fen and marshland wide
And tangled break, and reeds, until Far into fairy land I glide
O'er silvery waters, calm and still.

Pfrimmer had a few more verses to that poem, but instead of learning all of them we went bullhead fishing in the Kankakee. We would like to suggest to Mr. Ramsaye that when he gets out on the Kankakee, if he comes back this way, he recite some Broadway poems and see how they compare with some of the Hoosier poetry, but then, maybe they don't write poetry down on Broadway.

Swell Managers

We went up to Bassett, Neb., to see a couple of friends we had not seen for several years, Mr. and Mrs. Carlson, who operate the Bassett theatre. Bassett is the county seat of Rock county, although there are not many rocks in the county, but Bassett can boast of a nice theatre and a couple of swell managers. The town is located right close to the head of the Elkhorn river, and the Elkhorn runs through a lot of mighty good country, including Antelope county and several others, and that's probably why the Carlsons do such good business at the theatre and their dry cleaning establishment. You ought to stop and see them some time.

Ainsworth is where they raise the big potatoes and where A. F. Botsford operates a theatre and gives the people of that community as good pictures as they can see in New York City or Neligh, Neb.

We didn't get to see A. F., for he had gone to Omaha, but we had a nice visit with Mrs. Botsford and A. F.'s brother, and they assured us that A. F. would send us a check to renew his subscription, and we'll bet a hound pup he does it; he's built just that way.

Gets the Indian Trade

Hazel Dunn of Valentine told us that she had been trying to break Harold from eating so much lobster salad and pickled pigs feet and confine his diet to corned beef and cabbage, but that he wouldn't listen to her. That boy should pay more attention to what his wife tells him. Harold gets a lot of Indian trade at his show, and that's probably because he has a stand-in with all the squaws of the reservation. It was up near Valentine that we got stuck going up a little sandhill once, and a buck and his squaw came along going to Valentine and we offered them 50 cents to pull us about five rods up the hill, but the old squaw said she wanted a dollar and we said no, it was too much, and she replied, "No dollar, no pullem," and it was "no dollar no pullem," too. So we gave her a dollar. That old jane ought to be out in California; she could make the whole Sioux Nation rich in three months.

Horne & Morgan are still operating the show at Hay Springs. Not only that, but they are a couple of young men who operate about everything else in the town that requires brains and energy. There are a couple of boys who have been forgotten; one ought to be governor and the other in the United States senate, but the trouble is that neither is in politics, and should you ever go hunting for a real theatre and real theatre managers you might as well stop at Hay Springs. Both of these boys claimed to have read this colyum and both said they had to do something to pass away the time. We never can remember to carry a gun.

If you ever go up to Gordon be sure to stop and go to the Pace theatre and meet Clint and Bessie Robins who operate the show, and after that you will wire us (collect) and thank us for giving you this information. Clint and Bessie are oldtime favorites throughout this western country where they have been entertaining the public with their repertoire show for many years. We had a delightful visit with them and we want to congratulate the Black Hills Amusement Co. for being so fortunate as to secure their services. Clint and Bess left a lovely home on Newaygo Lake, Michigan, to come out and manage the Gordon theatre, and the Gordon folks are mighty fortunate. Good luck, friends, we know you will make good.

We've got a lot more to tell you, but it is about show time and we all want to go to the show, so we will "Skidoo," as our girl told us once when the drayman came at the back door. But before we forget about it, we want to tell you that we have been through that "Shelterbelt" and have heard a jazz orchestra and a crooner and now we are clear out of Pluto water. Doggone the doggone luck, anyhow.

COLONEL J. C. JENKINS,
The HERALD'S Vagabond Colyumnist.

Mexican Deal Closed For Spanish Pictures

What is considered by many as being the most important deal in the Spanish motion picture industry since the inception of sound there was finally closed last week after long negotiations by Alberto R. Pani, president of Cinematografica Latino Americana, Mexico City, and Vincente Casanova, president of the Compania Industrial Film Espanol, Valencia, Spain, in a long-distance conversation over the transatlantic telephone between Mexico City and Madrid, Spain.

By the terms of the agreement reached, CLA will undertake to distribute the Spanish company's product throughout Mexico while CIFE will handle the Mexican company's pictures in Spain.

Hal Roach Studio Expands

Hal Roach has purchased an additional two acres adjoining his studios in Hollywood, making a total of 13 acres in all, in another expansion move, the first since David L. Loew joined the company. Eighteen more writers have joined the studio staff.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

First National

BRIGHT LIGHTS: Joe Brown, Ann Dvorak—Best Joe Brown picture I have seen. Exceptional business for a three-day run.—Harold Smith, Dreamland, Theatre, Carson, Iowa. Rural patronage.

BRIGHT LIGHTS: Joe E. Brown, Ann Dvorak—The best picture Joe ever made; the kind of picture that never gets cold. Joe is always welcome at my house. Running time, 83 minutes.—J. E. Weber, Princess Theatre, Chelsea, Mich. General patronage.

GOOSE AND THE GANDER, THE: Kay Francis, George Brent—A mighty good program picture. Story interesting and about an all-star cast. Francis and Brent always good and this one had a lot of other good actors in the picture. Played November 20-21.—Bert Silver, New Silver Theatre, Greenville, Mich. City and country patronage.

SHIPMATES FOREVER—Dick Powell, Ruby Keeler—A very fine musical production. Good story and fine acting by the stars and all the cast. Naval background made it very interesting. One of the best of the season. Gave good satisfaction to all and did a good business. Played November 10-11.—Bert Silver, New Silver Theatre, Greenville, Mich. City and country patronage.

Liberty

ANNA KARENINA: Greta Garbo, Fredric March, Freddie Bartholomew—A fine picture, but did not cash at the B. O.—J. E. Weber, Princess Theatre, Chelsea, Mich. General patronage.

ANNA KARENINA: Greta Garbo, Fredric March—It seemed that Gargo was better than usual in this foreign atmosphere film. Her vital performance keeps alive what interest there is in the picture. Fredric March not up to par. Garbo is desperately in need of a modern story for a change. Why keep her in costumes? Business not in keeping with the rental, being much below average. Running time, 95 minutes. Played November 6-7.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

BISHOP MISBEHAVES, THE: Edmund Gwenn, Maureen O'Sullivan—An out of the ordinary picture that may or may not appeal, depending on the type of audience house caters to. Generally speaking, it will be more appreciated by those who know and like it as a play. It is well played by a competent cast in a farcical manner with enough action to sustain interest. Running time, 86 minutes. Played November 4-5.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacock, N. H. General patronage.

BONNIE SCOTLAND: Laurel and Hardy—Drew a good crowd. Audience in up uproar most of the time. All seemed to be pleased. Played November 19-20.—W. A. Cassidy, Frolic Theatre, Midland, Mich. General patronage.

BROADWAY MELODY OF 1936: Jack Benny, Robert Taylor, Eleanor Powell, Una Merkel—You can't afford to pass this one, it is wonderful. Played two days with plenty opposition, rain and home talent show, and still won out.—J. E. Weber, Princess Theatre, Chelsea, Mich. General patronage.

BROADWAY MELODY OF 1936: Jack Benny, Robert Taylor, Eleanor Powell, Una Merkel—This is about the last thing in entertainment. 100 per cent picture. Eleanor Powell begins dancing where the rest of the dancers leave off. She is a wonder and Jack Benny is a funny cuss, and Una Merkel was there very much in the picture. All the cast was extra good. Our patrons pronounce it the best yet. You have got to see this one to appreciate it. I call it great. Played November 17-19.—Bert Silver, New Silver Theatre, Greenville, Mich. City and country patronage.

BROADWAY MELODY OF 1936: Jack Benny, Robert Taylor, Eleanor Powell, Una Merkel—Some liked this better than "Top Hat." It was a grand show. Eleanor Powell's dancing is wonderful. Our patrons can hardly wait to see her in another of this type; it will please one hundred per cent. Running time, 103 minutes. Played October 22-23.—Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

1790 Broadway, New York

CHINA SEAS: Clark Gable, Jean Harlow, Wallace Beery—A great picture. Book it and push it; it will help pay the rent. Running time, 89 minutes.—J. E. Weber, Princess Theatre, Chelsea, Mich. General patronage.

ESCAPADE: William Powell, Luise Rainer, Virginia Bruce—Only a one-day program picture.—G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark. Family patronage.

ESCAPADE: William Powell, Luise Rainer—A most delightful comedy-drama that I thought so much of after I saw it on Sunday I sat at the phone on Monday morning and called every one I thought this picture would appeal to. If you can get out the folks with a keen sense of humor, they'll thank you, as mine did, for calling them. A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

HERE COMES THE BAND: Ted Lewis, Virginia Bruce—A rather hackneyed aimless plot is sustained by good music and some enjoyable players doing their best with poor material. Harry Stockwell makes an outstanding appearance. His singing and personality were an instant hit with our patrons. Picture got by nicely, however, and no complaints. Running time, 87 minutes. Played November 8-9.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

HERE COMES THE BAND: Ted Lewis, Virginia Bruce—Draws the crowd. Good entertainment. Good business. Played November 12-13.—W. A. Cassidy, Mecca Theatre, Midland, Mich. General patronage.

HERE COMES THE BAND: Ted Lewis, Virginia Bruce—One of the best musicals that you could ask for. This Harry Stockwell can certainly sing. Patrons are asking when he is coming again.—Harold Smith, Dreamland Theatre, Carson, Iowa. Rural patronage.

MURDER IN THE FLEET: Robert Taylor, Jean Parker—"Murder" in a title means poison at our box office, so we had two days of poor business. It is a good picture of its kind and, like all MGM pictures, it is well put on, and pleased the ones who came to see it.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

NAUGHTY MARIETTA: Jeannette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy—Don't miss this one. People are still talking about it here.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

O'SHAUGHNESSY'S BOY: Wallace Beery, Jackie Cooper—Personally, I thought it was great, but from a box office standpoint it was the biggest flop of the season. How the women did pan it!—Russell Armentrout, Clark Theatre, Louisiana, Mo. General patronage.

O'SHAUGHNESSY'S BOY: Jackie Cooper, Wallace Beery—Here is one swell show for the average theatre goer. In my estimation this is the best this pair have made and as comments were all good and business above the average I believe that this will be a good money maker for the small town.—Harold Smith, Dreamland Theatre, Carson, Iowa. Rural patronage.

SMILIN' THROUGH (Re-release)—Norma Shearer, Fredric March, Leslie Howard—A first-class picture, but, like all re-issues, failed to draw. Never again for me. Running time, 100 minutes. Played November 20-21.—J. E. Weber, Princess Theatre, Chelsea, Mich. General patronage.

Monogram

KEEPER OF THE BEES, THE: Neil Hamilton, Betty Furness—A very entertaining picture. Good old story and very well done and extra good cast of characters. Gave good satisfaction.—Bert Silver, New Silver Theatre, Greenville, Mich. City and country patronage.

PARADISE CANYON: John Wayne, Marion Burns —This is better than previous pictures of Wayne's from this company, but did no better at the box office. —A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

Paramount

ACCENT ON YOUTH: Sylvia Sidney, Herbert Marshall—A very poor picture for these two stars. I trust Sylvia will do better next time as she is well liked in our town, but they could not praise her in this one so highly. Business poor. Running time, 77 minutes. Played November 10-11.—Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

ANNAPOLIS FAREWELL: Tom Brown, Sir Guy Standing—A good navy picture, but nobody wanted to see it, so naturally the box office suffered. Running time, 82 minutes. Played November 23-24.—F. G. Walker, Community Theatre, Chamois, Mo. General patronage.

BIG BROADCAST OF 1936, THE: Jack Oakie, Burns & Allen, Lyda Roberti—An excellent array of acts strung together by a loose and repetitious story that uses up film and gets nowhere. Cast really big, however, and all do their part well. Business average. Running time, 98 minutes. Played November 17-18.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

BIG BROADCAST OF 1936, THE: Jack Oakie, Burns & Allen—Did good business on this show. Good entertainment. Draws them in. Played November 12-13.—W. A. Cassidy, Frolic Theatre, Midland, Mich. General patronage.

BIG BROADCAST OF 1936, THE: Jack Oakie, George Burns, Gracie Allen—This is better than average program picture. Not as good as Paramount would have you believe. Not as good as "Every Night at Eight" and did not draw as well. Running time, 97 minutes. Played November 16-17.—F. G. Walker, Community Theatre, Chamois, Mo. General patronage.

COLLEGE RHYTHM: Joe Penner, Jack Oakie, Lanny Ross, Lyda Roberti—Boy! oh, boy! Was this one a wow! That it was a year old made not a particle of difference; in fact, some of the boys who had already seen it outside stated that they enjoyed it even more this time. Joe's song to "Goo Goo" had the boys holding their stomachs, tears in their eyes from laughter. And when Lyda Roberti went into "Take a Number from One to Ten," you'd have thought the Warden had just passed out paroles to everyone in the auditorium! 100 per cent entertainment! Running time, 83 minutes. Played November 23.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

EVERY NIGHT AT EIGHT: George Raft, Alice Faye, Frances Langford, Patsy Kelly—This barely gets under the wire, but Patsy Kelly and one good ensemble number is impetus enough to put it over. Average week-end business. Running time, 77 minutes. Played November 14-16.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

HANDS ACROSS THE TABLE: Carole Lombard, Fred MacMurray—Lombard and MacMurray "go to town" in this vehicle. Chockful of wisecracks, it kept a full house in an uproar. If you want to give your patrons some real entertainment, book "Hands Across the Table." Running time, 8 reels. Played November 17-19.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

HANDS ACROSS THE TABLE: Carole Lombard, Fred MacMurray—A very good program picture. About the same type as "The Gilded Lily." Did not draw, but not the fault of the picture. Running time, 80 minutes. Played November 20-21.—F. G. Walker, Community Theatre, Chamois, Mo. General patronage.

MAN ON THE FLYING TRAPEZE, THE: W. C.

Fields, Mary Brian—Opinions were decidedly mixed. Some reported that they liked this better than any vehicle in which Fields had starred. Others reported rather deep disappointment. Business fair. Played November 13-14.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

MEN WITHOUT NAMES: Fred MacMurray, Madge Evans—We couldn't ask for any better picture for the week-end. Plenty of action throughout with enough comedy to offset it. Drew excellent business. —A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

PARIS IN SPRING: Tullio Carminati, Mary Ellis—This one has its moments, but they are few and far between. Good only for double billing. Running time, 82 minutes. Played November 13.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

ROCKY MOUNTAIN MYSTERY: Randolph Scott, Charles "Chic" Sale, Kathleen Burke—Pretty fair semi-western. Sale is very good.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

TWO FISTED: Grace Bradley, Lee Tracy—As Lee Tracy is pretty well liked here, this picture went over very nicely. Roscoe Karns helps to make it a very entertaining picture.—Harold Smith, Dreamland Theatre, Carson, Iowa. Rural patronage.

TWO FOR TONIGHT: Bing Crosby, Joan Bennett—As far as the public is concerned, Bing can stick with the radio and leave pictures alone.—Russell Armentrout, Clark Theatre, Louisiana, Mo. General patronage.

VIRGINIA JUDGE, THE: Marsha Hunt, Walter C. Kelly—A picture that is a little different from the average run. Went over very nicely, although not a big show.—Harold Smith, Dreamland Theatre, Carson, Iowa. Rural patronage.

VIRGINIAN, THE: Gary Cooper, Richard Arlen, Walter Huston, Mary Brian—A reissue. Wish I had not played it. Did not please. Pictures have advanced very far since this was first released. Arlen turned in the best performance. He's good.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

WINGS OVER ETHIOPIA: A feature length travelogue. A timely picture if played before the war ends. Do not advertise it as a war picture, as there is no war in it. Advertise it well in the schools. Running time, 54 minutes.—J. E. Weber, Princess Theatre, Chelsea, Mich. General patronage.

RKO Radio

ALICE ADAMS: Katharine Hepburn, Fred MacMurray—Two days to poor business. We were forced to play this picture on either Saturday or Sunday, but it didn't suit either date. My town simply does not like Hepburn, no matter what she is in.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

CHASING YESTERDAY: Anne Shirley, O. P. Heggie—Drew very well the first day, but fell off the second day by a great deal. Good picture for its type. Played November 17-18.—W. A. Cassidy, Frolic Theatre, Midland, Mich. General patronage.

FRECKLES: Virginia Weidler, Tom Brown, Carol Stone.—Just what the small town box office needs. Not so good as "Laddie" perhaps, but still good and drew a nice business for Tuesday and Wednesday. I find that if people want to see a picture it makes no difference which days of the week it is played.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

FRECKLES: Tom Brown, Virginia Weidler, Carol Stone—Not a big picture, but a nice clean one for the children. Well liked by all. Running time, 68 minutes.—J. B. Weber, Princess Theatre, Chelsea, Mich. General patronage.

FRECKLES: Virginia Weidler, Tom Brown, Carol Stone—Another excellent Gene Stratton-Porter story picturized. And a good show all around, even though it does differ a bit from its source. Virginia Weidler as good as in "Laddie" and surely deserves more attention from her producers. Running time, 68 minutes. Played November 15-16.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

GIVES IMPRESSIONS OF THEATRE PATRONS

"Our 'What the Picture Did for Me' herewith. From now on we intend to send them regularly.

"We have tried to give correctly the impression our patrons received from these pictures.

"We have a small town patronage but it is an intelligent patronage."—Assistant Manager, The Talisman Theatre, Rosedale, Miss.

HOT TIP: James Gleason, Zasu Pitts—A nice race horse program—G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark. Family patronage.

LADDIE: John Beal, Gloria Stuart—Play this and give your patrons something that they will appreciate. —Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

OLD MAN RHYTHM: Buddy Rogers, Betty Grable—A good programmer to moderate business. Played November 9.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

OLD MAN RHYTHM: Buddy Rogers, Betty Grable —Very good business Sunday and Monday and pleased. —A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

TOP HAT: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers—"Top Hat" is the tops in recent pictures from all angles. Pleased everyone and drew well, doing the best business we've done in some time. Running time, 99 minutes. Played November 10-11.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

TOP HAT: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers—One of the best of the year. These two stars make a grand team. Ginger Rogers well liked here; she was beautiful in this picture, and Fred Astaire superb as a dancer and singer as well. Give us more like this one. Running time, 99½ minutes. Played Octoebr 27-28.—Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

TOP HAT: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers—The best picture from this famous dance team to date. If we would have had fair weather we would have broken house records, which is enough said. Running time, 99 minutes. Played November 9-10.—F. G. Walker, Community Theatre, Chamois, Mo. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

CHARLIE CHAN IN SHANGHAI: Warner Oland, Irene Hervey—A good picture. As usual, on his pictures, we had a good crowd. Pleased all. Played November 14.—W. A. Cassidy, Frolic Theatre, Midland, Mich. General patronage.

CURLY TOP: Shirley Temple, John Boles—Little Miss Temple made another hit here in "Curly Top." Some of our patrons think this was her ace production. At any rate, no one was displeased. Business somewhat increased. Played November 20-21.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

FARMER TAKES A WIFE, THE: Janet Gaynor, Henry Fonda—Better draw than other Gaynor pictures.—G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark. Family patronage.

GAY DECEPTION, THE: Francis Lederer, Frances Dee—A very good program picture, with plenty of comedy. Francis Lederer very good. Patrons came out boosting it and that is what we like to hear. Running time, 76 minutes. Played November 7-8.—Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

HERE'S TO ROMANCE: Nino Martini—Another small town playdate wasted. Those who came that could enjoy it were disappointed by the others whose lack of appreciation of these fine opera artists made it difficult for them to fully enjoy it. Why must fine singing talent like Martini's be wasted in the same old story rehashed over and over ever since "One Night of Love"? Business was awful and with many more like this we would certainly be closed up. Our people just won't take it. Running time, 86 minutes. Played November 13-14.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

IN OLD KENTUCKY: Will Rogers, Dorothy Wilson—Saw this at a screening and I believe that it is one of the best Will has ever made.—Harold Smith, Dreamland Theatre, Carson, Iowa. Rural patronage.

NAVY WIFE: Claire Trevor, Ralph Bellamy—This picture was substituted in place of "Redheads on Parade" by Fox, but turned out to be a very pleasing little program picture. Everyone pleased. Some pretty Hawaiian music. Running time, 72 minutes. Played November 19-20.—Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

REDHEADS ON PARADE: John Boles, Dixie Lee—While this drew a good business it did not seem to go over so well. It seemed to lack the punch it takes to put a picture across.—Harold Smith, Dreamland Theatre, Carson, Iowa. Rural patronage.

STEAMBOAT 'ROUND THE BEND: Will Rogers, Ann Shirley—Some remarked it was the best our beloved Will Rogers made. Business about the same as on his previous pictures. Any of his pictures would always get the people who never go to see any other picture. Running time, 80 minutes. Played October 24-25.—Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

WAY DOWN EAST: Rochelle Hudson, Henry Fonda—A fine picture. Pleased all except the young men and the flappers.—G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark. Family patronage.

United Artists

BARBARY COAST: Edward G. Robinson, Miriam Hopkins, Joel McCrea—Seemed to please everyone. Good business. It's a different kind of show for a change. Played November 10-11.—W. A. Cassidy, Frolic Theatre, Midland, Mich. General patronage.

DARK ANGEL, THE: Fredric March, Merle Oberon, Herbert Marshall—One of the best pictures we have played in quite a while. Give it your best days and do not be afraid to boost it. Not a dissatisfied customer in the house, I believe. Running time, 90 minutes. Played November 17-18.—Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

Universal

ALIAS MARY DOW: Sally Eilers, Ray Milland—We considered this very good. In fact, we had no kicks. Normal business. Played November 16.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

HIS NIGHT OUT: Edward Everett Horton, Irene Hervey—While this was not as comical as I expected, it seemed to please the midweek fans and drew average business.—Harold Smith, Dreamland Theatre, Carson, Iowa. Rural patronage.

KING SOLOMON OF BROADWAY: Edmund Lowe, Dorothy Page—A good program picture. Well made story. Interesting. Stars very good. Gave satisfaction.—Bert Silver, New Silver Theatre, Greenville, Mich. City and country patronage.

Warner Bros.

ALIBI IKE: Joe E. Brown, Olivia De Havilland—Fine picture. Good crowd. Everybody pleased. Hurry back, Joe.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

PAGE MISS GLORY: Marion Davies, Pat O'Brien, Dick Powell, Patsy Kelly—A big picture and very entertaining. Lots of good comedy. Star fine and a great cast of characters. Gave good satisfaction.—Bert Silver, New Silver Theatre, Greenville, Mich. City and country patronage.

PAGE MISS GLORY: Marion Davies, Dick Powell, Pat O'Brien—This picture pleased most of our patrons. A few remarked that it was "punk" and, personally, I did not think so much of it, but it seemed to please the greater majority. Lots of comedy. Running time, 92 minutes. Played November 14-15.—Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

SHIPMATES FOREVER: Dick Powell, Ruby Keeler —This show has everything to put it over in the small town. Played this three days to a fine business and surely did satisfy everyone.—Harold Smith, Dreamland Theatre, Carson, Iowa. Rural patronage.

Short Features

Educational

CIRCUS DAYS: Terry-Toon—An acceptable cartoon, not too novel, that is about average for this series.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

DAME SHY: Buster West, Tom Patricola—A very good comedy. This pair keeps them laughing from start to finish. We seldom get a good comedy from this company, but I can hand it to them on this one. Running time, 20 minutes.—Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

DAME SHY: Buster West, Tom Patricola—An extra good comedy. Perhaps some may call it silly, but it got genuine laughs, so why argue? Buster West's dancing excellent.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

E-FLAT MAN: Buster Keaton—Not up to Keaton's recent standard, but still a better than average comedy. Running time, 20 minutes.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage

GROOMS IN GLOOM: Tom Howard—Fair comedy. —Harold Smith, Dreamland Theatre, Carson, Iowa. Rural patronage.

HEY DIDDLE DIDDLE: Paul Terry-Toons—Another average cartoon not blessed either by color or any particular originality.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

HOW AM I DOING?: Chick York and Rose King—Poor. It's a crime to waste film on such awful stuff and a worse crime to expect an exhibitor to pay for it. —L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

LIGHT FANTASTIC, THE: Ernest Truex—Very good comedy.—Harold Smith, Dreamland Theatre, Carson, Iowa. Rural patronage.

MOONLIGHT AND MELODY: Musical Comedies—A good musical but not a Buster West picture. Although he's in it, he has no dance numbers and merely struts through the picture. Dance numbers okay.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

RADIO RASCALS: The Cabin Kids—A good enough novelty reel along the amateur lines so popular now. The Cabin Kids perform as agreeably as usual. Running time, 10 minutes.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

STYLISH STOUTS: Coronet Comedy—Another bad one from Educational. They can make some terrible two-reel comedies. Running time, 20 minutes.—Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

MGM

BARNYARD BABIES: Happy Harmonies—This Happy Harmony is a dandy. Running time, 1 reel.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

BARNYARD BABIES: Happy Harmonies—Just as good as they come. Running time, 11 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

BASKETBALL TECHNIQUE: MGM Sports Parade —Exceptionally good short.—Harold Smith, Dreamland Theatre, Carson, Iowa. Rural patronage.

BEGINNER'S LUCK: Our Gang—Several people said this was the best Gang comedy for a long time. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

CHAIN LETTER DIMES: Oddities—An interesting number of the Oddities, but loses value due to lack of public interest in the now dead fad.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

CHINESE NIGHTINGALE: Happy Harmonies—Not quite so good as others in this series. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

FIGHTIN' FISH: Oddities—A dandy sport reel for all lovers of fishing. Several types shown and provides interest for most anyone. Running time, 10 minutes.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

FITZPATRICK TRAVEL TALKS SERIES: All of this series of one-reel shorts are beautiful and very interesting. Also educational. Running time, 10 minutes.—Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

INFERNAL TRIANGLE: Charley Chase—This comedy is not Charley Chase as listed, and not much of a comedy. Was not liked. Running time, 20 minutes.—Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

LITTLE PEOPLE, THE: Charles "Chic" Sale—Good subject and well done, but is maybe too slow for some audiences. That's the biggest fault with these "Chic" Sale recitations: they lack action.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

LIVE GHOSTS: Laurel and Hardy—Very good. Running time, 21 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

LUCKY BEGINNERS: Amateurs—An amateur

A GREAT HELP

DO YOU KNOW to the penny your exact profit for a given month or year? Do you laboriously waste time or do you follow the one famous, easy method now used by most theatre owners for recording receipts and expenses and allowing for all fixed and current charges?

WHAT WOULD YOU GIVE to know the exact status of your theatre, accounting-wise, when the tax man comes around? There is only one way to be sure that you don't overpay—only one way to prove your return. That's day by day accounting.

IT WILL SAVE you money, time, and aggravation. It is detailed even for the weather and temperature, and yet is notable for its utter simplicity.

ITS HARD COVER keeps the heavy bond pages like new throughout the year and is sufficient to care for twelve months' records.

NOW IS THE TIME to check what available space you still have left in your old book. No doubt you will find it running low. Reorder now so that you can continue your important daily entries without interruption.

group gathered together evidently for the purpose of proving all amateurs aren't good. At any rate, only one act was worth applause. Still the folks got quite a few laughs, so it served as a fair comedy. Running time, 20 minutes.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MEMORIES AND MELODIES: Musical Revue—Another of the Metro shorts in color and some very pretty music and singing. Play it. Running time, 20 minutes.—Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

OLD PLANTATION, THE: Happy Harmonies—All of the Happy Harmonies are good. I have played all of them that have been released. Running time, 10 minutes.—Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

PERFECT TRIBUTE, THE: Charles (Chic) Sale—An exceptionally good subject.—Harold Smith, Dreamland Theatre, Carson, Iowa. Rural patronage.

PRINCE, KING OF DOGS: Oddities—A reel showing how smart this dog is. Very enjoyable, as everyone likes dogs. Running time, nine minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

SHRIMPS FOR A DAY: Our Gang—Good. Lots of entertainment. Running time, 21 minutes.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

SOUTHERN EXPOSURE: Charley Chase—The best Chase comedy in some time. Highly amusing antics in the Kentucky hills.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SPRUCIN' UP: Our Gang—"Our Gang" always pleases. I think they are among the best comedies on the market. Running time, 20 minutes.—Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

THICKER THAN WATER: Laurel and Hardy—As good a comedy as one can expect. It's full of solid laughs and kept everyone happy. Daphne Pollard makes a fine wife for Hardy. Running time, 20 minutes.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

THICKER THAN WATER: Laurel and Hardy—A good comedy with this well-liked team. Running time, 20 minutes.—Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

TWO HEARTS IN WAX TIME: Musical Revues—A good musical with pretty natural colors. Running time, 20 minutes.—Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

TWO HEARTS IN WAX TIME: Musical Revues—Only fair. Not advisable for houses that object to drunk comics. Color very good.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Paramount

FOR BETTER OR WORSER: Popeye the Sailor—We have yet to show a Popeye cartoon that was not pleasing to the audience. Running time, nine minutes. —F. G. Walker, Community Theatre, Chamois, Mo. General patronage.

HYP-NUT-IST, THE: Popeye the Sailor—This was the first "Popeye" we have played; but you can rest assured it will not be the last, for the general verdict was the same one that old Popeye has won from coast to coast, the kingpin of the cartoons! Olive Oyl, changed into a chicken, had them bouncing in their seats. Running time, seven minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

IS MY FACE BLACK: Molasses 'n' January—This was the first time that a lot of the boys had heard this comedy team; and, judging from the number of laughs that followed each of their gags, their radio career should be long and highly successful. If you haven't run this one yet, do so, by all means! Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, N. J. State Prison, Trenton, N. Y. Prison patronage.

JUDGE FOR A DAY: Betty Boop Cartoons—A good one from Betty Boop. A good series to show on any program. Running time, eight minutes.—F. G. Walker, Community Theatre, Chamois, Mo. General patronage.

KING OF THE MARDI GRAS: Popeye the Sailor—One of the best Popeyes we have ever played and have played them all. He is very popular here. Running time, 10 minutes.—Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

KING OF THE MARDI GRAS: Popeye—An excellent Popeye cartoon that pleased fine.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

LITTLE SOAP AND WATER, A: Betty Boop—Betty Boop giving her dog a bath provides plenty of amusement in this cartoon.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

MAKING MANHANDLERS: Grantland Rice Sportlight (New Series)—How Uncle Sam trains the boys at West Point and Annapolis. Would say that this is the best Grantland Rice Sportlight I have ever seen, and that is saying a mouthful. Put "Making Manhandlers" in your best spot; rates special advertising. Running time, one reel.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

NO MOTOR TO GUIDE HIM: Paramount Varieties —"Shorty" the Chimpanzee goes motoring with his owners. Everyone likes to see this little animal and his monkey tricks.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

SIRENS OF SYNCOPATION: Phil Spitalny and His Musical Ladies—A pip of a musical. Running time, one reel.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

RKO Radio

BIRD SCOUTS: Rainbow Parade Cartoons—A dandy color cartoon with the birds playing Boy Scouts. Novel idea laughingly developed. Running time, seven minutes.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

BRICK-A-BRAC: Edgar Kennedy—This is one of the best that we have screened of Kennedy. It will certainly get the laughs. Running time, 19 minutes.—F. G. Walker, Community Theatre, Chamois, Mo. General patronage.

GOING ON TWO: Dionne Quintuplets—A good two-reeler with the cute Dionne Quintuplets. Everyone thought it very interesting. Running time, 20 minutes. —Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

HOME WORK: Leon Errol—A fair comedy that is at least a little different. Final gag gets a genuine belly-laff from the audience.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

IF THIS ISN'T LOVE: Musical—Another RKO comedy that is meaningless. Running time, 19 minutes.—W. J. Carter, Maxine Theatre, Croswell, Mich. Small town patronage.

MAJOR BOWES' AMATEUR THEATRE OF THE AIR: This series of six sold under separate contract; do not wish to condemn them in toto, but the first was disappointing; some of the numbers so amateurish, they made me squirm. Running time, two reels. —Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

MAJOR BOWES' AMATEUR THEATRE OF THE AIR: This registered disappointment in general. Not any better than the average vaudeville act.—Harold Smith, Dreamland Theatre, Carson, Iowa. Rural patronage.

MAJOR BOWES' AMATEUR THEATRE OF THE AIR SERIES: This series of shorts seems to be pleasing. Some good numbers by the amateurs. Running time, 20 minutes.—Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

MARCH OF TIME: These are very good and worth the money. Favorable response from both old and young. Running time, two reels.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

MARCH OF TIME: I am surprised at this series of shorts. I bought them thinking they would draw. I had read so much about them, but they are a great disappointment. Running time, 20 minutes.—Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

MARCH OF TIME: These subjects are good, but one reel too long. Nothing takes the place of good comedies. Sorry I bought March of Time.—G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark. Family patronage.

TRICKS OF THE TRADE: Easy Aces—A fairly interesting filler. Running time, one reel.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ARMIES OF THE WORLD: Adventures of the Newsreel Cameraman—An interesting subject, especially with so much war news in the papers to arouse public interest.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MOROCCO MIRAGE: Magic Carpet Series—An okay travelogue, but nothing new.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Warners Vitaphone

MAIN STREET FOLLIES: Hal LeRoy—This is one of the most enjoyable "Broadway Brevities" we have had. Part of it is in the "Gay Nineties" period. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

OH EVALINE: Hal LeRoy, Eleanore Whitney—A good musical. Warner hardly ever fails to make a good short. Some good tap dancing. Running time, 20 minutes.—Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

OH EVALINE: Hal LeRoy—Pretty good musical.—Harold Smith, Dreamland Theatre, Carson, Iowa. Rural patronage.

PHIL SPITALNY AND HIS MUSICAL QUEENS: Melody Masters—Splendid, especially the playing and dancing of "La Paloma." Running time, 10 minutes. —A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

Serials
Universal

ROARING WEST: Buck Jones—I have just finished with this serial and cannot say much for it. The first few chapters went over, but it seemed as though there was too much repetition of action and 15 chapters are tiresome. Patrons seemed happy when it was over.—Harold Smith, Dreamland Theatre, Carson, Iowa. Rural patronage.

Film Relief Fund Starts

The annual film relief fund drive conducted by Film Daily is now under way, and, as usual, is intended to finance needy cases in the eastern motion picture business, reaching its climax at Christmas time. MOTION PICTURE HERALD

NEWS NOTES FROM CHICAGO SECTOR

UNDER the sponsorship of the Chicago Amusement Publicists Association, Chicago theatremen have united for one of the grandest bits of charity the local theatre profession has ever indulged in. A multitude of Movie Christmas Basket Parties has been arranged for the morning of Monday, December 23d.

At that time special shows will be held in all local theatres. The admission will be donations, any amount, of non-perishable foods. This food will then be distributed to needy families in the neighborhood of the theatres. Local newspapers have all agreed to do all they can in promoting this affair and special trailers are being made up. The pictures will be supplied free by the exchanges.

At a meeting of theatremen in the Congress hotel Monday, more than 150 promised their full support. The idea was suggested some weeks ago by Jack Miller.

Ben Judell leaves this week for New York prior to a trip to the Coast where he will spend the Christmas holidays. He plans to start up as an independent producer in the spring. The pictures will be distributed through his exchanges in the Midwest and other independent distributors.

"Mutiny on the Bounty" continues to run at a terrific pace here. Despite the cold weather the United Artists theatre is doing a standout business. Gross for the first week was approximately $4,000 over the house record.

Bob Collier, Warner exploiteer, left for New York the first of the week after winding up a whirlwind campaign on "A Mid-Summer Night's Dream," which is now showing at the Apollo. The picture was originally slated for a two weeks' run but, assisted by good advertising and ticket plans, it will be held over a third week.

Lou Abramson, of the Allied office, spent last week downstate on a goodwill tour. Lou reports business in the smaller cities as very good.

Bob Gillham, Bill Pine, Al Wilkie and Alec Moss of Paramount's publicity and advertising department, arrived in town two days ahead of the other Paramounters. A cocktail party was given at the Drake for the newspaper scribes Friday evening. Ernst Lubitsch was interviewed by practically all the press folk and rated tops in space in the local sheets.

Art G. Catlin, exploitation expert from the United Artists' office in New York, has been working with theatres downstate in this territory in exploiting UA pictures. Special cooperative ad pages and other forms of ballyhoo have proved very effective on "Dark Angel," "Barbary Coast" and other new product.

Henri Ellman, back from a six weeks' stay in Hollywood, reports that independent producers are giving up the idea of making "quickies." The product of Poverty Row has ceased to bring in revenue, Henri says, and the producers have found it out.

Pictures that cost around $75,000, without a heavy overhead charged on at the beginning, will be the most popular form of independent product during the coming year, Ellman predicts.

"The days of $25,000 'quickies', shot 'in the corner', are past. There is no demand for them and it is hard to get even the negative cost back," Ellman said. "Nowadays, one has to sell to the circuits in order to do much business and circuits will not go for the cheapest product, even on double bills. They want pictures that have good stories and are intelligently produced with capable and well-known actors in the cast."

Citing as an example the production plans of Derr and Sullivan for 16 features and Ben F. Zeidman for 20 features, Ellman said that independent producers such as these would give the major companies plenty to think about with the making of good films at a reasonable cost.

Ellman plans to open a number of independent exchanges on the coast in the coming year. Plans for these exchanges will probably be announced next week following a trip to New York.

Conn Adds to Group

Maurice Conn has added another feature to his group of eight. The new picture is "China Flight."

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

ON HOLDING HANDS

Way back in the beginning of time or maybe a few years later, Cain tried to prove there was no profit in brotherly love by taking a swift sock at Abel. Though quite a spell of days has passed since and lots of laddies known to history have continued to indulge unsuccessfully in the playful sport of fratricide, it seems that brother showmen still think it good form to reach for each others' throats.

F'instance, it wouldn't take the China Clipper many hours to fly from this corner to a sector where, according to reliable reports, newspaper editors are rapidly getting fed up on the reactions of theatremen to publicity given the opposition. It seems, according to our informant, that when one theatreman plants an extra feature, layout, contest, or what have you, the other managers in town come a-runnin' and "want in." And if they no get—well, good mawnin', Judge, and Your Honor, he hit me fust—

Who is to blame and why is neither here nor there. But the hell of it is that such disturbances seriously embarrass the planting of all local theatre publicity, endanger the theatres' prestige and in the end disgusted—and who can blame them—editors wind up by turning rigid and definite thumbs down on extra free space.

If theatremen in the same spots cannot see the wisdom of boosting each others efforts, common horse sense at least dictates a hands-off policy, especially on newspaper contacts. True enough, individual managers are concerned and rightly with landing as much publicity as is possible for their own houses. But there is still a lot to be said on the necessity of advancing the cause of theatre business as a whole.

Fight your heads off in private if you will, gentlemen, but for the future of your own business and for your own protection at least be smart enough to gaze fondly upon each other and hold hands when out in public.

INTRODUCING "CONTACT"

To the list of circuit organ publications is now added "Contact," recently inaugurated monthly of the Miami, Fla., Wometco circuit, edited by Sonny Shepherd, featured by Hal Kopplin by-lines and contributed to by other theatremen long known to these pages. Originally a mimeographed bulletin, "Contact" rapidly outgrew its swaddling clothes to reach the early dignity of regular type and smooth stock. It is an interesting job of work.

Such circuit papers designed for the interest of the entire personnel deserve every bit of encouragement. The extra expense entailed returns itself and more in bucking up circuit morale and engendering an atmosphere of comraderie often striven for without success by the more costly home office methods.

STRIPED PANTS AND CUTAWAY

It has yet to become very pronounced but here and there can be detected the beginnings of a movement to turn theatre advertising and publicity generally into more dignified channels. Undoubtedly audiences have become more sophisticated, at least as concerns their reaction toward the hey-hey and hurry-hurry publicity angles. Thus the hokey and pokey sock and slam has been toned down, and no harm done, that is, unless the soft pedal is applied too vigorously.

There are important situations where conservatism in copy and smartening of the usual press stuff is in keeping but for the average theatre, managers will still agree there is no good reason for any general adoption of the "striped pants and cutaway" school of advertising.

REASON TO BE

Harry Kalmine's Warner Theatres Pittsburgh zone has from the beginning been represented frequently in the Quigley Awards winning column and among those of his boys, the showmen in District Manager C. J. Latta's sector have indeed made a very brave showing. The score so far this year lists a Silver, two Bronzes, three First Mentions, six Honorables.

The Pennsylvanians are proud of their record. They have every reason to be.

To acquaint the public with improvements made in his two theatres, a Western exhibitor worked up some extra publicity by tieup with his merchants. Stores gave tickets with all purchases, the ducats being good for admission at both houses where the folks could spend a casual hour feeling the new carpet and trying out the new seats.

As a follow-up, Hector the bootblack, thinks it might be a good stunt to put on regular picture shows and sell tickets.

Strachan Puts on Sixth Annual Cooking Class

J. Knox Strachan, Warner's Portsmouth Theatre, Portsmouth, Ohio, garnered plenty of publicity for the Laroy Theatre there by tying in with local paper for a free cooking school. Doors opened at 8.45 daily with classes beginning at 9.40, women were entertained during wait by radio program.

Classes were held four mornings with prominent home economics expert lecturing and preparing meals on stage, recipes for which were distributed. Promoted samples of foodstuffs were handed out and various merchants plugged the classes in their ads. Strachan reports this is the sixth annual show and was so highly successful it shall be repeated next year.

Plants Page One Streamer And Eight Column Spread

According to Dick Wright, one of the biggest scoops recently promoted from the local press was manager Frank Savage's newspaper splash of a full eight-column streamer plus full page art spread running fourteen inches deep on "Mutiny" at the Warner, Youngstown, Ohio.

Savage also promoted a series of double-column tieup ads from merchants using Clark Gable in fashion shots.

Morrison Stages "Go to Movie Week" at Strand

Mel Morrison at the Strand in Dover, N. H. recently put over a reported very successful "Go to Pictures Week". For his theatre advance, entire staff wore chest bands with picture week copy on them, congratulatory wires from stars featured in current picture were displayed in lobby and setpiece listed attractions shown during "the" week.

Star biography was run in local daily six days ahead, movie columnist devoted space to theatres pictures and day before opening front page of paper plugged "picture week" and Mel had extra copies of these handed out on streets as "extras".

Baker inserted circulars in all bread leaving factory, Dover High School football team band played on stage with cheer leaders doing their stuff and ice cream was promoted for kiddies at special morning show. Another stunt that worked well for Mel, was the distribution of fake summonses, demanding appearance of recipients at theatre.

Botwick Scores Big On "Popeye" Contest

Some weeks back, Manager Harry Botwick, at the State, Portland, Me., made a tie up with the local paper using the "Popeye" cartoons in the Sunday edition by having the daily include copy in all house ads plugging the cartoon that the sailor-man could also be seen each Sunday at the State. In exchange, Harry plugged the strip on his screen. The tiein went over so well that the paper purchased the cartoon for daily use, giving Botwick an excellent opening for a profitable hookup.

The idea was a coloring contest which was started from the time the strip appeared in the daily, children being requested to color this strip and send it to the theatre, where each day the best was selected, entrant awarded a first prize. Other awards were presented.

Prizes were, first, choice of Popeye doll or football, then for the next winners, pipe, button, and guest tickets. All children who entered received a Popeye pin. Each week a grand prize of Popeye wristwatch was also given.

Paper got behind this in fine fashion with daily stories, photos, house ads, etc., theatre of course sharing all mentions. Botwick kept plugging the contest with a special trailer in which the paper was credited.

As a result of these steady promotions, Harry says the theatre is now cashing in on every new Popeye cartoon. In addition, he is now able to secure special publicity each time cartoon is presented getting a lot of breaks usually reserved for feature attractions.

Sobler Uses Petition To Boost Melton's Debut

To introduce James Melton, new screen star, in "Stars Over Broadway," Abe Sobler, Spreckles Theatre, San Diego, Cal., planted petition blanks in lobby (see photo). Exiting patrons were invited to sign register and state whether they enjoyed Melton's singing sufficiently to want him to be starred in future productions.

Signatures were appended to the petitions, which were sent to the producers in Hollywood, and Abe also enlarged his mailing list by many a name. Stunt was built up well enough to interest patrons sufficiently to spread word around town.

Marx Bally Blows Smoke Via Chest

As is to be expected in any stunt on the Marx Brothers in "A Night at the Opera," screwiness is in order and thus Manager Bert Leighton, at the Grand, Lancaster, Pa., reports a flock of angles on his date that had the folks a bit dizzy.

For instance, the ambulating three-sheet bally cutout as is illustrated below in which the cigar-smoking Groucho was made to blow smoke through his chest, done of course with conveniently placed holes. The bally artist consumed a lot of cigars with his act and performed along the entire route of the local welfare parade, at football stadiums, etc.

The nut idea was carried out further at the theatre with a large barrel of nuts decorated with cutout heads of the Brothers, labeled Walnut Groucho, Almond Harpo and Pecan Chico. Nuts were promoted from local five-and-ten and from the theatre were taken to the store, where a main window was decorated with the picture cutouts and other material to plug a sale—of all things—of mixed nuts.

Upside-down one-sheets displayed in prominent windows, free razor blades with trick copy and some other slants that had Leighton talking to himself were also put on to sell the antics of the daffy brothers.

Dancing School Plugs "Top Hat" for McCullough

Local dancing school in an effort to sell prospective pupils on the school tied in with James McCullough, city manager, for the "Top Hat" engagement at the Fisher Theatre, Danville, Ill., and circularized prospects for instruction on the "Piccolino."

One of the stunts Jim used was huge cake of ice which was planted in front of the theatre with frozen top hat within. Patrons were offered guest tickets for correct guesses as to exact day, hour and minute that the ice would melt, exposing the hat. Another gag was used in lobby with large glass case containing weighing scales and topper next to it, contestants were to guess weight of hat.

Sidewalk stencils were used and through cooperation of nearby hotel a six-foot compo board circle was placed atop marquee with imprinted oversized hat, bearing theatre and playdates.

Last Lap

Here's December, folks, the last lap in the 1935 Quigley Awards Derby—last chance to qualify for the Grand Awards and that Big Free Trip to Hollywood. Yes, sir, Hollywood, where the Grand Awards will be presented to the two winners who will make the round trip by air as guests of your Round Table.

TWA—Transcontinental & Western Air—the Lindbergh Line—will carry those two fortunate theatremen out to Studioland to be honored and entertained as they have never been before. Luxurious Douglas Skyliners fitted with every device for safety and comfort will speed the winners cross country and return and those hospitable studio heads and stars will be waiting to welcome them.

As announced, these winners will be selected from among the entries of the showmen who have won the monthly Quigley Award Silver and Bronze plaques during 1935. If you haven't clicked as yet, get goin' . . you may win in December.

The Competitions are still wide open. Keep in mind that the 1934 Grand Awards were voted on campaigns that won the December plaques—and that means the game isn't over until the last man is out.

So step on it, friends, and start. Get busy on your December entry for the Big Free Trip—that cloud-chasin', sky-kissin' air journey—that big grand and gee-lorious week in Hollywood.

Are you 'acomin'? A-MIKE.

Rotsky Runs Identification Contest for "Big Broadcast"

Through tieup with local newspaper, George Rotsky, Palace Theatre, Montreal, on "Big Broadcast" ran an identification contest with promoted prizes for winners. Each day paper ran photos of leading stars from picture standing in front of mike with faces partially concealed. Contest ran three days ahead with blanks for entrants to fill in their guesses.

On "Anna Karenina" leading department store devoted window display to the "Karenina" blouse. Book store featured Tolstoy's book together with profuse use of stills from picture, Jewish newspaper carried extra readers and mats and George contacted various religious bodies urging them to see the picture.

Girl Atop Marquee Plugs "She" for Floyd

Joe Floyd, New Pantages Theatre, Minneapolis, Minn., staged a little tableau atop his marquee for "She," using a girl to represent Sheba's daughter. At the sound of an Oriental gong, girl emerged on marquee with light playing on her and stood with arms outstretched, lights would fade out and girl disappeared from view. Stunt repeated every five minutes drew crowds.

Ventilator grilles in front of auditorium and along walls were converted into illuminated displays two weeks ahead and huge cutout title letters stood at curb in front of theatre.

On "Becky Sharp" loud speaker was used over box-office while multi-hued lighting effects were applied to marquee and upright sign giving dazzling effect.

MORE HOLIDAY SUGGESTIONS

Members Forward Further Slants On Tieins to Hold Up Grosses During Holiday Shopping Weeks

From Dick Wright, come additional holiday ideas he has passed along to his boys in the Warner Ohio Theatres district. Dick suggests group shot of theatre personnel with arms filled with packages tying in with shop early or mail early drive. Plant photos with papers, properly credited.

Santa Claus in front of the theatre, says Wright, to listen to children express what they want for Christmas. Santa writes down what each child wants or has youngster fill out form which is mailed to parents with good will letter from theatre.

Christmas magazine devoted to the month's attractions and theatre selling copy, is another Wright idea. Merchants can be sold on ads to defray expense and to build up interest, magazines may be numbered with certain lucky numbers posted daily in lobby.

Santa can also put on other stunts, says the Warnerite, such as riding round town in an old-fashioned horse-drawn sleigh appropriately bannered with theatre copy. The old gent can also be used on a street stunt by having him carry the conventional sack from which he can distribute promoted candy, popcorn, etc., to kids. Theatre plug appears on sack and hat, with Santa making regular stops in front of theatre to plug current attraction.

Mayor's Christmas Party

Dean Hyskell forwards the idea of a local Christmas Party Committee headed by the Mayor with members representing newspapers and charity organizations who select a number of "guests" daily to attend the theatre during the pre-seasonal lull up to December 24. Representative committee will be powerful enough to swing daily stories in all papers. Committee might also select an official city Santa Claus to toss gifts from theatre marquee. Or have each store's Santy do the stunt for the publicity.

For Christmas or New Year's dinner tieup, Hyskell offers a hookin with newspaper home economics department for a promotion such as for example a "Joan Crawford Dinner." Tieup copy might lead off as follows: "If you were having Christmas dinner at the home of Joan Crawford, you would be served a feast like this," to be followed with appropriate menu. Include photo of star used who of course will be one in coming picture which of course calls for the proper credits.

Holiday toy workshop idea in lobby can be arranged by reproduction of wood-work shop in lobby or foyer, says Dean. Paste pictures and star photos on light beaverboard to be cut out by Santa's helper, the cutouts given to attending youngsters. Tree gifts and other holiday atmosphere can be added.

Parcel Wrapping Idea

Dick Wright suggests the establishment of a "parcel wrapping for mailing" station in the lobby or foyer and states that the Post Office has been so receptive toward this angle that they have furnished scales, twine, etc., for theatre's use.

In some instances the slant has been worked at theatres centrally located for the planting of a regular sub-station with post office clerks in attendance to sell stamps and accept parcel post mailing, etc.

Roving Photographer Stunt

Have newspaper assign roving photographer to shoot Christmas shopping crowds. Each day photo is run in paper with one or more faces ringed. Those who identify themselves at newspaper office are entitled to guest tickets.

"Shop Early" Community Tieup

As getting folks to do their holiday purchasing early and not delay until the last few days is stressed each year, Hyskell tying in wherever possible with chamber of commerce, business men's association to have theatre run "shop early" trailer and use other good theatre angles to sell the idea in exchange for tiein copy at stores, etc., etc.

Salmon Dresses Quaker Theatres for "China Seas"

For the "China Seas" date at the Quaker Theatres in Philadelphia, Monty Salmon, district manager, used model sail boats and ships tied in with title and small cutout heads of the stars for display purposes in various parts of house. Through tieup with stores, Gable photos were distributed.

On "Wings Over Ethiopia" letters were sent to principals and teachers of schools stressing educational value of picture. An additional showing at 4.30 was arranged for students and heralds with war shots and photo of Selassie were distributed.

"Angel" Co-Op Ad Page

A full page co-op ad was secured on "Dark Angel" by R. V. McGinnis, Russellville, Ark. "Fit for an Angel" copy was carried across entire page in bold type and center of ad was devoted to theatre plug and cut of stars in picture.

ANIMATED DISPLAY. Frank La Falce, Warner Washington zone publicist, grouped pre-holiday attractions into animated display. Soldiers moved on continuous belt.

Turtle, Turtle, Who's Got The Turtle, Asks Hardwick

A reported stunt that gathered such crowds that he had to quit offering free ducats was the turtle gag pulled by Russell Hardwick, Lyceum Theatre, Clovis, N. M., to exploit "She." Russ promoted 36 of these pets from local shop which were put into eight-foot square show case in front of theatre, bottom of which contained sand and about four inches of water. Rocks scattered around were painted black and lettered in white with cast, play dates, etc.

Turtles were also painted with copy and to each person notifying the management that one of the turtles with lettering on its back was resting on a rock, tickets were awarded. Russ says it's a stunt worth working on any picture.

Joiner Holds "Youth" Fashion Display in Lobby

Vancouver's leading shops cooperated with Maynard Joiner at the Orpheum Theatre there by offering for lobby display newest fall fashions in connection with "Accent on Youth." Gowns were attractively displayed (see photo) with credit card accompanying each group. Merchants' ads scatered throughout paper all carried mention of display.

Nut Stunts Highlight Evans "Opera" Opening

Harold W. Evans, Loew's State, St. Louis, must have had a grand time for himself preparing his "Night at the Opera" campaign for which he used a small Austin hooked up to a large greyhound bus "pulling" it around the city, both bus and car being bannered.

Man in Harpo outfit chased blonde around city, headless man walked streets with copy "I've laughed my head off at," etc., etc. Hal also secured a special inverted dummy outfit which man wore on streets giving appearance of walking upside-down, sign reading "I'm upside down from laughing," etc., etc. Special float on truck which was covered with peanuts, and three boys in Marx outfits toured school neighborhoods distributing nuts to kids.

Another eye-attractor was mechanical man atop 22-story hotel with gag rigging over ledge of building; stunt pulled at noon attracted plenty of attention. Candy store devoted display to nuts with tie-in copy, department store arranged special window on ladies' evening clothes with oil painting and blowup of Kitty Carlisle, and entire staff wore banners and Groucho mustache week prior.

Mayor Heads "Curly Top" Parade for Hellman

Lloyd Hellman, Burns Theatre, Newport, Vermont, started his "Curly Top" engagement off with a Shirley Temple party and parade to theatre headed by motorcycle escort for Mayor Bradley and party. Parade was announced in papers, kids lining up with banners and following Mayor's car to theatre where they were presented with confections and ice cream promoted from merchant.

Another highlight was Lloyd's resemblance contest for which store donated prizes. Contestants mailed their photos to theatre where they were displayed in lobby, each picture tagged with number. Ballots were distributed to adults on which to enter their votes and winners were presented with prizes on stage.

Clerks in all larger stores wore imprinted badges to which small Temple heads were glued and manager of each store was given pass to present to clerk making largest increase in sales over week previous.

Bray Plays Up Stars In "Powdersmoke"

Instead of selling "Powdersmoke Range" as another Western, Lew Bray, Vernon Theatre, Vernon, Texas, played it up as the greatest galaxy of Western stars ever to appear in one picture. This was stressed in ads and heralds.

Lew also promoted a show case in which to display western relics including branding irons, powder horns, steer heads, spurs, etc., and dressed his doorman in cowboy regalia promoted from local rancher.

PUBLIC RELATIONS IN THE THEATRE

New Mediums For Practical and Constructive Theatre Contacts Available, Says Round Tabler

by NATALIE TOLMAN KUNZE
Old Colony and Plymouth, Plymouth, Mass.

NATALIE TOLMAN KUNZE is no stranger to these pages. Her work has had to do with the inauguration and development of kiddie clubs and other similar contacts at the theatres with which she has been associated. In this field of endeavor her results have been outstanding. On this page, Mrs. Kunze details the activities effected with Manager Paul Kunze at the Old Colony and Plymouth Theatres, in Plymouth, Mass., and relates what is now being done to further extend the local horizon of the theatre in cooperation with the schools, libraries, churches and service organizations.

In these present times when so many varied interests have cropped up, all aimed at "cutting in" on the dollars that would ordinarily go to theatre box-offices, there is a definite necessity for making and keeping people motion picture conscious. It appears that one way to combat the numerous forms of local competition prevalent in every situation is through institutional advertising; through the newer mediums being developed by the industry itself and now more easily accessible, due, in part, to the "cleaning up" of the films. To keep one's public constantly talking and thinking motion pictures and screen personalities will do much to counteract the inroads being made by other attractions, as well as making more effective the selling of our own programs.

Much of this type of thing is being done now by producers themselves, through magazines, especially those catering to the female sex, and via the radio and direct mailing. Much more that is constructive can be accomplished by the theatres themselves, through exploiting the new mediums of schools, libraries, churches and service organizations; mediums that have been long existant but never before within reach for practical exploitation purposes.

These ready-made new mediums need only common sense, a thorough understanding of the other sides' angle and proper handling to make them lucrative selling aids for the motion picture.

Your Schools

Unquestionably, the best and most easily accessible for direct results are the schools. Logically, for indirect results, the schools must be considered—since the youngsters, from whom considerable revenue now comes, are the adult patrons of tomorrow. Given a background of motion picture appreciation in school, now a part of the High School curriculum in many places, they become conscious of the importance of the screen, not only as entertainment, but as an aid in their chosen field of education.

Here in Plymouth we maintain very happy and profitable relations with the schools and are accorded every reasonable co-operation. Success in this direction lies definitely in approaching the thing strictly from the educator's angle and keeping away from the "advertising" or commercial, which naturally follows anyway and accomplishes the theatre's aim without it being obvious. Visual education, in which the motion picture plays the prominent part, is being given increased emphasis by national associations of English and History teachers, and class room discussion of all phases of picture production is being urged and more generally adopted.

A most helpful accessory available to all theatres for the furtherance of motion picture appreciation in schools, is the Study or Photoplay Guides issued on many of the better pictures. When these are procurable, we consider them a part of our planned exploitation and furnish whatever quantity is needed for the classes at our own expense, as the schools here have no provision for this extra expenditure. Seeing the picture is a requirement of class room discussion and the Guides become the property of the pupils to take home.

Further along these lines we occasionally furnish school dramatic groups with the sketches and playlets of scenes from films that are published in the press sheets. This type of school co-operation, together with making an effort to maintain the week-end programs as near the "family" type as possible; making occasional changes in Saturday matinee shows when a picture is not suitable, etc., has resulted in a most friendly attitude towards the theatre. We frequently are able to arrange special showings of appropriate pictures for school children, for which schools are closed and children attend in a body and very often have herald distribution through the schools—something which years ago would have been unheard of.

Not so long ago, libraries, librarians or trustees were slow to co-operate with films because of the belief they did not need it and that the only benefits would be to the theatre. As the schools have changed, so have the libraries, and film-library co-operation is very readily forthcoming—following the purgation of films and a realization that such activity does actually increase book circulation; and indirectly attracts to the library an element of people who rarely used its facilities. Here again, it is necessary to understand the other's viewpoint, and not attempt to dictate the choice of films for co-operation. Let them decide, work it out their way, and abide by their decisions.

Library tie-ups are valuable, not too costly and guarantee a thorough distribution. The use of bookmarks, and desk or bulletin board display of properly chosen stills, as well as posted lists of coming attractions, are used here effectively and are welcomed by the library. Children's story hours, held in the library, based on sections of the story from an appropriate picture, proved popular with both.

The clergy, always the last to expound on the merits of a photoplay, seems cognizant of what has been done within the industry to raise standards; and while watching and waiting are much less antagonistic, even willing to help where the moral tone of a story is uplifting and of a high standard. For our recent engagement of "Last Days of Pompeii," several local clergymen used subject matter from the film as the basis of their Sunday sermon. We have promises of a repetition for the showing of "Crusades."

Service Organizations

Another group, not to be overlooked, is the Motion Picture Council or Committee of the Woman's Clubs.

Here in Plymouth an additional channel for exploitation has been opened up which gives the theatre an opportunity of having the advance "better" picture releases announced at the club meetings; and in so far as is possible, the dates of their showing here are given at the same time. We, also, supervise a list of endorsed photoplays, which appears monthly in the local club house-organ, and on special occasions make-up and insert in said house-organ a dignified fly-leaf supplement. An additional means of co-operating with this group was the running of Saturday morning Juvenile Matinees—a Woman's Club sponsored and supported project.

The proper and continued use of these newly-opened avenues of good-will and exploitation, each in themselves powerful local factors, cannot help but maintain any theatre on an extremely firm footing.

If you haven't been doing it, talk with your school superintendent, the library, your clergy. If they were cold and disinterested before and are abreast of the times, they will have changed. We found it so.

Critic Shows How

William Boehnel, ace movie reviewer, together with Morris Helprin, wrote this aviation thriller of death in the clouds. Rated one of the best film scribes in the country, Boehnel has written an absorbing drama that can serve as a good working model for movie writers. It has suspense, timing, characterization and unfolds a logical, well-told story. The Trade Press says:

FORCED LANDING

PACKS GOOD SUSPENSE AND THRILLS IN MURDER MYSTERY OF AIRPLANE CRIME THAT WILL PLEASE . . . a drama that sustains the excitement and suspense to the end . . . the narrative has many original twists and surprises. —Film Daily

. . . a continually interesting mystery drama, having its moments of suspense . . . original major situations and rapid-fire developments . . . the picture makes good use of its ingredients for heightening interest. —Motion Picture Daily

PROJECTION ROOM EDITING

ONE of the most important attentions to the motion picture on its way to the public is never considered, measured, evaluated—and that is what may be called projection-editing.

The elimination of phases and phrases and sequences and bits that exhibitors deem unacceptable to their audiences or indiscreet for any number of reasons, is common and frequent practice in the theatres of the land. The technique varies from excision of the film itself to the manipulation of gain controls and blurring images.

The picture maker in the pride of his craft and flown with a sense of authority will call this "censorship," of course, whereas it is another of those internal processes of adjusting the product to the requirements of the customer.

The preponderance of this projection room attention to the product in the theatres of the land is given to shorts and comedies, which appear to offer special temptation for the injection of material that invades and jars.

Because of the application of this projection room technique, so readily and immediately dealing with the problems as they arise, the exhibitor rarely takes the trouble to file complaint with the booker or the exchange and the story never gets back to the producer. So the studio never knows—but the cuts so made are in sum total probably vastly in excess of all those made by external censorships.

"HOW!"

PICTURE makers' murmurings about restrictive pressure against "the use of scenes showing excessive drinking" by the Hays office, and the viewpoint in production making that pressure necessary, reflect an inadequate knowledge of this America.

Be it known, also, that in very large and important areas a preponderance of the better people, the buying power if you please, inclines to the notion that any drinking at all is excessive.

Liquor is a commonplace, more important maybe than tomato juice, but no more significant, in New York and Hollywood, but on most of the Main Streets it ranges from self-conscious naughty adventure to Deadly Sin. On Main Street liquor is something for the idle, immoral rich and the debased, abandoned poor. To take a few samples from a transcontinental investigation in the best hotels of Richmond, Indiana, Boonville, Missouri; McPherson, Kansas; and La Junta, Colorado—places where the Rotary and Kiwanis lads rise and sing—even ginger ale comes up to the room camouflaged for eyes in transit by a paper bag, while the ice travels in a water pitcher. And, mind you, some of these states are painted in very dark on the wet map. There is plenty in a field survey to indicate that the vote was against prohibition rather than for liquor.

It would seem that the picture makers will do well to take these facts into consideration when they seek realism and verity in their depictions. Liquor is decidedly characterization and motivation, not just a property to dress the scene, in the notion of a very large proportion of the customers.

It should be recorded, however, that Hollywood has not consciously and wilfully transgressed or distorted the place of liquor in dramatic representations, it has merely accepted liquor cliche fashion, just as cartoonists always used to put the banker in a silk hat. It is another rubber stamp to discard.

WHAT'S IN IT — NOT WHO?

HOLLYWOOD'S oft heard cry for stories is but a concentrated echoing of the voice of the exhibitor speaking for his patrons across the nation. If the expressed opinions of many competent showmen in centers great and small are to be taken at par, names are today a smaller component of box office value than ever before in the career of the screen. Boiled down, the showman comment now is that a star name means only as much as it implies as to the probabilities of the general character and merit of the picture.

And that reminds one of Miss Mary Pickford's comment the other day when she, too, visiting her New York office, lamented the paucity of adequate material and exclaimed about the high cost of even commonplace talent for the most incidental roles in Hollywood.

This is, says Mistress Mary, the author's day if he will take it—and the exhibitor is willing to agree.

WITH John just getting through his "protege" problems and Ethel defending her dignity by taking a poke at a girl reporter in New Orleans, as reported, we are getting worried about Lionel. Maybe he does all his acting before the camera.

IT would be a large favor if the caption writers of the daily press would refrain from titling every layout of politicians in close-up stills as "character studies."

MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S

"Fight ASCAP!"

In the aftermath of the Warner withdrawal from the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America this week demanded "substantial reductions" in the music tax "extortions." ASCAP indicated there would be no reductions.

The MPTOA also called for a continued exhibitor fight against ASCAP, and suggested that Warner refrain from levying additional music fees on its accounts.

The National Association of Broadcasters meanwhile was discussing new proposals with ASCAP, prior to formulating policy to fit the situation. And the Society revamped its formula of distributing revenue to publisher members. All the developments are related in the stories starting on page 18.

Exhibitors Speak!

The 2,000-foot reel is favored over the present 1,000-foot length by more than 76 per cent of exhibitors. Those opposed to the change-over constitute 16 per cent of the whole, while six per cent have reached no conclusion.

Exhibitors welcoming the change-over reason that it will improve projection, eliminate much unnecessary work in the booth and increase projection efficiency. Arguments against it are that it will mean a burden of cost, especially for the small theatre man, and many booths are not equipped to handle the longer reel. Exhibitors who have made no decision say they want technical advice, but indicate opposition on the ground of expense.

With the exception of Universal, the principal distributors, however, are proceeding with arrangements to make the changeover complete by April 1st, regardless of minority exhibitor opposition and rejection of the proposed standard by New England projectionist unions. What the exhibitor survey determined, and other "long-reel" developments, are related in the story starting on page 15.

British Studio

Amalgamated Film Studios, Ltd., has been launched in England to build a $2,000,000 plant at Boreham Wood, London. Sponsors are H. E. Soskin, uncle of Paul Soskin who recently took over the bulk of British and Dominion Productions; Major Charles H. Bell, former Paramount theatre executive, and E. A. Stone, theatre architect.

Sir Robert McAlpine and Company will build the proposed plant, two-thirds of which is designed to be ready by June and all of it by October.

Amalgamated was floated privately with a capital of $250,000. No stock covering the new project will be sold publicly.

It is reported United Artists, British and Dominion, Paramount and whatever production Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer launches in England will be concentrated in the plant.

Mr. Bell will go to New York in February.

Stone Walls

The program of current releases, along with those pictures ready for showing this winter, is the most promising the industry has had in years and as a result the financial returns of a number of companies are running at the best rate this year with prospects that the winter months will continue this trend. This is in the opinion of Wall Street's Wall Street Journal, which predicts that "earnings for the current months of a number of producing companies may show surprising gains."

An analysis of the situation, and with a general discussion of the financial possibilities of three of the larger producing companies, are found on page 48.

Snags for WPA

Uncle Sam's producing venture, called the WPA theatre project, is running into all sorts of snags, and Actors Equity Association and other theatre and theatre labor groups are up in arms about the delay brought about by a maze of red tape. The WPA refuses to do anything about it, however, and meanwhile some of the units are not starting because they cannot get actors. Competition to motion picture theatres at the moment appears far removed. See page 40.

A New Domain

In a decision which lawyers say will have far reaching effects on the composition and use of music, including motion picture recording, Judge Alfred C. Coxe, in the federal district court in New York, established new principles in connection with copyright and adaptation of music from the public domain. The implications of the decision, given in an infringement suit, are detailed in the story on page 41.

Freakish

One of the most freakish pieces of insurance underwriting ever to involve an entire business, and one which stands to increase exhibitors' box-office receipts, made its appearance quietly this week in the form of policies assuring patrons their winnings in Bank Nights when their numbers are drawn and they are absent.

This, and the court decisions covering chance games in New York, Alabama, Milwaukee and New Hampshire along with other rulings on the practice are covered in detail in the story found on page 53.

Heads Drive

Sidney R. Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox, has taken over the chairmanship of the motion picture section of the Business Groups cooperating in the 29th annual Christmas seal campaign of the New York Tuberculosis and Health Association, which opened Thanksgiving Day.

Mr. Kent is writing letters to his film associates explaining the activities of the association, which works not only in the field of tuberculosis, but also in those of heart disease, social hygiene, child health, dental health and industrial health.

Checks may be sent to Mr. Kent at 444 West 56th Street or to Thomas W. Lamont, treasurer, New York Tuberculosis and Health Association, 386 Fourth Avenue.

NEWS SUMMARY COVERING THE SCREEN WORLD

"Anti-Aggressors"

That independents are combining for mutual business benefits is evident in New York, where a proposal for a 100-theatre independent circuit has been revived, and in Philadelphia and Des Moines, where exhibitors are forming buying and booking combines. In Iowa-Nebraska it is a theatre building combine as well.

The New York plan contemplates $2,000,000 underwriting by a banking house, and the owners would turn their properties over for stock and other compensation. See page 39.

Critics Differ

Harbingers of a merry controversy probably a-blowin' up may be implied in innuendoes that the film critics of New York newspapers and of Time and The New Yorker organized to make annual awards in order to pick a bone with the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences in Hollywood.

The critics deny that as an organization they "resent" the Academy's selections, but at the same time retain for themselves the right to differ, which they have done as recently as last year.

Dead Contract

The invalidity of "standard," "compulsory" motion picture rental contracts, held illegal in the Paramount case, as decided by the Minnesota courts, was given effect by the United States Supreme Court this week when it dismissed the appeal of Fox Film Corporation for a review of its long-fought suit against A. B. Muller, Minnesota exhibitor. The Supreme Court dismissed the case for want of jurisdiction. See Page 38.

English Ages

Sixty per cent of England's motion picture theatregoers are between the ages of 22 and 45, 17 per cent are between 15 and 21, and 14.6 per cent range from 45 to 60.

This conclusion has been made by London Films, of England, as the result of an investigation throughout all England and Ireland to determine types of patrons and their tastes, the results of which are now reported in the New York press.

In answer to the question, "How frequently do you see films?" it was found that some 38 per cent attend the movies once a week and more than 27 per cent attend twice a week. Eight per cent replied that they go "occasionally"; 8.19 per cent go three times a week, 8.14 per cent once per fortnight, 1.13 per cent four times a week, 1.53 per cent attend almost every day.

The figures on the occupations of moviegoers brings forth some illuminating facts. The largest class, comprising 22.40 per cent of the total, consists of "business clerks," which would probably be translated into American as "white collar" workers. "Home duties," presumably meaning those in domestic service, comes next with 16.70 per cent. The classifications of other patrons next in order follow:

CLASS	PERCENTAGE
Professional	15.00
Industrial Workers	9.40
School and University	6.60
Employers and executives	4.85
Retired and independent	4.40
Shop assistants	4.00
Arts and Crafts	3.87
Army, Navy, Air Force	1.60
Agriculture	1.20
Unemployed	0.80

The unemployed, as expected, occupy the lowest rank, although the so-called intellectual and executive classes are less inclined toward the cinema than those in humbler positions.

Another point in the questionnaire concerns the popularity of British actors. In all, some 330 players received votes, 11,909 of which went to Charles Laughton. George Arliss is next with 6,915, and he is followed by Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Robert Donat, Jack Hulbert, Leslie Howard, Tom Walls, Jack Buchanan, Gordon Harker, Conrad Veidt, Leslie Banks and Clive Brooks.

Opposes Duals

The Motion Picture Council for Brooklyn at a recent meeting adopted this resolution in protest of double features. Resolved: That the thoroughly worthwhile picture is expensive. In order to offset this cost a tawdry, second-rate film is often added, thus vitiating the value of the whole program.

That these double-feature programs are too long, resulting in loss of interest, tired nerves and eye strain for both adults and children. That they preclude the introduction of more of the fine travelogues, scientific films and "shorts."

Cool Water

About 50 theatres in Westchester County, New York, are watching moves for studying new sources of water supply in the county. The matter is important to air-cooled houses.

$800,000 Bill

New York film exchanges are facing a possible $800,000 combined annual tax following the assessment of United Artists' Exchange of $20,100 by the city in connection with the two per cent sales tax. The exchanges will fight the assessments to the highest courts, basing their claims on the argument that they rent films and do not sell them and therefore they are exempt from the tax. This and other tax developments throughout the country are covered in a story on page 36.

Option Confabs

J. Cheever Cowdin, holding an option to purchase Universal Pictures, was meeting in New York this week with Lawrence Fox, head of Mr. Cowdin's Standard Capital Company, and with Charles R. Rogers, concerning the exercising of his option. However, a decision is not expected for another few weeks.

Navy Patrons

Film producers during 1935 received more than $300,000 from the United States Navy, it was reported this week by Rear Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of the Bureau of Navigation.

The government itself contributed only $85,000 toward the $323,280 spent during the year for pictures, the remainder having been made up from ship's store profits and contributions from ships and stations.

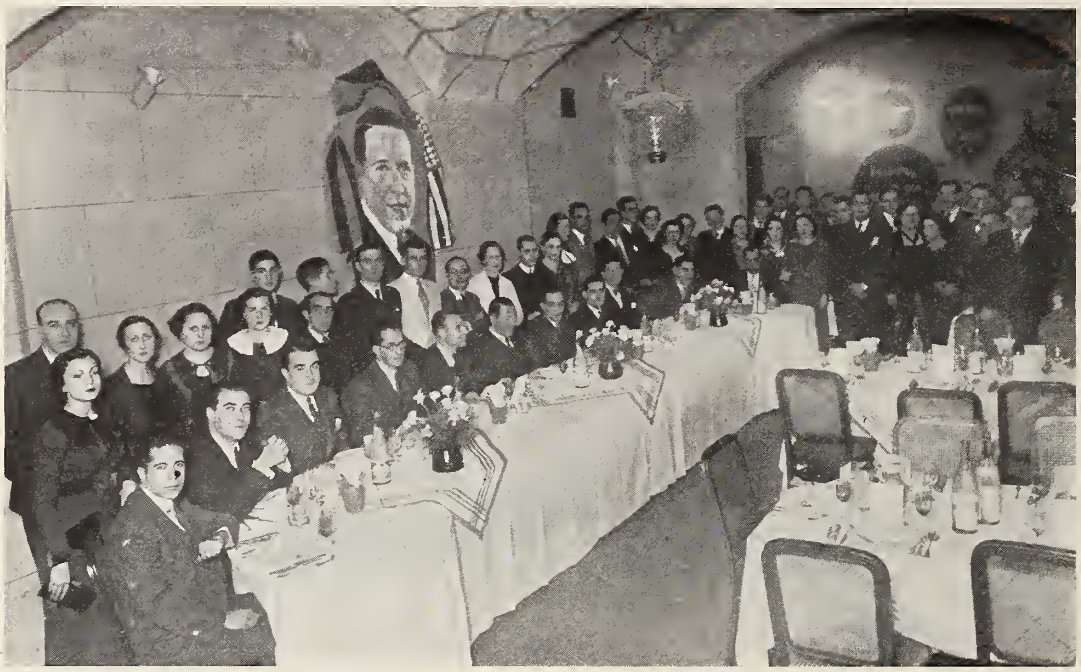
The unit price for leasing programs remained the same as for 1934, it was stated.

Wedding

What Mr. Merlin Hall Aylesworth called the "wedlock" of radio and screen, was solemnized this week in Hollywood, at a gala opening of the National Broadcasting Company's magnificent studio and broadcasting plant. Among speakers were Mr. Aylesworth himself, Mr. Will Hays, Mr. Richard Patterson, Mr. Al Jolson. The latter acted as master of ceremonies.

All of the speakers commented on the union thus effected between the screen and the radio. Concerning this union, as well as the formalities of its establishment, both Martin Quigley and Terry Ramsaye speak elsewhere in this issue—Mr. Quigley, in his Viewpoints on page 29; and Mr. Ramsaye, from Hollywood, on page 28.

This Week in Pictures



NEWCOMER. Beverly Roberts, night club singer, who has been signed by Warner for a leading role opposite Al Jolson in "The Singing Kid."

HONORED. The officials and branch managers of Radio Films honor Roberto Trillo, the general manager, in a gala banquet given at the Taberna Vasca, in Barcelona, Spain.

HERE TO WITNESS PLAYS. Sam Bischoff, associate producer at the Warner Burbank studios, arriving in New York aboard the S.S. Pennsylvania with Mrs. Bischoff for a combination business and vacation trip. He will inspect plays his company is interested in filming.

MASQUERADES AS A BOY. In her new picture, "Sylvia Scarlett" for RKO Radio, Katharine Hepburn had to shear her hair, as we see.

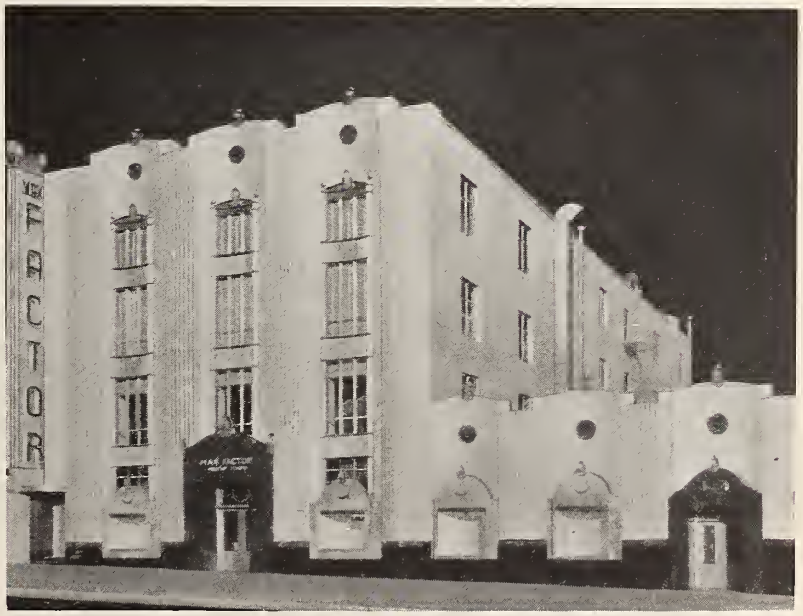
STARRED. (Right) Greta Nissen, who heads cast of First Division's, "Spy 77," Alliance production.

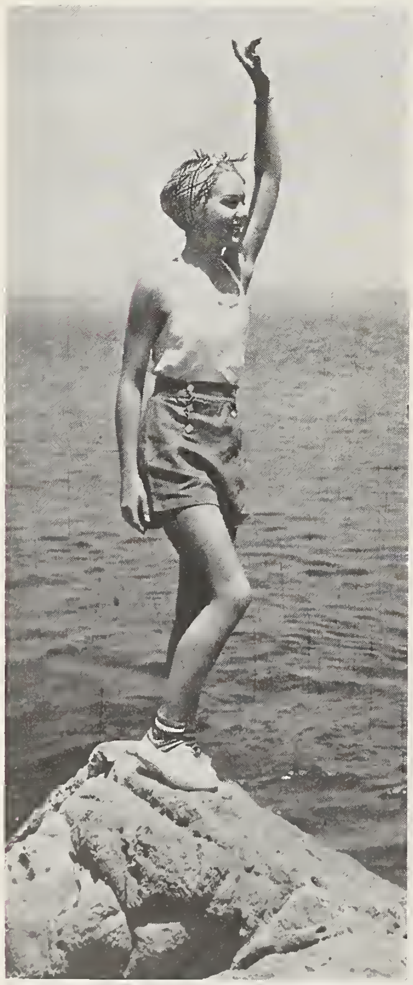
THEY SEEM TO AGREE. Ed Kuykendall, president of the MPTOA discusses with Margaret Sullavan, Universal star, her latest picture, "Next Time We Love." Mr. Kuykendall saw this picture in production during his recent visit to the Coast. He seems well pleased.



FACTOR'S NEW STUDIO. Max Factor celebrated his twenty-sixth anniversary as Hollywood's foremost makeup artist with the opening of this new modernistic studio pictured here. Designed by S. Charles Lee, noted theatre architect, it includes among other interesting features, a powder making plant. The studio occupies nearly four acres.

RELAXING. Bewhiskered Wallace Beery and John Boles on "A Message to Garcia" set at 20th Century-Fox.

LATEST ABE. Chic Sale, who portrays Lincoln in "The Perfect Tribute," with his daughter at the Capitol, New York.



A DECEMBER DIP. Winter has no interruption for Anne Shirley's favorite outdoor sport. The young RKO Radio star is currently in "Chatterbox."

ENGLAND BOUND. Robert Young arrives in New York with Mrs. Young, on his way to England to appear for GB in "The Secret Agent," for which he was borrowed from MGM He'll do a villain role.

STEPPING DOWN. Ginger Rogers, singing and dancing star with Fred Astair in RKO Radio's "Follow the Fleet," descending for her daily tennis.

WELLS SURE HIS AIM NOT BRITISH FILM DOMINANCE

Terry Ramsaye, in Hollywood, interviews Britain's "H. G." and suggests a possible motive for his enthusiatic stay among the studios of America

by TERRY RAMSAYE

The first man to write a motion picture story is in Hollywood writing, again, motion picture stories, making notes, planning revolutions in the art that he was one of the first to discover—just forty years ago.

This man is Mr. H. G. Wells, the British Mr. Wells, doing a job for Britain.

Mr. Wells is the season's literary lion of the motion picture community, being met at teas and dinners and the chattering rendezvous from the Vendome to the Trocadero and way stations.

Mr. Wells' host in Hollywood, for his sojourn of exploration, is Mr. Charles Chaplin. The social chatelaine of Mr. Wells' movements, his comings and goings and engagements is the somewhat pixie Miss Paulette Goddard. And one may fancy, too, that Mr. Wells is learning about movies, too, from Anita Loos, who wrote her first script for Biograph with a lipstick in a roadshow dressing room, about the year Miss Mary Pickford began, and graduated into literary rank with "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" half a decade before sound came in.

The week-end this is written Mr. Wells is, under the guidance of these able mentors, extending his researches into the nature of things cinema to the region of Palm Springs on the desert.

Across the table, with Miss Goddard presiding, even prompting, encouraging, Mr. Wells chatted the other day about his adventures in a new form of script—he's a contract script writer for a year or such a matter, for Alexander Korda, you remember.

Something Brand New In Script Technique

And in his motion picture writing Mr. Wells opines that he has arrived at a new story form exemplified by his "Things to Come" (Macmillan).

"It is a form of narrative that pictorially presents in words, always in active present tense, as the motion picture is," he explains. "I endeavour to set down the story, and without a lot of the detail on paper that goes into typical scripts. It is a waste of time and effort for a story teller to write stage directions, details about long-shots and close-ups and all that for the directors and technical experts. They are intelligent, capable and if one can convey to them the story so that they see and feel it they will know best how to put it on the film."

"This is," I suggested to Mr. Wells, "a direct sequel of that scenario novel of yours of some seven years ago, 'The King Who Was a King'."

"Except," interrupted Mr. Wells, "that that was not a practical plausible motion picture story."

"Yes, that was a piece of Graustarkian peace propaganda."

Mr. Wells did not seem to care for that notion.

"Anyway," he went on, "my new stories are much better, the second better than the first, the third better yet, and the fourth much—"

"Do you mean you have four stories done, three ahead on production?"

He's Three Up On Production

"Oh, certainly," this was with the wave of a hand denoting that the labor had been inconsiderable. It is necessary to remember that this man has for forty years been exuding copy and volumes from the light to the ponderous practically without interruption.

Reflection, talk of the early days of the British screen and Mr. Robert W. Paul, brought up the title of that amazing Wells story of '94, "The Time Machine," which was substantially a presentation in fiction of an anticipation of what the photoplay now is.

"That, 'The Time Machine,' is probably the best piece of motion picture material that you will ever write," I suggested.

Miss Goddard bent inquiring attention, a bit bepuzzled.

"That, my dear," Mr. Wells gently explained, "was written quite a number of years before there was any Paulette—except perhaps in happy anticipation."

Paulette appeared dubious.

"There are," Mr. Wells assured, "always pretty Paulettes in the tomorrow—for the ages, on and on endlessly—that makes the world."

But back to "The Time Machine."

"That is not ready yet—the time for the Time Machine is yet to come—for there would be a most excellent chance for that to go wrong in the making now."

It is natural enough that Mr. Wells should consider that story with a certain cautious attention, for it was indeed the tale that gave him the largest part of his first flare of literary attention, and it was the story which by its success had much to do with ordaining the course of his subsequent career.

British Domination Of Screen World? "Why?"

Mr. Wells, quite laden now with Hollywood lore, was of the notion that he would be flying back to New York in a fortnight, and sailing then very shortly for England.

"This, then," it was suggested in bantering fashion, "is just one of those outrider expeditions representing one of the earlier moves in a British program aimed at a sometime dominance of the screen world—a new Rule Britannia?"

Mr. Wells flashed at once both denial and interest. "Why?"

"London was in her day," I answered, "capital of the world of the stage, and of literature—the British are world merchandisers today and the motion picture is both merchandise, and by its influence, the maker of markets for merchandise—why should Britain not contemplate world dominion of the screen—and there are some increasing liaisons between Hollywood and London that might tend that way, apparent even now." And we recounted them.

Mr. Wells' rejoinder was more entertaining than convincing.

People Not Varied Enough in England

"Casting is one trouble about British pictures," he urged as argument. "We have no such a medley of peoples and types as you have available here. Why in the making of one picture in London, the arch-villain role, which called for a weazened old desperado, made it necessary to send down into the slums of Cardiff in Wales for an old rascal, who had to be sent to jail immediately when the picture was done. Now over here they are not so scarce—you could have taken your choice of a thousand of them."

"Old scoundrels—you mean?"

"But now that sound has driven the American movies indoors, you have lost

RAMSAYE MEETS WELLS

the advantages of climate and location," Mr. Wells went on. "If the pictures are to be made inside, we can do that in London, too."

However that did not suit his theme of denial of Britain's world ambitions for the screen so well. He took another tack.

"The English, you know, are dreadfully undramatic, untheatrical. They are so terrifically given to understatement and repression.

"Why, you know, if an English couple comes to a crisis, the break is likely to be something like this: He says, 'My dear, we are getting along badly, we shall have to separate. I shall see my solicitors and make arrangements.' Now that," urged Mr. Wells, "is very undramatic."

"That being the case," I observed, "how do you explain the rather large successes of British leading men in the American theatre and on the screen?"

"That," answered Mr. Wells, "is because their cold demeanor forces the charming ladies playing opposite to act."

This brought heavy applause from Miss Goddard, who is obviously a charming audience for Mr. Wells.

Some indiscreet and unkind persons from time to time have been so rude as to endeavour to get Mr. Wells to make an expression concerning the Hollywood scene. He has admitted that he considers the climate entrancing, the girls pictorially delightful. But he was rather put on the spot the other night at an Academy dinner in his honor, when without forewarning he was called upon to speak. He arose, and after a few kind and non-committal words, said, "Now that I have seen Hollywood, I am speechless." He then sat down.

And that reminds one of the diplomacies of Mr. Gus McCarthy, who reviews pictures here for Motion Picture Herald. When, as often occurs, he is importuned by persons interested for his opinions of a production after a preview, he has a standard answer, delivered with a merry inflection: "Really, I have never seen anything like it before."

Pathe Name May Again Be Used

The Pathe name may supplant the First Division mark on that company's product.

The change might also mark a new phase in Pathe's re-entry into motion picture activity, inasmuch as the possibility of Pathe either resuming production on its own or releasing under its own name additional product from independent producers is admitted by officials of the company.

However, the new product would be handled by the present First Division distribution system, it is believed.

Pathe's agreement to refrain from re-entering production for a five-year period, which was made at the time the company's principal film assets were acquired by RKO, expires next January 29th. The current discussions on reviving the name as a film brand by dropping the First Division name are in anticipation of the expiration of the five-year agreement.

Pathe is said to have been advised by RKO officials that that company, which owns RKO Pathe News, has no objections to the revival of the name of Pathe as a product brand even in advance of the expiration date.

Customs Passes Revised Film

A revised version of Eureka's Czechoslovakian picture, "Ecstasy," which has been the subject of much court action, has been passed by the law division of the United States Customs Department as "not objectionable."

Stockholder Charges Losses Caused by Atlas Purchase

James J. Donovan, shareholder of Securities Allied Corporation, which acquired his stock almost six months after dissolution of the corporation, is the plaintiff in a $15,000,000 "minority stockholders" suit started last Friday against nine officers of Securities and Atlas Corporation. Atlas has a considerable interest in Paramount and owns half of Radio-Keith-Orpheum with an option to buy the rest.

The suit began in the New York supreme court before Justice Albert Cohn. The defendants are Thomas B. Chadbourne, Floyd B. Odlum, L. Boyd Hatch, Oswald L. Johnston, William B. Joyce, Samuel McRoberts, George H. Howard and Reeve Schley.

Mr. Donovan claims that, prior to August, 1931, when, as a result of the acquisition of all the voting stock of Securities Corporation, Atlas assumed control of the management of the former, losses were sustained by Securities due to the action of former officers and directors.

The plaintiff asserts that the new management of Securities should have brought suit to recover the losses sustained. The defendants deny all liability and assert approval of the transaction by shareholders. Their counsel further assert that the plaintiff should be examined first, because of doubts as to his standing to maintain the action.

Irvin Deer in Cleveland

Irvin E. Deer, of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America staff, was the guest speaker Wednesday in Cleveland at a meeting of parents, educators and psychologists, sponsored by the Cleveland Cinema Club.

Paramount Net Is Set at $737,791

Paramount Pictures, Inc., and its wholly-owned or substantially wholly-owned subsidiaries, earned in the third quarter of this year an estimated net of $737,791, after expenses, federal income taxes and interest on the debentures, compared with operating earnings for the third quarter of 1935 of $999,189.

Adding dividends from non-consolidated subsidiaries of $186,430 and foreign exchange adjustment of $59,013, earnings for the last quarter were $1,244,632. After deducting estimated federal income taxes of $106,841 and interest on debentures of Paramount Pictures, Inc., of some $400,000, there was an estimated net of $737,791.

For the second quarter of the year the company estimated net earnings of $796,000.

The indicated third quarter earnings were equal to $2.68 a share on the $6 first preferred shares outstanding upon consummation of the reorganization. After deducting preferred dividends requirements the balance was equal to 50 cents a share on the second preferred stock.

Paramount explained that the third quarter "results are subject to annual audit by public accountants and do not include the results of operations of Olympia Theatres, Inc., and its subsidiaries in receivership throughout the period, and whose operations, therefore, do not affect the current earnings of Paramount Pictures, Inc. Operations of companies which are not wholly-owned or substantially wholly owned are included only to the extent that dividend income has been received.

"As indicated in connection with publication of the preceding quarters earnings, the adverse effect of the studio reorganization undertaken early in the year will continue to be reflected in the operating figures for the foruth quarter," the company declared.

Kamen Seeks Voiding Of Longacre Action

Counsel for Kay Kamen, Inc., will make a motion in supreme court of New York to vacate a notice of examination before trial in connection with a breach of contract suit brought by Betty Longacre, who is suing Kay and Herman Kamen for $79,000, which she says is due her under an oral agreement by which she was to receive 50 per cent of the net profits of the defendants' business.

The defendants had a contract with the Walt Disney Enterprises to use the Mickey Mouse character on merchandise. They charge that Miss Longacre was formerly a stenographer-secretary in Herman Kamen's employ and the petition for examination was not brought in good faith.

James Barrett, Actor, Dead

James S. Barrett, actor, died at Dr. Reed's Private Hospital at Amityville, L. I., after an illness of two months. He was 60 years old. He was a member of the Lambs, the Friars and Freeport Lodge of Elks. Surviving are his wife, Frances Brandt, now playing in "Pride and Prejudice" on Broadway, a son, Walter, and a brother, Walter B. Barrett, of Freeport, L. I.

76% OF EXHIBITORS FOR CHANGE TO LONG REEL

Poll of Theatres Shows Majority Believe 2,000-Foot Size Will Bring Smoother Projection, End Mutilation

Theatre owners the country over are overwhelmingly in favor of the changeover from the 1,000-foot to the 2,000-foot reel, it is indicated by a survey among a cross-section representative of all strata of theatre owners. The ballot would appear to resolve conclusively the controversy which has been raging for the last six months between the distributors, exhibitors and studios, and among themselves, over the practicability of the switch to the longer reel. set for April 1st.

In previous discussions only the sentiments of the large distributors, through a committee of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, and of the studios, through the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences in Hollywood, were made known. Finding favor at the start with two or three companies, others gradually withdrew their opposition to the change, and it has since been ratified by all major concerns with the exception of Universal, whose objection is chiefly that of cost.

Now for the first time the exhibitors are heard from, and their sentiment, on the basis of a cross-sectional "yes" and "no" vote, is as follows:

76⅔ per cent favor the changeover.
16⅔ per cent are opposed.
6⅔ per cent are noncommittal.

At a meeting at the offices of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America on Tuesday a special committee was appointed to work in cooperation with the National Board of Fire Underwriters relative to changes in fire regulations which may be required by the adoption of the 2,000-foot reel. This committee was to meet on Friday to draft new regulations which will be submitted for official adoption next May at the annual meeting of the National Fire Protective Association.

Revision of nomenclature was also discussed. No final action was taken on this subject and it will be referred to the Society of Motion Picture Engineers and the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

New apparatus displayed at the meeting included sample 2,000-foot reels, containers and rewind equipment.

Present were: H. C. Kaufman, Columbia; D. J. Smolen, Harry Mersay and Alan Friedman, Fox; J. S. MacLeod, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; Henry Anderson, G. Knox Haddow and E. F. Jones, Paramount; J. P. Skelly, RKO; Robert Hilton, United Artists; Joseph Spray, C. C. Ryan, Warner; S. Harris, representing the Society of Motion Picture Engineers; and A. S. Dickinson, Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

Organized projectionist sentiment, meanwhile, was partially indicated by the action of the New England district of the IATSE in disapproving the 2,000-foot length. The stand was unanimous in opposition, when a vote was called on a resolution presented at the district's annual convention, comprising the states of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Rhode Island, Massachusetts and Connecticut.

These States were the first to go on record officially against the proposal, and while it was announced the opposition was on the ground of safety primarily, many projectionists individually and through their locals have been inimical to the change because it would lessen the work of operators in the booth and, hence, they fear, require fewer operators. IATSE headquarters in New York considered the New England vote as significant, in view of the fact that in the past projectionists throughout the country have been sharply divided on the issue.

Called Sectional View

The distributors, however, regard the New England projectionists' vote as only sectional feeling, and in furtherance of the plan to complete the switchover by April 1, a committee is meeting continuously at the MPPDA office to work out details in connection with the new exchange apparatus and shipping equipment made necessary by the change.

The consensus of the exhibitors favoring the change, as shown in the survey, is that primarily the 2,000-foot reel would improve the technical excellence of the show in the theatre, would facilitate operation by making splicing and remounting unnecessary, would increase efficiency on the part of booth personnel, and effect a saving to the exhibitor because of lower expressage costs.

The opponents have just as definite reasons, but generally only two are well defined. First is the cost of the changeover, and almost of equal importance to exhibitors in the "no" column is that the heavier reel would place too much of a strain on existing equipment.

Those on the fence indicated they would veer toward the changeover provided the longer and heavier reel would be adaptable to their equipment and provided alterations or replacements in equipment to provide for the change were not necessary. In other words, those in the noncommittal class join the "antis" in opposing any additional investments in the booth.

See New Reel an Aid

The feeling among many exhibitors was that the 2,000-foot reel would prove more satisfactory generally, since its adoption would make for fewer leaders, less changes on the machines, fewer reels to handle, and all around greater convenience and efficiency in the booth. This school of exhibitor thought believed it would reduce by one-half the number of dark screens and poor changeovers in houses using 1,000-foot reels, particularly where personnel is limited to one operator.

Those Objecting Declare That New Dimensions Are Likely to Prove Costly and Burden Existing Booth Equipment

It is pointed out that any number of houses now double up the 1,000-foot reels to avoid the number of changeovers and to make the performance run more smoothly, which of course involves patching in making up and cutting in restoring the doubled reel to the original 1,000-foot length. A large element of exhibitors believe that since the great majority of magazines are capable of taking the 2,000-foot reel, there can be little if any objection on the part of exhibitors because of costs. The belief here is also that the long reel would prevent mutilation of film, which is a considerable item. With proper adjustment of machine heads, it is held that there would be no undue strain or wear on the film.

See Benefit to Small Towns

Further, those who are willing to make the change indicate that whereas now, with the single reels, their projectionists have practically no spare time between changeovers, with the 2,000-foot length they would have from 10 to 15 minutes. Fewer changes, also, will benefit the smaller towns, especially where there are no highly trained projectionists and where one-man-in-a-booth operation is the rule, according to exhibitors.

A number of exhibitors say they express also the sentiment of their projectionists in favoring the new length, because, in addition to the reasons already given, they would have more time to observe projection and sound quality, with the rewinding and changeover procedure reduced by almost half.

There was much feeling that since most theatres now are doubling the reels in the interest of efficiency and better projection, the best course under the circumstances would be to make the double reel a standard practice.

May End Mutilation

Typical of "pro" sentiment was the opinion of an operator of a small town circuit in the middle west that "this is a step that should have been taken with the advent of sound." His experience has demonstrated that use of the long reel would eliminate scratch marks, punched holes and other marks made for changeover cues, which, he has found, take the spectators' interest away from the picture itself.

An exhibitor in a small town in an eastern state who is the projectionist as well, said:

"I see the damage caused by 'doubling up, every day in the year. Nine out of every 10 subjects, either two-reelers or features, have gone through the process of being changed to 2,000-foot reels. When they are shipped back to the exchange, the leaders which are fastened to the picture proper are put on without the emulsion being scraped off, leaving a poorly made patch that will break every time. This causes the film to wrap itself around the sprockets, causing much damage to the film, aside from the wrath of the projectionist who then purposely rips the film to pieces. I do it and does every other operator whose religion is to keep the picture on the screen.

"If every theatre would run the 1,000-foot reel, it would not be so bad. But they nearly all put two reels together. It stands to reason that every time this is done so much film is cut out that when the theatre that follows a month or two gets the film, there is an interruption every time the reels are changed."

Weight Considered Factor

Among the reasons contributing to the favorable sentiment was that the 2,000-foot reel would weigh less than two 1,000-foot reels used at present, with consequent savings to the exhibitor in shipping to and from exchanges.

On the other hand, the smaller segment of theatre owners who believed the changeover would serve no good purpose or would be a downright burden, especially to the small exhibitor, opposed the proposed standard reel because of the expense involved and for technological reasons.

There were strong arguments advanced that since "practically all the equipment" in the smaller towns are made for the 1,000-foot reel, there was no valid reason for a change in such instances, especially since there was nothing to be gained thereby but extra expense.

Others could see no advantage to any theatre, except possibly the large houses with continuous performances, and certainly not to the majority of exhibitors. Some exhibitors believed their magazines and motors would fail to handle the heavier load, and replacements would be necessary, while at the same time there would be an undue strain on the machine heads.

Small Town Problems

A small town theatre man in the middle west protested, "We have plenty of trouble now with the small reels. Eighty per cent of the reels sent to the small towns are old, heavy, bent and one-sided ones that are almost impossible to use in many instances. If the 2,000-foot reels are in the same condition, there will be plenty of trouble in both upper and lower magazines because of the extra weight."

Those who had not arrived at a decision indicated they would welcome technical advice before making up their minds. They wondered, as in the case of old Simplex projectors, for instance, whether the equipment would have to be altered or replaced to meet requirements. Exhibitors in this category said that when they had found it advisable at times to use a 2,000-foot reel, they often encountered difficulty in having the takeup reel pull the film through without breaking.

Several indicated their assent provided the long reel were not too large to fit a Powers 6-B machine, pointing out there were hundreds of small town theatres with the same problem.

Otherwise, however, they expressed no opposition, and as a work saver for the operator, they believed they would like the longer reel.

Warns of New Tax Attacks

Organized defense of theatre owners against discriminatory taxation and unjust regulation is imperative, in view of the convening in Jannary of most of the state legislatures. This warning was sounded over the weekend by Edward L. Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, on his return from a countrywide tour discussing with exhibitors problems of exhibition and the advisability and manner of instituting a system for arbitrating disputes with exchanges.

Mr. Kuykendall said: "Some 12 states have enacted old-age pension laws, requiring considerable money to be raised by taxation to support the plans. The federal old-age pension act is a powerful inducement to every state to enact such a law. Almost invariably among the first proopsals is an unfair admission tax. Exhibitors are not opposed to old-age pensions, but they are rightly opposed to unjust and unfair discrimination in levying taxes to support such plans.

"Local exhibitors who have an actual investment in this business, whether it is large or small, must be on guard against deceptive and dishonest legislature proposals.

"Every proposal to regulate by statute or by government supervision the operation of this business should be carefully examined by the responsible exhibitors."

Caplan, New Head of Detroit Variety Club

M. J. Caplan was elected president of the Detroit Variety Club at the annual meeting.

H. M. Richey was named first vice-president; Ray E. Moon, second vice-president; Max Smitt, secretary, and J. Saxe, treasurer.

Directors chosen were Carl Buermele, Alex Schreiber, B. L. Kilbride, F. A. Westman, H. C. Robinson and M. Gottlieb.

MGM's Foreign Plans Uncertain

Arthur Loew, vice-president in charge of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's foreign activities, declares no definite production plans abroad have been made by his company. He added the status of foreign production remains as it always has been, despite reports about expanding foreign production.

However, MGM has been pondering over such plans, Mr. Loew said.

Ben Goetz, former vice-president of Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., who joined the company recently to make a survey in England looking toward the establishment of a laboratory and also to look into the possibility of production, will arrive from the coast shortly, enroute to London, where he will spend several months checking into both matters. The decision on both is contingent on his findings.

If, and when, MGM decides to go ahead on foreign production, activity will be confined to England, Mr. Loew declared. He further stated that the cost of the proposed London film printing plant, as well as details in connection with production, will be determined upon Mr. Goetz's return from abroad.

Meanwhile, in England, Sam Eckman, Jr., managing director for MGM, said that while the whole of his company's quota commitment of 15 pictures a year might not immediately be made by their own organization, what pictures were made in England would be definitely for world distribution. Pictures originally scheduled for Hollywood but which will be made in London now include "The Wind and the Rain," "Goodbye Mr. Chips" and "A Yank at Oxford."

Film Exchange Examiners And Shippers Organize

After several unsuccessful attempts, New York film examiners and shippers this week formed the Film Exchange Examiners and Shippers Union with Robert Murray, Universal, as president.

The organization has succeeded in securing an American Federation of Labor charter and it will hold a meeting every second Tuesday at the Hotel New Yorker.

Efforts are also under way to have all exchanges represented in the union and a standard wage scale and working hours are now being drafted.

Cooperation from Operators' Union, Local 306, is being sought and it is planned to get the operators to accept a plan not to admit film in a booth unless each reel has a union label on it. A mass meeting to bring in new members is expected to be held next Tuesday.

Republic Pictures Engaged In Extensive Studio Changes

Republic Pictures has already spent $50,000 in improvements on its North Hollywood studio, and plans to spend an additional $240,000 on a building program which will start within 90 days, according to a studio announcement. A new scene dock, portrait gallery and commissary have been started, and architects are now drawing plans for new stages and offices.

NATIONWIDE IATSE STRIKE AVERTED AS STUDIOS ACCEPT "CLOSED SHOP"

Settlement of Dispute Places International Union Over Both Production and Theatre Technical Workers

• Producer employers in Hollywood, their corporate circuit affiliates in New York, and exhibitors generally this week proceeded with their normal business of making and exhibiting motion pictures without the worries of a possible strike of all IATSE employes tying up both studios and theatres the country over.

The highest motion picture corporate officials in New York met in the East over the weekend with ranking executives of the International Alliance of Theatrical Employes and Moving Picture Operators, and settled their differences, which threatened a national film strike.

In sequel to the settlement, a five-year agreement between the IATSE and the major studios was signed Tuesday, covering the labor classifications at the studios which were placed under the IATSE jurisdiction. The IATSE is thus brought under the studios' basic labor contract until 1941.

New wage and hour schedules for studio labor will be up for negotiation again next March, when a nine-year pact with the IBEW expires. Workers affected by the new jurisdiction must have IATSE cards by January 1, the International said.

The basic element of the controversy was the conflict over jurisdictional rights in studios that has long been raging between IATSE and the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, which has been in control of the union studio situation on the Pacific Coast.

Industry leaders in New York believe that the motion picture business had been placed, undeservedly "in the middle" of the IATSE vs. IBEW jurisdictional dispute.

By the terms of the settlement, the IBEW's studio control of union matters shifts to the IATSE, bringing a "closed shop" to Hollywood, and giving the IATSE jurisdiction over propertymen, laboratory workers and cameramen, while at the same time retaining complete jurisdiction in the theatres where IATSE members man the majority of projection booths and back stage positions.

John E. Otterson, president of Paramount Pictures, announced the settlement on Monday.

As part of the agreement reached between the unions and the film company heads some 150 to 200 IBEW men who were dropped from theatre posts in the middle west during the past week will be reinstated and will remain members of the IBEW. IATSE members who were forced to resign from that union during recent studio developments will, in turn, be reinstated. The action of Paramount in asking the resignation from the IA of members of a production company before leaving for the east to photograph exterior shots for "Thirteen Hours by Air" precipitated the IA demand for a showdown on the jurisdictional dispute. It was preceded by the temporary calling out of IA men in Paramount affiliated theatres which closed houses for a few hours in Chicago, Minneapolis, Iowa and Nebraska.

The jurisdiction over sound men at the studios is being left to arbitration between the IA and the IBEW. Each will appoint a neutral arbitrator and the two will decide which of the unions is entitled to jurisdiction over the sound men within the next two months. It is estimated that approximately 1,000 sound men are affected. The cameramen, laboratory workers and grips are estimated at another 4,000, but these will not represent a clear numerical gain for the IA as many of them now hold cards to that organization in addition to those to IBEW.

Vote May Be Needed

Present indications are that under the agreement the IA will be given the right to organize these groups and may have the exclusive jurisdiction if its efforts are successful. This may involve a vote of the members affected to obtain a majority expression on which of the two unions they prefer to remain with. The I.A. comes back under the basic studio labor agreement from which it withdrew at the inception of the inter-union jurisdictional dispute at the time of the advent of sound, as its part in obtaining these privileges.

The New York conferences began on Saturday at the offices of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America and ended late Sunday night. Attending from film companies were Leo Spitz, president of RKO, who flew in from the coast to be present; Herbert B. Swope, chairman of the board of Keith-Albee-Orpheum; Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Loew's and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; Sidney R. Kent, president of Twentieth-Century-Fox; John E. Otterson, president of Paramount; Austin Keough, Paramount secretary; R. H. Cochrane, vice-president of Universal, and Harry M. Warner, president of Warner Brothers Pictures. United Artists and Columbia Pictures were not represented.

Union men attending included George Browne, president of the I.A.; Harland Holmden and John P. Nick, I.A. vice-presidents; Stephen Newman, I.A. coast representative; Dan Tracy, president of the I.B.E.W.; William L. Hutchinson, president of the carpenters' union, and Joseph Weber, president of the musicians' union. The last four named are members of the executive committee of the American Federation of Labor. Pat Casey, labor representative for the major studios, also played an important part in the conferences. Sol A. Rosenblatt, former Division Administrator of the NRA, and now legal aid of the I.A., is also reported to have participated.

Locals Choose Officers

Mr. Otterson, spokesman for the film interests, would not discuss the meeting following its conclusion, neither would he comment on the details still remaining to be worked out.

Industry Leaders Assert Motion Picture Business Was Put "In Middle" of Controversy Between Labor Groups

Meanwhile, many union locals in the field were busy electing new officers for 1936. William S. McKay was named president of the I.A.T.S.E. Local 98, Harrisburg, Pa., and other officers chosen were Fred Cleckner, vice-president; Charles J. Jones, corresponding secretary; Harry B. Wilson, secretary-treasurer; Joseph Ryan, business agent, and Harry Parsons and Harold Rudy, members of the executive board.

In Chicago the installation of officers of the local operators' union was held this week with George Browne, I.A.T.S.E. president, and Harry Holmden, third vice-president, officiating. Those inducted were Frank Clifford, business manager; Peter Shayne, president; Glenn Sweetney, vice-president; Neal Bishop, secretary-treasurer, and Robert Burns, James Fisco, Joseph Berinstein, and George Karg, members of the executive board. It was immediately following the induction that Mr. Browne left for New York.

In Los Angeles, members of Projectionists' Local 150, at their annual election, returned the present incumbents, who are E. C. Hamilton, president; J. B. Keaton, vice-president; M. J. Sands, secretary-treasurer, and R. L. Haywood, business representative.

The Allied Motion Picture Operators Union in New York elected Harry Glover president to succeed Sol D'Agostino. Other new officers chosen were William Snyder, vice-president; David Karpess, recording-secretary; Arthur Connolly, sergeant-at-arms, and Sol B. Fine, business agent.

Election of new officers of the Manhattan Operators' Union, Local 306, will be held December 18 and president J. S. Basson faces competition from Alex Polin and Ben Norton. Other nominations include Frank Ruddock for vice-president, Frank Pircher and James Ambrosio for treasurer and Herman Telber (incumbent) and William Green, recording secretary.

Many New Yorkers Attend Comerford Funeral Services

Among those who attended the funeral services of M. B. Comerford, who was killed last week in an automobile accident, at Scranton, Pa., were the following: E. L. McAvoy, RKO, New York; J. J. Unger and Milton, Kusel, Paramount, New York; Robert Mochrie, Warner; E. C. Grainger, Fox, New York; Edgar Moss, district manager, Fox, Philadelphia; P. A. Block, district manager, Paramount, Philadelphia; Major Leslie Thompson, RKO Theatres, New York; Louis Netter, Paramount, New York; Eddie Dowling, New York; Jules Levy, RKO, New York; Ted O'Shea, MGM manager, Buffalo; Sig Whitman, Universal; Charles McCarthy and Frank C. Walker.

MPTOA DEMANDS LOWER MUSIC FEES; BROADCASTERS FORMING POLICIES

Loss of Warner Music Warrants Cut, Says MPTOA, Which Also Asks Warner To Refrain From Levying Any Additional Fees

Bristling with indictments of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers and its "extortions," a statement by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America this week called on ASCAP to make "a substantial reduction" in its music tax charges by virtue of the loss of the Warner catalogue, effective January 1.

The MPTOA at the same time called on exhibitors to carry on "a sustained offensive" to curb ASCAP. The Society on Tuesday made reply, pointing out that the music assessment on the exhibitor is small in comparison with gross receipts or general overhead, indicating that there will be no reduction.

The exhibitors' organization, representative of affiliated circuit and independent theatres, declares Warner Brothers, in seceding from the Society, has "a fine opportunity to repudiate and show up the unfair, obnoxious and monopolistic methods of ASCAP." Warners can do this, says the MPTOA, by announcing that no additional music levies would be made on exhibitors who buy Warner pictures, thus putting it up to the other motion picture companies having music publishing subsidiaries "to match their fairness to the exhibitor."

ASCAP previously indicated there would be no reduction, believing that "with or without the Warner music," the ASCAP catalogue is worth all the exhibitors are paying for it.

Warner officially was noncommital on the MPTOA statement, since its policies for licensing of public performances have not as yet been formulated. Many things are involved, and it was said the matter may not be decided for some time.

MPTOA's sentiments were expressed in a bulletin sent to members. Coming on the heels of Warner's resignation from the Society, the blasting statement adds impetus to the exhibitors' campaign to defeat the music taxes. The MPTOA pointed out the exhibitor already pays for music through film rentals, and further assessment by ASCAP is "unjustifiable."

"The high priced press agents of ASCAP are desperately trying to answer the charges leveled at the music tax combine by one of their own members, and one of the largest," said the MPTOA in calling attention to Warner charges that ASCAP is run by "a well entrenched clique of executive officers who sign contracts and perform other important acts on their own authority, the board of directors in many cases having no opportunity to review such transactions until the Society has been committed to them."

The MPTOA then quoted the Warner statement: "These executive officers have very little at stake financially in comparison with the publishing firms (several of them are subsidiaries of motion picture companies) that are threatened with extinction, although it must be said that the salaries paid the Society's executives are certainly not small, Mr. Mills, the general manager, receiving about $50,000 a year, and Mr. Buck, the president, about $35,000." (How about Mr. Burkan, the general counsel? asks the MPTOA, in an aside)

"Furthermore," the MPTOA continues, still quoting Warners, "the distribution to authors and composers of the various funds collected by the Society is conducted in an illogical manner based mainly on favoritism and politics.

"The Society is on the defensive in so many lawsuits throughout the United States that the sense of security into which many of its members have been lulled has a very precarious foundation. With the federal Government attacking it as a monopoly, its contracts with motion picture exhibitors and theatre chains being repudiated in various states on grounds of invalidity and illegality, heavy taxes being levied upon it in numerous jurisdictions, and a federal income tax case involving over a million dollars hanging over its head, its future is problematical. In the state of Washington a receiver has been appointed for the Society's business in that state.

"The interests of the art and industry of music in this country are too important to be inextricably bound up with an agency whose management has not been of a quality to warrant bright hopes for a successful issue of its difficulties.

"While it is true that most authors and composers have signed the Society's contract, they have done so without being given the benefit of an alternative or (in most cases) of a knowledge of the complete workings of the Society and the difficulties at present confronting it.

"One result of our (Warner's) resignation will be the opportunities opened for new writing talent which has hitherto found it extremely difficult to obtain membership in the Society. The field will be open for unestablished authors and composers of real ability."

The MPTOA urges exhibitors to "mark these words well," for "they are from the inside of the ASCAP organization, from one of their largest members, represented on their board of directors, who should know what they are talking about.

"Inasmuch as Warner's music interests are publishers of a very large part of the music controlled by the ASCAP combine," continues the MPTOA, "and in view of the ASCAP press agents' curious but constant shouting for a 'fair' return for their music, the loss of almost half of the usable music they have been collecting for, in all fairness, should result in a substantial reduction in the music tax extorted from the motion picture theatres. You can judge the 'fairness' of ASCAP by the amount of the rebate you receive.

"Warners have a fine opportunity to repudiate and show up the unfair, obnoxious and monopolistic methods of ASCAP with the motion picture theatres. Why should the exhibitor be required to submit to the added extortion of the music tax, imposed through a complicated trick in the copyright laws not contemplated by Congress when they were enacted, for

NAB Directors Discuss New Arrangements With ASCAP, Although No Overtures Have Been Made to Warners

Discussions with the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers on new arrangements made necessary by the withdrawal of Warner's 11 music publishing subsidiaries on December 31, highlighted a meeting of the board of directors of the National Association of Broadcasters on Monday and Tuesday in New York.

Formulation of policies was the announced purpose of the meeting. James W. Baldwin of Washington, NAB managing director, said at the conclusion of the session late Tuesday night that no decision had been reached with regard to the new developments, and he would not predict that any conclusion might be arrived at when the board resumes its discussions on Monday. The complex problems brought into bold relief by the Warner situation were causing prolonged deliberations.

Whatever policies the broadcasters decide upon will, it is believed, eventually affect the exhibitors' relations with both ASCAP and Warner with regard to music taxes.

Mr. Baldwin said that no discussions had been held with Warner representatives, and that no overtures had been made to ASCAP to reduce its royalty charges of 5 per cent of the gross commercial collections of radio stations, plus sustaining fees. He added that no committees had been formed as yet to take any action. In other words, until further discussions and adoption of policy by the broadcasters, the situation brought about the Warner split still remains in a stalemate.

One of the matters on which ASCAP anxiously awaits word is whether those radio stations which have not renewed their contracts will do so by December 31, or will ask a further extension beyond that date, pending the outcome of the Government's anti-trust suit which aims to declare it a monopoly. A three-month extension beyond expiration of contracts on October 1 was granted by ASCAP for that reason. January 7 is the tentative date when the trial is to be resumed, but that is now indefinite.

That situation is now further complicated by the very likely possibility that broadcasters will have to deal with Warner for its music, and the probability of a double royalty fee in event the film company's breach with ASCAP is not healed.

Following receipt of formal notice of Warner's resignation last week, and its formal acceptance, ASCAP notified the 57 stations which had signed new five-year contracts that they may be canceled on 30 days' notice, in accordance with license clauses providing for such action in event the ASCAP catalogue is impaired. This, it is understood, was one of the points un-

"Custer's Last Stand"

(Stage and Screen)

The first three episodes of this 15-chapter serial set a pace that ought to stir up plenty of excitement for the Saturday afternoon kid trade as well as those adults who go for outdoor action in a big way.

George M. Merrick has hung his story on the fact that Sioux must have a sacred arrow which has been captured by white men during a wagon train attack. Renegade whites want the arrow because it is supposed to have directions to a sacred Indian cave with gold in it.

It happens that the arrow is in the possession of Joseph Swickard, former Confederate army doctor, who is traveling with his daughter, Nancy Caswell, and an orphan boy, Marty Joyce.

After two wagon train attacks, some spectacular riding, and a pursuit, the first episode ends with Rex Lease crawling out on a wagon tongue to pry an Indian loose. The wagon crashes over a hill. It's hot stuff.

The second episode has a huge buffalo stampede as the climax with Lease and Lona Andre lying on the ground in their path. Very spectacular. In the third episode a disgraced officer and Lease clash in a fight for the arrow in the midst of an Indian attack on a town.

The cast has 38 principals and a flock of Indians. Some historical characters are impersonated—Buffalo Bill, General Custer, Wild Bill Hickok and Calamity Jane. The exploitation ought to be easy where westerns are popular. Elmer Clifton directed. Running time, first episode, 44 minutes. Second and third episodes, 22½ minutes each. "G."

CUSTER'S LAST STAND (Weiss Productions)

Dir: Elmer Clifton. Cast: Rex Lease, Lona Andre,
William Farnum, Jack Mulhall, Frank McGlynn, Jr.

The struggle between red men and white which is inevitably a part of any story dealing with the early history of our own West is featured in this serial with the usual accompaniment of hard riding, fast shooting, and stampeding cattle. The result is plenty of excitement, presumably leading up to a dramatic climax which will be arrived at when the series reaches the historic incident from which the film takes its name. The plot has dramatic value and the atmosphere of pioneer days is successfully re-created. A roaring melodrama which should appeal to those who like thrills, a swift pace and a Western setting in their picture fare. Family.

Here's a chapter-play of the Wild West in the days of the pioneers which has action and gun-play aplenty and will arouse the enthusiasm of serial fans from seven to seventy. Such famous characters as General Custer, Buffalo Bill, Wild Bill Hickok and Sitting Bull appear throughout the story portrayed by an outstanding cast of players that includes Lona Andre and Reed Howes supported by William Farnum, Jack Mulhall, Creighton Hale and a host of old-time favorites. The opening episode, which runs 44 minutes, lays the foundation for the later chapters, each of which closes with a thrill that will make you hold your breath until next week's chapter is shown. The search for a magic arrow lost by a tribe of Indians is responsible for a constant state of warfare on the U. S. Cavalry and the settlers. The first episode ends with a covered wagon crashing over a cliff; the second closes with a stampede of wild buffalo—one of the most exciting scenes ever filmed—while the finish of the third finds the hero and a renegade in a close combat while the Indians attack the town. Later episodes, which average 20 minutes in length promise to provide just as great a punch. Go the limit on selling the names and historical characters. Get them in at the beginning and they'll keep on coming.

Mr. Robert Mintz, Pres.
Stage & Screen Productions,
New York City,

My dear Mr. Mintz:

Thank you very much for the preview of your very excellent serial-"CUSTER'S LAST STAND". It is a story with a plot of unusual interest, based on one of the many colorful historical events that were a part of the old West.

With Kit Carson, General Custer, Sitting Bull and other vivid characters brought to life, the picture is more than interesting, it becomes a gripping reality.

The thundering hoofs of the buffalo herd bring to us the atmosphere of frontier days. The plot is well built and carries the usual quota of excitement and hard riding. The dramatic values are strong, the photography fine. I heartily recommend it as a picture suitable for the whole family.
My sincerest congratulations.

Cordially yours,

Weiss Productions 15 Chapters

A Wow Thriller

The first three chapters of this thriller of the Old West has all the elements necessary to crash the thrill fans into your house, both the youngsters and oldsters. A bang-up cast makes this one something to shout about in your publicity. The names should be prominently displayed out front or in your lobby. Rex Lease plays the role of Kit Cardigan, the famous Indian scout. Frank McGlynn, Jr. is General Custer, the famous Indian fighter. Nancy Caswell is the girl, with Lona Andre as her rival for femme honors. Then you have William Farnum, Reed Howes, Jack Mulhall, Ruth Mix, Joseph Swickard, Creighton Hale, George Cheseboro — all names popular with the action fans. Little Bobby Nelson adds the kid interest as the youngster with the pioneer wagon outfit who becomes a pal of the scout. The action stuff is there continuously, with repeated Indian fights and some fine scenes with the U. S. Cavalry troop stationed at Fort Henry under command of General Custer. Here is a serial that has all the glamour of the early pioneer West, with the Indian fight scenes and the U. S. Cavalry in action. It should prove a wow with the youngsters, and there are plenty of the elders who will go for it big. Produced by George M. Merrick. Give this serial plenty before your first chapter gets started, and you should pile 'em in for the remaining runs.

Custer's Last Stand

This serial, taking the first three chapters as a criterion, has enough of virile, hectic action to satisfy.

The background of the picture is the old west, in the days of General Custer, Sitting Bull and Rain-in-the-Face, when the United States Cavalry fought the combined great Indian tribes led by the Sioux.

In this setting we find a wagon train of pioneers plodding westward and being harassed by the redskins. In a fight a valuable "medicine" arrow falls into the hands of the white men and since it tells the location of a cave of gold it naturally becomes the object for which both factions fight. Up to the end of the third episode the action has progressed, following several skirmishes between the Indians and wagon trains, with the Cavalry thrown in now and then, to the point where the arrow is still in the possession of the white men as General Custer sets up his headquarters at Fort Henry to resist the Indians who are gathering for a one last stand — which terminated in the general's annihilation.

CUSTER'S LAST STAND. Stage and Screen Production. 15 episodes. First episode four reels remaining, two reels each. This is excellent in love interest, action, historical authenticity for the audiences at which it is directed. Acting, direction, photography, sound are okey. Story, while based on events leading up to Custer's fight, brings in a tale of white scout out to avenge death of father at Indians hands, with a minor plot of a cave of gold known only to the slayer. Rex Lease, Lona Andre, William Farnum, Reed Howes, Joseph Swickard, Creighton Hale are some of the actors. GOOD.

A MAGNIFICENT FEATURE ATTRACTION

"CUSTER'S LAST STAND" is now available for immediate release in two forms. In addition to the fifteen-chapter serial version, "Custer's Last Stand" is offered as a full-length feature attraction . . . one of the most magnificent and spectacular historical dramas that the screen has ever known . . . an impressive and authentic representation of the most colorful period in all American history.

AS a feature attraction, "Custer's Last Stand" will be a significant contribution to the all-too-small film library of Americana. An authoritative and definitive dramatization of the American Indians last stand against the westward progress of white civilization, it must take its rightful place with such screen epics of the West as "The Covered Wagon" and "Cimarron." "Custer's Last Stand" is, truly, an outstanding screen achievement.

THE feature version of "Custer's Last Stand" is offered as an attraction for extended engagements at first-run theatres and as a special attraction at neighborhood theatres. Showmen who play the serial version on their regular serial days will find that the feature version will prove a box-office magnet for adults, as well as children, at mid-week showings. The wise exhibitor will reap the fullest returns if he plays both the serial and feature versions of "Custer's Last Stand."

PLAN OF FREE TELEVISION THEATRE ALARMS EXHIBITORS IN ENGLAND

Showmen Face Official Competition; Association Would Bar Broadcast of Film Three Months After Last Booking

by BRUCE ALLAN
London Correspondent

Proposals of British Broadcasting Corporation to establish an "official" television theatre are taking a form which exhibitors in the United Kingdom find alarming.

The original plan of the BBC—which, it should be remembered, is a near-Government department—was to open, at Broadcasting House or elsewhere in the West End of London, a small theatre at which it would screen the "experimental" television broadcasts to be transmitted for three hours daily, beginning next Spring.

A statement that "the public would be admitted" to this theatre has since been amplified into the semi-official news that it would be allowed to enter without payment. Simultaneously, it is stated, the "small theatre" has been planned as a 1,000 seater.

The Council of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, already alarmed at certain threats to theatre interests in possible television developments, is now faced with the more fundamental problem of what in effect would be State competition. It is understood to have made representations to the BBC and also to the Baird and EMI companies, which are to handle the official transmissions. The former, through its G-B associations, has interests in common with the film industry.

Seek Protection for Films

Before this difficulty arose, the CEA was very much engaged with other problems arising from television. It is common knowledge that a big percentage of the first television transmissions will be from films, and the association Council has been endeavoring to establish a very firm undertaking that no subject shall be broadcast until three months after its last theatre booking. It wants, in fact, the same protection which is given against the issue of substandard versions of popular entertainment features, for display in the home. The only difficulty which seemed likely to arise was in regard to news films, and this may be accentuated if the BBC's "official" theatre plans are on the lines stated.

Conferences between CEA, the BBC, Baird and EMI are the immediate next step and in the background is the obvious possibility that the CEA will come to an understanding with the Kinematograph Renters' Society strictly limiting the use of films for television by regard to industry interests.

Danger of Own Newsreel

The effectiveness of such a measure is subject to one rather important qualification. Newsreel companies are probably as anxious as exhibitors that their items should not be put over the air. There is, however, complete freedom to any individual to make his own news film. If the BBC so wishes it can undoubtedly obtain its own news shots of an important event and transmit them to television "listeners" long before the first theatre shows a picture of the same events.

It already broadcasts news and, though there is a limiting agreement with the newspapers, it in fact frequently anticipates them. Here is a problem which will become vital when television has reached the stage at which the news theatre, to keep up to date, must begin to use it.

New Baird Reconstruction Plan

With television the topic of the moment, special interests attaches to details now published of the revised reconstruction plan of Baird Television, Ltd.; a previous plan was abandoned because of shareholders' disapproval. The project to come up for approval on Dec. 17 proposes a reduction of capital to £50,000 ($250,000) and a subsequent increase to £1,087,500 by a new issue. The method suggested is that both the 2,100,000 preferred ordinaries (5/-value) and the deferred ordinaries (1,200,000, of same value) shall be divided into double the number of shares of half that value. Half of these shares will be surrendered to the holders of "A" ordinary shares in the proportion of 10½ preferred ordinary and 6 deferred ordinaries for each "A" share. The "A" shares will be extinguished. New capital will be in the form of 2,100,000 preferred ordinaries of the value of 2/6d (two shillings and sixpence). A shareholders' association is believed to have expressed general approval of this scheme.

Theatre Finance Plans Shape

Some further details are now available of the issue of new capital by theatre companies. The original announcement, due largely to the fact that neither Union Cinema Company nor County Cinemas has production or distribution affiliations, gave rise to a crop of rumors indicating the establishment of such connections. A sensational rise in the market price of Union ordinaries was declared to be due to Gaumont-British buying for control; an official statement from G-B has since advised that that company has no interest whatever in Union. The current story is that behind the Union expansion scheme is J. Arthur Rank, the miller millionaire.

Mr. Rank is a leading figure in British National Films, has a big interest in the new Pinewood studio at Iver, in partnership with the Boot building concern and is believed to have invested in the Technicolor plant at Denham. He is known to be very keenly interested in films and there has been some expectation that, with his associate, Lady Yule, he might interest himself in exhibition. At this moment there is no confirmation of his connection with the Union extension, which in the first instance will take the form of a £500,000 ($2,500,000) flotation of a subsidiary, National Provincial Cinemas, Ltd.

The County flotation will be for £2,562,500 made up of £1,600,000 5 per cent debenture stock, £700,000 6 per cent preference shares and £262,500 ordinaries of 5/-all issued at par.

Against "Horror" Films

The London County Council proposes to issue a new rule prohibiting the admission of children to "horrified" films. This is a special classification, introduced comparatively recently. It has been open to exhibitors to admit children to such subjects on the same condition as governs their admission to "A" films generally; that is to say, they had to be accompanied by a parent or guardian. In future they will be absolutely barred, accompanied or alone.

New Stock Issue to Increase Capital of Baird Company Is Revised Project; Circuits Advance Financing Plans

The L.C.C. legislates for the London area only, but its rulings are very generally imitated by other licensing authorities throughout the country.

"Sanctions" for CEA Policies

The suggestion that power should be given to the CEA general council to enforce obedience to policies formally approved has created a considerable split in opinion among exhibitors. In various districts there have been questions of both the wisdom and the practicability of a policy of penalties for disloyal members. One view is that the only punishment really within the power of the Council—that of expulsion—would be ineffective. Another is that a system of cash deposits, forfeitable in the case of noncompliance with official resolutions, should be tried.

The difficulties are obviously serious, but so is the problem with which it is desired to deal. Regularly, exhibitors vote for a policy—an instance is the "forty per cent maximum" for rentals—and then disregard it. For the moment, the Council has contented itself by remitting to legal experts the drafting of an amendment to the rules permitting the constitutional imposition of penalties.

Studio Expansion Move

Norman Loudon's company, Sound City, Ltd., will increase its capital to £350,000 and will add five new buildings and a workshop. A public flotation is planned, stressing Sound City's objective as a general service studio for the industry. Mr. Loudon asserts the contemplated new space has been booked for three years ahead. Equity Law Life Assurance Society will advance £100,000. The remainder will be sold in preference and ordinary share lots.

"FREE DELIVERY" OF SCREEN TALENT HAILED AT NBC COAST OPENING

New National Broadcasting Co. Studio in Hollywood Dedicated; Much Speech Making; Hays' Remarks Cautious

Film Celebrities Join Network Executives in Happy Visions of "Wedlock" of Motion Pictures and Air Entertainment

by TERRY RAMSAYE

In Hollywood

Radio, which has been wildcatting in the field for some years, on Saturday night last brought in its number one big well sunk deep into the motion picture's talent pool with an elaborate, amazingly frank, opening and dedicatory ceremony at the newly completed National Broadcasting Company studios in Hollywood.

NBC's well from which it will pump radio amusement to the nation, in competition with the screens that sell entertainment, is an ornate, ultra-moderne structure encrusted with much chromium plate and "effects." It is strategically located on Melrose avenue immediately between the Radio Pictures lot and the Paramount studios—at Radio's backdoor, Paramount's front yard.

The program consisted almost entirely of motion picture names, and concerned itself in every respect with endeavors to utilize screen fame and the public's interest in the motion picture.

From these gilded halls of the NBC well head plant, screen fame will be distilled into advertising, building for the motion picture's star names an association in the public mind with soap, lubricating oil, pickles and patent medicines. When the artistry, labor and money of the picture makers have created atmosphere of romance, mystery, magic and glamour for their people, they will go to the microphone to help the sponsors sell cereals and laxatives.

Cite Radio's "Free Delivery"

Addresses were made by Mr. Merlin Hall Aylesworth, president, by Mr. Richard Patterson, executive vice-president, of National Broadcasting, and by Mr. Will H. Hays of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc.

Mr. Hays did his valued and competent best to avoid a word that might bear on the pitfalls of this alleged alliance of the radio and the screen, and discussed as best he might what his hopes and anticipations for the art of the screen of tomorrow might be and offer. He spoke fair of radio and of the industry he represents.

Mr. Al Jolson, an actor who used to play at Shubert's Winter Garden in New York, was the master of ceremonies, devoting the highlights of his running comment to complaints, perhaps funny complaints, perhaps, about the length of Mr. Hays' address. This was a cue to Mr. Jack Benny, speaking from a motion picture theatre dressing room to twang the same note, presumably in token of his appreciation of Mr. Hays' services to the institution which pays him.

The speeches of the radio officials, Mr. Aylesworth and Mr. Patterson were remarkably clear on the point that they have brought to Hollywood this plant and machinery and plan of operation to take personalities held by the screen at a price for the box office patrons and deliver them free to the millions "in hovels," etc.

HAYS, AYLESWORTH RETURN TO EAST

Will H. Hays, accompanied by Mrs. Hays, returned to his New York office Wednesday, after a trip to Hollywood, where he spoke at the opening of the new National Broadcasting Company studio. Merlin H. Aylesworth, head of NBC, traveled east at the same time.

These speakers proclaimed the oneness of radio and the screen, without, however, telling waiting Hollywood just wherein and how the screen would get its share of the oneness.

It was a grand proclamation of what Mr. Aylesworth in his whimsy has called the "wedlock" of radio and screen. It would be out of harmony with the jolly spirit of the occasion to make any observations about "shotgun weddings."

Publicity Hopes Ill Timed

The immediate adjacency of the Radio picture lot, the creative center of the motion picture company from which the Radio Corporation of America, parent also of NBC, just withdrew by process of sale of its interest, was calculated to further impress the auditors with the oneness, the wedlock, etc., of the arts. To be sure, there has been more than one case in Hollywood of love restored and superheated by divorce. Mr. NBC and Miss Movie may be slipping away to Palm Springs for the week-end any time now.

One of the curious phenomena connected with NBC's gala night and vast publicity gesture was in its misfire on newspaper publicity in these parts. The industrious Sunday papers go to press Saturday afternoon and early evening and the three-hour radio show starting at 7:30 o'clock in the night appears to have been too late to handle, even for a replate for city distribution. Meanwhile, apparently mañana overtook the editors and reporters completely because Monday morning's papers forgot it, too. More than likely it will prove to have been just about in time to catch the Sunday supplements of next week.

Pathos, Eulogy, Mysticism!

The program reached its apogee of something with Mr. Jolson, enlisting the aid of May Robson, making formal dedication of the plant and occasion to some land beyond the skies, some far plane of otherwhere, which was taken as permission to parade the names of the motion picture's dead from Mr. Will Rogers on back to the days of Rudolph Valentino.

The master of the program lost the best opportunity in years to have sung "Hello, Central, Give Me Heaven, Just Because My Mama's There"—a white mammy song of the '90's. It would have been closely in key with this part of the presentation.

The obvious implication of this spiritual and astral sequence was in behalf of the effulgent scope and mysterioso quality of the art of radio—suitable showmanship for these sunkissed shores where spiritualism, palmistry, phrenology, and all the isms and creeds of the religioso exploiteer prosper. The touch did somewhat enrich the entire program.

Some Things They Said

Among words heard during the speechmaking were these:

Ken Carpenter, NBC local announcer: "Tonight is an event not soon to be forgotten."

Richard C. Carpenter, executive vice-president NBC: "We have long known that the source of entertainment desired was centered here in Hollywood. We will tap that source directly. We could do nothing else, because of the inconvenience previously encountered, than come here in order that those whom you most appreciate should be immediately available!"

Merlin H. Aylesworth, president, NBC (after describing the building): "Those engaged in production for the screen will now have opportunity to offer their talent directly through the medium of the radio. I believe that the sign we all saw as we approached this building is more than a symbol. [Sign is on the RKO-Radio lot. It's a globe, surmounted by a radio tower, lightning flashing in four directions.] It will carry the entertainment of the world's greatest personalities into the forgotten corners of the earth." He concluded, "We owe a debt of gratitude to my friend, Herb Yates, personally, and to Consolidated Laboratories for providing this magnificent new building."

Will H. Hays: "Radio broadcasting and the motion picture screen are essential for the purpose of disseminating news and spreading information, but the primary purpose of both is entertainment. In this field both mediums, each interdependent on the other now, will advance together."

AL JOLSON, kidding Mr. Hays' speech: "Hello, Ruby, I won't be home until New Years unless Will Hays stops talking." Carried this gag through various numbers and when Sam Hays, news reporter was announced, busted in to say, "Heard the name Hays, but this guy is not Will, so it's all right."

May Robson and Jolson, delivering an eulogy to departed screen immortals, start-

Radio Competition

ELABORATE ceremonies attended the opening on last Saturday night of the new studio of the National Broadcasting Company in Hollywood, including an hour and a half broadcast which presumably was listened to by several million persons. The program presented a number of stellar performers, each of whom has a wide following with the amusement public. Coincidentally with the broadcast, some fourteen thousand motion picture theatres throughout the country were seeking—and seeking to serve—customers.

The establishment of the new NBC studio in Hollywood revives the frequently discussed question of the relations between the screen and radio. Various speakers on the inaugural program Saturday night stressed the value of co-operation as being commonly advantageous both to the radio and to the screen.

It may be that co-operation will bring advantages to both. But the measure of advantage to the screen, at this point, is not entirely clear. In the first place, it may be observed that an instance of real co-operation usually originates when and where both parties to the scheme are willing. Up to date it does not appear that the motion picture has gone to any great lengths to seek a compact of co-operation with radio. On the other hand, it rather appears that what may now be construed as a willingness on the part of the industry to co-operate has not been willingly arrived at. At least there can be no doubt on this point relative to many thousands of exhibitors who find that the radio is a serious competitor.

It is urged that "in the long run" the motion picture will benefit through greater audiences for the theatres which the radio will assist in creating; also that the popularity of stars may be enhanced and new personalities developed through radio appearances.

Just where the chief advantage lies in co-operation between the screen and radio is, we think, made exceedingly plain in the fact that radio has gone to Hollywood and Hollywood has not gone to Radio City. Further, it may be noted that while the motion picture has in fact received up to date some slight advantage in the use of personalities which have been developed on the radio, the radio is coming into increasing dependence upon motion picture personalities. In fact, many of its chief programs are dependent entirely upon material, personal or literary, which it is borrowing from Hollywood.

The opening of the new NBC studio in Hollywood doubtlessly forecasts wider and greater activity on the part of radio interests to capitalize on what the motion picture has developed in Hollywood. In view of this the problem confronting the motion picture industry assumes even more substantial proportions.

Many hours on the radio are now being brightened by musical numbers developed not in the studios of radio but in the studios of Hollywood. It is of course true that the radio assists in popularizing these numbers. It is also true that through incessant rendition it succeeds in killing them, often before the pictures for which they were written reach more than a few of the principal theatres.

Radio may and frequently does provide a valuable ballyhoo for a coming motion picture. In instances, however, in which the wily gentlemen of radio succeed in getting producers to allow them to tell much of the story, their efforts result in robbing the play of much of its freshness, and frequently, through the relative ineffectiveness of the radio for dramatic presentation, succeed in taking from the prospective patron of the theatre an interest in the coming attraction which he would otherwise have.

There is also a very legitimate question relative to the influence of radio appearances upon the popularity of many motion picture personalities with the public which buys tickets to see them perform upon the screen. In the case of singers and glib comedians the question perhaps does not become a serious one. But in the case of many others there seems to be little doubt that the consequences of radio appearances is disastrous. Many of the personalities in pictures are what they are in the public eye because of the amazing effectiveness which the motion picture gives to their appearances upon the screen. Radio has but little to offer the player other than voice transmission. In certain instances what comes from the radio receiver under the name of a personality famous and important in pictures is rather sad to contemplate. If radio is to continue to rush on, ruthlessly and selfishly, as it has been doing and gather up for its own uses without regard to the damage done to the personalities in their principal work, then before very long there may be no doubt as to the value to the motion picture industry of any pact of co-operation.

There is also to be considered the influence of radio in Hollywood on the already exceedingly difficult question of salary compensation. Radio's interest is to sell program time. The cost of talent is of small or no concern at all to the broadcasting companies. This cost is assumed automatically by the program sponsor through the kindly ministrations of its advertising agent, neither the sponsor nor the agent usually knowing any more about engaging talent than they do about sailing a Chinese junk in the Yangtse River. Trouble from this source is by no means a wild surmise; in fact, there are already numerous instances in which the germ of discontent has been fed upon the king's ransom allowed for a few minutes service at the microphone.

Radio competition is not a theory but a fact. Whether it is liked by the industry or not, it is here and doubtlessly is going to stay. We do not regard the situation as one warranting violent alarm, but neither do we construe the circumstances as justifying any high note of exultation on the part of Hollywood as seems to have been indulged in on last Saturday night. Before this we would like to have seen some evidence that what is called co-operation in this case means something like a reasonable division of benefits between the two high contracting parties.

Dedicates Radio Plant to the Memory of Yesteryear's Stars

ing with Will Rogers and going down the line, including Marie Dressler, John Bunny, Rudolph Valentino, Milton Sills, Wally Reid, Sam Hardy, among others, saying to musical accompaniment: "These screen immortals would have loved to be here tonight. But they are listening in from another plane. It is but fitting that we should dedicate this fine studio to their memory."

Jack Benny: "I have just got through entertaining audience of 4,000 people here in the Paramount theatre in Los Angeles. I'm sitting in my dressing room. It would be difficult to crowd half a dozen people in here Yet through the miracle of radio I can talk to countless millions. Radio had to come after me. They've had to come after lots of other people. As the talent radio needed has migrated to Hollywood, so radio has migrated. Through its wonderful facilities they will be heard around the world. Radio tonight provides us with a chance to reach millions of people who, if there was not such a thing as radio, would be denied the opportunity of hearing us—even if they did have to listen to Will Hays while getting it."

WARNER BOARD RE-ELECTED: PROFIT OF A MILLION SEEN FOR QUARTER

Stockholders Approve Action of Management in Settling Corporation Controversies; Minority Group Loses Plea

Reelection of H. M. Warner as President Expected at Directors' Meeting; Announce "Most Diversified Program"

The financial, corporate and management affairs of Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., were affected this week by the following developments:

Some 99.2 per cent of Warner stockholders reelected the board of directors, comprising the present management, and approved the board's action in compromising and settling controversies involving the corporation.

Profits for the first quarter of 1935-36 were estimated at $1,000,000, considerably more than earnings of all of the last fiscal year.

Federal courts denied an injunction sought by a minority stockholder to prevent the annual stockholders' meeting.

Sales personnel, meeting in the East, heard the announcement that during the next few weeks the company "will release the most diversified program in its history."

At the annual meeting of the stockholders, held in Wilmington, Del., the directors unanimously re-elected were: Harry M. Warner, Jack L. Warner, Waddill Catchings, Henry A. Rudkin and Abel Carey Thomas. It is expected that H. M. Warner will be re-elected president at the annual meeting of directors on December 17 in New York. Ivan Culbertson, Wilmington attorney, presided at the meeting.

Suit Issue Settled

Approval was also given the compromise settlement agreement between the company and the Warner brothers by a vote of 2,140,451 shares to approximately 4,000. The percentage in favor was 99.2 This is the agreement that caused several injunction suits in advance of the meeting.

Mr. Thomas told the stockholders that he had received information that the company has a prospect of $1,000,000 in profits for the first quarter of the fiscal year, according to the company's comptroller. This would exceed the profit for all four quarters of the fiscal year ending August 31.

In discussing the prospective profit, Mr. Thomas said, "I speak in the absence of Harry M. Warner, whose presence was necessary today at a conference of the representatives of the leading motion picture companies and officials of the International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employes, being held in New York.

Calls Outlook Bright

"The financial outlook, in the absence of any unexpected labor disturbances, is bright. Your company in the fiscal year ending August 31, after all charges, earned a net profit of $674,158.96.

"The comptroller informs me that the profits for the first quarter of the current fiscal year are estimated to be slightly in excess of $1,000,000, after all charges. This, you will note, represents a larger profit than earned in all of the last fiscal year.

"There has been a continued increase in theatre attendance, and we have reason to believe this increase will continue. It is sincerely hoped that this year will be the best since 1930."

GOVERNOR DECLARES FOR BETTER PICTURES

Governor Wilbur Cross, of Connecticut, praises the motion picture industry in declaring that "New England at least is prepared to support better films."

Voicing his comment simultaneously with the opening of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" at the College Theatre in New Haven, the Governor declared that production of pictures such as "Dream," has given impetus to the trend toward better films.

"The industry should be encouraged to continue this trend," he said.

Thomas Garrett of Davis, Polk, Wardwell, Gardiner and Reed, gave a full explanation of the facts leading to the settlement agreement. Referring to the recent wave of law suits against Warner Brothers, he said:

"Unfortunately there is no way in which we can protect anyone from what we in the legal profession call sharpshooters. If you are involved in a large business you must expect law suits. The sharpshooters are always with us."

He further declared his belief that legislation should be enacted to protect corporations and individuals from "sharpshooters."

During the course of the meeting a suggestion was made by a stockholder that the minority stockholders should have representation on the board. There was no discussion of this suggestion, however.

Refuses to Bar Meeting

Federal Judge William Bondy in New York, meanwhile, denied an application by Norman Johnson for an injunction to restrain the meeting of the stockholders. The application was made on the eve of the meeting, with the plaintiff charging that the notice of the stockholders' meeting to approve the settlement of the claims of the corporation against the Warner Brothers was legally insufficient and deceptive.

Supreme Court Justice Callahan also handed down an opinion in another minority stockholder's suit against the corporation (Pepper vs. Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc.), wherein he denied the plaintiff's application for an examination of the directors of the corporation. Justice Callahan said:

"It sufficiently appears that plaintiff became a stockholder solely for the purpose of bringing this litigation, and under the circumstances the court feels that its discretion should be exercised as indicated."

Andy W. Smith, Jr., company executive in charge of Eastern and Canadian sales, in addressing the branch managers of his divisions, said:

"During the next few weeks your company will release the most diversified program of screen entertainment in its history."

Mr. Smith then outlined the plans for the distribution of the impending product from Warner Brothers, First National and Cosmopolitan production units, and announced that among the pictures to be shortly released are "Captain Blood," "The Story of Louis Pasteur," "Dangerous." "Ceiling Zero," 'The Petrified Forest" and "The Singing Kid."

The company's southern and western branch managers will hold a mid-winter sales meeting next week, probably in Kansas City, with Gradwell L. Sears, vice-president in charge of these divisions, presiding. The actual date and location of the gathering will be set late this week.

Gar O'Neill Is Erpi Press Head

G. R. (Gar) O'Neill has been appointed motion picture trade paper press relations director at Electrical Research Products, Inc., to fill the vacancy caused by the recent death of Walter Eberhardt. The appointment was made by P. L. Thompson, director of public relations for the company, and Western Electric.

Mr. O'Neill, who is at present connected with the distribution department of Erpi, is a native of Kentucky. He was educated at the Chestnut Hill Academy, Philadelphia, and at Columbia University, New York. CRITICS AGREE that M-G-M's

"TALE OF 2 CITIES"

is the Perfect Holiday Attraction!

Last year Santa Claus Leo of M-G-M thrilled you with "David Copperfield". This holiday season another Dickens masterpiece! Critics say it's even better than "Copperfield."

OUTSTANDING!

"Outstanding contribution of film entertainment."

—M. P. Daily

MASTERLY!

"One of the outstanding pictures of the year. David O. Selznick, who did so well with 'David Copperfield,' has given this other Dickens classic a painstaking production, while Jack Conway brings the drama of the story to the screen in a masterly way. Ronald Colman is splendid."

—Film Daily

CERTAIN BOX-OFFICE!

"M-G-M's 'Tale of Two Cities' great picture. Certain Box-Office! Immortal story brought to the screen with an overwhelming power and beauty that make that world-shaking chapter of history a living and shattering reality. This distinguished work is the second Dickens story David O. Selznick has fathered as producer within a year. By reason of its subject his 'David Copperfield' is outdone and he leaves behind a monumental money-maker. For there is not a box-office in this country, and few in other lands, that will not be enriched by this presentation. Such a roster of celebrated names, of which at least eight are stars, is something to talk about. From Ronald Colman down it is an illustrious assemblage."

—Hollywood Reporter

BETTER THAN "DAVID COPPERFIELD"

"Better than 'Copperfield.' Dickens' story mounts to epic proportions. M-G-M, sweeping the country with many fine productions, have added this stupendous story to their growing list of successes. It will be hard to equal for real entertainment.

—Showmen's Trade Review

HIGHEST BOX-OFFICE HONORS!

"With high thrill, heroic terror and beauty has Charles Dickens' 'A Tale of Two Cities' been brought to the screen to bid for the highest artistic and box-office honors. Altogether one of the finest expressions of screen and profoundly emotional incitements yet offered. Ronald Colman gives a great performance. One of the finest of year's impersonations. Production magnitude gives it an epic sweep."

DISTRIBUTORS' ANTIPATHY BLOCKS MPTOA PLAN FOR SELF-REGULATION

Kuykendall Charges Self-Discipline in Trade Practice Problems Halted by Film Companys' Refusal to Co-operate

Local Exhibitor Organizations Urged to Protect Their Interests by Preparing Against Probable Unfair Legislation

Code plans for effecting self-regulation of the motion picture industry suffered one direct setback, and another indirectly, this week, both severe. First, the move to formulate a plan within the business, as proposed by Edward L. Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, was reaching an impasse because of "the withholding of any offer of co-operation by the distributors."

Next, wild disorder attended the virtual scuttling of Major George Berry's NRA meeting at Washington to effect new code plans for all lines, where self-regulation is wanted. However, Mr. Berry said he is determined to proceed.

"The whole project of self-regulation of trade practice problems, which exhibitors are apparently ready and willing to undertake, is blocked by the withholding of any offer of essential co-operation by the distributors," Mr. Kuykendall charges in his current organization bulletin.

Reporting on exhibitor reactions to the idea of developing plans for self-regulation of the industry through locally authorized agencies, reactions gathered by Mr. Kuykendall in a nationwide tour of exchange centers which he completed recently, he says he found "a surprising unanimity of opinion that the trade practices of this business badly need some sort of self-regulation and self-discipline.

"Sentiment among representative owners of both large and small theatres," he adds, "has become well crystallized in favor of practical self-regulation within the industry to settle and adjust in a rational way disputes and controversies by local conciliation, arbitration and hearings to remove abuses and prevent injustices. The MPTOA has focused attention on the specific things that should be done, with a surprisingly uniform response and approval from exhibitors everywhere.

"The industry today stands challenged to regulate and discipline itself in commercial matters. If no such responsibility will be assumed by the producers and distributors, they should not complain of governmental interference if the legislatures and the courts move in and do it for us."

Mr. Kuykendall further says that as soon as some definite plan for self-regulation is evolved a meeting of the organization's board of directors will be called. Meanwhile, he urges local exhibitor organizations to strengthen their ranks and protect their interests against unfair legislation which he sees in prospect with the convening of many state legislatures next month.

What was designated last Monday morning in Washington by Major Berry, co-ordinator for industrial control, as the greatest industrial meeting ever held, threatened on Monday night to be as great a failure, as industry after industry passed resolutions to have nothing to do with his conference or walked out without the formality of taking action.

Film and theatre interests, slated to hold a round table conference on their problems never even organized a meeting, an example which was followed by a number of other industries. Others met, passed resolutions of condemnation and quit, and only a half dozen or so had formulated a program and elected delegates to the Industries Council meeting which is to end the affair, as asked by Major Berry.

If any representative of the film industry was present, he had not made his affiliation known when entering the meeting, according to Major Berry's office. At that, however, about 50 per cent of those attending had failed to make known the industry or organization which they represented.

Sol A. Rosenblatt, former Division Administrator of the NRA, was present, but he said he was merely an observer.

The opening session of the conference consisted solely of a speech by Major Berry. Before the Major was well along in his address he and an executive of a furniture trade association gave each other the lie and the chairman offered to make his opponent "eat" his words. The meeting was adjourned immediately on the conclusion of the Major's talk and this action precipitated a near riot as efforts were made to give John W. O'Leary, former president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, an opportunity to speak.

Union Groups Resentful

A session of the labor organizations Monday afternoon proceeded with but little less friction as representatives of the American Federation of Labor refused flatly to sit in any conference with unions not connected with their organization. The organizations scheduled to gather for a consideration of the problems of the amusement industries included the Associated Actors and Artists of America, American Federation of Labor, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Brotherhood of Electrical Workers of America, International Union of Operating Engineers, American Federation of Musicians, and Stage Employes and Moving Picture Machine Operators of the United States and Canada.

As an aftermath of the disastrous Washington meeting came the announcement of the results of the questionnaire of the National Association of Manufacturers which showed a vast majority of the manufacturers of this country do not "favor legislation continuing in any form the principles and policies of the National Recovery Administration."

The association announced that 10,000 answers to the questionnaire showed that 82 per cent of the manufacturers, employing about 50 per cent of all factory employees, would prefer things to go on as they are.

Nor were the 18 per cent not voting against a return of the NRA uniting in any single idea. Their votes qualified with so many conditions and reservations that no clear interpretation of their stand was possible.

Little Hope for Success

The employers who have answered the questionnaire use 3,900,000 workers in their plants and they range from the biggest corporations to firms using no fewer than 25 employes.

Expressing his determination of putting his plan for an industrial council into effect, despite the bolting of all but a bare score of the 137 trades invited to participate. Mr. Berry on Tuesday was surveying the wreckage of "The greatest industry meeting ever held" with faint hope of salvaging much of his ambitious program.

Stigmatizing those who opposed him as "Communist," Mr. Berry, in an official statement, despite the bolting of 85 per cent of the trades, declared that, "A great majority of those present have started to work on the problems attendant upon the President's call for facts."

With the exception of the labor groups, which met Tuesday, the conference was practically at an end, only the delegates of those groups which agreed to participate in the Industrial Council remaining in Washington. In several instances, it was learned, these delegates are without authority to bind their groups to any action and in some cases were appointed to express disapproval of Mr. Berry's plan.

Sees Council Needed

A note of humor was injected into the otherwise dreary situation by a formal statement issued by the co-ordinator in which he said the conference has "struck a responsive chord in the minds of thinking men of industry and labor" and the issues "cannot be swept aside by political considerations or by unreasoning opposition."

"The progress thus far has clarified the situation somewhat," Mr. Berry declared, "and we are going forward in the work of setting up an industrial council exactly as originally planned. To apply itself to the great problems of industry which can never be solved without general discussion and general co-operation between leaders of industry, labor and the people."

Discussing the situation, officials in Mr. Berry's office expressed the hope that the council might include as many as 35 delegates and maintained that once formed some "big names" would be attracted.

DISTRIBUTORS FACING $800,000 N.Y. TAX BILL

City Finds Exchanges Liable for Tax on Entire Revenue Regardless of the Source

The decision, disturbing to distributors, that the entire revenue of New York exchanges is subject to the city's two per cent sales tax, threatening the imposition of an $800,000 combined annual tax bill on all companies, held the spotlight this week in taxation matters that affect the industry.

Elsewhere, Missouri merchants and exhibitors decided to continue their attack in the courts on the state sales tax; Ohio continued for another year the three per cent tax on theatre admissions, as the Ohio House passed a new income tax measure; sponsored films and commercial film announcements appearing on South Carolina theatres will hereafter be heavily taxed; in Clarksburg, West Virginia, imposition of a new theatre tax on Sunday performances was declared illegal by the courts, while Ontario cut admission taxation and theatres immediately lowered prices.

New York Ruling Worrisome

The New York City finance department last week completed its audit of the books of the local United Artists exchange, and on the basis of its findings, notified the exchange of an assessment of $20,100 for its share of the city sales tax of two per cent on gross revenue for the period from December 28 to March 1, last.

The assessment was made against the entire revenue of the exchange regardless of whether it originated outside the city or state limits, and excluded only the non-taxable revenue derived from sales to the United States Government.

This assessment indicates that New York exchanges might stand to be taxed approximately $800,000 annually if the city succeeds in its efforts to prove its contention that film rentals are subject to the sales tax. New York distributors, employing the United Artists instance as a test case, contend that they are not.

A hearing is to be held by members of the city finance department and exchange men to determine to just what extent, if any, exchanges are subject to the sales tax. Exchange men claim exemption on the grounds they rent, not sell, film to theatres. They are prepared to take the matter to the courts, and indications are that if the city presses the collection of the tax from United Artists, as is expected, the whole matter will be brought to the courts.

Missouri Sales Tax Fight

Meanwhile, in Kansas City, attorneys for the Joplin cafeteria company which lost a court attack on the sales tax law have indicated they will file an appeal to the Missouri supreme court.

Judge N. Sevier, in the Cole County circuit court, sustained a demurrer of State Auditor Forrest Smith without making comment on the constitutionality of the law.

In Columbus, Ohio, the House taxation committee reversed its previous stand and recommended the extension for another year after December 31st of Ohio's three per cent tax on gross admissions. The committee earlier had failed to approve Governor Davey's recommendation that the three per cent tax be reenacted as an equivalent of the state's three per cent sales tax. The committee's action again suspends application of the former 10 per cent admission tax, which was originally suspended following enactment of the state three per cent sales tax.

In Spartanburg, S. C., the city council passed an ordinance licensing commercial film advertising, other than advertisements of coming attractions, at the rate of $200 for the first $1,000 revenue and $5 for each additional $1,000.

The new ordinance prohibits advertising or offering for sale in theatres, halls or auditoriums, by moving pictures, still pictures, slides, paintings, drawings or writing except on payment of the license.

In Clarksburg, W. Va., the city was enjoined by a circuit court order from imposition of a one-cent tax on theatre tickets. Argument for a permanent injunction will be heard next week. The tax ordinance was to have become effective December 1st, but Jack Marks, of the Orpheum theatre, and Claude Robinson, of the Grand and Moore Opera House theatres, obtained the restraining order.

Effective immediately, the Province of Ontario has granted a cut of three cents per admission in amusement taxes applying to the lower priced tickets. The higher brackets, ranging upwards of 35 cents, are not affected.

Bowes Gets Court Order Prohibiting Amateur Show

An interim injunction prohibiting appearance in theatres owned by Confederation Amusements, Ltd., Canada, of any persons purporting to be winners of amateur shows held by Major Edward Bowes, of New York, has been issued in the superior court of Montreal. At the same time an action for damages against the theatre company for $4,500 was brought by Major Bowes.

Major Bowes declared in his petition that persons adjudged winners by popular vote in his New York contests receive contracts as vaudeville entertainers in theatrical troops which tour the continent. Since November 23rd, he said, Confederation Amusements has been advertising in Montreal newspapers that certain winners in Bowes contests would appear in their theatres, but the names have not been those of actual winners, it was charged.

University Offers Projection Course

The Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Boston, will offer a university extension course in motion picture projection. The course is to start February 4th with Louis Frey, former head of an independent school for operators, engaged as instructor.

Loew Stockholders Select Directors Armsby and Parker

Stockholders of Loew's, Inc., on Tuesday elected George N. Armsby and William A. Parker to the directorate to fill the vacancies created several weeks ago by the resignation of Arthur M. and David L. Loew. This action was taken at the annual meeting held in Loew's State Building in New York, Directors who were re-elected include Nicholas M. Schenck, David Bernstein, J. Robert Rubin, Isidor Frey, Charles C. Moskowitz, David Warfield, Thomas Nelson Perkins, John R. Hazel, William A. Phillips and Leopold Friedman.

The management was accorded a vote of confidence on a suggestion by one of the stockholders. In answer to a question from another, it was said that earnings in the first quarter of the new fiscal year are expected to strike the same level as in the preceding quarter despite the fact that amortization of negatives during the period were approximately the heaviest in the company's history.

The addition to Mr. Armsby and Mr. Parker to the directorate was described by Loew executives as without special significance. Both men are prominent in banking and investing circles. Mr. Armsby is a director of the Moredall Realty Corporation, which operates the Capitol Theatre, in New York. He is also a director in J. Cheever Cowdin's Standard Capital Corporation, which holds an option expiring February 1 to purchase Universal from Carl Laemmle.

Mr. Armsby, an officer and director of a long string of corporations, was once an officer of Bancamerica-Blair Corporation and a director in Radio-Keith-Orpheum, when Bancamerica-Blair and Lehman had jointly participated in a portion of RKO financing. He is a director of the American Maracaibo Corporation, Certain-teed Products, Inc., Curtis Aeroplane and Motor Company, General Outdoor Advertising Company, Industrial Rayon Corporation, Intercontinental Aviation, Inc., Keystone Aircraft Corporation, National Department Stores, Inc., and others.

Mr. Parker is president of the Incorporated Investors, Inc., one of the largest investment trusts in New England. Like Mr. Armsby, Mr. Parker is a heavy holder of Loew stock. He has been a constant champion of the company and its management.

Sunday Case Stirs Clergy, Petition Asks Another Vote

The dismissal of a charge of Sunday operation against Roy A. Richardson in Suffolk, Va., has stirred up the ministers of the town and Dr. N. J. Goodwin, pastor of the First Baptist Church, has demanded that Police Justice E. Roland Custis explain his reasons for the dismissal of the case against the theatre manager. Three ministers and five church leaders testified against the manager in court.

Another petition asking for a called city election to vote on Sunday films will be presented to the City Commission of Denton, Texas, shortly.

INVALIDITY OF RENTAL CONTRACT IS UPHELD

Supreme Court Dismisses An Appeal of Fox Film in Suit Against Minnesota Exhibitor

Invalidity of "standard," "compulsory" motion picture rental contracts held illegal in the Paramount case, as decided by the Minnesota courts, was given effect by the United States Supreme Court on Monday when it dismissed, for want of jurisdiction, the appeal of Fox Film Corporation for a review of its long-fought suit against A. B. Muller, Minnesota exhibitor.

The decision itself has only academic interest, although it does bury deeper the long deceased "standard exhibition contract" as used years ago in compulsory form by distributors. Distributors for years have been using an optional form of standard contract together with their own individual company form, and exhibitors are permitted to select either one to effect their contractual requirements.

In this week's decision, rendered by Mr. Justice Sutherland, the court held the case to be "controlled by the settled rule that where the judgment of a state court rests upon two grounds, one of which is federal and the other non-federal in character, our jurisdiction fails if the non-federal ground is independent of the federal ground and adequate to support the judgment," as it was held to be here.

Charges Refused Films

The suit arose under two contracts made by Fox with Mr. Muller, under which the former agreed to deliver 46 pictures for which Mr. Muller agreed to pay a rental of $1,837. Fox alleged that it had made all these pictures available, but that Mr. Muller refused to accept or play or pay the license fee for any of them; and at Mr. Muller's request had shipped him five pictures under these contracts which he refused to receive or play or pay the license fee for, or even the transportation charges of $8.92 thereon.

In his answer to the suit, Mr. Muller contended that the contracts were formulated as the result of a combination and conspiracy between the ten large producers and distributors, which controlled the film business, and in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law; that the contracts were in restraint of trade and interstate commerce, illegal and void.

In a stipulation agreed to during the trial, it was admitted that paragraph 18 of the contract—the so-called arbitration clause—was "the same as the paragraph 18 in the contract construed by said decisions above named (Thacher decision and Paramount decision), and said paragraph 18 was held by said decisions to be illegal and unenforceable."

Early Decision Upheld

In a decision in favor of Muller, on April 7, 1933, the trial court declared "it must be said that the illegality permeates the whole contract. This court is of the same opinion as before, to wit: that no recovery can be had upon the ground that the contract is illegal; first, because the arbitration plan is so connected with the remainder of the contract that the entire contract is tained; second, because the contract violates the Sherman antitrust law and is a void contract under the decisions of the United States Supreme Court in Paramount Famous Lasky Corporation v. United States, 282, U. S. 30, and in nowise indicates that there is any intention on the part of the court to overrule its former decisions or to hold the law otherwise than previously held."

Upon appeal to the Minnesota supreme court, the decision of the lower tribunal was affirmed and the case was carried to the United States Supreme Court by Fox in a petition filed October 22, 1934. The petition was granted, but when the case was called for argument on February 18, last, it was found that no final judgment had been entered and the cause was dismissed as "improvidentially granted." On May 9, last, after final judgment had been entered, the case was again appealed to Washington, the petition was granted and argument was held November 15.

In his decision this week, Justice Sutherland entered upon no discussion of the merits of the clause, pointing out that "in view of the disposition we are to make of this writ, it is not necessary to set forth the terms of the arbitration clause or the other provisions of the contract."

Throughout the opinion, Justice Sutherland confined himself to the question of authority of the Supreme Court in cases as this, where the federal and non-federal questions were so interwoven as not to be independent.

The case, he held, had been settled finally before it was brought before the court by the determination of the Minnesota tribunal that the invalid clause was not separable from the other provisions of the contract.

"This is an action brought in a Minnesota state court of first instance by the film corporation against Muller, to recover damages for an alleged breach of two contracts by which Muller was licensed to exhibit certain moving-picture films belonging to the corporation," the opinion said. "Muller answered, setting up the invalidity of the contracts under the Sherman anti-trust act. It was and is agreed that these contracts are substantially the same as the one involved in United States v. Paramount Famous Lasky Corp., et al., 34F (2d) 984 (aff'd 282 U. S. 30); that petitioner was one of the defendants in that action; and that the 'arbitration clause,' paragraph 18 of each of the contracts sued upon, is the same as that held in that case to be invalid. In view of the disposition which we are to make of this writ, it is not necessary to set forth the terms of the arbitration clause or the other provisions of the contract.

Anti-Trust Violation

"The court of first instance held that each contract sued upon violated the Sherman anti-trust act, and dismissed the action. In a supplemental opinion that court put its decision upon the grounds, first, that the arbitration plan is so connected with the remainder of the contract that the entire contract is tained, and, second, that the contract violates the Sherman anti-trust law. The state supreme court affirmed. 192 Minn. 212. We granted certiorary, 293 U. S. 550; but, when the case was called for argument, it appeared that no final judgment had been entered and the writ was dismissed as improvidently granted. 294 U. S. 696. The case was then remanded to the state supreme court; and, the judgment having been made final, and again affirmed by the state supreme court on the authority of its previous opinion,—Minn.—, we allowed the present writ. 295 U. S. —.

"In its opinion, the state supreme court, after a statement of the case, said (192 Minn. at p. 214):

"'The question presented on this appeal is whether the arbitration clause is severable from the contract, leaving the remainder of the contract enforceable, or not severable, permeating and tainting the whole contract with illegality and making it void.'

"That court then proceeded to refer and discuss a number of decisions of state and federal courts, some of which took the view that the arbitration clause was severable, and others that it was not severable, from the remainder of the contract. After reviewing the opinion and decree of the federal district court in the Paramount case, the lower court reached the conclusion that the holding of the federal court was that the entire contract was illegal; and upon that view and upon what it conceived to be the weight of authority, held the arbitration plan was inseparable from the other provisions of the contract. Whether this conclusion was right or wrong we need not determine. It is enough that it is, at least, not without fair support.

"Respondent contends that the question of severability was alone decided, and that no federal question was determined by the lower court. This contention petitioner challenges, and asserts that a federal question was involved and decided. We do not attempt to settle the dispute; but, assuming for present purposes only that petitioner's view is the correct one, the case is controlled by the settled rule that where the judgment of a state court rests upon two grounds, one of which is federal and the other non-federal in character, our jurisdiction fails if the non-federal ground is independent of the federal ground and adequate to support the judgment. This rule had become firmly fixed at least at early as Klinger v. State of Missouri, 13 Wall. 257, 263, and has been reiterated in a long line of cases since that time. It is enough to cite, in addition to the Klinger case, the following: Enterprise Irrig. Dist. v. Canal Co., 243 U. S. 157, 163-165; Petrie v. Nampa &c. Irrig. Dist., 248 U. S. 154, 157; McCoy v. Shaw, 277 U. S. 302; Eustis v. Bolles, 150 U. S. 361.

Arbitration Clause Invalid

"Whether the provisions of a contract are non-severable, so that if one be held invalid the others must fall with it, is clearly a question of general and not of federal law. The invalidity of the arbitration clause which the present contracts embody is conceded. It was held invalid by the federal district court in the Paramount case, and its judgment was affirmed here. The question, therefore, was foreclosed; and was not the subject of controversy in the state courts. In that situation, the primary question to be determined by the court below was whether the concededly invalid clause was separable from the other provisions of the contract. The ruling of the state supreme court that it was not, is sufficient to conclude the case without regard to the determination, if, in fact, any was made, in respect of the federal question. It follows that the non-federal ground is adequate to sustain the judgment.

"The rule announced in Enterprise Irrig. Dist. v. Canal Co., supra, and other cases, to the effect that our jurisdiction attaches where the nonfederal ground is so interwoven with the other as not to be an independent matter, does not apply. The construction put upon the contracts did not constitute a preliminary step which simply had the effect of bringing forward for determination of the federal question, but was a decision which automatically took the federal question out of the case if otherwise it would be there. The non-federal question in respect of the construction of the contracts and the federal question in respect of their validity under the anti-trust act were clearly independent of one another. See Allen v. Southern Pacific Railroad Co., 173 U. S. 479, 489-492. The case, in effect, was disposed of before the federal question said to be involved was reached. Chouteau v. Gibson, 111 U. S. 200; Chapman v Goodnow, 123 U. S. 540, 548. A decision of that question then became unnecessary; and whether it was decided or not, our want of jurisdiction is clear.

"Writ dismissed for want of jurisdiction."

Chief Justice Hughes took no part in the consideration of decision of the case.

BUYING COMBINES ORGANIZING TO FIGHT AGAINST "AGGRESSION"

Independent Group of 100 Theatres Is Proposed in New York Involving a $2,000,000 Pool for Financing Houses

Revival of negotiations for an independent theatre circuit in New York and plans underway in at least two other key cities for booking combines of independent exhibitors against circuit dominance or outside aggression, promise to shape a new approach on the part of the distributors in the selling of product in those cities.

In New York this week sponsors of the proposed circuit of independent houses had under consideration underwriting to the extent of $2,000,000, to provide the sinews for the deal which, it is planned, will have 100 theatres as a nucleus. At the same time buying and booking combines were forming in Philadelphia and Des Moines, and in Columbus as well there has been consideration of such a plan.

The powerful buying combine operated by Allied of Michigan in Detroit appears to be serving as the pattern, and from it independents in other sections are drawing their inspiration, as the most successful aggrandized independent buying power in the country. Another such organization of many years' standing exists in Chicago.

Hallgarten and Company, banking house, is reported to have approached sponsors of the independent New York circuit with a plan of financing providing for common and preferred stock issues. Auditors for the firm are inspecting the books of some 145 theatres in Greater New York, from which the selection of the first 100 will be made. The plan contemplates the formation of a corporation to take over the theatres, and in return the owners will receive stock, the preferred of which will be retired out of half the profits.

Figuring in the negotiations are Harry Brandt and Milton C. Weisman, president and counsel, respectively, of the Independent Theatre Owners of Greater New York, who are the chief sponsors. If the plan goes through, Mr. Brandt will be the operator. He is reported to have pledged his group of 45 houses to the circuit with the understanding that he will head the organization.

Keen Rivalry Portended

Plans, however, are still in a more or less nebulous state, but if they are consummated the new circuit will loom as an important factor in the New York exhibition field. The nearest contender would be the Metropolitan Playhouses with about 80 theatre units, divided in operation between Randforce and Skouras Theatres Corporation, but under the control of United Artists Theatres Corporation.

About a year ago Mr. Weisman and a group of independents initiated a plan to pool about 100 theatres under an arrangement whereby exhibitors would make a cash contribution to the circuit when turning over properties and leases. Owners were to receive stock, and in most cases continue operation of their houses. They would be guaranteed a flat sum every week, based on the weekly earnings of individual theatres for the two years preceding.

Commitments for about 60 houses were made at the time, but half of the exhibitors participating failed to carry out the financial obligations involved, and the plan tentatively was abandoned. The new proposal, it is understood, does not provide for cash outlays by exhibitors, as this would be taken care of by Hallgarten and Company. Meantime it will be several weeks before anything tangible can develop.

Plan Philadelphia Group

Of a different nature, but also involving business combinations of exhibitors, is the plan of the Associated Theatres of Pennsylvania, in which 26 theatres in Philadelphia and environs have signified their intention to participate. This is proposed to be a buying and booking combine, with expectant benefits to exhibitors in the way of film rentals and contractual terms. Word from Philadelphia this week was that negotiations for a merger of the I. E. P. A. and the MPTO of Eastern Pennsylvania under the name of the Independent MPTO were temporarily retarding the move.

Another product buying agency, but for a largely different purpose, is being inaugurated in Des Moines, with a membership of 48 theatres as the objective and with Allied Theatre Owners of Iowa and Nebraska as the sponsor.

Each theatre is required to post $1,000 as a guarantee, the fund to be used for the general purposes of the combine and "also to build theatres where and if necessary." The group, which is headed by Leo F. Wolcott of Eldorado, Ia., aims to act as a protective agency for independents in the Iowa-Nebraska territory against circuit aggression, but primarily, it is understood, to prevent the invasion of unnecessary competition in some of the towns.

At the annual convention of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio in Columbus recently the chief topic was a co-operative buying and booking plan for the State similar to that in Michigan.

The first buying combine, as far as can be determined, was started in Philadelphia by the Stanley circuit in 1915. Later the idea took hold in Chicago and Detroit. In the Michigan city the combine grew powerful under the aegis of the Kunsky circuit, but when that group was taken over by Paramount and the parent company refused to continue with the combine as well, it lost the Kunsky first runs and much of its power. It is now continuing as the exclusive buying agents for a group of independents, and is still strong despite some recent difficulties.

Michigan Allied Plan Proving To Be Pattern for Theatre Combinations Now Being Projected in Several Cities

Internal dissension has shorn the Chicago combine of much of its former dominant position. About half of the exhibitors formerly affiliated with it have dropped out in recent years, but it is functioning for a small number of houses, under the management of Aaron Saperstein, president of Allied of Illinois.

Allied Has New Campaign Media

Allied States' "White Book," published to gain support for the Pettengill and Neely anti-block booking and blind selling bills, has been issued for distribution by exhibitor members and the 35 groups which have come out in support of the measures.

A list of these organizations is printed in the book along with the names of 43 educational, religious and civic leaders who have indorsed the Pettengill bill.

A foreword says the purpose of the booklet is "to supply accurate information to the movie-goers of America—and, more especially, to the parents of juvenile and adolescent movie-goers—relative to certain trade practices imposed upon the independent motion picture theatre owners by the major producers and distributors of motion pictures which practices have a direct bearing on the character of entertainment offered by the independent theatres to the public."

Six of the eight chapters give the Allied definition of block booking and blind selling and their effects. Chapter V insists the Pettengill and Neely bills, which are identical, are the only remedy. Chapter VI is titled: "Big Eight Propaganda Exposed." It purports to answer the majors' contentions that block booking is not compulsory; that block booking compels exhibitors to play the good pictures; that the bills will work undue hardships on producers and distributors, and that the proposed legislation is without precedent.

A list of endorsers of the bills is given on page 20. This is followed by a discussion of the meaning of the Allied seal, a reprint of the Pettengill bill and a glossary of industry terms.

A direct appeal for aid of readers of the booklet in support of the bills is made.

Cincinnati Sees Amateur Film

"First Option," said to be the first feature-length sound picture ever to be produced and filmed in Cincinnati, had its premiere at the Taft last week under the sponsorship of the new Cincinnati Cine Club. The picture was produced by William C. Sage and directed by Margaret Radcliffe. Cast was composed of local residents.

"RED TAPE" SLOWS UP WPA'S THEATRE PROJECT

Project Announced Two Months Ago Has Made No Material Advancement Up To Date

Mired in governmental red tape, as revealed in highly complicated regulations and slow-moving machinery, the Works Progress Administration theatre project in the New York area and elsewhere is "getting nowhere fast," while Actors' Equity and Chorus Equity Associations are appealing to President Roosevelt to ease some of the restrictions.

Protests on all sides are being leveled at the bureaucratic policies which have slowed up the ambitious plans to put Uncle Sam in show business and thereby take the needy theatre folk off the home relief rolls and put them to work.

Originally written up for the New York district to absorb some 3,700 unemployed actors, technicians, musicians, writers, stage hands and others, only about 1,900 have been placed on the payroll, and 1,500 of these were transferred from the previous administration of the FERA. And in the more than two months which have elapsed since the projects were announced to begin, nothing in the way of actual accomplishment toward production has even been started.

In the field as well reports indicate that the program is progressing at a snail's pace, although in some localities plans are being advanced.

Meanwhile the early fear on the part of motion picture and theatre interests that the projects would present strong competition has considerably abated as a result of the delay. From the present outlook it will be several weeks before the drama and vaudeville units can start functioning, if then, and the project is scheduled to end in June.

The WPA productions are not expected to make much of a dent in theatre business in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles, the primary centers for relief of this character. Motion picture sources point out that the vaudeville shows put on in auditoriums in New York failed to injure established theatres to any extent because they were intended primarily for the unemployed, and chiefly because the entertainment offered in film houses is so vastly superior.

Stop Vaudeville Project

Another factor in the New York area, and an important one, is that the plan to tour vaudeville and musical comedy shows in cities outstate has been stopped, at least for the time being. This division particularly is bogged in a maze of red tape, and it is doubtful whether the necessary traveling expenses promised at the start will be forthcoming. Also, Eddie Dowling, in charge of the project, is finding difficulty obtaining the required number of actors because of the regulation shutting applicants out of the WPA if they were not on relief November 1. Should this ever get started, however, exhibitors in the smaller cities in New York state might suffer some competition from these contemplated one-night stands. Six road companies including actors, musicians and stage hands, had been planned for this project, to provide work for about 1,200 persons.

While Mrs. Hallie Flanagan, the national director, was in Hollywood attempting to overcome objections of the Screen Actors' Guild, the studio players' union, and to stimulate activity on the West Coast, Equity in New York was bitter in condemning the restrictions retarding the program.

Equity's attitude toward the WPA, while expressed in approval by the organization's council, will be determined among the rank and file at its next quarterly meeting December 20. The attitude of the Screen Actors' Guild depends largely on the extent to which Mrs. Flanagan is successful in answering the criticisms of that group.

One of the reasons for the delay, explained Elmer Rice, regional director in New York, is that while in the commercial theatre an actor can be hired and signed to a contract in a few minutes, the procedure of placing an actor on the WPA payroll requires three weeks, as the applications are shuttled from department to department for investigation and approval, through as many as 20 hands.

Rice Blames Red Tape

Mr. Rice also blamed the red tape. Without it, he said, he could have had "lots of shows" running by now. He had hoped to have the drama units in New York functioning in January, and two or three theatres have been leased for the purpose, but he is now venturing no predictions. Equity has absolved both Mr. Rice and Mrs. Flanagan of responsibility for the mess, directing its fire at Washington, pointing out the anomaly that while the projects are retarded by the lack of actors, hundreds of players are not permitted to enroll.

The United Scenic Artists of America has joined Equity and other theatre unions in protesting the delay. If an actor or anyone else experienced in the theatre needs work and there is a federal project job open for him, he should receive it, regardless of whether he was registered for relief by November 1, they contend. Equity points out many actors had hoped to get theatre employment by November 1, and for that reason did not apply for relief.

Replying in Washington, Joseph Baker, assistant administrator of the WPA, said that no blanket ruling permitting 25 per cent of unemployed actors not on relief by that date to enroll in the WPA theatre project would be put into force. Ninety per cent of the actors in the projects must have been on relief, according to regulations, but it is discretionary with the WPA to reduce this to 75 per cent, which would permit a larger enrollment from non-relief actors.

"We are making exemptions on specific drama projects in New York every day in line with this permissive power," said Mr. Baker, "but we have no intention whatsoever of changing the policy we have hitherto followed there."

Only 3,000 Eligible

Of 5,000 persons who have applied in New York, less than 3,000 were found eligible for employment under the rules, and only half of these will actually be employed in addition to present personnel.

It was learned meanwhile that attempts were being made to organize a theatre projects local of the City Projects Council, a union of WPA white collar workers claiming 3,000 members. The Council announced it would join Equity's campaign against red tape.

Plans are under way for projects in Minneapolis and St. Paul under the direction of Professor A. Dale Riley, head of the University of Minnesota theatre department. Besides commercial shows, it is planned to have presentations of various sorts in grade and high schools and at 100 CCC camps in Minnesota.

From New Haven comes word that the newly organized Theatre of Eleven, Inc., selected as the nucleus of a Connecticut program, will be approved by Senator Matthew A. Daley as a WPA project. Four groups of theatre activity are planned for the state, with an appropriation of $86,000. In addition to the New Haven group, there will be a Hartford project, a vaudeville unit and a children's unit. The Theatre of Eleven cast will go on tour in the state.

The New Jersey project will be centered in a theatre in Atlantic City. Des Moines, Iowa, is planning free performances by the WPA in schools and other auditoriums, and units may be sent to various parts of the state.

Late last week Mayor F. H. LaGuardia intervened to prevent a threatened strike of 700 musicians employed on the WPA music project in New York which would have involved indirectly all the 18,000 members of Local 802, American Federation of Musicians. The WPA made certain concessions which brought the wage nearer to the prevailing union scale per hour. The Government, however, retained freedom of action in charging admission fees to WPA concerts, another point of difference with the union, but officials said this would apply to some concerts only.

Block Booking Issue Comes To the Fore Again in Canada

The block booking issue has come to the fore in Canada again, largely this time through a move by a social organization in Toronto, the Provincial Council of Women, in presenting a demand for the abolition of the system, the claim being made by Mrs. Harold Clarke, of Windsor, that theatres are forced to take poor features along with high-class attractions.

The Council of Women has presented a petition to the Ontario Cabinet for the enactment of legislation to prohibit block booking, bringing a reply from H. C. Nixon, acting premier of Ontario, that the Provincial Government probably did not have the power to interfere. This was followed by a recommendation by Mayor P. J. Nolan, of Ottawa, for an investigation by the Dominion Government, through a Royal Commission, into the whole system of film distribution in Canada, Mr. Nolan declaring that block-booking "has been a burning question with theatre owners for the past 15 years."

RULES "PUBLIC DOMAIN" MUSIC MAY BECOME PRIVATE PROPERTY

Original Treatment Supports Copyright of Song Generally Known, Federal Judge Decides in Wilkie vs. Santley

When a musical composition is taken from the public domain and clothed with some originality, it becomes the property of the adapter, according to a decision in an infringement suit given by Judge Alfred C. Coxe in the United States District court in New York.

Establishing new phases of law in connection with copyrights, the decision, according to attorneys, will have far-reaching effects on the composition of music and its use, including recording in motion pictures.

The decision sets up three departures from accepted principles:

1. A composer who adapts a composition in public domain and gives it original material obtains rights to the whole. No one may use such music in another composition and declare it to be original.

2. The fact that another composer's music may have been taken from the public domain is no defense in an infringement action.

3. Even though there is no access to an original composition, if the similarity is sufficient, the court has the right to imply copy. This point is said to be not entirely new.

The decision was in the case of W. A. (Bud) Wilkie, a composer, against Santly Brothers, Inc., music publishers, and Bernice Petkere, the alleged infringing composer. The action was for infringement of a common law copyright of a song entitled "Confessing," which Mr. Wilkie wrote in 1927 and 1928. The song was never published, but was privately performed by Mr. Wilkie for film studios and others in California at different times prior to 1929.

The alleged infringing composition is called "Starlight," composed by Miss Petkere in 1931. This song was published and copyrighted by Santly Brothers in December, 1931, and has since enjoyed a fair amount of commercial success.

Ruling Called Unwarranted

Some attorneys are of the belief the decision went counter to established principles of law, since Mr. Wilkie's song was never copyrighted or registered and hence was entitled to no protection, even though Mr. Wilkie had the first idea. William V. Goldie of Goldie and Gumm, attorneys for the defendants, announced this week there would be an appeal to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals. Louis Nizer of Phillips and Nizer represented the plaintiff.

It was insisted in the suit that the music of the two songs is so nearly alike as to warrant an inference of copyright. Miss Petkere denied copying or an opportunity for copying, and it was not established that she had had access to "Confessing." Under questioning by Mr. Nizer, she claimed that the inspiration for "Starlight" came to her while she was in a night club in New York and that she then jotted down the song on the back of a menu. She claimed her song was original, and that any portions similar to "Confessing" were taken independently from common sources in the public domain.

"There is no direct evidence," said Judge Coxe, "that the defendants had access to the plaintiff's song, but access may be inferred from circumstances in the same way that any other fact is proved; and, although in a common law copyright the range of contacts is necessarily restricted, I cannot say that it is entirely improbable that at some time prior to 1931, Miss Petkere may have had access to the melody of 'Confessing.'

Similarity Is Traced

"The theme of 'Confessing' is found in the first eight bars of the chorus. These bars occur all told four times in the song . . . and it is against them that the main attack of the defendants had been directed. They contain a four bar chromatic progression very similar to that of 'Violets' (1900), and a number of other earlier melodies; but after the first four bars there is a distinctive digression entirely original with the plaintiff; and the defendants have been unable to find anywhere in the whole field of music the same combination of notes appearing in the entire eight bars. Manifestly, this is sufficient to entitle plaintiff to protection for his song as an original composition."

Judge Coxe found other similarities, and decided that they could not have been the result of mere accident or coincidence. While both songs incorporated a portion from "Violets," that does not account for the exact duplication in "Starlight" of the original digression made by Mr. Wilkie in the rest of his theme, the court held.

"The argument that 'Starlight' was built up independently from common sources in the public domain is, I think, completely answered by Miss Petkere's own testimony," the decision continued, "for she tesified that she had had no previous technical musical training, and was totally unfamiliar with all of the earler melodies referred to at the trial, except 'Violets,' and her whole background was such as to preclude any reasonable probability that she could have gone to the public domain for her material.

"Moreover, she stated that her song was entirely spontaneous, and composed without reference to the common sources, indicating clearly that these sources were given no real consideration. The case, therefore, falls squarely within the ruling of Judge Learned Hand in Fisher vs. Dillingham (supra), where it was held that the public domain must be used if it is to afford protection against copyright infringement."

There were eight bars in "Starlight" not similar to "Confessing," and the lyrics were entirely different.

Imposing musical experts for both sides

Decision Likely to Have Far-Reaching Effects on Use of Compositions in Motion Pictures and Elsewhere failed to agree. Testifying for the plaintiff in this connection were Alexander Smallens, director of George Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess," musical play on Broadway, and director of the New York Philharmonic Symphony orchestra, and Maurice Baron and Lehman Engel, composers. They all testified that the similarity in the two songs was such that there could not have been any coincidence in their composition. The other side called Fred E. Ahlert and another musical expert to explain what they thought were disparities in scale and melody.

Judge Coxe appointed a master to compute damages, and ordered that all income from radio, sheet music, phonograph records and other sources be turned over to Mr. Wilkie, as well as all record dies, published music, orchestrations and other records. He issued an injunction restraining the defendants from making any further disposition of the disputed song.

Terms of Aid to Children By Rogers Fund Revealed

Handicapped children to be helped by the Will Rogers Memorial Fund, under a decision reached by the Memorial Commission this week, were defined as "those suffering from blindness or other physical disabilities; those who have been victims of illness who can be brought back to partial or complete activity through expert care; those without parents or whose parents lack the money to give them the proper care."

The manner in which these benefits are to be administered will be determined by the Memorial Commission, of which Vice-President Garner is chairman, after the close of the campaign on December 15th.

Contributions are being received at national headquarters, 570 Lexington Ave., New York.

Received this week was $1,000 from the McNaught Syndicate, Inc., through which Roger's daily newspaper comments were distributed, while the New York Fire Department has also set up offices where contributions may be received. In Boston, December 14 has been set as Will Rogers Tag Day. In Kansas City and San Francisco benefit stage performances are being planned.

Cagney Performance Voted Best

James Cagney's performance in "A Midsummer Night's Dream" has been voted the best performance of November by the Screen Actors Guild. Honorable mention went to Carole Lombard in "Hands Across the Table" and Preston Foster in "The Last Days of Pompeii."

MPTOA Urges Battle on ASCAP

recorded music he has already bought and paid well for when he licensed the films for public exhibition? Let Warners frankly announce they will levy no added tax on the exhibitor who buys their pictures, putting it squarely up to other motion picture companies with music publishing subsidiaries now members of ASCAP or non-members to match their fairness to the exhibitor.

"If this extortion of many years is to be curbed and restrained, a sustained offensive must be carried on by the exhibitors, who pay out millions for this music tax. It can only be levied and collected by a monopolistic combine such as ASCAP, otherwise your film rentals would be a full and complete payment for the entire public performing rights to a motion picture, including the music, for which the composer is well paid by the producer. Music not controlled by ASCAP has never levied an additional tax extortion on motion picture theatres. Every exhibitor has a personal and individual responsibility to do two things:

"1. Give the Government every possible cooperation and encouragement in its litigation to have ASCAP declared an illegal monopoly and price-fixing combine in violation of the antitrust laws, seeking to either curb and restrain their arbitrary extortions or to have their dissolution ordered.

"2. Actively support the new Duffy Copyright Law through your own representative in the Congress. This bill is no complete cure, but it will restrain and make it more difficult for ASCAP to carry out and enforce their unjustifiable and arbitrary extortions on the theatres by removing the severe and mandatory provisions for excessive liquidated damages for the 'unauthorized' use of copyrighted music now in the present copyright laws, and will require actual damages to be proved for violations.

"Active interest in the music tax fight must be sustained by all exhibitors. Let the public, the press and the Congress know the facts about this unfair and unjustifiable extortion levied on motion picture theatres for rights already bought and paid for. No producer can record music in his picture without paying adequate compensation to the composer for the songs and music actually used, which he recovers from you in the film rentals you pay. An additional music tax on motion picture theatres is an inexcusable extortion which the Government and the courts should not tolerate any longer."

In reply, E. C. Mills, general manager of ASCAP, on Tuesday issued this statement:

"Every so often the paid emissaries of organizations presumed to look after the interests of exhibitors let fly at the composer and author of music to divert attention from more serious exhibitor difficulties.

"Such epithets as 'extortion,' 'racket,' etc., are not uncommon from these gentlemen who represent the exhibitors. But the theatre owners themselves rarely stop to think that this is all sound and no sense. Figures compiled from statistics furnished by the United States Department of Commerce shows that the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers receives around one cent out of every $6.83 of gross receipts in the motion picture theatres of America, or, figuring on operating costs, about one cent out of every five dollars spent by the exhibitor. For this penny he gets a license to use the copyrighted music of more than 45,000 composers, authors and publishers in 21 countries.

"The average paid by exhibitors is a little over a dollar a week, certainly no sum to call for 'war chests,' congressional lobbying, mass organized support of inspired Government suits and other vicious attacks fomented not largely by the real users of music, but by agents whose tenure of office depends on how much commotion they can stir up, and how much fright they can instill into their members.

"Suppose performing rights were sold like film? Then some theatres would pick the best music, pay a high price for it to stifle their competitors, and the little exhibitor would labor under greater difficulties than ever. ASCAP makes all the copyrighted music in its vast catalogue available to the smallest, as well as the largest user, on a uniformly even price.

"That price (paid by theatres to ASCAP) is so small that to attempt to split it into fractions because of a fluctuating catalogue would result in no substantial saving to theatre owners, but in the aggregate might cause suffering among the composers and authors without whose music the theatres could not provide diversified entertainment."

Broadcasters in New Policy Move

der discussion by the broadcasters' board of directors. It is believed that few if any stations planned to take advantage of the cancellation privilege.

Warner is negotiating with the National Broadcasting Company and the Columbia Broadcasting System for licensing its music before contacting independent stations. It is willing to negotiate either on a per use, or performance, basis, or for its catalogue outright on a flat fee or percentage. Mr. Baldwin pointed out that the broadcasters have for three years been on record as favoring the per use system.

Marking a radical departure in the method of revenue distribution for publisher members of ASCAP, the publishers' classification committee, of which Louis Bernstein is chairman, after long deliberation this week finally adopted a plan alloting 65 per cent for performance, 20 per cent to count for availability, meaning size, value and character of catalogue, and 15 per cent for seniority, or length of membership in the Society. The present method devotes 25 per cent to seniority and the balance to other classifications.

All publishers are represented as being "satisfied" with the formula, which goes into effect January 1, simultaneously with the publishers' new five-year membership contracts. The adopted method is considered an improvement, because in the old, the element of performance was a less important factor and the other classifications frequently ruled in deciding royalty distribution. With all publishers in accord, the threat of an ASCAP break-up because of internal dissension is now considered a thing of the past.

Warner will be the only member to withdraw, and all publishers who have not already renewed their contracts will do so by the end of the month, according to ASCAP. This includes other motion picture companies controlling music publishing subsidiaries, MGM, Paramount and Fox.

The inequalities of the old method of royalty distribution—which has been referred to in motion picture theatre circles as "divvying the spoils"—was a contributing factor in the Warner disaffection. Among publishers it is felt ASCAP is now in a better position to negotiate Warner's return to the fold, if a reconciliation should be attempted.

Warner claimed its $340,000 share of ASCAP's collections last year was disproportionate to the number of times its music was played on the air, and that a per use system of rating would have appreciably increased that amount.

ASCAP, however, takes issue, and claims that the performance method would have made little difference, estimating the uses of Warner-controlled music last year as 21 per cent of the whole, whereas its publishing firms, Harms, Remick, Witmark and T. B. Harms and the seven smaller subsidiaries, received 20 per cent of the entire distribution made to publishers.

The first payment under the new formula will be for the quarter ending March 31, 1936. Meanwhile the frequency of performance will be determined by a check of 100,000 radio programs, as compared with 37,000 last year for the same purpose. There was no announcement as to the type or identity of the programs, for obvious reasons.

Performance rating will be solely on broadcasts, as in the past, and will not provide for an analysis of theatre performances. This was reported under consideration, and if adopted would have benefited film companies in the music business immeasurably. A committee is to determine the availability classification of members.

The publishers also are setting up a fair practice committee of impartial persons not connected with the business to adjudicate complaints such as unethical song plugging, and punitive measures are planned. Bribery by publishers to induce playing a song has been a thorn in the side of "tin pan alley" many years. Those found guilty of the practice will be penalized by loss of credits.

Much dissatisfaction among the younger authors and composers with the method of rating in fund distribution is bringing about a revision in the system for these groups. It is expected to follow closely the formula adopted by the publishers, and will at least give more weight to the frequency of performance than length of membership.

Bader Returning Here After Leaving Universal

Dave Bader, personal representative for Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, in the United Kingdom, has resigned, and is en route to New York from London.

Joining Universal 14 years ago, one of Mr. Bader's first assignments was to handle exploitation for "Baby Peggy." One of his major assignments was to prepare data for John Drinkwater's biography of Mr. Laemmle, on which he went to England in 1930. He later was appointed to head special exploitation and closer cooperation with exhibitors as Mr. Laemmle's personal representative.

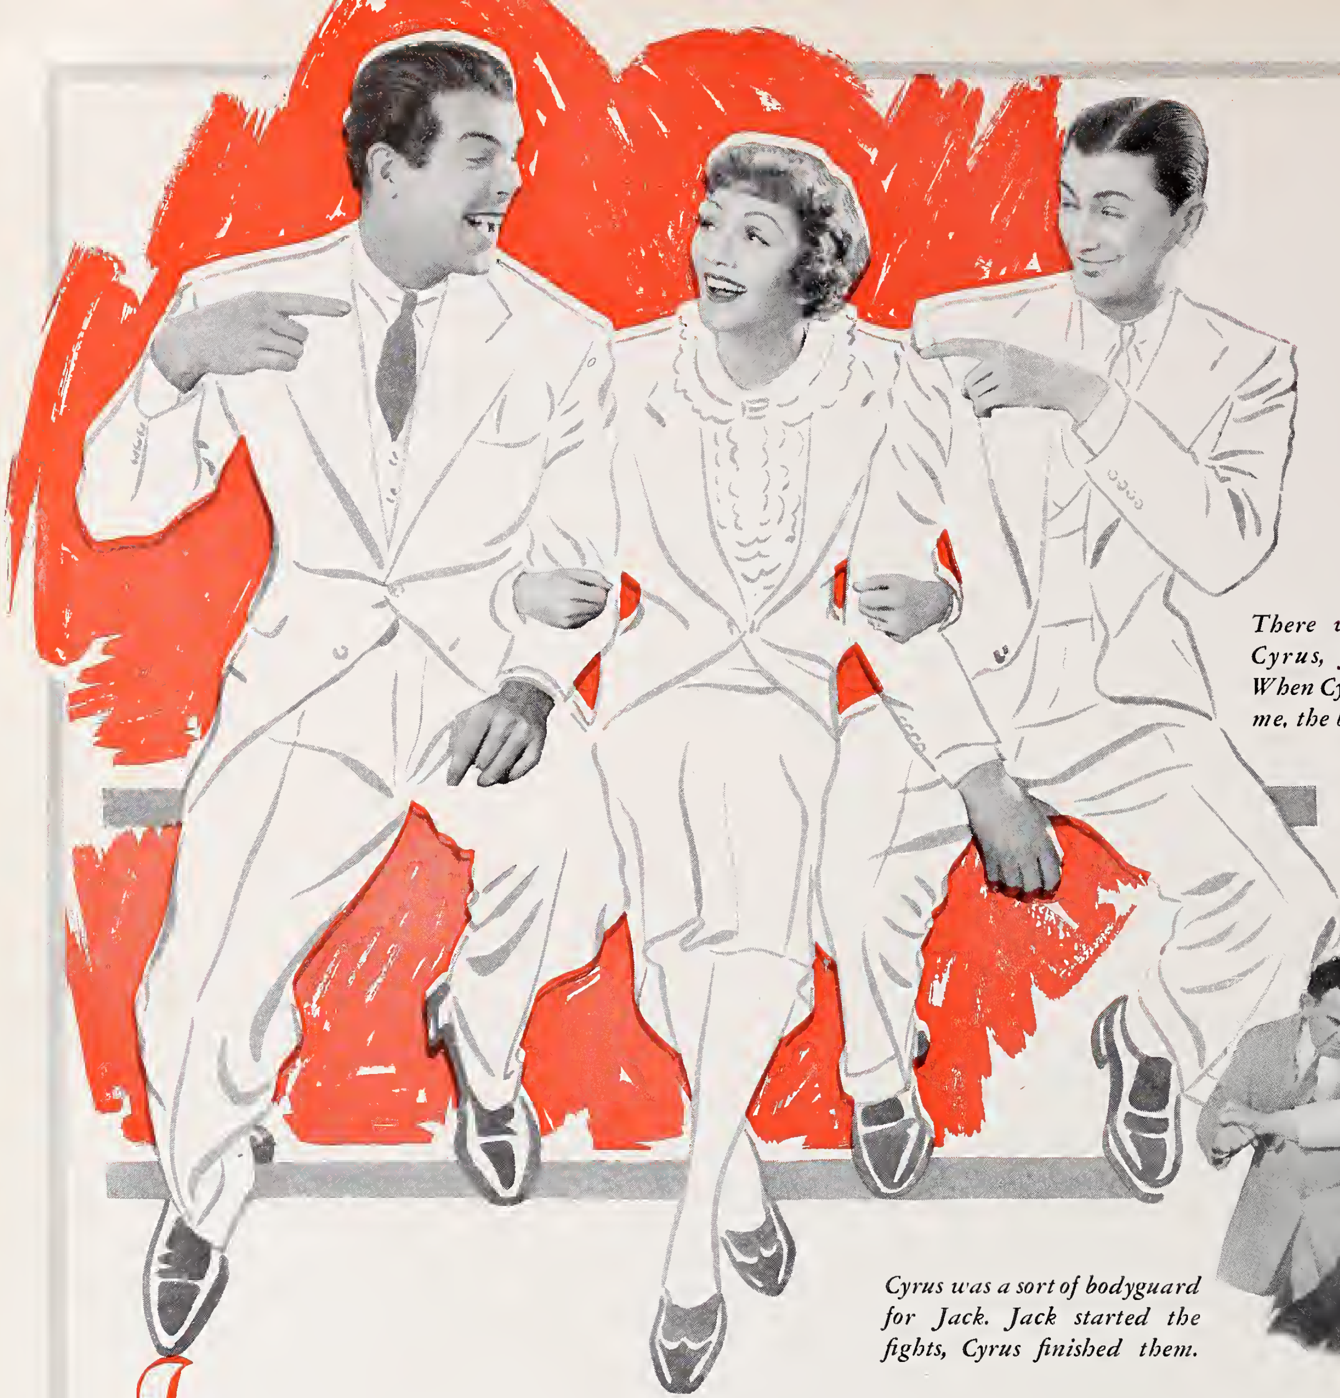
Twenty-five Years a Manager

Twenty-five years a theatre manager for Loew's in Boston is the milestone reached by Victor J. Morris, manager of the first-run Loew's Orpheum there. He went to Boston in 1910, the first theatre manager to be assigned to a house outside New York by the late Marcus Loew. Mr. Morris has been with the Loew organization for the past 28 years.

NIAGARA FALLS

"WELL, WE'RE MARRIED AT LAST!"

. . . and this is how it happened



There were three of us, Cyrus, Jack and myself. When Cyrus fell in love with me, the battle started.

Cyrus was a sort of bodyguard for Jack. Jack started the fights, Cyrus finished them.

I was a Chicago deb, used to all the luxury in the world. And then it happened! Dad, who's been a pal to me ever since my mother died, told me that he'd lost every cent we had, that we were poor as church mice.

● So, it was up to yours truly to get a job . . . and that right fast!

● I went to Jack Bristow, who was spending some of the huge fortune he'd just inherited publishing a magazine, and asked him for a job. He laughed at me, thought I was joking. And, for the umpty-umpth time asked me to marry him. But I told him I was never more serious in my life, that I couldn't marry for money. So he gave me a job under his editor, a tough newspaperman named Cyrus Anderson.

● Cyrus, who had been sort of bodyguard for Jack before he came in to his inheritance, was furious. He thought I was just a society butterfly with a silly desire to clutter up his office. So he set me to work counting up all the Smiths and the Jones in the telephone directory. When he threatened to make me count up the Cohens, I lost my temper.

In fact, I thought I'd never met a more disagreeable person in my life. He had a perfectly terrible temper. I have sort of a bad one myself. Jack spent most of his time refereeing our fights. We had plenty of them until Dad told me that he'd lost every cent ...that we were poor as church mice.

Cyrus brought the judge to marry us, but we started battling instead.

Cyrus had a perfectly terrible temper. I have a sort of bad one myself.

When Cyrus threatened to make me count the Cohens, I lost my temper.

Jack said the only sensible thing was to marry him instead of Cyrus. We elope.

one night when we were having it hot and heavy Cyrus suddenly looked at me a funny sort of way . . . and kissed me. Would you believe it, we found we were not mad at each other at all, but actually in love!

We planned to get married right away. I was to meet Cyrus in his apartment and he was to bring the judge . . . and it was all too wonderful. I went there. The apartment looked so messy I just got out a pail and a mop and started cleaning it up. I thought Cyrus would be delighted. But when he came in with the judge he was furious at me for messing up his things. The first I knew, we were battling just like we always had been. Our wedding was a complete flop.

Jack told me he'd known it would be. That no two people with tempers should ever try to marry. He sounded awfully convincing. When he told me the only sensible thing for me to do was to marry him, I finally agreed.

We eloped to Crown Point. But I thought I'd better telephone Dad. And what do you suppose he did? He told Cyrus where I'd gone and the two sillies came dashing after us on a motorcycle . . . and just as a stupid country judge was about to marry us and I was beginning to think maybe Jack wasn't so right about being the best person for me to marry after all . . . in came Cyrus and Dad . . . and . . . you've guessed it I married Cyrus . . .

and well . . .

"Ain't Love Grand!"

You'll say it is . . . when you see this grandest of all comedies . . . Daily Variety says that "'The Bride Comes Home' rings up best actual performance for Claudette Colbert, without discounting her roles in 'It Happened One Night' and 'The Gilded Lily'," and goes on to call the picture a "swell comedy of extraordinary production and entertainment qualities." • • •

The Hollywood Reporter says "a worthy successor to 'It Happened One Night' and that it is a winner that will please all box-offices." . . . We say "The Bride Comes Home" will pile up new record grosses everywhere!

Mrs. Thomas N. Entertainment was provided by an organist. He played "Kiss Me Again" and "I'm in the Mood for Love."

That sly old fox ASCAP, faced with head-splitting complaints from both exhibitors and broadcasters over "exhorbitant" fees for music performing rights, together with a pending United States Government suit to dissolve it, plus the chaos caused in films and radio by the withdrawal of Warners from ASCAP membership, would like us to believe that there is nothing else worrying them at this time more important than the staging of a contest for Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia for an anthem for little old New York—"a snappy march song typical of our city," as chubby and vociferous Mayor Fiorello put it.

ASCAP's treasury is evidently bulging with the royalties collected from exhibitors and broadcasters, for it has put up $2,000 cash as a prize to the person who captures in words and music the rhythm of the city, with all of its horn honking, machine gunnery, sirens, police whistles, rock blasting, radio belching and whatnot.

"THEY MADE ME WHAT I AM TODAY"—A MULTI-MILLIONAIRE

The Chase Bank's admission these days that it is ready to sell its control of Fox Film, but that bids received so far are too low, reminds us of the story they told about ol' Bill Fox when he was fighting like a wildcat with the bankers for control of the company, back in '30. Waving in his hand — after he sold out — the bankers' check for $15,000,000, together with their agreement to pay him another $6,000,000 later, Mr. Fox, affecting a hurt attitude, backed out of the building shouting: "God will punish you for this."

"How many men will you send to Norwich to play at holiday dance for $100?" telegraphed the Norwich (Connecticut) Free Academy, to Guy Lombardo, in New York.

"For $100," replied Guy, "we will send one piccolo player and two sheets of music."

Leonard (Lyon's Den) Lyons remembers that it was exactly 20 years ago when Henry (gettin' on to 72) Ford set out in his "Peace-Ship," Oscar II, on his historic voyage from America to Europe to get our doughboys "out of the trenches by Christmas." Irving Caesar, the songwriter-playwright, was on that boat as a secretary to a secretary of a secretary to a secretary, when he was stricken with the Great Idea—a surefire plan to end the war. "I'll write a song to end the war," he told Heap Big Peace Henry. "I'll write 'Out of the Trenches by Christmas.' We'll have airplanes dropping copies of the song into the trenches. The soldiers will like the idea, and that'll end the war." But Magnate Ford poo-poohed the idea.

The other evening—20 years to the December day—someone on the Hammerstein radio broadcast, after talking war talk, sang, "That's What I Want for Christmas": "What I really want is this, Sister's smile and brother's kiss, Fill our land with peace and bliss, From Maine down to the Isthmus. . . . That's what I want for Christmas." . . .

The singer was Irving Caesar. He had also composed the song.

Radio's Perry Charles needed a violin the other night to break up during a radio presentation, so Mark Hellinger tells us. He did not know where he could pick up a prop fiddle in a hurry—until he thought of Chez Chase, the comic.

Chez Chase, as Broadway knows him so well, does a strange act in the show business. He has appeared at many a motion picture function, eating everything in sight, from fire and lighted cigars and cigarettes to blankets and a pair of rubbers. Perry remembered that he had seen Chez do away with several prop violins in his act, so he immediately called Chase's agent on Broadway and stated his needs.

"Sorry, Perry," advised the agent, "but we can't help you out. Mr. Chase isn't using violins in his act any more."

"No?" returned Perry. "Why not?"

"Well," the agent replied, in all seriousness, "the price of prop violins went from 30 cents apiece to one dollar, so now Mr. Chase isn't eating anything but ukeles!"

Sid Skolsky pens from Hollywood about the writer who was waiting to get into the office of a big producer. The producer kept the writer waiting two hours, then three hours, as producers do. Exasperated, he bellowed to the executive, "Busy man, you've had a little day," and stamped out.

WALL STREET PREDICTS GOOD WINTER FOR FILMS

Financial Paper Bases Prophecy on Recent Reorganization and Quality of New Product

"The program of film releases now being shown or ready for showing this winter is the most promising that the industry as a whole has had in years, and with the new fall program of releases now in full swing, earnings of a number of companies are running at the best rate this year with prospects that the winter months will continue this trend."

This is the opinion of Wall Street, as reflected over the weekend by the Wall Street Journal of the Dow, Jones financial news service in New York, which predicts that, "earnings for the current months of a number of producing companies may show surprising gains."

"The financial difficulties and reorganizations of management which several of the leading companies have been passing through over the last year or so inevitably interrupted the smooth flow of product, but this period now seems to be over for most of the companies," said Dow, Jones, which analyzed the financial structure and earnings possibilities of Loew's, MGM, Warner Brothers and Twentieth Century-Fox, as being typical of conditions in the motion picture business, and reporting as follows:

Loew's, Inc. and MGM

"Loew's, the largest company in the industry, which has maintained its earning power better than most of its competitors in recent years, has in release or just completed the largest number of expensive pictures that it has had in a long time. These include 'China Seas,' 'Broadway Melody' and more recently 'Mutiny on the Bounty' and the Marx Brothers in 'Night at the Opera.' 'Tale of Two Cities' and 'Ah Wilderness,' based on the O'Neill play, will be out soon.

"'Mutiny' is one of the most expensive films ever made, probably costing well over $2,000,000 and the cost of the others was also high. As a result, amortization on these films which is highest during the first weeks of release will probably pull earnings down somewhat during the September-November quarter but the quarter starting with December should show a sharp gain. Loew's reported $4.53 a share for the year ended August 31, 1935. Cost of these films is reflected in Loew's inventories at the year-end totaling $32,500,000 against $26,000,000 in the preceding year.

Warner Brothers Pictures

"Warner Brothers Pictures has also increased its production expenditures and at the end of the August 31 year had $12,500,000 inventories against $10,800,000 in 1934. Warner's major production, 'Midsummer Night's Dream,' is the most expensive film this company has made in a long time. It seems to be meeting with good popular reception. Other films, 'Frisco Kid' and 'Stella Parish' are doing well and 'Captain Blood,' after the famous Sabatini story, is expected to be a good money maker. Warner is now making 'Anthony Adverse.'

"Although Warner reported a net profit of only $674,159, or seven cents a share on 3,701,090 shares of common for the 1935 year, it is estimated that earnings for the first quarter of the new year (ending November 30) may exceed $1,000,000. Warner is being helped by Sunday showings now legal in Pennsylvania for the first time.

Twentieth Century-Fox

"Twentieth Century-Fox in the 39 weeks ended September 28 reported $1,996,325, equal after dividends for the period on the 1,359,042 shares of $1.50 preferred to 38 cents a share on 1,226,529 shares of common. This included only a few weeks' earnings from the Twentieth Century division. A very good final quarter, due to successful films, is expected to bring earnings for the year up to well over $1 a share.

"In addition, Twentieth Century has a substantial interest in the Fox West Coast Theatres, recently reorganized, which are now earning substantial profits."

Sirovich Probe Resumed in N. Y.

Congressman William I. Sirovich's committee investigating patents last week resumed hearings at New York's Fifth Avenue Hotel, reopening with a technical discussion of the compensation that inventors and scientists get for patents developed for commercial firms. Mr. Sirovich, however, has resumed his probe minus the official presence of Robert Robins, head of the ephemeral American Society for the Protection of the Motion Picture Theatre, and his counsel, David G. Berger.

The association of Mr. Robins as a special investigator for the committee and of Mr. Berger as its counsel brought the Sirovich probings of film and communications patents to an abrupt halt in October, after only four days of hearings, when it was disclosed that those two committee officers were principals in litigation pending against film and communication patents owners—the electrics—through which aggregate damages of upwards of $40,000,000 are sought.

A member of the committee reveals that not only had Mr. Robins and Mr. Berger been divorced from the committee, but that the group's "study" of film patents had been concluded and would not be revived during the present session.

Bell & Howell Have New Film on Ethiopian Customs

Same Quota Next Year: Educational

Educational will release in 1936-37 approximately the same number of subjects as on this year's program, said Earle W. Hammons, president of the company, on his return Monday from the coast and an exchange trip.

The statement was in denial of reports that next season's quota would be reduced to 28. Currently the company is releasing 42 two-reelers and 26 single-reel subjects, said Mr. Hammons.

Educational is not discontinuing production on the coast to center activities in the east, Mr. Hammons said in further denial of reports. The studio is merely being closed temporarily following completion of a Buster Keaton film, and will reopen in February.

Operations at the Eastern Service Studio at Astoria, L. I., will also be suspended late this month for the usual holiday vacation, resuming about January 15. Educational's 28th two-reel comedy of the season, "Hot Air Waves," was starting at Astoria this week, putting Al Christie's production staff well past the half-way mark on two-reel releases prior to the year-end shutdown, during which Christie will go to the coast. About two-thirds of the company's product is being made in the east, Mr. Hammons said.

Following a stay in Hollywood, Educational's president visited San Francisco, Salt Lake City and Denver en route east, and reported conditions as he observed them in various territories were "very good."

J. H. Skirball, Educational's sales manager, who accompanied Mr. Hammons to Hollywood, visited Twentieth Century-Fox Exchanges in Kansas City and St. Louis on his return trip. Sol Edwards and William Clark are making circuits of exchanges in other parts of the country.

The company recently announced as ready for release "The Timid Young Man," Buster Keaton comedy, and, among others, these two-reelers: "Ladies Love Hats," with Ernest Truex; "One Big Happy Family," with Tim and Irene of the radio; "Way Up Thar," with Joan Davis; "He's a Prince," featuring Tom Howard and George Shelton; "Moonlight and Melody," with Lucille Page, Buster West and Tom Patricola featured; and "Rhythm of Paree," featuring Niela Goodelle, Earl Oxford and Fred Lightner. Among one-reel sports subjects are listed "Hold That Line," "Gangsters of the Deep," "Sunday Sports in Mexico" and "Football."

Opera To Adopt Film Technique

Hollywood technique in the art of makeup will be introduced in New York this season at the Metropolitan Opera—the home of opera in America—in an effort to "brighten" the chorus, which has been the subject of much criticism during past seasons as being poor theatrically, although, perhaps, excellent vocally.

As part of the Metropolitan's modernization plan, Ira Senz and his father, Adolf Senz, have been appointed wig and makeup executives for the season opening December 16. Both Senzes are held up as being well versed in the Hollywood art of makeup.

HOLLYWOOD SCENE

History Current Source of New Group of Characters—Eight Productions Started, Five Completed—Increase in Free Lancing Creates Billing Troubles

New Pictures

Opening week of December saw the Hollywood production mill occupy itself with eight new productions. In the same period five pictures finished. It also featured an unusual event, the elimination of an already started feature, rushes of which completely demonstrated that it would be of little or no commercial or entertainment value.

Starting

With three pictures going into work, Paramount hopped into the new production vanguard. In the first picture to start, "Preview," the cast includes Reginald Denny, Gail Patrick, Francis Drake, George Barbier, Ian Keith, Rod LaRocque and Conway Tearle. Robert Florey is directing. "Sky Patrol," which went on the stages, will present Jimmy Allen, Kent Taylor, William Gargan, Katherine DeMille, Sid Saylor, Betty Rhodes, Dean Jagger and Grant Withers. Otto Lovering is directing. Third picture, a Harry Sherman feature continuing his western series is "Hopalong Cassidy's Protege." With William Boyd and Jimmy Ellison in the leads, supporting cast lists George Hayes, Muriel Evans, Chester Conklin, Hank Mann, Willie Fung and Al Hil. Howard Bretherton is directing.

Two pictures started at Republic, one of which is a serial. The feature, "The Leavenworth Case," will present Norman Foster, Gavin Gordon, Clay Clement, Erin O'Brien-Moore, Warren Hymer, Jean Rouveral, Maude Eburne and Ian Wolfe. Lewis D. Collins is directing. In the serial "Darkest Africa," which Breezy Eason and Joseph Kane are co-directing Clyde Beatty, Maurine King, Ray Bernard and Ray Turner are featured.

At Warners a pair of pictures also started. "The Man in the Black Hat" lists among its cast Warren William, Marie Wilson, Alison Skipworth, Arthur Treacher, Porter Hall, Winifred Shaw, Charles Wilson, Olin Howland and Barbara Blane. William Diertele is directing. In "Snowed Under" George Brent, Joan Blondell, Genevieve Tobin, Glenda Farell, Frank McHugh, John Eldredge and Si Jenks will be seen. Ray Enright is directing.

Final starting picture is "Exclusive Story," a MGM. Directed by George B. Seitz, the cast lists Franchot Tone, Madge Evans, Stuart Erwin, J. Farrell McDonald, Joseph Calleia, Louise Henry, Margaret Irving and Wade Boteler.

Completed

Only Warners completed two pictures. These are "Petrified Forest" and "Colleen." In the first Leslie Howard and Bette Davis are starred, supported by Charles Grapewin, Humphrey Bogart, Dick Foran, Porter Hall, Paul Harvey, Genevieve Tobin, Joseph Sawyer, Adrian Morris, Slim Thompson, John Alexander, Eddie Acuff, Arthur Aylesworth, George Guhl and Nina Campana. Archie Mayo directed. "Colleen," a musical romance, will present Ruby Keeler, Dick Powell, Joan Blondell, Jack Oakie, Hugh Herbert, Paul Draper, J. M. Kerrigan, Berton Churchill, Louise Fazenda, Hobart Cavanaugh, Spencer Charters, Addison Richards, Luis Alberni, Andrew Beranger and Charles Coleman. Al Green directed.

At 20th Century-Fox "Song and Dance Man" finished. The cast will present Claire Trevor, Paul Kelly, Michael Whelan, Ruth Donnelly, Lester Matthews, James Burke, Gloria Roy, Ralf Harolde and James Flavin. Allan Dwan directed.

Universal completed "Dangerous Waters." It will present Jack Holt, Grace Bradley, Robert Armstrong, Diana Gibson, Charlie Murray, Dewey Robinson, Matt McHugh, Guy Usher, Richard Alexander, Edwin Maxwell, Ed Early, Matty Kemp, Billy Gilbert and Grace Cunard. Lambert Hillyer directed.

"The Green Shadow' finished at Radio. Lengthy cast includes Preston Foster, Margaret Callahan, Alan Mowbray, Molly Lamont, John Carroll, Florine McKinney, Ralph Morgan, Guinn Williams, Robert Middlemass, Nicholas Soussanin, Harold Huber, Clarence Muse, Paul Porcasi, Noel Madison, Maxine Jennings and Maxey Rosenbloom. Charles Vidor directed.

Picture dropped from the production schedule is "Three on a Bench." A Hal Roach production, it would have been an MGM release.

History

Before summer arrives, papa is going to be able to go home from the theatre and astound junior with his knowledge of American history, for at last producers are turning interested eyes upon the dramatic past of this country.

Strangely enough, it is a little explored field. Through the years quite a number of films have been made about the Revolutionary and Civil wars, but with very few exceptions the colorful characters who had such important parts in the building of this civilization have been neglected. Now the rush is on, with all story department hastily leafing through history books and encyclopedias.

Twentieth Century-Fox has scheduled a story about the valiant sea fighters of the American Revolution in the "Life of John Paul Jones." "The Prisoner of Shark Island" deals with the fate of Dr. Mudd, surgeon who dressed the wound of the assassin of Abraham Lincoln. "The Littlest Rebel" gives Shirley Temple opportunity to defend the Confederacy against the Yankees. "Ramona" will be a cross section of life in the early days when California was under Spanish rule, and "The Country Beyond" is another Jack London tale of the search for Alaskan gold in 1898.

M-G-M will make "The Gorgeous Hussy," a story dealing with the romance between Andrew Jackson and Peggy O'Neil, and will release in January the story about Joaquin Murietta, "The Robin Hood of El Dorado."

RKO-Radio owns a Civil war story, "Mr. Grant," and also holds film rights to "Yellow Jack." The latter deals with the fight of Dr. Walter Reed against yellow fever during the Spanish-American war.

Paramount recently bought for Gary Cooper "The Haven," which is a story of Sam Houston and early days in the Republic of Texas. "So Red the Rose," tale of the Civil War, is just released. "Rose of the Rancho" deals with early California days, and "Proud Rider," in which George Raft will star, is about pioneers in the southwest. Cecil DeMille is preparing "Buffalo Bill."

"The Last of the Mohicans" starts filming within a few weeks at Reliance. Universal has "Sutter's Gold" and "Show Boat." Republic plans to make a special out of "The Glory Parade," which will show the battle between the Merrimac and the Monitor, and will deal in good part with Ericsson, the inventor of the first iron-clad fighting ship. At the same studio, John Wayne will make "The Battle of the Alamo" and "Custer's Last Ride."

American culture is built upon the achievements of men who had to live dramatically if they were to survive the riotous events which built a new world power.

Billing

Within the past few weeks, producers have encountered more trouble with players over billing than they have had for some time. The question of just whose name is to go above whose on the credit sheets, has always been a source of annoyance, but with an increasing number of good performers joining the free lance ranks, the problem becomes more difficult daily.

It has been the practice of studios to give preference to their own contract lists when preparing credits, but as so many pictures now require free lance players in important roles, it is not always possible to adhere to set rules. So great has been the difficulty in some instances, that studios have been forced to cast lesser personalities in certain roles because the actor or actress ideally suited for the part would not consent to billing below a studio contract player.

With independents, the situation is even more complicated. With no contract lists of their own, independents must cast all the roles from the free lance ranks, and must be doubly sure there will be no conflict before they announce a complete cast.

GB Sets Talent Pool with Fox Hollywood Studio

Abandoning plans for Hollywood production, GB Pictures instead will step up its distribution program in the United States to 24 pictures in 1936-37, and at the same time announces a pooling arrangement for interchange of talent with Twentieth Century-Fox.

Sixteen of GB's 29 British-made productions are being released on the American market this season. Next year the company is planning to announce 52 productions, 26 of which will be made in its own studios in England and the balance coming from outside sources. Approximately one-half of GB's entire list will be designed for American distribution next year.

Mark Ostrer, chairman of the board of Gaumont British Picture Corporation, Ltd., London, and Michael Balcon, head of production, on their arrival here several weeks ago announced their intention to produce a number of films in Hollywood. Those plans, however, have not materialized, but the company will interchange players, directors and writers with its American affiliate, and both companies have agreed to arrange their peaks of studio activity so that they will not conflict.

Kent Announces Interchange

A joint statement by Mr. Ostrer and Sidney R. Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox hailed the large-scale interchange of important personalities as "one of the most forward steps in the history of international film relations."

"For GB," continued the statement, "it means a full and complete use of some of the biggest star names and players in Hollywood who are under contract to Twentieth Century-Fox. At the same time it makes available to Twentieth Century-Fox the full roster of artists under contract in England to GB now and in the future.

"By the terms of this agreement, our respective companies have call on such of each other's talent as are not engaged in actual production. And to further facilitate this interchange, schedules of productions are to be so arranged so that the respective peaks of activity of each company will occur at different times."

Mr. Ostrer said he was "very happy" over the outcome of the negotiations, and expressed his appreciation to Mr. Kent, Joseph M. Schenck, Darryl F. Zanuck and William Goetz of Twentieth Century-Fox for their cooperation in providing Mr. Balcon the facilities at their studio during his current visit to observe at first hand Hollywood production methods.

Return to England

Mr. Balcon returned to New York last week from the west coast, and late this week he and Mr. Ostrer are to sail for London.

Victor McLaglen, Sally Eilers, Edmund Lowe, Elizabeth Allan, Richard Arlen and Robert Young have been added to the roster of Hollywood players signed by GB for productions to be made at Shepherd's Bush. McLaglen will have the starring role in Kipling's "Soldiers Three," which Walter Forde will direct.

Maureen O'Sullivan, signed last year by GB for the feminine lead in "Soldiers Three," will also be co-starred with Richard Arlen in "The Barrier," if her MGM schedule makes her available.

Miss Eilers and Lowe will co-star in a feature whose tentative title is "The Phantom Wrecker." Miss Allan will be featured in the next George Arliss picture. Robert Young, now at the GB studio working in "Secret Agent," has been re-signed for "It's Love Again," in which Jessie Matthews has the feminine lead.

The signing of Sylvia Sidney and Constance Bennett had been previously announced. Miss Bennett leaves in mid-January on a two picture deal. The first, to be directed by Milton Rossner, is "Everything Is Thunder," starting in February, and the second, "The Hawk," is scheduled to start start in October.

GB has also contracted Chuck Reisner for one year to direct, and Ralph Spence for six months to write stories for Jack Hulbert and Cicely Courtneidge, each in a series.

George W. Weeks, general sales manager, has placed John L. Franconi in charge of the Dallas and Oklahoma City branches, with W. B. Wesley continuing as branch manager in Oklahoma City.

FWC Bankruptcy Called a Fraud

T. I. Talley, I. I. Bard and Corbar Corporation have filed a petition in the district court of San Francisco to have the Fox West Coast bankruptcy proceedings set aside. Charging fraud, the petitioners claim that Wesco Corporation, now known as National Theatres Corporation, and the Chase National Bank, of New York, are a single entity, whereas these corporations represented to the bankruptcy court they were separate entities, and "conspired to act as such to perpetrate fraud."

Based on the testimony given before the recent Senate hearings on bankruptcies, the petition states Directors Oscar S. Oldnow, Alfred Wright and H. G. Delabor, of FWC, declared an $8,000,000 dividend which was in reality "a withdrawal and reduction of capital stock of FWC." The petition added that the dividend was never paid, but false entries were made showing it listed as a liability.

In addition to asking the bankruptcy adjudication be set aside, the petition asks the court to appoint a receiver for FWC and all subsidiary companies, that Chase National, Wesco, Fox Film and National Theatres pay the receivers $25,000,000 or other damages set by the court, and that the court render judgment for fees against Tuller and Myers, Reuben G. Hunt, Charles P. Skouras, Charles C. Irwin and Samuel W. McNabb. The petition also asks that rentals of all disaffirmed leases be paid to date at the original rental rates.

Universal Delays Meeting

A regular meeting of the Universal board of directors scheduled for Tuesday was postponed indefinitely.

RKO May Again Operate Radio City Theatres

As Leo Spitz, president, and Ned E. Depinet, distribution general of RKO-Radio, both were denying Broadway rumors that Mr. Depinet would leave the company to become president of United Artists, Mr. Spitz was preparing to return to Hollywood to complete his study of the studio and production management, as requested by the new Floyd Odlum-Atlas-Lehman interests in the company. Mr. Spitz had hurried to New York to attend the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes union conferences with other eastern film leaders.

It became known, too, that the corporation may resume full operation of the Music Hall and Center theatres in Radio City on its emergence from reorganization by making new leases with Rockefeller Center for the two houses as part of a settlement of the Rockefeller claim of $8,207,000 against it.

Rockefellers' Claim Was Approved

At present RKO has no interest whatever in the Center and its association with the Music Hall is confined to a minor interest in the operating company through its subsidiary, RKO Service Corporation, and in a Radio Pictures product deal. The management of the theatres is now dominated completely by the Rockefeller interests.

The Rockefeller $8,207,000 claim against RKO was approved in that amount by Special Master Thomas D. Thacher last summer. It is based on the original leases made by RKO with Rockefeller Center which provided that RKO would become liable for the construction costs of the theatres in event of certain defaults under the leases. The special master held that the designated defaults had occurred and found RKO liable for construction costs of more than $6,000,000 and rental deficiencies of more than $1,000,000.

Irving Trust Company, as trustee in reorganization for RKO, has filed exceptions to the special master's report, but hearings on the exceptions have been delayed variously over the past two months to permit negotiations looking toward a settlement of the claim. The latest postponement was made this week when a scheduled hearing before Federal Judge William Bondy in New York was postponed until December 19.

By entering into new leases for the Radio City theatres, RKO might relieve itself of liability to Rockefeller Center for the major portion of the claim, that involving more than $6,000,000 in construction costs of the theatres, it is believed. The balance in rental deficiencies could be liquidated by the issuance to Rockefeller Center of new securities of reorganized RKO for the amount of the deficiencies.

While it is admitted that such a solution of the huge Rockefeller Center claim against RKO has been discussed, a Rockefeller spokesman described the claim negotiations at present as "very indefinite." This official said that it was unlikely that a final compromise of the claim would be reached until a reorganization plan for RKO had proceeded "considerably farther than it has now."

Colleen

Warners

It is the hope of the producers that this feature will outstrip all previous musical comedies in worth of story and cast entertainment and commercial values, spectacular settings, arrangements and solo and choral music and individual and group dance interludes.

That this purpose may be achieved they have selected Alfred E. Green, credited with a long list of successes, most recently "Here's to Romance," as the director. For name values they have set in the cast Dick Powell, Ruby Keeler, Jack Oakie, Joan Blondel, Hugh Herbert, Berton Churchill, Olin Howland and Luis Alberni. In secondary roles are Paul Draper, J. M. Kerrigan, Louise Fazenda, Hobart Cavanaugh, Spencer Charters, Addison Richards and Charles Coleman.

Quality of musical content has been placed in the hands of Harry Warren and Al Dubin, who list "Lullaby of Broadway" as the latest of the many pictures on which they have functioned. For spectacular chorus dance numbers, Bobby Connolly was given carte blanche to line up some 200 of the most beautiful girls in Hollywood.

Story is an original by Robert Lord, who collaborated on the screen play "Page Miss Glory." Screen play is by Peter Milne and F. Hugh Herbert, both of whom have worked on many Warner features.

With a decided comedy twist, the motivating story is peppy modern romance. Locale is in New York. As the theme thread is adhered to continuously, plans are that the song and dance features, both individual and group, shall be worked in in logical sequences so that they become a part of the story action and not presented as specialty interludes.

While the producers are counting heavily upon the worth of cast names to inspire first audience and exhibitor interest, they further anticipate that the substantiating production values in the way of lavish sets and spectacular song and dance numbers for eye and ear appeal and that the many novelties that are included in theme delineation will be of better than usual exploitation value.

The Bohemian Girl

Hal Roach-MGM Release

For the annual Laurel and Hardy comedy musical feature, Hal Roach has chosen Balfe's "The Bohemian Girl" as the successor to "Devil's Brother" and last year's "Babes in Toyland." In several ways, while the general theme of the original operetta has been maintained, eliminations and alterations have been made to concentrate attention more closely on the comedians. All the music has been retained, principally in score accompaniment and sequences featuring choral singing and dancing. One new modern number, "Heart of a Gypsy," by Nathaniel Shilkret and Robert Shayon, which Thelma Todd will sing, has been added.

As would be expected, with Laurel and Hardy starred, comedy will make up for the loss suffered in deviation from straight story content. The backgrounds, however, and the occasions for their antics, are distinctively dramatic in tone. Gypsy in atmosphere, locale is mid-continental Europe. As an incident in Hardy's henpecked life, his shrewish wife kidnaps a little princess as she elopes with the band's prize, Romeo. Laurel and Hardy, "mothering and fathering" the child over a long period of years, during which the musical quality of the original is given full scope, again arrive at the home of the child. While she is about to be flogged by the minions of her father, who hate all Gypsy vagabonds for the great tragedy they brought him, he recognizes a token establishing the identity of the now grown girl as his child. Happiness all around as the funsters are suitably rewarded for caring for the girl.

In the supporting cast, Mae Busch plays the part of Hardy's wife, and Antonio Moreno, recently seen in "Storm Over the Andes," that of the romantic Gypsy with whom she elopes. Thelma Todd will be seen as the gypsy queen. Darla Hood, a new child find, is the girl in the early part of the picture, and Jacqueline Wells, seen in "Coronado" and a recent "Charlie Chan" picture, the girl grown up. James Finlayson, seen in "Babes in Toyland" and "Bonnie Scotland," is also featured, as is William P. Carleton.

The Grean Shadow

Radio

The plot of this story involves many people and is purposely complicated and made difficult to understand or anticipate the conclusion in order that the element of baffling mystery may predominate. While eerie or weird terror is eschewed, comedy is at a minimum and romantic love interest quality serves but a minor function. In gist, it is the story of a man, who, encountering financial difficulties, conspires with his ward to stage a kidnapping. The man, in effecting arrangements with the kidnappers, uses money belonging to his daughter as well as that borrowed from her fiance to pay the ransom. Clever detective work frustrates the scheme, saves the lives of the girl and her lover and brings about the death of the arch conspirator and his confederate.

Production is based on a published novel by James Edward Grant. Screen play is by Erwin Gelsey, recently credited with "We're in the Money." Direction is by Charles Vidor.

Preston Foster, currently in "We're Only Human," plays the role of the detective who untangles the knotty skein. Alan Mowbray and Florine McKinney are the conspiring confederates. Molly Lamont is Mowbray's daughter and John Carroll her sweetheart. Supporting players include Guinn Williams, Ralph Morgan, Robert Middlemass, Clarence Muse, Noel Madison, Maxine Jennings and Nicholas Soussanin.

As the producers are concentrating on straight dramatic mystery in presenting the picture in such a manner that quality shall be the central motivating factor, it is evident that they expect that showmen will follow the same theory in presenting the feature to audiences.

Champagne Charlie

20th Century - Fox

That audiences will get the intimate backgrounds in personalities and incidents of which this story broadly deals is hardly to be doubted. That alert showmen can capitalize upon it is equally sure. Basically the story is fictionized dramatic romance. Yet, in a vivid way, it parallels the actual life experiences of an American million dollar princess whose marital affairs made sensational news material and the tragedy that was the aftermath of one of them made international front page headlines.

Essentially it's the story of a gay gambler and a girl. In the clutches of racketeers, down on his luck and losing in swank European casinos, he is practically forced to become engaged to an adventurous American heiress. Really in love, he discovers the girl is the daughter of an old sweetheart. To make atonement for this, the most dishonorable thing he ever did, he plans suicide. But the girl is in the car with him. His enemies, suspecting trickery, assault him. The gambler is killed; the girl, hopelessly crippled, is left to find solace only in his memory and the companionship of old friends.

Story is an original by Gene Markey. Screen play is by Allen Rivkin. James Tinling, who made "Chan in Shanghai," is directing.

Helen Wood, recently seen in minor roles in "She Married Her Boss" and "My Marriage," is featured in her first leading role as the girl. Paul Cavanagh, currently in "Splendor" and "Thunder in the Night," is "Champagne Charlie." As they carry the main thread of the story and are present in practically all its action, the supporting cast is composed of well known players.

Timothy's Quest

Paramount

In connection with the showmanship availability of this production, it might be well to remember that it is a Kate Douglas Wiggin story. About a year ago, during the period of whimsical human interest rural pictures, the same producing company ventured another Wiggin story, "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch." In many sectors, its release met with favorable public reception. In offering this story, the dramatic, romantic and comedy quality of which is similar, Paramount is hoping for the same reaction from theatregoers and that exhibitors, recalling the popularity of "Mrs. Wiggs," will be more inclined to recognize the entertainment and commercial value of this.

Adapted from the original by Gilbert Pratt and Lex Neal, the screenplay is by Dore Schary. Direction is by Charles Barton, recently credited with "The Last Outpost."

In essence, and striking the keynote of its human interest content, the story is that of a small boy and his little sister in their search for happiness. Taking on some of the topical character of the operation of baby farms, establishments which occasionally burst forth in sensational headlines, the yarn tells of the flight from the cruelties of the guardians and their eventual finding of happiness in the friendship of a kindly old lady. The drama of this situation is contrasted by a clean, wholesome romance concerning the two older juveniles.

Dicke Moore, currently in "The Story of Louis Pasteur," and Virginia Weidler will be seen as the children. Eleanore Whitney, now in "Millions in the Air," and Tom Keene carry the romantic angle. Elizabeth Patterson, soon to be seen in "Her Master's Voice," is the kind old lady. Esther Dale and Samuel Hinds also appear in the cast.

The homespun nature of the story, continually concentrating its simple appeal indicates the potential type of showmanship that may be used.

World Affairs Increase on Air

An increase of 400 per cent in the amount of radio time devoted to world and national affairs, resulting from the tremendous growth of public interest in the turbulent political and economic conditions throughout the world this year, is shown in the National Broadcasting Company's survey of its 1935 programs.

Ten per cent of all NBC's time on the air this year, or 1,715 hours, has been given over to news and discussion of such problems, compared to little more than two per cent in 1934. Talks, including informative and interpretive comment, comprised 6.9 per cent of all NBC's 1935 programs, compared to 1.4 per cent in 1934, a five-fold increase, and time devoted to current topics increased from 0.9 per cent to 3.1 per cent.

Following is a detailed analysis of NBC programs for the entire year, 1935, based on figures for the first ten months:

Court Case on Negro Issue Is Dismissed

Dismissal of the police court case against Sol Starr, white manager of a theatre in the Negro business district of Oklahoma City, was ordered by Bob Belisle, secretary of the city planning commission.

Mr. Starr was charged with violating the city racial segregation ordinance and was arrested three days before the state supreme court held the ordinance unconstitutional.

"We'll make no more arrests," Mr. Belisle said.

Mr. Starr had been charged with having leased the Aldridge theatre for Negroes after the city ordinance was passed. The ordinance covered "ownership as well as occupancy of property," and it was claimed that white owners could be reached by the ordinance "even though they placed a Negro in actual occupancy as manager."

In the supreme court it was held that the ordinance was in violation of the 14th amendment of the federal constitution because it "deprives the defendants of their right to contract, and discriminates against citizens solely on a basis of color." Both test cases involved residential property.

School of Journalism To Survey Publicity

The Division of Research of the Medill School of Journalism of Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill., is conducting an investigation of the problems in the general field of publicity and promotion. This research, when completed, is to form the basis of a revised course in Problems of Publicity and Promotion to be offered by the Medill School,

New Anti-Playdate Suits Await Pending Test Cases

A flood of legislation seeking enactment of anti-designated play-dates bills, sponsored by exhibitor units affiliated with Allied, was reported this week to be contingent upon the tests of the constitutionality of similar laws on the statute books of Ohio and Wisconsin.

In the event the courts hold that the laws are constitutional, regional associations are expected to institute measures in various state legislatures, it was indicated.

"Speaking Paper" Is Demonstrated

"Speaking paper," an invention of an Argentine engineer, was demonstrated in London, according to a report from the American consulate-general, London, made public by the United States Commerce Department this week.

By means of this paper, it is said to be possible to present a record of speech, music or any other sound in as handy a form as the daily newspaper. It is claimed that the invention will create a new industry, which will produce "speaking" books, sell the equivalent of 12-inch graphophone records and will also permit newspapers to print an actual record of a public speech, concert or play which readers could reproduce in their own homes, the report states.

The system, called the "Fotoliptofono," works more or less on the principles of a talking picture. A sound track is registered on a celluloid negative by means of a microphone and oscillograph. From this photographic impression a block is made from which is printed the "speaking paper," a series of close parallels of jagged black lines, it was stated.

The paper is then placed in the reproducing apparatus, the subject of the recent demonstration. A piece of paper about the size of a single newspaper sheet was fitted on to the cylinder of a machine resembling the early Edison phonograph and a photo-electric cell retranslated the black lines into impulses which issued from an ordinary portable wireless set as speech, song and music in turn, according to the report.

It is reported that negotiations are in progress looking to the production of the "speaking paper" by the English graphophone companies.

No More Duals Expected In Kansas City Theatres

No further extension of double bills in Kansas City is expected now that the first excitement following the introduction of the policy by Fox Midwest has settled down.

Fox Midwest has not tried the policy in the de luxe subsequent runs theatres—Plaza, Warwick, Isis and Apollo—and it is not thought that it will be tried in other spots in view of the Fox buying of "prior run protection."

Railroad Theatre Is Formed

Coast to Coast Railroad Theatre Corporation has been formed at Albany, N. Y., by Oscar Rubin, Goldie Stahl and Mollie Schnee.

New Device Said To Improve Prints

Bell and Howell, Chicago, this week announced that, "The last obstacle to the reproduction in theatres of realistic talking motion pictures has now been removed, according to statements recently issued by leading Hollywood executives. For several months, cameramen and sound engineers have been producing sound films of quality, but these films could not be duplicated without serious losses in sound and picture value in the hundreds of copies needed for theatre circulation," now, at a cost of over $375,000, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Paramount, are said by B. and H. have contracted for the installation of new duplicating equipment known as automatic sound and picture printers, developed in the laboratories of Bell and Howell, Chicago.

Both the picture and the sound track are automatically reproduced on the new machines at one operation, "retaining all of the depth and definition of the original film and without loss of the full range of the recorded sound."

Unlike the printers formerly used, the new machines are entirely independent of the skill of the operator. Although running at higher speeds, these printers are equipped with interlocking controls and safety devices. They will stop instantly and automatically in case of film breakage, lamp burn-outs, power-line variations, or failure of the air-supply lines which vacuum-clean the film while it is being run. Film waste is thus entirely eliminated, said the company.

Germans Launching Program Of Native Culture Films

Because Germany's film industry is declared to lack capital sufficient to allow the production of feature films in competition with foreign producers, a scheme has been launched in that country to concentrate on the production of "cultural" films, according to report to the Department of Commerce in Washington from its commercial attache in Berlin.

Measures have already been taken, the report says, to force the showing of these films in German theatres, and it is hoped that the German producers will be able to build up a profitable export trade.

As the production cost of German-culture films is only a fraction of the cost of producing regular feature films, the German industry hopes to be able to supply the demands with a limited amount of capital and without destroying the industry's ability to produce as many entertainment feature films as heretofore.

Sale of German Processing Machinery Shows Increases

Exports of German film processing machines have considerably improved during the last few months, reports Acting Commercial Attache Douglas Miller from Berlin to the Department of Commerce in Washington.

This improvement has included principally developing and copying machines,

FREAK POLICY ASSURES PATRONS THEATRE CHANCE GAME WINNINGS

Insurance Against Losses Due to Absence from Performance Follows Rise of Ill Feeling Over Contest Rules

Decisions Handed Down in Test Cases Uphold Legality of Some Games, Others Await Direct Suits

One of the most freakish pieces of insurance underwriting ever to involve an entire business, and one which stands to increase exhibitors' box office receipts by an inestimable extent, made its appearance quietly this week in the form of policies assuring theatre patrons their winnings in "Bank nights" when their numbers are drawn and they are not present.

That hundreds of exhibitors have incurred the ill feeling and loss of patronage of customers who claimed "Bank Night" awards and, according to the rules, were not entitled to them because of their non-presence at the drawing, is understood to be as important a factor against the use of the practice as the established fact that many persons refrain from participating in the stunt knowing that unless they are present in the theatre for the drawing their chances of winning are nil.

It is felt in exhibition that quite some damage is suffered by the theatre from the whispering campaigns instigated by persons whose numbers were drawn but who did not receive the award because they were not in the house, and who believe they are entitled to the prize money. Typical of the repercussions felt in this connection is the suit pending against Aaron L. Dare, operator of the Rosedale theatre, Kansas City, Kan., and filed by a patron who alleged she won the money but had not been given it.

But now the National Insurance Underwriters report a policy which would abolish all such unfavorable aspects of chance games and the inevitable unfavorable reactions.

Typical Procedure

Typical of the procedure is that already started in El Paso, Texas, where Dave Lawson, manager of the Knickerbocker Club, announced that he would issue insurance policies on bank night awards made at local theatres, to protect late arrivals on bank nights. He proposes to insure a patron's chance of winning an award for 10 cents per $100 up to $500 limit, and to pay the claim in 30 days. Policy forms were being printed. The procedure is legal and there is no need for a state charter, according to Mr. Lawson.

C. M. Jones, fire and casualty general agent in Clinton and Terre Haute, Ind., has offered to insure clients their winnings in theatre bank nights if they are absent when their numbers are drawn. He stated that if bank nights are legal, so is his offer.

London Lloyds' representatives this week said bank night insurance was not yet being offered by Lloyds, which as a rule undewrites only hazards free from human whims. It was pointed out total premium derived from any movie theatre putting on a weekly bank night must be as nearly as much per week as the weekly cash offering, as eventually someone would draw down the accumulation. On top of this there must be loading for expenses, commission, profit for carrier, taxes, etc.

Sale of the policy to individuals would have a limited field, it was believed, since the odds against a designated person drawing the cash are remote. However, it was said there might be a business opportunity in developing a blanket form to be sold to movie theatres to serve as a patronage stimulator and to mollify persons unlucky in being absent when their registered number was pulled from the hat.

Another prolific field of business, a prominent insurance man comments, would be policy tickets and handbooks where there should be a great demand for a policy to salve the wounded feelings of patrons who "missed the boat."

Meanwhile the nationwide legal controversy waging over chance games continued this week, with the odds gaining favor in the practice, insofar as its legality is concerned.

New York high courts decided for chance games, declaring them not to be a lottery; Milwaukee ruled similarly; Alabama authorities declared the practice not to be in violation of state laws, while in New Hampshire the courts refused to rule on the issue and the ban in that state was eased. Kansas City, too, decided not to stop giveaways.

The first test case in special sessions, Manhattan, on Bank Night was decided in favor of the game agent when Judges Murphy, Cresson and Nolan dismissed an action against the Washington, 149th St., and Amsterdam Avenue theatres after Assistant District Attorney Goldman had recommended such a move.

The assistant district attorney, in favoring the dismissal, told the three judges that there was "insufficient evidence," that the "game was not a lottery" and that patrons did not have to pay in order to win. The only charge, he continued, was that of entertainment. As a result the three judges informed the police not to make any further arrests in connection with this particular game.

Some time ago a Manhattan magistrate dismissed a case against the Gotham theatre and pending in a Bronx court is an action against the Bronx Opera House, which had been postponed indefinitelly until the outcome of the above special sessions action. It therefore appears a foregone conclusion that the action will now be dismissed.

Rules Law Not Violated

In Milwaukee Charles Washicheck won a jury verdict in the municipal court on an appeal from a district court decision of October 22, charging him with operating a lottery, Grocery Night, in his theatre.

Attorney-General A. A. Carmichael of Alabama, furthermore, has ruled that Bank Night and Jack Pot, now prevalent in the state, do not violate any state law. The opinion, addressed to Circuit Solicitor John K. Watkins of Opelika was based on his statement of facts that chances in the drawings were given as trade inducements and not sold for a consideration.

In New Hampshire the supreme court has declined to pass on the legality of Bank Night until a direct suit against a theatre is launched. The decision came as a result of a test case against Attorney-General Johnson's seeking to have him rescind his order of several months ago that Bank Night could not operate. As a result of the court's decision the pressure against chance games in the state has been relieved.

Furthermore, in Kansas City, City Manager McElroy has told the Independent Theatre Owners the city will not attempt to stop giveaways, but will not allow misleading signs outside theatres. The group will meet soon to plan its cash giveaway pool, in which 25 houses are expected to join.

Meanwhile, copyright owners of Bank Night were pushing their prosecution of alleged infringement violators, and in New York an answer to the injunction proceedings brought in federal court by Affiliated Enterprizes, Inc., owners of the game, against Hatco Theatres Company, Inc., has been filed.

The plaintiff seeks to restrain the defendant from employing Bank Night or Treasury Night in its theatres. The defense sets up that the Bank Night or Treasury Night system is not patentable and these terms are not lawfully used as a trademark. It further charges that the plaintiff's system constitutes an unlawful scheme and is in violation of the state lottery laws.

Suit Charges Infringement

A suit for damages and costs and a temporary injunction has been started by attorneys for Affiliated Enterprises in Boston against Meyer Gruger and Harry Bloomberg of the B. & G. Distributing Corporation. The Bank Night company charges the cash giveaway scheme known as "Parlay Cash Night" is "substantially identical in its salient and effective features with the plaintiffs' 'Bank Night,' except that in the operation of 'Parlay Cash Night' arrangements are made by the defendants or by exhibitors with local merchants as a result of which the merchants permit registration cards at their stores and receive advertisement on a screen trailer in return."

Meanwhile, another suit of Affiliated Enterprises, this one against Sam A. Blair Theatre Enterprises charging infringement on his use of Cash Night, has been continued in the federal court until the January term of Judge Richard J. Hopkins.

The abolition of all theatrical cash giveaway schemes in Massachusetts is a growing possibility, owing to the launching of an initiative petition in Boston by the Puritan League which seeks to have all laws legalizing any form of gambling in the state repealed by the 1936 Legislature which convenes January 2.

Twenty thousand names will put the matter before the legislature. If action there is not favorable to the petitioneers, an additional 5,000 names will automatically place the matter on the next ballot in the form of a referendum. Little difficulty, however, is expected in the gathering of the necessary signatures.

Mary Hildegarde Healy, former Keith's Memorial publicity manager in Boston, is now one of the important figures in the Puritan League.

$10,220,000 to RCA from Banks For U.K. Stock

Radio Corporation of America this week received from the British syndicate headed by Morgan, Grenfell and Company and Edward De Stein and Company, of London, proceeds of the sale of its holdings of 1,700,000 ordinary shares of Electrical & Musical Industries, Ltd., amounting to $10,220,000, thereby officially closing the deal.

Receipts of the funds from the British syndicate for EMI follows disposal recently of one-half interest, or 1,259,463 common shares and one-half of the $9,786,655 10-year debentures, of RCA's holdings in Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation, and is expected to enable the company to show further improvement in its year-end asset position, already strong prior to disposal of these assets for cash.

Book Loss for RCA

The sale obviously will entail a book loss for RCA which has been carrying the shares among its "investments at cost," or approximately $13,000,000. However, the investment prior to last year gave no return.

In 1934, an initial dividend declared by EMI yielded RCA approximately $325,000, after British income taxes. This year a 10 per cent dividend (one share) with a two per cent extra, will give RCA an additional $400,000 which will accrue this month regardless of the stock disposal. Even with the extra dividend, the net return to RCA would still be less than four per cent on the price received, and somewhat less than three per cent on the price at which the holdings were carried "at cost."

An option on the remaining half of the RCA holdings of RKO securities was granted to Atlas Corporation. The exact prices on the sale and options never have been divulged officially, but it is reported to involve about $13,000,000 cash altogether as against the $14,644,000 at which the securities were carried on the books.

Beck and Heiman to Stage Plays in Kansas City

The Orpheum in Kansas City, formerly operated by RKO as a vaudeville house and later as a film theatre, has been taken over by Martin Beck and Marcus Heiman, Broadway producer, for stage offerings. The Shubert, long Kansas City's stage theatre, is being dismantled.

The new legitimate theatre is owned by RKO, subject to the bondholders. Mr. Beck is one of the major bondholders, and it is understood the partners have taken the house until May. Several weeks' of legitimate is assured for Kansas through bookings which include "Dodsworth," "Three Men on a Horse," "The Old Maid," "Tobacco Road," Earl Carrol's "Vanities," "Blossom Time," and others.

Victor Leighton, manager of the Martin Beck Theatre, New York, and until recently in charge of booking for the Erlanger theatres, has assigned to manager the Kansas City theatre.

Philadelphia Variety Club Installation January 12

More than 1,000 leaders in the industry and allied theatrical fields, city, state and national leaders are expected to attend the first gala annual dinner-installation of Variety Club, Tent No. 13, to be held at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, Philadelphia, January 12th.

With Jay Emanuel as general chairman, and sub-committee heads already at work, the club is selecting guests from all walks of American industry as well as the theatrical field.

New Judge Picked In St. Louis Case

The United States Government will be ready to proceed in January against Warners, RKO and Paramount in its St. Louis equity case, Federal Judge Joseph West Molyneaux having been appointed this week to preside on the bench in place of Judge Moore, who disqualified himself after a federal jury in his court acquitted the defendants on a criminal conspiracy charge.

Meanwhile, distributors' counsel in New York were studying the latest conspiracy allegation, that of Mrs. Loretta L. Momand, filed in Oklahoma City court last Wednesday.

Conspiracy in restraint of trade may be the allegation charged by Kansas City exhibitors who seek to break up the present zoning system in that city.

Presiding Justice Kimbrough Stone of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals on Monday appointed Judge Molyneaux, of Minneapolis, to hear the Government's equity action for a temporary injunction against Warners, Paramount and RKO. No date has been set for the hearing, but attorneys for the defense and Government counsel will meet this week to decide when the case shall be heard. The date is not expected to be before the mid-January.

An injunction against Vitagraph, Inc., Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., First National Pictures, Inc., Fox Film Corporation, RKO, Distributing Corporation, Columbia Pictures Corporation and Universal Film Exchanges, Inc., all accused of conspiracy to thwart operation of the Odeon Theatre in Shawnee, Okla., was asked by Mrs. Loretta L. Momand, operator of the house, in the federal court of Oklahoma City.

In Kansas City the Independent Theatre Owners have voted funds to institute court action to break up the zoned, prior run protection on which Fox Midwest bought this season's product. The charge is expected to be conspiracy in restraint of trade.

In Boston, depositions are expected from industry leaders before trial of the Morse Rothenberg suit against the Shea Circuit, Maine and New Hampshire Theatres, Inc.,

Fox's GTE Claim Is Finally Settled; Courts Cite Him

Chancellor Josiah O. Wolcott in Chancery Court at Wilmington, Del., approved, last weekend, the proposed settlement between United States Senator Daniel O. Hastings, of Delaware, as receiver for General Theatres Equipment, Inc., and All Continent Corporation, William Fox and Eva Fox, on a Fox claim against General.

The claim of All Continent, originally for $2,300,000, is reduced to $600,000, under the new agreement. Controversies involving the receiver and the Fox and other parties in interest are settled.

Under the agreement All Continent Corporation also is given title to 108,000 shares of Fox Film Corporation Class A stock (old) and 50,000 shares of the capital stock of Grandeur, Inc., collateral for a note held against GTE in the amount of $300,000.

The agreement also provides for the settlement of a suit commenced by All Continent Corporation and Eva Fox against Fox Film Corporation and others including Senator Hastings, as receiver; General Theatres Equipment, Twentieth Century Pictures and others in the New York State Supreme Court and an action started by Senator Hastings in chancery, here against All Continent Corporation and William Fox.

While Mr. Fox was on the receiving end in the GTE matter, courts elsewhere cited him for contempt for his failure to obey a subpoena in another matter, that of a judgment secured against him by the Capital Company, of California, for $297,412.

Federal Judge William Bondy, in New York, acting on the motion of attorneys for Capital, adjudged Mr. Fox in contempt of court for his failure to appear for examination as subpoenaed.

The subpoena, it was explained by Samuel B. Stewart, attorney for the litigant, was served on Mr. Fox on a railroad train entering Philadelphia late in October. It called for Mr. Fox's presence in court for examination November 22nd in supplementary proceedings, but he failed to appear, claiming illness. Judge Bondy provided in his decision, however, that Mr. Fox could purge himself of contempt by appearing and submitting to examination.

The judgment was based upon Mr. Fox's alleged guarantee of rent to be paid to the plaintiff by a theatrical corporation in San Francisco.

Bitner Resigns from Feist Music Company

Edgar F. Bitner, president ant general manager of Leo Feist, Inc., music publishing company, has resigned, after 38 years of service with the firm. Mr. Bitner intends to retire from business entirely, but says he will return to the music publishing industry if he should ever change his mind.

Control of the Leo Feist firm was recently purchased by MGM, and it is being operated under the supervision of the Robbins Music Corporation, the film company's chief music subsidiary.

VOICE OF READERS

THE EXHIBITOR IN PICTURE PIONEERING

To the Editor of the Herald:

Thanks for your defense of the "lethargic" exhibitor. I would like to read an article some time on the "incompetent" trade magazine editor. Many of them in this business seem never to have the slightest acquaintance with any exhibitor, nor have they apparently the vaguest idea of how exhibitors form their opinions, what sort of men they are on the average nationally, what effort if any they make to pioneer new fields of selling, build up new attractive personalities, and trade brands.

We need such editors, ones that go further than parties at which loving cups are presented to whosis and whosat. Baloney banquets, and hanging around the studios and executive offices will never inform editors of what the exhibition end means.

Your editorial "Facts Wanted" indicates that you must have taken time off to find out how the exhibitor brain actually works.

Let me start by telling of how the exhibitor "pioneered" in these parts, and surely if this wild jungle land has exhibitors, that pioneer, one can reasonably infer that in more "metropolitan" areas pioneering in "art" (may God save us from it) is done even more bravely—let's see one instance in these lands of alkali and sage.

A year ago a foreign producer invaded this field with several pictures. Practically every exhibitor except the undersigned went for the product. Circuits, too, purchased the pictures. Even as leery a bird as myself bought a single sample, because I wanted to see if the stuff could be put over, because, like all exhibitors, I wanted to encourage new producers, wanted new stuff to sell. I bought the best one they had. Its title is known to two generations. It had been a box-office success not only in Europe but in parts of the East. It was a good and well made picture. It however presented a brand new type of entertainment—hence was an experiment.

I advertised it about twice as heavily as I advertise first-rate pictures and it fell flat on its face; it drew complaints from my audience; it slowed up the tempo of my theatre. Since the sample failed to click I bought no more of this product—I waited to see how the boys came out in this land of potatoes and ticks—they didn't come out; they took a uniform beating; lost their shirts.

Now, Mr. Editor, your wizards of the pen, your gentlemen that spend their evenings being photographed at idiotic banquets given for this and that, will at once say, "and so he lived, a stick in the mud who would never pioneer, ever after," and right there is where the fellow would be wrong about me and my fellows, right there is where he should cut out a few banquets and loving cup dispensations, and get out and learn his business—for already I am in the market for at least two of this same foreign company's products this year, and if they succeed I will buy more. I think they will succeed. I know they will sell their good pictures in this territory, but they won't sell their block.

Exhibitors have under their thumb a barometer that no man of sense can sneer at. It is the only sure critique in this business—the daily box-office reports. Studying them for thirty years with the intentness that only an exhibitor can study them with, with an understanding of their implications only an experienced exhibitor can have—they tell a vivid and accurate story.

We are getting too arty. We are getting silly for instance over highbrow music. We are nuts over opera, the pauper in velvet, of amusements, the great fake game supported by genteel charity. The game where fat ladies with plenty of diamonds and a husband who has cheated the nation of a billion sits like a fat female pug dog and sizes up her neighbors. This silly thing is to be saddled on us. They can't be made to take it. I have steadily warned against it. This doesn't mean that pictures like "Rose Marie" won't succeed. They will. The difference, and why they will succeed is plain to me, but it isn't to many producers.

We have too many foreigners in our American-made films. We are getting goofy over classical music. The producers are, of course, inferior men—I mean those at the money end. To overcome this inferiority complex we are going to have them deluge us with "classical" effusions.

The screen has the greatest of all jobs to do. To bring happiness to the only class of people worth anyone's bothering about—the mass of the people. It would be well for the great musicians and singers to ask themselves what's wrong with them, that they must sing to pug dogs in diamonds and bankers whose banks are going bust, and lose humanity. Can't they write to reach humanity? Can't they sing to reach humanity? Must they always be what they are, parasites like tapeworms, beggars of the rich?

Exhibitors have great and important jobs, on the whole they do them well, much better than anyone else has ever done in human history. They sense the mind and heart of humanity, they take delight in bringing happiness and surcase to those hearts and minds. They make mistakes but less than any other class catering to the whole of humanity ever made before. Now if you are skeptical of this, ask the first booker in the nearest film exchange and he will tell you that before pictures of universal appeal are released, before the producer knows he has a hit of this kind, before the advertising gets to the exchange, that exhibitors are calling, writing, wiring for it. Don't take my word for this, ask the bookers in any exchange.—Herman J. Brown, The New Majestic Theatre, Nampa, Idaho.

Whipsaw

(MGM)

Romantic Drama

An interesting story, well acted, capably directed and geared to appeal to the masses, this show provides much with which to entertain the public and much to arouse showmanship attention. With Myrna Loy in the leading role, it returns a popular personality to the screen. In view of the manner in which her latest pictures were received it would hardly be good showmanship to ignore this fact. The picture also presents Spencer Tracy in the kind of role in which he appears to good advantage. Work of the supporting cast, as it pertains to individual performances and as a feature of the whole production, cleverly accents that of the leading players.

The story is modern topical drama, counterbalanced by semi-sophisticated romance. While there are several incidents in it that carry a vestige of near intimacy these, in relation to the whole show, should not be the cause of any worry as to moral worth. The quality of the dialogue, occasionally brisk and pointed, peps up the action, which at times inclines toward slowness. Situations, in relation to motivating plot and action, change quickly and the apparent slowness may be intentional in order that proper reactions and impressions may have time to register. Also through the condition, the show's comedy contrast and suspense content is developed in an effective manner.

The yarn is well contrived. First localed in Paris, Vivian Palmer, Dexter and Ames, plan to steal pearls purchased by Wadsworth. Rival gangsters Evans and Arnold, on the same mission, muscle in. Scene shifts to New York, and though customs officers are tipped off, Dexter steals the gems as Evans and Arnold are pushed around. Posing as a fellow fugitive, G-man McBride seeks to gain the confidence of Miss Palmer that he may be led to Dexter, supposed possessor of the loot. Smartly contrived situations, in which Miss Palmer is forced to adopt the sham of being McBride's wife, carry the hint that the girl is not totally unaware of her companion's actual identity, and carry the pair to the midwest. Trying to escape McBride as well as dodge the trailing Evans and Arnold, the girl's antics create much comedy. Eventually storm bound, they land in a farmhouse where the couple, accepted as man and wife, assist at the birth of twins in the Dabson family household. In the meantime, Evans has traced a phone call which Vivian has made to Dexter at New Orleans where he and Arnold go to hold the Dexter mob hostages until Vivian's trail is again picked up. Romance, which has been developed between Vivian and McBride, causes her again to phone Dexter and notify him that she is quitting. About to pack, McBride drops a mirror and the gems drop out of the handle. Suspense marking the incident, McBride, who has heard the phone conversation, thinks he is being made a fool of and arrests the girl. The combined mobs descend upon the pair, and in a restaurant, first getting Vivian in a place of safety, shoots it out with the thieves.

The finale has McBride dictating a statement which clears Vivian of complicity, and as love has regenerated her, her mission in life now is to take care of the wounded G-man.

There is a continuous air of thrill and action to the feature. The story it tells is quickly understandable as there is little in it to strain the imaginations. As the situations change, they do so logically so that the motivating coherence is preserved. As such it offers entertainment that moves in an aura of tense drama, appealing love interest and pleasing comedy. Featuring two personalities who have definite name value, a campaign that combines their worths as well as that of the story and utilizing some of the clever dialogue should go far in exciting general interest in the attraction.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

We're Only Human

(Radio-Kaufman)

Drama

More than usual entertainment and showmanship significance is attached to this drama inasmuch as it is the story of a man who was afraid to be afraid and of a woman who showed him how to conquer fear. Sticking closely, at all times, to dramatic and romantic elements that have definite screen value, it never succumbs to the temptation of being psychological. When it does give patrons something a little more serious to consider as it might pertain directly to themselves, it does so through the force of illusion and example rather than by advancng scientific or medical theories.

In the yarn, Sgt. McGaffrey, a cop who plays to the grandstand, captures notorious criminal Berger while sob sister reporter Sally is a thrilled spectator. Instead of the expected plaudits and complimentary newspaper notices, he gets censored and ridiculed in the prints. Berger escapes and McGaffrey publicly announces that he'll pinch him within a month. Not only is his ambition the inspiration for this, but having become romantically inclined towards Sally he is anxious to show her the kind of get-his-man officer he really is. While suspended, he hears the police radio reporting a robbery. Determined to be the big shot, he rushes in ahead of his erstwhile partner, tips off the presence of the cops and in the ensuing melee Walsh is shot and killed. The escapade only arouses the disgust of Sally who would be sympathetic.

Later in another fracas with criminals, McGaffrey is wounded and blinded. Though the accident brings Sally back to him, the man living in darkness, becomes mortally afraid. When he returns to duty he is yellow. All Sally's pleadings cannot restore his courage. But when another crime is committed and in which Berger is implicated, McGaffrey, single handed, invades the criminals' hideout to wipe out all including Berger.

His success in rubbing out the mob, coupled with the realization he is no longer afraid, brings him the applause he had always yearned for plus the love of Sally which will guide him in more discreet paths in the future.

Showmen who like to study their attractions with a view towards analyzing them for new and novel angles with which to lure patron curiosity, should find much in this feature to stimulate their exploitation ingenuity. As the picture differs radically in idea and manner of presentation from any of the current trend, it provides plenty of opportunity to do something different in effectively calling it to public attention.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Escape from Devil's Island

(Columbia)

Drama

Essentially a man's picture. All of those elements of drama that appeal to masculine audiences are crammed into this production to assure the magnetism needed to draw in that direction, but it is in focusing their campaigns to attract the feminine element that showmen will have to pay particular attention.

As the title implies, this is a prison picture, one dealing with all the hardships, suffering, brutality and cruelty of a prison camp set in the jungles of French Guiana. France's famous prison on Devil's Island, the subject of innumerable books, articles and other pictures, is a natural exploitation hook on which showmen can hang their campaigns. Combined with this are the names of Victory Jory, Florence Rice and Norman Foster, who all turn in well-rounded and convincing portrayals.

The story, in brief, concerns two spies, one of whom is sent to Devil's Island, while the other plots to bring about his escape, being in love with the prisoner's daughter all the while and risking his life more to make her happy again than to merely free his former partner. Into this theme comes the discordant note of the girl's falling in love with another man, who inadvertently finds himself drawn into prison, although innocent, because of the espionage activities of the other two.

The character portrayals are in keeping with the production, which, in most scenes, is authentic and realistic. The direction, however, seems to allow the action to bog down in the middle and the suspense, which was building nicely, slips back considerably.

Steve Harrington, international spy, plans one last coup with his younger colleague, Dario, before retiring. Together they attempt to steal military secrets from France, but their plans go awry and while Dario escapes Steve is caught and sentenced to Devil's Island.

As Steve's daughter manages to establish a home across the jungle from the prison, as a haven of refuge should her father escape, Dario cleverly has himself appointed a guard at the prison to assist in his partner's break for freedom. Meanwhile, in prison, Steve has become friendly with Andre Dion, a young convict sentenced unjustly, and asks him to join in the break.

Plans are completed, with Dario's ingenuity, and the break is made through the jungle. The fugitives soon lose their bearings and Steve climbs a tree to reconnoiter, only to be shot down by the pursuing guards. He dies in Dario's arms. Dario and Andre then separate and the latter is the first to reach Steve's daughter.

In their enforced intimacy they fall in love, but Andre, aware of Dario's love for the girl, won't betray his friend by declaring himself. At last Dario arrives safely and the three set out for Venezuela, where they will be safe.

From the captain of the boat Dario learns Andre is innocent and needs only to give himself up to be pardoned. Rushing to tell him the glad news he finds him in the girl's arms. Enraged, he puts him ashore in the jungle instead and leaves him to die.

Johanna cannot understand Andre's disappearance and, in desparation, tells Dario of her love for Andre. Aware of his blunder, Dario promises Johanna he will find the man she loves and returns to search for him in the jungle. He learns, too late, that Andre has been found and pardoned, and as the lovers are reunited Dario goes off to Devil's Island promising to join them for their fifth anniversary.

By use of all the material offered them here, showmen should find suitable campaigns to fit most any situation.—BAEHLER, New York.

The Last of the Pagans

(MGM - Phil Goldstone)

Dramatic Romance

Distinctly a novelty feature, this is one, however, which intelligently exploited should meet with favorable audience reaction. It is essentially dramatic romance. The two personalities featured, Mala and Lotus, the stars of "Eskimo," are the prototypes of a vanishing South Sea Island race. All their dialogue is in native Polynesian tongue, a dialect made understandable primarily by action and expression, and also by the use of subtitles. Only the language of white men in a few sequences in the latter sequences of the picture is intelligible. Charm of the beautiful natural scenic backgrounds is effectively captured by expert photography which should be a decided asset in selling the picture.

The motivating theme is simple and powerful. Mala, (Ray Wise), wife-raiding with fellow tribesmen, captures Natita (Lotus Long). Taking her to his island home and into the cabin of his mother, he endeavors to win her trust and affection by human kindness and exhibits of his prowess as a hunter. Sequences picturizing tribal customs preceding the wedding ceremony after Natita has been wooed and won are highly educational as well as being unusually entertaining.

But raiding white labor exploiteers in first exhibiting the dignity of white civilization by getting the natives drunk make a deal for some of the tribesmen to work in phosphate mines. Mala is one. His experience, as he encounters the curses of civilization are graphically dramatic. As a laborer who cannot understand why toil and tragedy should be his fate, he is a hero in a mine disaster. Promised the companionship of Natita, he is deprived of that when the whites fear native reprisals. Jailed, but escaping during a tropical storm, he rescues Natita from a sinking storm battered schooner to sail away to a new island where they can begin their idyllic life anew, unharried by white duplicity.

Names naturally meaning little, exploitation dependence must necessarily be placed upon the character of the picture. Simple appealing love drama, the element of most entertainment can be sold. So can the music which accompanies the action. Reliance should be placed strongly upon the fact that instead of being a novel travelogue the picture is elemental pagan love drama in which there is deep human interest. —MCCARTHY, Hollywood.

The Singing Vagabond

(Republic)

Musical Western

Showmen and audiences who appreciate the commercial entertainment worth of novelly treated thrill action adventure amusement should find much in this to engage their attention. Basically the feature is a musical western. Actually, with the production technique that made westerns so popular in the silent days expertly regenerated, it's the U. S. cavalry to the rescue. The well contrived situations move with speedy continuity. Music, which features Gene Autry mainly and Ann Rutherford in a minor manner with choruses, is effective. Dialogue fills the expected function, but primarily, action carries the story thread. The intent of the picture graphically is geared to arouse mass enthusiasm and to appeal strongly to the younger audience contingents.

Captain Tex Autry is the singing head of a troop of singing cavalry men convoying a wagon train of which runaway girl Lettie Morgan is a member. Bandits attack it and Autry's troop rides to the rescue. Romance which has a triangle complex develops for Tex, Lettie and LaCrosse. Arriving at the fort, horses are stolen and Tex suspected is arrested and convicted and sentenced to death. The wagon train moves on. Aided by his buddies, Frog and Buffalo, Tex escapes. He catches up with the train just as marauding Indians attack it. Driving off the raiders, Tex puts the finger on Utah Joe as the culprit in the crime of which he is charged. Exonerated, he wins Lettie.

As the picture concentrates on delivering the maximum amount of thrill action and makes no pretenses, other than in using music, to be anything than a pulse tingling western, showmen who accept it as such and make a serious effort to convince their audiences, particularly the outdoor action adventure devotees and the youngsters that the attraction is honestly entertaining, should find its presentation an enjoyable occasion.—MCCARTHY, Hollywood.

Come Out of the Pantry

(British & Dominions - U.A.)

Farce Comedy

Essentially a stage farce both in story values and treatment, this will still provide good if mild entertainment in stations where Jack Buchanan is liked. With him is Fay Wray. Very little is asked of her, but she shows an attractive sense of humor in the doing of it and she looks very charming indeed. There are good names in the support; James Carew, Olive Blakeney, Kate Cutler and Ronald Squire got humor out of parts almost traditional in farce.

Lord Robert Brent, sent from England to New York to dispose of some family pictures, deposits the cash received in a bank which suspends payment. Robert, in straits, meets an old family servant who is butler to Beach-Howard, a rich American, and persuades him to give him a job as footman in the same house.

Hilda, niece of Beach-Howard, discovers the new servant's secret and also falls in love with him. Robert's employer returns from England accompanied by Robert's bumptious elder brother, whom he plans to marry to Hilda. Robert, waiting at table at a dinner of welcome to the new arrival, manages to keep out of his brother's sight and to propose in installments to Hilda and get her answer between the courses, finally taking his brother's place as guest of honor.

The broad farce of the story seems to dictate the selling campaign. It's a case of underlining the central situation. There's something to be done in the way of tieups with tailoring establishments with Buchanan's masquerade in footman's tails as the cue; the dinner table scene, best in the film, suggests other efforts.—ALLAN, London.

Young Forest

(Golden State Film Co.)

Historical Drama

Based on the Polish rebellion of 1905 against the Russian Government, this picture has many moments of pure drama, satisfying romance and good comedy. The production is confined, insofar as the rebellion is concerned, to that part of the uprising which embraced the students of Poland and their schools as controlled by Russia. A group of students inflamed by patriotism, begin a movement to throw off the yoke of Russia. Held secretive at first, its growth brings the movement to the attention of the school authorities, who, in seeking to punish those responsible caused the movement to be brought into the open with the resultant rebellion of the students and their refusal to attend the schools as long as they were conducted under the aegis of the Russian Government.

While the dialogue is in Polish there are sufficient superimposed English titles to make the production readily understandable. The picture has an excellent cast.

Exhibitors should have no difficulty in selling the picture in those situations where the Polish are concentrated. For other situations, its value as a presentation rests in its treatment of a historical subject. Said to be produced on the exact locale of the 1905 revolution, its authenticity is of value. It is also good entertainment.

In the story, Anthony Majewski, son of a Pole in Russian service, and one of the foremost agitators, resents the actions of the Russian representatives and heads of the college where he is a student. Majewski's pro-Polish activities come to the attention of Starogranadski, principal of the college. A manifesto, calling for a strike is found in the school hall by Starogranadski, who with the help of a teacher, Kiernicki, traces its origin to Majewski. The principal fails to provoke Majewski to admitting that he is responsible for the literature but another student, Walczaks, denounces the present system in the principal's hearing. The principal inquires of the students if they all agree with Walczaks and finds to his satisfaction a dissenter in Stefan Kiernicki, son of the teacher. Kiernicki is subsequently ignored by his fellow students and by the girl he loves, Wanda Litinska.

Walczaks agrees to make a public apology when his mother is intimidated by the school's officials. But the effort to apologize causes Walczaks to faint before uttering the words. The incident incites the students to open rebellion. Kiernicki, preferring the companionship of his fellow students, turns against his father and learning that the authorities are aware of a secret meeting of the agitators and intend to arrest them, Kiernicki warns the students in time for them to make their escape. In so doing Kiernicki strikes down Pakotin, supervisor of the college, who is waiting for the police to arrive. Kiernicki is accepted by the students as one of them and by Wanda, an agitator in one of the boarding schools for girls, who loves him. The fight for freedom continues with liberty as the ultimate goal.—MOONEY, New York.

Kiss Me Goodbye

(Celebrity)

Musical Comedy

A musical comedy that has its setting in Vienna and concerns itself with the romance of two men who love the same girl and attempt to win her. She loves both and being unable to choose one or the other, the two, being "best of friends," decide to leave Vienna and forget the girl. The production ends on this indecisive note and because of it the picture suffers from lack of completeness. The ending, however, is in keeping with the whimsical tenor of the story, which is perhaps too light. The singing sequences and the comedy help to balance the production and its dearth of story value.

This is the first of P. A. Powers' Celebrity feature productions, stars Magda Schneider, Viennese operatic soprano, and features Arthur Riscoe and Naunton Wayne, musical comedy players. These names, unknown in this country, present a difficult selling problem for the exhibitor. Probably the best means of approach would be to exploit the picture as a light musical comedy with adequate singing by Miss Schneider. The locale is modern Vienna and the dialogue is in English.

Two young playboys, Riscoe and Wayne, arrive by airplane in Vienna. At night, in a restaurant, they strike up an acquaintance with Miss Schneider by means of a miniature telephone system that links all tables in the dining room. Learning that Miss Schneider's parents have a spare room to rent, Riscoe and Wayne establish themselves in her home. Riscoe thinks Magda would make a great dancer, while Wayne believes she would make a great grand opera star.

To realize these predictions, they separatedly arrange for her to have dancing and singing lessons. By trickery Wayne brings the director of the opera to hear Magda sing on the balcony of her home. Magda's singing brings out all the other occupants of the large apartment house and they all join in an augmented chorus. Magda proves she can both sing and dance and is made the star of a stage presentation of Donizetti's "Daughter of the Regiment." Realizing that they are both in love with Magda, Riscoe and Wayne decide to leave Vienna rather than have the girl come between them and they say goodbye to Magda. Confused by the parting with the girl they find themselves in a plane headed in the opposite direction they had intended going.—MOONEY, New York.

Stranger Than Fiction

(Universal)

Oddities

Number 15 of this series presents seven more oddities to intrigue audiences. In Buffalo, Harold Carlson, uses moving steel hooks for hands, to drive a car, play golf, typewrite, to write in "longhooks" (longhand). A bicyclist in Chicago goes touring with a trailer attached to the "bike" with almost all the conveniences of a modern home. A slip of a girl in French Morocco drinks boiling hot water, while radio tubes in a tiny electrical organ in New York produce the tone and power of a bigger pipe-organ. A fig tree in Chicago, starting its growth in the basement of a barber shop, has become too tall for the shop and the next step calls for a hole in the roof. In Mound Lake, Ark., a window shade is used for fishing purposes and in San Antonio, Texas, a man and his wife do some fancy shooting with pistols.—Running time, 9 minutes.

Harlem Bound

Musical

An entertaining short from Universal's Mentone series. The locale is in a Harlem night spot. Featuring colored performers, this short is a combination of singing and dancing with Norman Astwood acting as master-of-ceremonies. In addition to Astwood there are the teams of Buck and Bubbles and Cook and Brown and also Avis Astwood with the Cotton Club chorus appearing in the finale. Buck and Bubbles do the shuffling dance mania known as "Trucking," followed by the Cotton Club Chorus.—Running time, 20 minutes.

(Universal)

Novelties

"Going Places," with Lowell Thomas still in the driver's seat, bringing new sequences to add to this interesting series. In this issue the Totonacos Indians of Papantla, Vera Cruz, Mexico, celebrate the feast of Corpus Christi with a mixture of ancient and modern rites. In Philadelphia, Samuel Yellin, once of Russia, practices his trade of iron craftsmanship that has gained him international recognition. In New Jersey the fishermen of Bivalve dredge for seed oysters in Delaware Bay only to transplant them in Maurice River Cove, where better habitat conditions prevail.—Running time, 9 minutes.

Allied Heads Terminate Session in New York

Abram F. Myers, general counsel of Allied; H. M. Richey, Detroit; and Aaron Saperstein, Chicago, this week returned to their respective headquarters after conferring with Sidney Samuelson, president, on the distribution of the "white books" recently published by the organization on block booking. They decided to hold the national annual convention in Washington late next month. At this time, officers will be eleced. Mr. Samuelson has said he is not a candidate, but he did not say he would refuse the post if the directors insisted on his keeping it.

Sixty New Jersey Allied exhibitors sailed from New York last week on a cruise to Bermuda on the Monarch of Bermuda, during which the unit was scheduled to hold its adjourned annual meeting. Only one business session, for the election of president, was to take place and Mr. Samuelson is expected to return to New York late this week with the announcement he will again hold the office another term.

AMPA Advertising Award Announcement Due Soon

Details in connection with the annual advertising awards to be made by the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers will be announced in two weeks, according to Gordon S. White, president.

George Jessel will be the principal speaker, and Jack Alicoate will be master-of-ceremonies at the annual Christmas party to be held at the Hotel Astor December 19th. Invited are Lily Pons, Morton Downey and other stage, screen and radio stars.

Golden Will Conduct Regional Sales Meets

Edward Golden, general sales manager of Republic Pictures, will conduct four regional sales meetings in January.

W. Ray Johnston, president, returns to New York from the coast, where he has been attending production conferences, in about two weeks.

Examination Board Threatens

An effort may again be made at the new session of the Louisiana legislature in Baton Rouge for the introduction and passage of a bill creating a state board of motion picture examiners. Should such a bill pass it will be necessary for all projectionists to pass an examination before a new state board. Many of the smaller theatres are reported organizing to fight any such a measure.

NEW SERIES OF QUESTIONS BASED ON SIXTH EDITION OF BLUEBOOK. QUESTION NO. 1.—(A) What is the function of the photoelectric cell in a sound system? (B) In a lens, what is meant by "barrel distortion?" (C) Does dry scraping of the stub end of a film when making a splice produce reliable results? Explain.

Answer to Question No. 288-B

Bluebook School Question No. 288-B was: Would it not be possible to so connect the monitor that it would project exactly the same sound as is projected by the auditorium loudspeakers? If this could be done it would at least enable projectionists to detect and remedy some possible faults, though of course not all of them. (B) When there is noise in the sound that we suspect has its seat in some particular sound equipment, and to be due to a partial or light ground, what is the quickest and best way to test the matter?

To section A the engineers say:

"We do not regard the monitor speaker as of much possible value to the projectionist regardless of its connection, in judging sound, either as to quality or volume. This is for the reason that in the projection room always there is sufficient noises of mechanical nature to enable any safe estimate of sound quality in either music or speech. The projector gearing and movement of the intermittent mechanism is sufficient to prevent that, and the size, shape and acoustical qualities of the room would also have a decided effect on sound.

"As to Section B, surely the question answers itself. Disconnect the suspected piece of apparatus and test it for ground by means that surely by now are well known to all projectionists."

The following projectionists made satisfactory answers: S. Evans and C. Rau; D. Danielson; G. E. Doe; D. L. Sinklow; J. Wentworth and C Wentworth; G. Edwards; L. M. and C. B. Traxler; A. Richardson and N. L. Haynes; D. D. Lally and F. Ferguson; F. Simms and O. L. Daris; T. Turk; L. B. Sanderson; T. T. Golley; J. Van Vaulkenburg; P. Itt; J. L. Samuels, R. Tomkins, O. D. Lantry and B. M. Ferguson; C. Umphrey; R. and K. Wells; H. Youst; H. J. Billingsworth; F. H. S. and P. Dalbey; R. Bluend; S. E. Gay; G. N. Guidotti, F. L. Savlor and N. Savlor; P. and L. Felt; D. Emmerson; S. Spooner, D. Howard, J. Gurts and B. H. Thaller; G. L. Thomas and J. Bascombe; H. T. Granger; L. L. Daniels; J. Genson; R. D. Oberleigh and J. Lansing; T. L. Daniels and G. Samuels; J. L. Grangier; B. L. White and I. F. Lifton; T. T. Davidson and R. G. Crews; R. and K. Wells; T. W. Peterson and E. W. Ford; L. B. Proctor and D. U. Granger; G. Lathrope and N. L. Tomlinson; J. White; H. W. Bower; T. Thomas; K. L. Knight and L. Henderson; H. T. Adams; T. E. Mantol; H. T. Farrell and H. T. Woods; W. M. Powell; L. Denis, L. L. Samuels; W. Burns and T. R. Fanning; S. T. Rogers; S. L. Richards; M. M. Sitman; T. J. McGuire; H. Urger; N. Tomlinson; B. B. Hornstein; I. B. Bancroft; G. R. Squires; W. T. Murphy; D. L. and M. Rice F. N. Giddings; R. E. Salisbury; K. H. Harley; T. L. Davis and H. T. Goodman; P. L. Perry, W. Williams, C. O. Bartlett and D. Carille; S. D. and W. Love; T. H. E. Richman; N. F. Gray; F. T. Bennett; T. L. Bradbury; B. G. Korda; Nic Granby D. Allen and M. Spencer; M. and J. Devoy; F. H. Klar, L. Klar and T. H. Morton; K. N. Kirkpatrick; L. R. Spooner and G. Johnson; N. Prane and B. R. Mills; L. A. Dodson and H. T. Todd; D. L. Lode, B. H. Sanders and J. Gensen; M. D. Fitzsimmons.

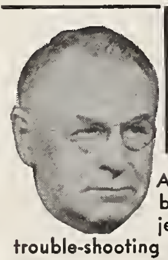
Evans and Rau say, "It is possible to so connect the monitor that it would project exactly the same sound as do the auditorium speakers, but because of the difference in volume required and the difference in acoustics as between the auditorium and the projection room, the results would not be the same."

D. Danielson says, "In certain types of equipment it would be possible to give the monitor the same power as the screen loudspeakers. In other types it would be next to impossible. But even if it may be done, the results would for several reasons be the same."

C. Umphrey says, "I am not certain whether or no it could be done with all equipments, but I am very sure it would be quite useless if it could. I arrive at this conclusion by process of reasoning. The screen and monitor loudspeakers are of necessity very different in shape and size. They operate under wholly different conditions, therefore it would be wholly impossible to secure and maintain equality in results."

May I butt in to say that I regard the answer of Brother Umphrey as the most complete of them all, including the engineers. It in my opinion states the two things that make equality in results entirely impossible.

(B) G. E. Doe says, "If I suspected the trouble to be due to a ground, light or otherwise, in some particular piece of the equipment, I would disconnect that equipment or equipment part and test for ground in the usual manner. Personally I am strong for a magneto test. Had the boss buy one for me 10 years ago. It is just as good today as when it was bought, and a ground that can get past that bird without discovery is—well, it don't exist. However, head phones energized by a series battery connection is good, making the test connection from each side of the suspected equipment to a ground that is known to be good—as a well-cleaned spot on a water pipe."



F. H. RICHARDSON'S NEW BLUE BOOK OF PROJECTION

A new edition of this famous book is now available. Projection sound reproduction and trouble-shooting all in one compact, handy volume of 714 pages, including 153 illustrations of hook-ups, wiring diagrams and schematics.

Experts consider it the most up-to-date and practical projection manual on the market. Contains an extremely simple index system for instant use in emergency breakdowns. A book that should be part of every projection room in the country. ORDER YOUR COPY NOW.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD
1790 Broadway, New York

First National

CASE OF THE LUCKY LEGS, THE: Warren William, Genevieve Tobin—Double billed with "Personal Maid's Secret." Best double bill you could find. Both good pictures.—Otis Page, Lincoln Theatre, Damariscotta, Me. General patronage.

I FOUND STELLA PARISH: Kay Francis, Ian Hunter—Best Francis yet. Business better than usual. Played December 3. I have used First National and Warner pictures for two years. I find them very good.—R. L. Sherman, Strand Theatre, North Branch, Mich. General patronage.

I SELL ANYTHING: Pat O'Brien, Ann Dvorak, Claire Dodd—This was one of O'Brien's poorest pictures, full of chatter, which played to poor business. Shelve it; could not recommend it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

IRISH IN US, THE: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, Olivia de Havilland, Mary Gordon—Played September 7-8. Brought it back November 6-7. It is the tops for small town.—R. L. Sherman, Strand Theatre, North Branch, Mich. Small town patronage.

IRISH IN US, THE: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, Mary Gordon—Mary Gordon is the real star in this picture, but they are all good. Often a picture is over-advertised (because they need it), but this one lives up to its advertising. Severe winter weather held our attendance down low, but all who saw it were pleased. Played November 22-23.--O. Ingmar Oleson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Rural patronage.

SHIPMATES FOREVER: Dick Powell, Ruby Keeler, Lewis Stone--What a show! Cast and everything you would pray for. Was I ever thankful to First National! Thanksgiving Nite people were still coming at ten o'clock. Played November 27-28.—R. L. Sherman, Strand Theatre, North Branch, Mich. Small town patronage.

SHIPMATES FOREVER: Dick Powell, Ruby Keeler—Swell picture. Very well liked by all.—Otis Page, Lincoln Theatre, Damariscotta, Me. General patronage.

WOMAN IN RED, THE: Barbara Stanwyck, Gene Raymond—A good audience picture. Good comments and good entertainment. Running time, 65 minutes. Played November 22-23.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

Mascot

LITTLE MEN: Erin O'Brien-Moore, Ralph Morgan, Frankie Darro—A very well done independent picture production. This picture is of major company caliber. If the independents would make more pictures of this type, we would not be hesitant about using their product.—Theodore J. Friedman, The Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

AGE OF INDISCRETION: May Robson, Madge Evans—Just fair. One of those kind that will not draw. Tried but found wanting. Running time, 80 minutes. Played November 20-21.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinncille, Ore. Local patronage.

ANNA KARENINA: Greta Garbo, Fredric March, Freddie Bartholomew—There was nothing more to be desired as far as the acting was concerned; it is undoubtedly Garbo's best to date. But the draw was not there and it is no fault of the picture, but the fact is that it is not a small town picture. Most of audience were women and it was apparently shunned by the men. I blame the trailer for showing so much of the love scenes; the men look them over and figure that it is another piece of mush, which was not true. A little restraint in these arty picture would help at the box office. Metro. please notice.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

BISHOP MISBEHAVES, THE: Edmund Gwenn, Maureen O'Sullivan—Good program picture that did surprisingly well considering the absence of star names in the cast. Played November 20.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

CHINA SEAS: Clark Gable, Jean Harlow, Wallace Beery—A big production, worthy of the name special. The unseen mechanical crew are deserving of praise with the seen stars. The storm at sea is certainly a whopper; one is thankful that one can see it from a comfortable theatre seat instead of being in it onesself. As for business, perhaps showing it the day after Thanksgiving held down the gross. I did a little better than average, but not enough better to make up the cost of this.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

FLAME WITHIN, THE: Ann Harding, Herbert Marshall—Very poor. Just a waste of time. Running time, 80 minutes. Played November 13-14.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinville, Ore. Local patronage.

HERE COMES THE BAND: Ted Lewis, Virginia Bruce—Failed to click. Running time, 87 minutes. Played November 10-11.—C. C. Cassinelli, Wyoming Theatre, Mullens, W. Va. Small town patronage.

HERE COMES THE BAND: Ted Lewis, Virginia Bruce—One of the best shows I have exhibited for some time. Harry Stockwell is certainly going to be mighty popular from now on. "Headin' Home" was the highlight of the show. Just all around good entertainment. Running time, 80 minutes. Played November 16-17.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

MURDER IN THE FLEET: Robert Taylor, Jean Parker—Well liked and good entertainment. Played November 15-16.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

O'SHAUGHNESSY'S BOY: Wallace Beery, Jackie Cooper—A satisfactory picture. Beery always pulls them. The only fault is that the sequences of Jackie sulking were a little too long. The circus atmosphere always attracts the kids. Hard to tell about business as we ran into icy roads both nights of the showing. —A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

PURSUIT: Chester Morris, Sally Eilers—Better than average programmer. Business average. Second night built up, which is unusual. Running time, 59 minutes. —Edward L. Ornstein, Lyric Theatre, Brooksville, Ky. General patronage.

SMILIN' THROUGH (Re-release): Norma Shearer, Fredric March, Leslie Howard—Played here for the third time. Still did better than average business. Running time, 97 minutes.—Edward L. Ornstein, Lyric Theatre, Brooksville, Ky. General patronage.

WEST POINT OF THE AIR: Wallace Beery, Robert Young—Saw this picture when it came out last spring and felt that it would be well-liked in here. Reception given it vindicated my judgment, for it was pronounced 100 per cent entertainment. Aerial sequences were great and Beery is always a popular star here. A rather odd coincidence was the fact that the picture, containing a few shots of an Army-Navy football game, was shown on the same day as this year's service game. Running time, 88 minutes. Played November 30.—J. A. Reynolds, Recreational Director, New Jersey State Prsion, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

WINNING TICKET, THE: Leo Carrillo, Ted Healy, Irene Hervey—Plenty of dialect which should suit foreign situations, but was not appreciated to the full extent in our local town theatre. Did below average business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

WOMAN WANTED: Joel McCrea, Maureen O'Sullivan--A dandy and well-liked. Splendid entertainment. Played November 22-23.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

Monogram

KEEPER OF THE BEES, THE: Neil Hamilton, Betty Furness—Everyone liked it. Good business second night. Good clean picture. Played October 25-26.—Fred J. Case, La Balle Theatre, La Belle, Fla. Rural patronage.

Paramount

ANNAPOLIS FAREWELL: Tom Brown, Sir Guy Standing—Here is a well done picture, with numerous shots of the training station that add to the effectiveness of the production. The work of Sir Guy Standing is outstanding and adds to his many laurels. Played to good business Thanksgiving week end and everyone pleased. Running time, 82 minutes. Played November 28-30.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

CAR 99: Fred MacMurray, Ann Sheridan, Sir Guy Standing—One of the first Paramount pictures we have run in a long time and it is a swell picture for Saturday and Sunday. Good story, plenty of action, and comedy. Good for the whole family. Played November 16-17.—W. J. Carter, Maxine Theatre, Croswell, Mich. Small town patronage.

CORONADO: Jack Haley, Johnny Downs—Swell musical. Great dancing, good music, with Eddie Duchin. Plenty of good comedy.—Otis Page, Lincoln Theatre, Damariscotta, Me. General patronage.

GOIN' TO TOWN: Mae West, Paul Cavanagh—One of Mae's best. A very good story, splendid dialogue and geared at a fast pace. This pictureis a real box-office.—Theodore J. Friedman, The Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

GOIN' TO TOWN: Mae West, Paul Cavanagh—A much advertised picture and many came to see Mae West. They may "come and see her sometime," but would not be regular callers. Nothing exceptional about this picture and the audience leaves with a sense of disappointment. An over-advertised picture is somewhat at a disadvantage, as the audience expects more. Personally, I was disappointed, particularly with the singing. Would not book another by Mae West. Played November 15-16.—O. Ingmar Oleson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Rural patronage.

HANDS ACROSS THE TABLE: Carole Lombard, Fred MacMurray—Very good. Not too strong at box office.—Otis Page, Lincoln Theatre, Damariscotta, Me. General patronage.

LAST OUTPOST, THE: Cary Grant, Claude Rains, Gertrude Michael—Everyone responsible for this production deserves everything you may say for them. If this had been the first "Bengal Lancer" story to be produced, it would have been equally as good a box office attraction. As it is, we enjoyed big business. One thing we did was to have the story published in serial form, and this does wonders for the box office. The local newspaper was glad to co-operate.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

LITTLE AMERICA: Admiral Byrd—In spite of the fact that we advertised it as "Byrd's Second Expedition," they thought they had seen it. While a very interesting offering, it failed to draw, and to me it did not carry the thrill the first one did. Played "Hopalong Cassidy" with it and the patrons had more to say for this than the Byrd picture.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

MAN ON THE FLYING TRAPEZE: W. C. Fields, Mary Brian—A typical Fields picture. Pleasing and entertaining, but not outstanding. Played on a week end to a general audience appeal.—Theodore J. Friedman, The Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

MARY BURNS, FUGITIVE: Sylvia Sidney, Melvyn Douglas—Great. Very well liked. Miss Sidney is coming back.—Otis Page, Lincoln Theatre, Damariscotta, Me. General patronage.

NEVADA: Larry Crabbe, Kathleen Burke—Good western.—Otis Page, Lincoln Theatre, Damariscotta, Me. General patronage.

PARIS IN SPRING: Tulio Carminati, Mary Ellis—A very well done musical comedy. Best suited for class houses. This picture has no marquee names, therefore not a box office attraction.—Theodore J. Friedman, The Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

ROCKY MOUNTAIN MYSTERY: Randolph Scott, Charles "Chic" Sale, Kathleen Burke—This is another Zane Grey. Always dependable, and the pleasure of a full house. Running time, 63 minutes. Played November 20-21.—H. Bettendorf, Opera House, Foley, Minn. Small town and country patronage.

SHIP CAFE: Carl Brisson, Arline Judge—Just fair. —Otis Page, Lincoln Theatre, Damariscotta, Me. General patronage.

SMART GIRL: Kent Taylor, Ida Lupino—A good light comedy aided by a good plot. This picture moves along at a fast pace with comedy predominating. Outstanding marquee names lacking to make this real box office. Played Friday and Saturday.—Theodore J. Friedman, The Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

TWO FOR TONIGHT: Bing Crosby, Joan Bennett—Would class this as a pleasing program picture, nothing more. Running time, 61 minutes. Played November 27-28.P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

TWO FOR TONIGHT: Bing Crosby, Joan Bennett —Poor. The best possibility for a two-reel comedy stretched out to six reels I've seen in a long time. If you play it you might as well tell Crosby goodbye. Running time, 60 minutes.—Edward L. Ornstein, Lyric Theatre, Brooksville, Ky. General patronage.

VIRGINIA JUDGE, THE: Walter C. Kelly, Marshall Hunt—Patrons must have been afraid to get sentenced, since drew very small business. Pleasing comedy-drama. Running time, 59 minutes. Played November 13-14.—C. C. Cassinelli, Wyoming Theatre, Mullens, W. Va. Small town patronage.

WANDERER OF THE WASTELAND: Dean Jagger, Gail Patrick, Edward Ellis—This is another Zane Grey and this seems to be just what they want. It is entertainment, and this man Ellis, who did the prospector's part was so good you feel it was done as well as Lionel Barrymore could do it. More power to Zane Grey productions.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

WANDERERF OF THE WASTELAND: Gail Patrick, Dean Jagger—Excellent western. Running time, 62 minutes.—Edward L. Ornstein, Lyric Theatre, Brooksville, Ky. General patronage.

WINGS OVER ETHIOPIA: No good at any angle. Otis Page, Lincoln Theatre, Damariscotta, Me. General patronage.

Republic

FORBIDDEN HEAVEN: Charles Farrell, Charlotte Henry—Before playing this picture, I tried to find some reviews for it. If I had, probably would never have run it. Boresome. Played November 3-4.—Charles C. Cassinelli, Wyoming Theatre, Mullens, W. Va. Small town patronage.

TUMBLING TUMBLEWEEDS: Gene Autry, Lucile Browne—Here is a western with all the earmarks of a major studio western. We popularized Gene Autry with the serial, "The Phantom Empire," and had a ready-made audience. We had an extra large children's attendance, larger than the usual Thanksgiving matinee. This was double billed with "Front Page Woman" and the show pleased old and young.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

RKO Radio

ARIZONIAN, THE: Richard Dix, Margot Grahame —Just the kind of a picture that does business in a small town. Good story, plenty of action and our patrons like Dix. Give us more of this type of picture. Played November 26-27.—W. J. Carter, Maxine Theatre, Croswell, Mich. Small town patronage.

LAST DAYS OF POMPEII, THE: Preston Foster, Basil Rathbone, David Holt, Dorothy Wilson—While this dramatic spectacle pleased all who came, it was a disappointment at the B. O., playing to the lowest gross in months. Running time, 96 minutes. Played November 24-26.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

COULD HARDLY GET ALONG WITHOUT IT

I think "What the Picture Did for Me" of great benefit; in fact, I could hardly get along without it. I always turn to this page the first thing. It helps the exhibitor in selecting the pictures more than anything else I know of.

You may look for more reports on pictures in the very near future from me. — MISS ALICE SIMMONS, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

LAST DAYS OF POMPEII, THE: Preston Foster, Basil Rathbone, David Holt, Dorothy Wilson—Good picture, but they don't like this kind.—Otis Page, Lincoln Theatre, Damariscotta, Me. General patronage.

OLD MAN RYHTHM: Buddy Rogers, Betty Grable —Splendid musical picture with plenty of comedy. George Barbier stole the show. General appeal. Will do anywhere.—Fred J. Case, La Belle Theatre, La Belle, Fla. Rural patronage.

ROBERTA: Fred Astaire. Ginger Rogers, Irene Dunne—We played this picture ahead of "Top Hat," expecting to do business, as we spent a lot of energy and time in making this picture a special. Was disappointed in our crowds, although we did above average business. We thought it an excellent musical. It did not prove a box office attraction.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

STRANGERS ALL: May Robson, Preston Foster, Florine McKinney—Fine picture, well done. Teaches a good lesson. It's free of drinking scenes, which alone ought to recommend it. I wonder why the exhibitors do not start a rebellion against the pictures that reek with drinking scenes. If we had the courage to boycott every picture that shows more than one or two drinking scenes, we could clean up our screens from such filth all by ourselves and set our theatres right with our patrons.—E. T. Mathes, Avalon Theatre, Bellingham, Wash. Family patronage.

THREE MUSKETEERS, THE: Walter Abel, Paul Lukas, Margot Grahame. Heather Angel—Done fair. Weather was very bad. Played December 1-2. I have used RKO pictures for over two years. Eight per cent are money-makers for small town.—R. L. Sherman, Strand Theatre, North Branch, Mich. General patronage.

TO BEAT THE BAND: Helen Broderick, Hugh Herbert—Get behind this. The last five minutes are worth the price of admission. Played November 24-25. —R. L. Sherman, Strand Theatre, North Branch, Mich. General patronage.

TOP HAT: Fred Astaire, Gingers Rogers—Very good at box office and it pleased the customers. Played October 13-14.—R. L. Sherman, Strand Theatre, North Branch, Mich. General patronage.

TOP HAT: Fred Astaire, Gingers Rogers—This is really a box office honey for any theatre. Play it and step on it. Running time, 99 minutes. Played November 17-18.—C. C. Cassinelli, Wyoming Theatre, Mullens, W. Va. Small town patronage.

TOP HAT: Fred Astaire, Gingers Rogers—Can add nothing to the commendatory reports that have already been published. Picture drew and pleased. That last sentence tells the story. Some draw, but leave a taste that hurts. "Top Hat" sent all classes out of the theatre with well-satisfied expressions and comments. Running time, 99 minutes. Played November 24-26.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

TOP HAT: Fred Asaire, Ginger Rogers—If you want to lift the mortgage on the old homestead, book this one. It's the perfect picture. Wonderful cast. They came to town in one horse shays and model T's. The traveling minstrel show left town after the first night the competition was too much for them. "Top Hat" will be good this time next year, but RKO doesn't seem to be afraid to give the good ones to the little fellow before they grow a grey beard. Running time. 99 minutes. Played November 24-25.—Fred J. Case, La Belle Theatre, La Belle, Fla. Rural patronage.

TOP HAT: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers—What more can I say about this? Running time, 101 minutes.—Edward L. Ornstein, Lyric Theatre, Brooksville, Ky. General patronage.

Twentieth Century - Fox

CHARLIE CHAN IN EGYPT: Warner Oland, "Pat" Paterson—A regular Charlie Chan picture, about the same as the usual Chan pictures, only in a different locale. Double billed it with "A Night at the Ritz." This program did above average business. I would say that most of the credit for the extra draw should be given to the Charlie Chan picture.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN IN SHANGHAI: Warner Oland, Irene Hervey—Better than the last one. Oland always gives a good performance, if he has the stuff to do it with. But I think that the public is getting a little fed up with the cycle. We had the same thing years ago in the late lamented "Cohens and Kellys," and from the box office reaction, these seem to be going the same way; they do not draw as they used to do.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

CURLY TOP: Shirley Temple, John Boles—Very good, especially from the box office standpoint. The story is very much the same as "Daddy Long Legs." Played November 9.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

CURLY TOP: Shirley Temple, John Boles—Her finest picture so far, so our patrons say. John Boles is good, too. Fine entertainment.—E. T. Mathes, Avalon Theatre, Bellingham, Wash. Family patronage.

CURLY TOP: Shirley Temple, John Boles—Why report on the Shirley Temple pictures? They are all the tops in entertainment. Personally, do not like any of her pictures quite so well as "The Little Colonel," but they are all the best there is and my patrons leave asking when will there be another Shirley Temple show? Running time, 74 minutes. Played November 20-21.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

DOUBTING THOMAS: Will Rogers, Billie Burke—Another good picture from Bill. We believe it is just as good as any of his previous pictures. Played November 23-24.—W. J. Carter, Maxine Theatre, Croswell, Mich. Small town patronage.

DRESSED TO THRILL: Clive Brook, Tutta Rolf—I've been guilty of slip-ups- slip-downs and whatnots, but, brother, this is the soriest picture ever to appear in my house. It embarrassed us greatly; lacked $3.60 taking in enough the first night to pay for the film, but rather than endure further punishment closed the house the second night. I feel like I stole from my patrons who saw it. Played November 19-20.—Harolde T. Young, Palace Theatre, Farmerville, La. Small town and rural patronage.

FARMER TAKES A WIFE, THE: Janet Gaynor, Henry Fonda—Why do some exhibitors insist on writing adverse criticism of this picture, always ending up by saying it's not up to Janet Gaynor's other pictures? This is as good as we've shown and our patrons said so; drew far above average, second night better than first. Our folks are in love with Henry Fonda, and for myself I think he is Fox's best bet for a male lead, and I'll stick to Janet Gaynor for box-office at least till Shirley Temple grows up. Running time, 90 minutes. Played November 12-13.—Harolde T. Young, Palace Theatre, Farmersville, La. Small town and rural patronage.

GAY DECEPTION, THE: Francis Lederer, Frances Dee—A fair story, but no names to draw the customers. Poor business for me. Played November 17-19.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

GINGER: Jane Withers, Jackie Searl—This juvenile actress appealed very much to our audience. Should build herself up to be a box office attraction. Did average business. Feel she will prove a greater draw in her next picture.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

GINGER: Jane Withers, Jackie Searl—Seventy-four minutes of as good entertainment as you can ask for. Jane Withers certainly wows them in this one. She puts on a show that would be a credit to a grownup. That little lady will go places. A number of my patrons said she was better than Shirley Temple, and when they say that, well, Jane has to be pretty good. The entire cast gives a fine performance. Running time, 74 minutes. Played November 13-14.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

GINGER: Jane Withers. Jackie Searl—Here is a good picture for any day of the week. Jane Withers does a fine bit of acting. Played November 19-20.—W. J. Carter, Maxine Theatre, Croswell, Mich. Small town patronage.

HARD ROCK HARRIGAN: George O'Brien, Irene Hervey—A good action melodrama; a nice change from the usual western. This drew as well as the usual George O'Brien western. A good average but not special draw.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

REDHEADS ON PARADE: John Boles, Dixie Lee —Very good musical. Boles well liked here. Running time, 77 minutes.—Edward L. Ornstein, Lyric Theatre, Brooksville, Ky. General patronage.

STEAMBOAT ROUND THE BEND: Will Rogers, Anne Shirley—Played this to best business in many months. 'Nuff sed. Played November 15.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

THUNDER IN THE NIGHT: Edmund Lowe, Karen Morley—Just seven reels of film. Good title, but the picture is punk; better left on the shelf. Played November 13.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

THUNDER MOUNTAIN: George O'Brien, Barbara Fritchie—Very poor. Fox is sure putting the skids on O'Brien. The stories he has had lately have been very poor and the production terrible. Running time, 60 minutes. Played November 8-9.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

WAY DOWN EAST: Rochelle Hudson, Henry Fonda—Good entertainment and well liked. Played November 10-12.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

WAY DOWN EAST: Rochelle Hudson, Henry Fonda—Another one that slipped up on me; personally endorsed this and told my patrons that if they did not feel that they were benefited by seeing this picture their money would be refunded. Although did not draw as well as expected pleased everyone that saw it. Did not have to refund any. Consider this Rochelle Hudson's best. Henry Fonda again very good; play it and advertise. If you can get them in it will please probably better than any picture of the year. Running time, 84 minutes. Played November 19-20.—Harolde T. Young, Palace Theatre, Farmerville, La. Small town patronage.

WELCOME HOME: James Dunn, Arline Judge—Pleased those who came, but did not draw. Average comedy drama. Clean, but hardly heavy enough for Sunday. Story built about small town "Homecoming," and the alumni who drift back for the occasion. Running time, 72 minutes. Played November 17-18.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

United Artists

DARK ANGEL, THE: Fredric March, Merle Oberon, Herbert Marshall—Again "The Dark Angel" is with us, as was "Resurection," for a repeat production in a short period since they were made in sound. Not such good judgment on the part of the producers, if box office is any criterion. But this edition has cast names, and Merle Oberon, whose work in this picture is of high calibre. She was very good, and I will admit that the picture was the best produced of the two issues. Largely due to the cast, I think. The story is so outstanding that there was no change from the other version and that, I know, cut down the attendance.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

HOUSE OF ROTHSCHILD, THE: George Arliss—This was a wonderful production and was appreciated by the few that came. Arliss does not seem to be a small town draw.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

WEDDING NIGHT, THE: Gary Cooper, Anna Sten —Wonderful picture and well produced and appealed to our adult patrons, but below average box office. Must have been too old.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Universal

ALIAS MARY DOW: Sally Eilers, Ray Milland—Would consider this above average picture, which seemed to please all. Business normal.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

BRIDE OF FRANKENSTEIN, THE: Boris Karloff, Valerie Hobson—Terribly disappointed in this picture. From the prior reports, I expected something really big, but can class this one no better than program fair. Picture good in spots, but not consistently so. Played midweek.—Theodore J. Friedman, The Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

BRIDE OF FRANKENSTEIN, THE: Boris Karloff, Valeric Hobson—A well-made "horror" picture that drew. Seemed to hold interest and please. Running time, 80 minutes. Played November 20-21.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

CRIMSON TRAIL, THE: Buck Jones, Polly Ann Young—Swell picture, chucked full of action which played to a good weekend business. Buck Jones always draws our farm friends. Never lets them down. —Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

FIGHTING YOUTH: Charles Farrell, June Martel—Good football yarn. Well liked here; drew extra business. Played at height of football season here. Running time, 77 minutes. Played November 6-7.—C. C. Cassinelli, Wyoming Theatre, Mullens, W. Va. Small town patronage.

I'VE BEEN AROUND: Chester Morris, Rochelle Hudson—Played this to average business. Fair program picture.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

LADY TUBBS: Alice Brady, Douglass Montgomery, Anita Louise—A good average comedy drama that amused. Double billed it with "Hard Rock Harrigan" and did a good average Sunday and Monday business.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

NIGHT LIFE OF THE GODS: Florine McKinney, Alan Mowbray—A very peculiar picture. Some thought it very good and some thought it very bad. Will fare better with the class audience as the others do not know what it is all about. Played midweek.—Theodore J. Friedman, The Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

PRINCESS O'HARA: Jean Parker, Chester Morris —A very good program picture with a typical Damon Runyon story, which always means good dialogue and rapid pace. Acting by all concerned is very good. Will please almost any type of audience.—Theodore J. Friedman, The Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

RAVEN, THE: Boris Karloff, Bela Lugosi—Disappointed in this picture. Thought it would be much better. Moves along slowly with poor acting by all concerned. Played this midweek.—Theodore J. Friedman, The Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

TRANSIENT LADY: Gene Raymond, Henry Hull—A very pleasing picture. Good plot and good acting. This picture moves along at a rapid pace and will please almost any audience.—Theodore J. Friedman, The Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

WEREWOLF OF LONDON: Henry Hull, Valerie Hobson—One of the best horror pictures to date. Henry Hull plays his part splendidly. Supporting cast also does very well. Played Friday and Saturday to many shudders and praises.—Theodore J. Friedman, The Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

Warner Bros.

BROADWAY GONDOLIER: Dick Powell, Joan Blondell—Very satisfactory. Has good music, good singing, good comedy and good Flagenheim cheese. Play it. Played November 23-24.—H. Bettendorf, Opera House, Foley, Minn. Small town and country patronage.

DR. SOCRATES: Paul Muni, Ann Dvorak—Well liked by all patrons. Poor title.—Otis Page, Lincoln Theatre, Damariscotta, Me. General patronage.

FRONT PAGE WOMAN: Bette Davis, George Brent—Here is a fine newspaper yarn that moves at a lively pace from start to finish. The surprise finish with the rival papers coming out, one with the "Guilty" headline and the other paper with the "Not Guilty" headline in an important murder trial is a "pip." I double billed it with "Tumbling Tumbleweeds" for my Thanksgiving program and did a nice business. This can stand alone, but in this double bill town many will possibly double bill "Mutiny on the Bounty" with "A Midsummer Night's Dream."—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

LITTLE BIG SHOT: Sybil Jason, Robert Armstrong—Good picture. Juvenile pictures of this calibre should prove box-office everywhere. Running time, 72 minutes. Played November 20-21.—C. C. Cassinelli, Wyoming Theatre, Mullens, W. Va. Small town patronage.

MOONLIGHT ON THE PRAIRIE: Richard (Dick) Foran, Sheila Mannors—Made to keep small towns open. Swell trailer. Swell show. Played November 8-9.—R. L. Sherman, Strand Theatre, North Branch, Mich. Small town patronage.

PAGE MISS GLORY: Marion Davies, Pat O'Brien, Dick Powell, Patsy Kelly—My patrons are not crazy about Marion Davies, but all the same I think it is a swell picture. Running time, 92 minutes.—J. E. Weber, Princess Theatre, Chelsea, Mich. General patronage.

PERSONAL MAID'S SECRET: Margaret Lindsay, Warren Hull—Double billed with "The Case of the Lucky Legs." Best double bill you could find. Both good pictures.—Otis Page, Lincoln Theatre, Damariscotta, Me. General patronage.

SPECIAL AGENT: George Brent, Bette Davis—Another of the Gangster-G-Men pictures that pleased. Enough suspense and thrills to keep the audience guessing. The entire cast gives a good performance. Running time, 78 minutes. Played November 23-24.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

SPECIAL AGENT: George Brent, Bette Davis—Very good.—Otis Page, Lincoln Theatre, Damariscotta, Me. General patronage.

Short Features

Educational

ALADDIN'S LAMP: Paul Terry-Toon—A good black and white cartoon.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

COLLEGE CAPERS: Song and Comedy Hits—The Cabin Kids are the high spots in this. Just fair. Running time, 12 minutes.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

FITZPATRICK TRAVEL TALKS: Fitzpatrick Travelogues are the class of the program. All in color and the only reel that we get some scattered applause on.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

FOOTBALL TEAMWORK: MGM Sports Parade—Here is a very good sports reel that attracted the football fans. Running time, 1 reel.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

INFERNAL TRIANGLE: Charley Chase—A short that is different, showing the infernal triangle from the American, English, French, Russian standpoint and ending with a scene from the oldtime silents. Most of my patrons semed to like it. Running time, 20 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

LITTLE PAPA: Our Gang—Here is a dandy; one of the best yet, with a baby that will capture the heart of any audience. Running time, 2 reels.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

OLD PLANTATION, THE: Happy Harmonies—Here's a real colored cartoon. The toys play the old Kentucky home with the mortgage foreclosure and horse race to save the home and Black Beauty wins in a riot of fun.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

OUR GANG FOLLIES OF 1936: Our Gang—This is a whole show by itself. About everything in the way of entertainment you can ask for. Several said it was worth the price of admission. Running time, 20 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kans. Small town patronage.

SOUTHERN EXPOSURE: Charley Chase—Distributors gave us this one as a last minute substitute for the Todd-Kelly number, "Sing, Sister Sing!" and we owe them a note of thanks, for this turned out to be the best two-reeler we have shown this season. The hillbilly court scene was a "darb" Running time, 21 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Recreational Director, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

TWIN TRIPLETS: Todd-Kelly—Another Todd-Kelly comedy that went over good, as they usually do. Running time, 20 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theathe, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

Paramount

CAVALCADE OF MUSIC, THE: Headliners—Here is a splendid musical; in fact, no producer is turning out better one reelers than Paramount. This one rates top spot. Running time, 1 reel.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

PARAMOUNT NEWS: We are playing this news for thirty days and so far think it some better than Fox. Would appreciate small town exhibitors' opinions on news.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

RKO Radio

GENTLEMEN'S SPORTS: Sports With Bill Corum —A pretty fair sports reel, but not outstanding.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

MAJOR BOWES' AMATEUR THEATRE OF THE AIR: No. 2—This is the first Major Bowes' we have played. We build it and received some favorable comments, but do not think it as good as Warner's 2-reel Broadway Brevities.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

MARCH OF TIME: No. 7—These issues could have extra drawing power if played sooner. Letting them stale. Just a newsreel in condensed form. Running time, 20 minutes.—Charles C. Cassinelli, Wyoming Theatre, Mullens, W. Va. Small town patronage.

United Artists

PLUTO'S JUDGMENT DAY: Mickey Mouse—This is an exceptionally good Mickey Mouse with a lot of originality. Running time, 9 minutes.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

Universal

BRONCO BUSTER: Oswald Cartoon—One of the best black and white cartoons on the market. Give this preferred time. Our house in an uproar.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Vitaphone

CAMERA HUNTING: Paul Douglas—Pictures of wild life in various parts of the United States that is educational as well as entertaining. Running time, 10 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

COUNTRY MOUSE, THE: Merrie Melodies—Another of the excellent colored cartoons that got nearly as many laughs from the adults as from the kiddies. Running time, 10 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

FIRE ALARM: Looney Tune—A good black and white cartoon.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

LONESOME TRAILER: El Brendel—A very good two-reel comedy with El Brendel. Clean and not slapstick, but very funny.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

ROMANCE OF THE WEST: Henry Armetta, Dorothy Dare, Phil Regan—This is a very unusual short in full color. It combines some very beautiful shots of the Grand Canyon, with good acting and singing. Far above the average, in fact, we have not seen a better short.—O. Ingmar Oleson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

ROMANCE OF THE WEST: Henry Armetta, Dorothy Dare, Phil Regan—In Technicolor. A stranded airplane party amid beautiful Western scenery. Can highly recommend it. Running time, 20 minutes.—H. Bettendorf, Opera House, Foley, Minn. Small town and country patronage.

SURPRISE: Duncan Sisters—Mighty good two-reel musical with comedy, dancing and singing. These Broadway Brevities are always good. Running time, 20 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

Serials

Burroughs - Tarzan

NEW ADVENTURE OF TARZAN, THE: Herman Brix—Playing the third episode of this serial and showing an increase at our weekend matinees.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Mascot

MYSTERY MOUNTAIN: Ken Maynard, Verna Hillie—Half way through and holding up fine.—H. Bettendorf, Opera House, Foley, Minn. Small town and country patronage.

Universal Sioux Falls Accounts Are Split

Thirty-six towns, until recently served through the Universal branch office at Sioux Falls, S. D., will be added to the Omaha branch office and served from there, according to Jerry Spandau, Omaha branch manager of the company.

Mr. Spandau's statement came upon the heels of an announcement from Universal's home office that the Sioux Falls branch was to be discontinued.

The towns served out of Sioux Falls have been divided and assigned to the Minneapolis and Omaha branch offices. Eddie Gruenberg, Sioux Falls manager, and one salesman, joined the Minneapolis branch as salesmen.

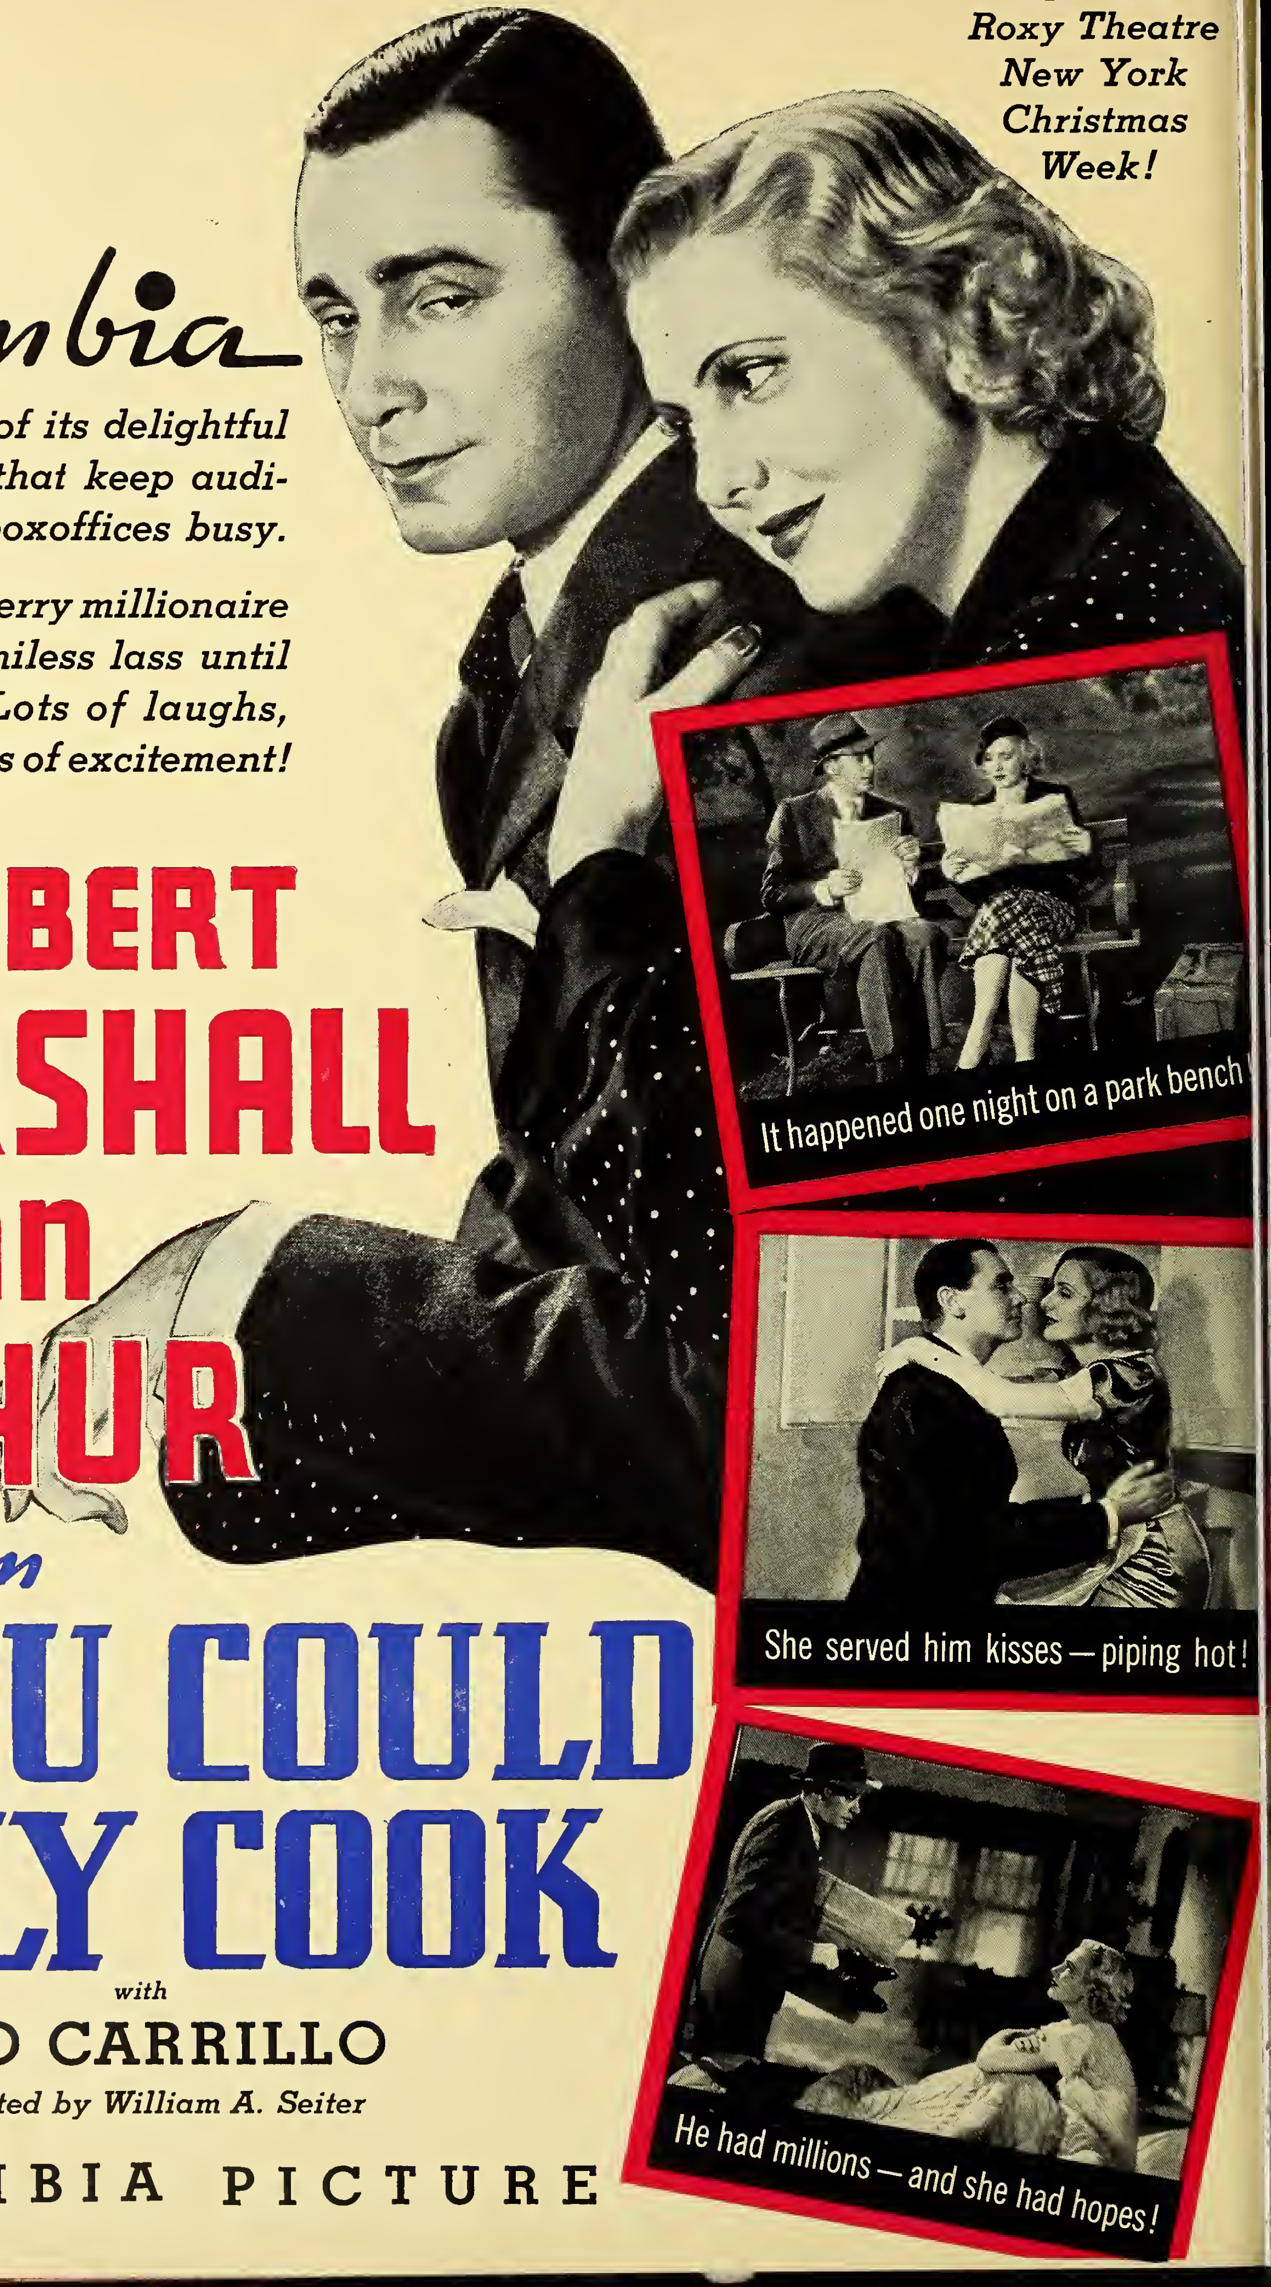
Columbia

has made another of its delightful comedy romances that keep audiences happy and boxoffices busy.

It's a gay tale of a merry millionaire who chased a penniless lass until she caught him. Lots of laughs, lots of surprises, lots of excitement!



It happened one night on a park bench!

She served him kisses—piping hot!

He had millions—and she had hopes!

A COLUMBIA PICTURE

J. C. JENKINS--HIS COLYUM

Lexington, Nebraska

Dear Herald:

This is one of those cold, rainy, snowy, disagreeable days that makes a man want to hit his grandmother with an ax, but fortunately the old lady isn't here and we don't have an ax, so we are in a good humor to kick the whey out of the house poodle, and that's one reason why we wouldn't want to be a dog. Fleas are another reason. But speaking of dogs, this skyoodle of ours is just the kind of dog the Government could use out on that "Shelterbelt." It would also make a pretty good crooner.

We stayed overnight in Chadron the other evening for three pretty good reasons, one being that there is a pretty good hotel there and another reason being that a fellow from our hometown runs the hotel and the third reason being that Chadron has a very lovely theatre operated by a very fine chap by the name of Cline, and this boy Cline is a son of a very good friend of ours who operates the theatre at Deadwood, South Dakota, and whose name is Cline also and who is one of the principal officers of the Black Hills Amusement Company, and after we met this boy Cline and met Clint and Bessie Robins who operate the theatre at Gordon for the Black Hills Amusement Company we are convinced that the Black Hills Amusement Company know how to pick good ones, but then we surmise that Leo Peterson of the Elks theatre at Rapid City, South Dakota, had something to do with it.

Hemingford is not so very far from the Wyoming line. Perhaps that's why Wyoming is such a good state (for sheep). We went into a cafe at Hemingford to get a hand-out and we found H. G. Drury, the manager of the Rozy theatre, trying to work Ed Loy, a Fox film salesman, to pay for his dinner (Drury ought to have known better than to try and get anything out of a film salesman).

Can't Fool Jaysee

It seems like about every time we go to Scotts Bluffs, Billy Ostenburg of the Egyptian theatre gets wind of it and chases off over to Denver. There's no doggone sense in a man doing that, we didn't want to touch him for a meal, but perhaps he was afraid we'd clean him up again on the golf course. Anyhow he was gone and we didn't get to see him, so we drove over to Torrington, Wyoming, to see our old friends Mr. and Mrs. McDonald, who operate the theatres at Crawford and Mitchell, Nebraska, and Torrington, Wyoming, but they were in bed and we didn't get to see them, which goes to show that we work while other people sleep (sometimes). Then we drove down to Morrell to call on Mr. Boston, who operates the theatre for Billy Ostenburg and a brother of Mr. Boston who looks after the Egyptain while Billy is out on the Platte River fishing for bullheads.

At Mitchell we ran across a couple of mighty fine folks we met one time at Hot Springs, S. D., who were operating the theatre there but who are now operating a theatre at Mitchell for Mr. McDonnald. If you ever go to Mitchell be sure to go and call on Mr. and Mrs. Harry Rodell and see their show. You will find it worth while, for they are excellent people and we'll betcha they have a good show too.

A Turkey Shoot

The sun sets about an hour later in Oshkosh than it does in Neligh, but in spite of that it was dark when we drove through the town and, as we wanted to get over to Ogallala, we didn't have time to call on our very good friends Mr. and Mrs. Jensen, who are related to Mrs. Zorn and family over in Julesburg, Colorado, some more swell friends of ours, and we had to step on the gas and didn't get over to Ogallala until the show had been opened at the Princess theatre and A. F. Kehn, the manager, had gone out to buy a couple of boxes of shells to go to a turkey shoot the next day. That boy is always doing something like that.

Then the next morning he came up to the hotel and had breakfast with us and he acted like he thought we were broke, for he insisted on paying for it. (It's funny how these boys can figure us out that way.) Then he took us out to where he is building a new theatre and if you want to see what a real theatre looks like you should go to Ogallala and see this one, for it will be the pride of the West when it is finished. Ogallala is where they hold a yearly rodeo and roundup and A.F. is the man who has everything to do to make the show a success except to bulldog the steers.

Bayard is the town where they hold annually a pageant similar to the Passion Play over in Oberammergau—or some town like that where they make Limburger cheese—and people from all over the country flock there to see it. It is staged out in the hills south of Bayard and they have something like two hundred in it and it is staged by the Methodist people and it has a very wide reputation. Bayard also has a couple of theatres. The Rex is operated by G. C. Luce and the Palm by Grove & Anderson.

We visited Mr. and Mrs. Luce when they were operating a theatre in Gering, Nebraska, and, strange as it may seem, they both remembered us when we called although we hadn't touched them for a nickel. They both seemed pleased that we called, so pleased, in fact, that they gave us a renewal of their subscription to the HERALD, with the understanding that we wouldn't steal it. Then we went and called on Mr. and Mrs. Anderson of the Palm and they knew us also, for Mrs. Anderson said she remembered that we called on them a couple of years ago when they were all torn up and moving. They also wanted the HERALD and gave us very warm invitation to come out there in June and attend the pageant, giving us an invitation to make their home our headquarters, and we want to tell you folks that that was pretty doggone nice of them. Maybe we can arrange to do it, and we want you to remember that when you are in Bayard to go to these theatres and see a good show and meet some swell people.

We wanted to call on the Goodall folks, who make the Goodall sound device, but they were closed up for the night and quite likely the whole office force were out to a bridge party or suthin, so we didn't get to see any of them, and that night we heard a crooner and an Airedale trying to see which could make the folks swear the most.

According to a report in a paper Mark Twain's "Prince and Pauper" was sold to the Edison company for $500 several years ago and the screen rights to it sold recently for $100,000, and if true it would indicate that the depression hadn't affected the screen very much or that old classic had grown in value with age. We've got two cars that cost a whole lot more than Mark got but they don't seem to improve with age that fast. Age makes a lot of difference, and maybe in a hundred years from now this Colyum may have some value, who knows?

CLEAR GAIN

THE photographic quality of Eastman Super X Panchromatic Negative is truly outstanding. Equally important, however, is the fact that the pronounced improvement which has been achieved involves no compromise. It does not mean the sacrifice or impairment of any other desirable or essential quality. It is clear gain for the industry, and for the public. Eastman Kodak Company, Rochester, N. Y. (J. E. Brulatour, Inc., Distributors, Fort Lee, New York, Chicago, Hollywood.)

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

WORTHY SACRIFICE

To the wonders of this age must be added the speed and dispatch with which morsels of Hollywood gossip and carefully guarded secrets of production are ferreted out, spread in the public prints and shouted over the radio.

The loneliest dweller in the wilderness needs no longer suffer the bitterness of isolation, no longer be denied glamour, romance, drama. Newspapers, fan magazines, the radio have combined to supply these missing ingredients, to make his lot happier. For whatever happens in Hollywood tonight is his for the asking in the morning.

He doesn't have to worry and bite his fingernails over how a battle scene, shipwreck, plane crash or double exposure was manipulated. Papers and magazines now obligingly detail the entire mechanism to the last nail and comma. Let a producer order retakes, a star greet his spouse with indifferent eye, a director battle the front office over script changes — sure enough, by the dawn's early light, the radio chatterers will pour the lowdown into his eager ears and syndicate columnists have it in print for his waiting eyes.

Even thinking for one's self as pertains to personal likes and dislikes in screen fare is unnecessary. For today publications of every nature with painful precision rate the worth of pictures with such dinguses as stars, letters, arrows and other fascinating gadgets.

It's all just too stupendous.

Has sufficient appreciation been given the regiments of volunteers who generously give much of their time, if not all of it, to the publicizing and broadcasting in every possible form, shape and manner of anything even remotely connected with the motion picture? And is it fair to stand by and see these kind and willing helpers devote so much attention solely to pictures?

Surely there are different important industries which would gladly welcome such splendid cooperation and enthusiasm, such eagerness to make public interesting trade secrets, marital difficulties and other tasty tidbits whispered behind hands. Would not the automobile manufacturers, for instance, just love to have newspapers rate the new models by stars or arrows so that the public would know which cars to buy and those to avoid?

Wouldn't they, though?

If only in justice to the rest of the nation's business there should be a willingness on the part of the picture industry to share the publicity spotlight with other lines of endeavor. Of course, any such procedure would lead eventually to less space in the public prints divulging motion picture production secrets and private affairs of film personalities.

Well, some sacrifice has to be made.

"WON'T BE—CAN'T BE"

More than once on this page have we had occasion under the above head to call attention to theatremen who, striving earnestly but unsuccessfully month after month, finally click to reach their hard-won goal of a Quigley plaque. In referring to these courageous showmen who refuse to recognize defeat or any part of it we have recalled those resounding words of the late Bill Roper, Princeton football coach and creator of that immortal phrase—"A man who won't be licked, can't be licked."

Gentlemen, we give you Les Pollock, enterprising manager of Loew's Theatre, Rochester, who since the early days of the Awards made bid after bid for top mention. Getting no further than listing in the Honorable Mention columns did not discourage this hard-hitter. He kept on smacking that line to crash through decisively for the Quigley November Silver.

It took Les almost two years to make the grade but because "he wouldn't, he couldn't" and that's your answer, folks. Pollock's dogged courage may well be offered as encouragement to those inclined to lay off the pace when the boxoffice going gets tough.

Going a bit theatre in newspaper copy, a New York department store advertised a coming sale with the line: "Saturday's Sensational Riot!" If the sale continued we wonder if the store's advertising manager was tempted to use the head: "Held Over. Second BIG Day."

Time sure do change. From Chicago comes the report of a theatre usher passing his examinations and receiving appointment to West Point. As we recall it, it wasn't so many years ago that West Pointers were taking examinations for appointment as ushers.

Loew Band and Bally In Macy Parade

The Thanksgiving Day parade arranged by Macy's in New York is an annual feature witnessed by millions, which was recognized by those Loew Theatres and MGM publicists who did a neat job of copping a lot of honors in this year's event.

Arranged by Eddie Dowden of Oscar Doob's staff was the promotion of the Loew Theatres Cadet Band of 125 pieces to lead the parade, accompanying photo showing the lads swinging down Broadway immediately ahead of one of the many animal balloons. Note eight-foot drum on wheels.

In line with these displays, Billy Ferguson, working with Ben Serkowich of the Capitol, had Tony Sarg, famed artist, create a 15-foot helium-filled Harpo Marx balloon for the parade to tie in on the "Night at the Opera" date. The boys also dug up an ancient tallyho, bannered it, and with a flock of Harpos riding on top tagged on to the end of the procession.

Ties Cross Word Puzzle To Theatre Contest

Instead of the usual prizes offered by newspapers for correct solutions of cross word puzzles, Paul Kunze, skipper of the Old Colony and Plymouth Theatres, Plymouth, Mass., ties in by offering cash and theatre tickets. In addition, contestants are requested to express their opinions on the service given at the theatres, quality of pictures, why they like to attend, etc. Including head, rules, space for name and address, the puzzle itself, followed by two column story on theatre comment and winners, paper devotes on an average of 30 free inches weekly to the stunt.

Puts on Autumn Drive

Kunze also reports successful inauguration of a "Screen Salute to Autumn" this drive for coming attractions with the unusual title used to get away from the usual Jubilee, Harvest, March, etc. Paul's "Salute" included first a page flash devoted to the new pictures, followed immediately by a double-truck of merchants' ads headed by a banner, "Plymouth's Screen and Merchandise Salute to a New Fall Season—Offered by the Interstate and Plymouth Theatres, Stores and Business Houses Below."

Kunze took space in the spread as did the other advertisers and to make it more interesting, 25 phone numbers were planted in the ads, guest tickets offered for those finding their numbers, clipping the ad and bringing it to the boxoffice of either theatre.

Final week in the campaign was featured by a front page spread of display ads and publicity topped with full page streamer. Kunze paid only for the ad space, the publicity being planted as the theatre's regular spread given by the paper.

Ace New York Drive For 'Dream Too Much'

Publicity tieups of the first water that netted lots of newspaper space in the metropolitan dailies were gathered on the Radio City Music Hall date for RKO Radio's "I Dream Too Much," Lily Pons' first starring picture. For instance, in the ceremonies formally retiring the last open-cockpit mail plane in active service held in the Rockefeller Center Plaza, Miss Pons was selected to present a plaque to the pilots who have been flying the little ships. The star spoke over a nationwide NBC hookup and the presentation was carried by the New York papers. Important aviation officials were among the guests at the ceremonies.

Photographs Star's Voice

On the eve of the opening, the first facsimile telegram on the new Western Union service was sent to New York from Buffalo, copy congratulating the star on her screen debut. Mats showing Miss Pons reading the message were distributed nationally and the picture was shown in all telegraph branch offices.

General Electric also tied in to create a lot of good publicity in the first public demonstration of the company's new process by which the voice is actually "seen" by means of light rays. Miss Pons volunteered to be the first subject, the registering of her voice witnessed by a gathering of scientists and technicians. Many stories were landed as a result of this stunt.

Smart Shops Cooperate

Commercial tieups were many featured by a hookin with prominent Fifth Avenue Lentheric perfume salon which dedicated a new scent to the star and introduced it at a reception and fashion show. Smart window display (see photo) further stressed this slant. Music hookups also were planted, shops plugging the hit tunes which were played on leading radio hours and a preview for newspaper music critics also being arranged.

Clothes slants also played a part in rounding out the campaign with reproductions of the star's wardrobe presented by Modern Merchandise Bureau for Cinema Shop distribution, Macy's in New York arranging a special floor display of the fashions and accessories.

Entire campaign was arranged under the supervision of Hazel Flynn at the Music Hall in cooperation with S. Barret McCormick and his staff.

Granara Offers 'Oaklies' On "Annie Oakley"

For lobby angle in advance of "Annie Oakley" at the RKO Keith Memorial, Boston, publicity head, Jack Granada worked out a target stunt (see photo) with patrons invited to test their marksmanship via radio target apparatus. Film flashed on small screen from box staggered by copy on picture and followed by bull's-eye slides. Machinery in box indicated direct hit.

Copy of poster below wall screen read as follows: "Free—try your skill—hit the bull's-eye and get an Annie Oakley."

POLLOCK, WHITAKER NOVEMBER WINNERS

Rochester Loew Manager Takes Down Quigley Silver Plaque; L. & J. Atlantan Voted Bronze

Besides being distinguished as next to the last month of the 1935 Quigley Awards, November stands out because of the winning by Manager Les Pollock, Loew's Rochester, N. Y., by the judges' majority vote of the Quigley Silver for his excellent campaign on MGM's "Mutiny On the Bounty."

And not far behind for second honors comes E. E. Whitaker, Lucas and Jenkins, Atlanta, Ga., City Manager, who did a very fancy job on Paramount's "So Red the Rose" at the Fox, that brought him the Quigley November Bronze.

Pollock's winning is in the nature of a triumph, for Les started out on the Quigley plaque trail way back in 1934, and though his entries were sound and showmanly he never got up to the peak. But this Round Tabler kept right on top of the ball and smashed through in the November competitions with a bang-up entry that could not be denied.

"Whit" is another theatreman who has been training his sights upon the Quigley target for some time and finally found the range to split the bullseye for the Bronze plaque. His sterling showmanship on "Rose" briefly described in the issue of Nov. 23 was a fine job of work which the judges selected for second honors.

Three First Mentions are awarded for November, two of the winners, Ken Grimes and Herb Morgan, previously landing plaques, and F. L. Frechette, for the second consecutive month voted a "First." Ken had Morgantown, West Va., on its ear with his campaign on "Mutiny" and Herb did a lot of high-powered boxoffice things in Baltimore for "Night at the Opera." All "Firsts" and "Honorables" are listed in column to left and the Sheepskin Certificates go forward to the winners.

Newcomers Win Honorables

Of the 13 entrants taking the Honorable Mentions, nine are first-timers and this, coupled with the fact that last month all the Firsts and Honorables were voted to newcomers evidently indicates more and more interest in the Quigley Competitions by theatremen in various situations who in the past have not yet been represented. As usual, independents as well as circuit managers are listed.

About three big weeks remain in December, the last month in which to get those Quigley entries in to qualify for the Big Trip by air to Hollywood, where the 1935 Grand Awards are to be presented.

As previously announced, it is planned to put on fitting ceremonies at the studios to honor the fortunate theatremen and in addition to the presentation festivities, a week of entertainment is also in the cards. This will comprise sightseeing, visits to the different "lots" to see pictures in production and plenty of other pleasant surprises.

Deadline for December is set for midnight of Saturday, Jan. 4, 1936. January winners will be announced in the issue of Jan. 11.

See those folks in the photo above? They're on their way by TWA in the same kind of Douglas Skyliner which will carry the two Grand Award winners out to Studioland as guests of your Round Table. All theatremen voted the 1935 monthly Silver and Bronze plaques are eligible for the air trip. Are you a-comin'?

IMPRESSIVE. Distinctly out of the ordinary and highly impressive was the lobby flash on "The Crusades," part of the fine campaign put on at the Grand Theatre, Shanghai, by Managing Director R. K. Butler and Manager H. Sonnleitner. Note ingenious use of stills on giant swords and shields. Other top stunts were 76-sheet size poster covering front and prominent window in largest local department store.

Vitaphone Ties Nationally On Billiard Short

Powerful lot of exploitation has been arranged by Vitaphone for the single reel short "P's and Cues," billiard short featuring Ruth McGinnis, woman's pocket billiard champ, and Charles Peterson, world's trick shot expert. Short has been released simultaneously with National Billiard Week and the opening in New York of the championship tournament. Brunswick-Balke-Collender are cooperating by distributing two-color posters on the "week" to all billiard academies, churches and other organizations maintaining billiard facilities. Posters all mention the picture and folder on this is also available.

Warner Brothers' exchanges have been advised to cooperate in arranging personal appearances at theatres in key situations by touring champions and exploitation suggestions point out advantages of tiein with leading billiard academies for instructions, amateur contests, in addition to merchant tieup such as sporting goods stores, etc.

THE THEATRE WITH 102 USHERS

Radio City Music Hall Called a City Within Itself; Total of 689 Employees Make Up Personnel

GUS S. EYSSELL, Round Tabler, long-time and well-known theatreman, is secretary of the Radio City Music Hall Corp., and assistant to W. G. Van Schmus, president and managing director. In addition to his duties that have to do with every angle of operation, Gus also represents Mr. Van Schmus, in welcoming visiting theatremen from all over the world. And there are many visitors for it is natural for showmen to want a close-up of a 6200-seat theatre that has a stage company of 350, uniformed service staff of 102, and orchestra of 75, among other things. What the visitors see is detailed by the genial Eyssell and set down for the information of readers interested in the low-down on the operation of this internationally known theatre.

Of a recent afternoon, there were gathered in the office of Gus Eyssell, an exhibitor, a theatre owner from Holland, a manager from Tokyo, and an exhibitor from Dallas, Texas, a representative cross-section of showmen from most everywhere who while in New York, make for the Music Hall.

They were on hand to see what and who made the wheels go round and this seeing of course, called for a complete tour of the theatre structure, a journey that can take anywhere from two to four hours. A man's wind evidently has to be in pretty good shape.

Starting with the modernistic reception room on the studio floor, there is a fully-equipped kitchen in which luncheon is prepared each Friday noon for department heads of the theatre. Here, the weekly new show is discussed—change day being Thursday. Over this luncheon, Mr. Van Schmus, the theatre's managing director presides. After luncheon, the wheels swing into action. Costumes are made, settings designed, new musical scores rehearsed, dance routines outlined—two permanent dancing ensembles are maintained, the Rockettes, 36 world-famous precision dancers and the corps de ballet of thirty-two.

Two private preview rooms are constantly in operation. As soon as a new picture arrives, the executive staff of the theatre is notified and after screenings opinions are carefully checked.

Maintains Dormitories

The Music Hall also maintains sleeping dormitories equipped with 25 beds. Here, dancers and artistics appearing in the stage shows may spend the night if early morning rehearsals or long train trips make it inadvisable for them to go to their homes.

In the projection rooms, above the Music Hall's three mezzanines, 13 projectionists (three to a shift) operate the six machines. The projection rooms are banked on both sides by the spotlight booths, where lighting effects for the stage shows are housed. Eight men are required to operate them.

Backstage, is a fully-equipped hospital with a doctor and two nurses in attendance. With 689 employes and 22,000 patrons visiting the theatre each day, it is conceivable, of course, that mishaps may occur. However, it is Mr. Van Schmus' belief that an ounce of prevention is worth a ton of hospitals, and every possible precaution is taken against injury of any kind to any patron or employee.

The stage, itself, is a city-block wide, and on each side of it are seven stories of dressing rooms and production department offices. The 350 members of the stage company also have their recreation rooms here. They have their own athletic association, to which all staff members belong, sponsoring a baseball and basketball team, camera club, bowling and handball team, and a national flyweight champion boxer, Georgie Coyle, who is a member of the ushers' staff.

On the great roof of the theatre, a playground terrace has become one of the most unusual spots in Manhattan. In the summer, in sunshine and open air, all manner of athletics are played.

Most theatre men have read and heard of the modern mechanics of the Music Hall's stage, but they are interested to learn that it takes 45 stage hands to work one of the shows, whether the show lasts ten or ninety minutes.

The theatre maintains its own scenic, production and costume departments. Another bustling spot is the costume room, where 40 seamstresses turn out costumes for the new show. The Music Hall has its own broadcasting studio, accommodating 300 where each Sunday afternoon, a program advertising the theatre's attractions and offering symphonic and operatic music is broadcast over a national network.

Fred A. Cruise, ace theatre manager, is in charge of house operation and the uniformed staff of 102. Assistant managers are always at hand in the grand foyer to talk to patrons. All complaints are noted, answered and filed. Cruise installed a paging system in the grand lounge of the Music Hall, whereby patrons may be paged at any time for telephone calls or other messages.

Underneath the auditorium of the theatre, are the quarters for ushers, doormen and cashiers. A tailor shop is operated there where uniforms are kept spotlessly clean and pressed, and shirts and collars for each usher's four sets of uniforms cared for. A cafeteria is open day and night and back stage, too, are lockers, showers, clubrooms for musicians, electricians, carpenters and property men.

The Music Hall, in truth, is a city within itself.

Klondike Miner Sells "Wild" for Steinbuch

For his street bally on "Call of the Wild" Everett Steinbuch, publicist at Loew's State, Cleveland, dressed man as Klondike miner with carpet bag properly labeled and copy on his back, cigars, boots, etc., who passed out small cards printed in gambling hall fashion reading "I live on the screen at," etc., etc.

Through tieup with ice cream company, large cakes of ice in which stills with copy and pennies were frozen. Kids hung around display waiting for the ice to melt, at which there was a grand scramble for the coins. An original Alaskan bannered sleigh drawn by famous dog "Balto" toured streets and beauty shop featured window with stills of Loretta Young and picture copy.

On "Dark Angel," Ev tied in with department store who featured window of Red Cross shoes as worn by Oberon, together with blowup of page cut of her from Vogue. Doorknob hangers were used in pay stations, good morning stickers on hotel papers and travel cards featured in shop windows.

Frank's Testimonial Letter

Abe Frank, Lyric Theatre, Camden, N. J. recently received a letter from the head of the English Department of one of the high schools thanking him for courtesies extended on seeing "The Dream" and praising the picture highly. Abe's division, incidentally, was one of the most outstanding in the sale of tickets for the show.

Boston Paper Sponsors "Dream" Voting Idea

Many were the smart slants on Warners' "Dream" at the Majestic, Boston, reported by publicist Harry Brown, Jr., but most unusual was the ballot angle sponsored by local daily in which patrons were invited to cast cinema ballots on whether or not they considered the "Dream" more than an ordinary picture and whether or not they wanted more Shakespeare plays and other classics on the screen.

Brown arranged publicity, including page one on this for 14 consecutive days and with it an entire page or roto stuff, editorials on two different days and center of Sunday layouts for four weeks. Ballots were printed with the above questions and distributed at the theatre with thousands of votes reported.

Well ahead, cooperation was arranged to show special trailer at 50 M and P theatres in addition to Warner houses in the New England territory on the Boston engagement, each manager furnished with advertising and reservation blanks. To encourage the theatremen special cash prizes were offered for those selling most tickets.

The general approach included the active assistance of Governor Milliken, who participated in the formation of a Boston Committee of prominence which included representation in every group. Special previews were held for the committee and featured also in making important contacts was Dr. Burton, who appeared before leading clubs and associations, to discuss the picture.

General publicity was quite extensive with all papers concerned, outstanding being the society columns reported cracked for the first time in Boston for a picture premiere. This included photos of prominent debs who posed in original costumes from the picture promoted from the studios. Brown used these additionally in landing prominent window (see photo) well ahead.

Gould Puts on Amateur Nights at Camerphone

S. W. Gould, Cameraphone Theatre, Pittsburgh, Pa., has recently successfully put over a series of amateur nights sponsored by Sears, Roebuck Company. Store plugged contest over their radio programs, featured it in window displays and cards distributed in their offices. Company paid for ads plugging the series and prizes were presented to winners decided on by audience applause. Gould secured a raft of publicity when various papers picked up the story and devoted space to it.

NEWS NOTES FROM CHICAGO SECTOR

THE united efforts of all motion picture people in Chicago are at work to make the Movie Christmas Basket Parties an outstanding success. The special shows which will be held in all Chicago film houses the morning of Dec. 23, will, it is believed, bring happiness to thousands of Chicago families.

Admission to these special shows will be by foodstuffs. These foodstuffs will then be made up into baskets and the food distributed to those in need who reside in the neighborhood of the theatre where the food is collected. Film for the matinees will be supplied free to the theatres by the distributors, a liberal amount of advertising has been donated by the local papers, and publicity matter has been arranged through the CAPA organization. Jack Miller, chairman of the committee in charge, reports that both independent and circuit theatres are going for the idea one hundred per cent.

H. A. Ross, head of the Ross Federal Service, was a Chicago visitor last week. Most of his time was spent conferring with Walter Brown, local manager, and with film row executives.

Since the appointment of Charles H. Miller as general sales manager for Superior Pictures in Milwaukee, Indianapolis, St. Louis and Chicago, sales of First Division Pictures have taken a decided upswing, according to an announcement made by J. N. Jovaney, president of the company. Several circuit deals have been closed for the product and many independent deals have reached the dotted line stage.

Capt. John B. Craig, cameraman, traveler and lecturer, is appearing in this territory with films which he has made in his exciting career. Craig is showing a collection of his cuttings from many major films, entitled, "Making Thrill Shots for Films." After showing the films Craig explains how they were made.

Many big names have been signed for stage appearances in loop picture houses for the coming weeks. Among the ones to appear at the Chicago theatre will be Burns and Allen, Veloz and Yolanda, Libby Holman, Fred Waring, with his band, and others. Booked at the Palace is a revue from the Hollywood Cabaret, Bill Hogan and orchestra, Judith Allen and husband Jack Doyle, Wayne King and his orchestra, and Clyde Beatty and his animal act. The majority of these stellar attractions have been booked for the holiday season.

Mrs. B. J. Bennett of the Rialto theatre in Pekin, was a film row caller last week. She reports business very good downstate.

We had a nice talk with Ernst Lubitsch the other day while the Paramount men were in conference here and he disclosed many new plans Paramount had for the coming year. Most pertinent among the things he discussed were the following:

Instead of telling Paramount salesmen what product they would have to sell, this sales meeting was called to show them. Six completed pictures and cuts from those near completion were screened, and the sales chief learned first hand what they had to offer the exhibitor. The salesmen, he stated, agreed that the product now on hand was the best Paramount had had in years.

Lubitsch also told the salesmen, and his remarks were without superlatives, that all forthcoming Paramount pictures would be made with their box office value the first consideration. He said that the "Lubitsch touch" would from now on be a "box office" rather than an "artistic" touch.

The famous director also pointed out that Paramount has many new stars in the developing stage and that by teaming them with stars who were already established he felt that soon the studio talent list would be filled with valuable names, and names, he said, were the most important factor in box office pictures.

Asked if Paramount planned to make the picture "Buffalo Bill," Lubitsch said the company was undecided. He said that some exhibitors wanted it, others were not so interested. He asserted that if it were made, the plans called for the story to be about Buffalo Bill's early life and his exploits with that other famous plainsman, Wild Bill Hickok. Suggested as leads for this picture were Gary Cooper as the young Bill Cody and Fred McMurray as his partner, Wild Bill Hickok. The picture would be similar in background to "The Virginian."

John Clark, sales chief for Twentieth Century-Fox, has been here for the past several days conferring with Clyde Eckhardt on sales plans for the coming year. Several deals pending were also taken care of while the sales executive was present.

Last week was a busy one for the Santa Fe. Travelers to and from the coast included Joe E. Brown, Mike Frankovich, Margaret Ettinger, Natalie Kalmus, Ernst Lubitsch, Bill Pine, Watterson Rothacker, Jack Trop, Jean Muir, Leo Spitz and Gene Autry. Chicagoans who spent several days in New York included Aaron Sapperstein, Ben Judell and Henri Ellman.

When Eddie Fontaine is not extolling the virtues of Paramount pictures, he spends his time telling of the latest exploits of Raymond Fontaine, his two-weeks-old son.

The National Bridge Tourney was held at the Stevens Hotel last week and with such stars as Ely Culbertson in the play, it drew much attention. Joe E. Brown, in town between trains, decided to take a look at the tourney during his spare time. Casually dropping in, Joe precipitated a small riot when many of the players left their cards to get his autograph. Culbertson took time off to tell the gathering that Joe was one of Hollywood's best when it came to card playing, and Joe admitted that Culbertson was "pretty good" too. Joe was invited to join the play, but decided that he couldn't take the time off to do it. He did play a hand for the lads, though, and showed them his new "psychic bid" system, which, he says, is much the same as the one he uses when he picks racehorses. Incidentally, he won—both at bridge that day and on the horse he had selected, which, by the way, was named "Sleepy Joe."

A 17-week sales drive called "Our Big Twelve Drive," will be started by Paramount January 1. Neil Agnew, newly appointed sales chief, will make a tour around the country visiting the various exchanges on behalf of this drive. He plans to leave New York January 2 to begin his tour, which will take several weeks.

Ethel Merman stopped over between trains and took the time to tell newshounds how swell Eddie Cantor's picture, "Strike Me Pink," was going to be.

Plans for making the WLS Barn Dance feature filmusical have been delayed again. The feminine star of the show is expecting a "blessed event" in the near future, and picture making is being postponed for the time being.

Gene Autry, Western star, was in town for a few hours the other day. He plans to make some personal appearances here before returning to the Coast for picture work. With him was Smiley Burnett, composer and actor. Autry won his first theatrical fame with the WLS Barn Dance show.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attra ctions." Running times are those supplied by the companies. Asterisk indicates running time as made known by West Coast studio before announcement by home office in New York. Variations also may be due to local censorship deletions. Dates are 1935, unless otherwise specified. Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1935-36 season.

OVER 3000 SUPREX TYPE ARCS ARE NOW IN OPERATION

IS YOUR THEATRE SUPREX EQUIPPED?

THE Suprex High Intensity Arc has been acclaimed as "the outstanding achievement of years" in the field of motion picture projection.

The development of this improved type of carbon arc by the National Carbon Company Research Laboratories puts High Intensity Projection within the economic reach of theatres of every size.

The advantages of High Intensity Projection are:

A snow white light that gives clarity and depth to black and white productions, and natural color values in color features and sequences.

A brilliancy of screen illumination which allows sufficient supplementary lighting in the theatre for comfortable vision from the moment of entrance.

NATIONAL
CARBONS

Take advantage of the patronage drawing power of this superior projection light

SUPREX CARBONS

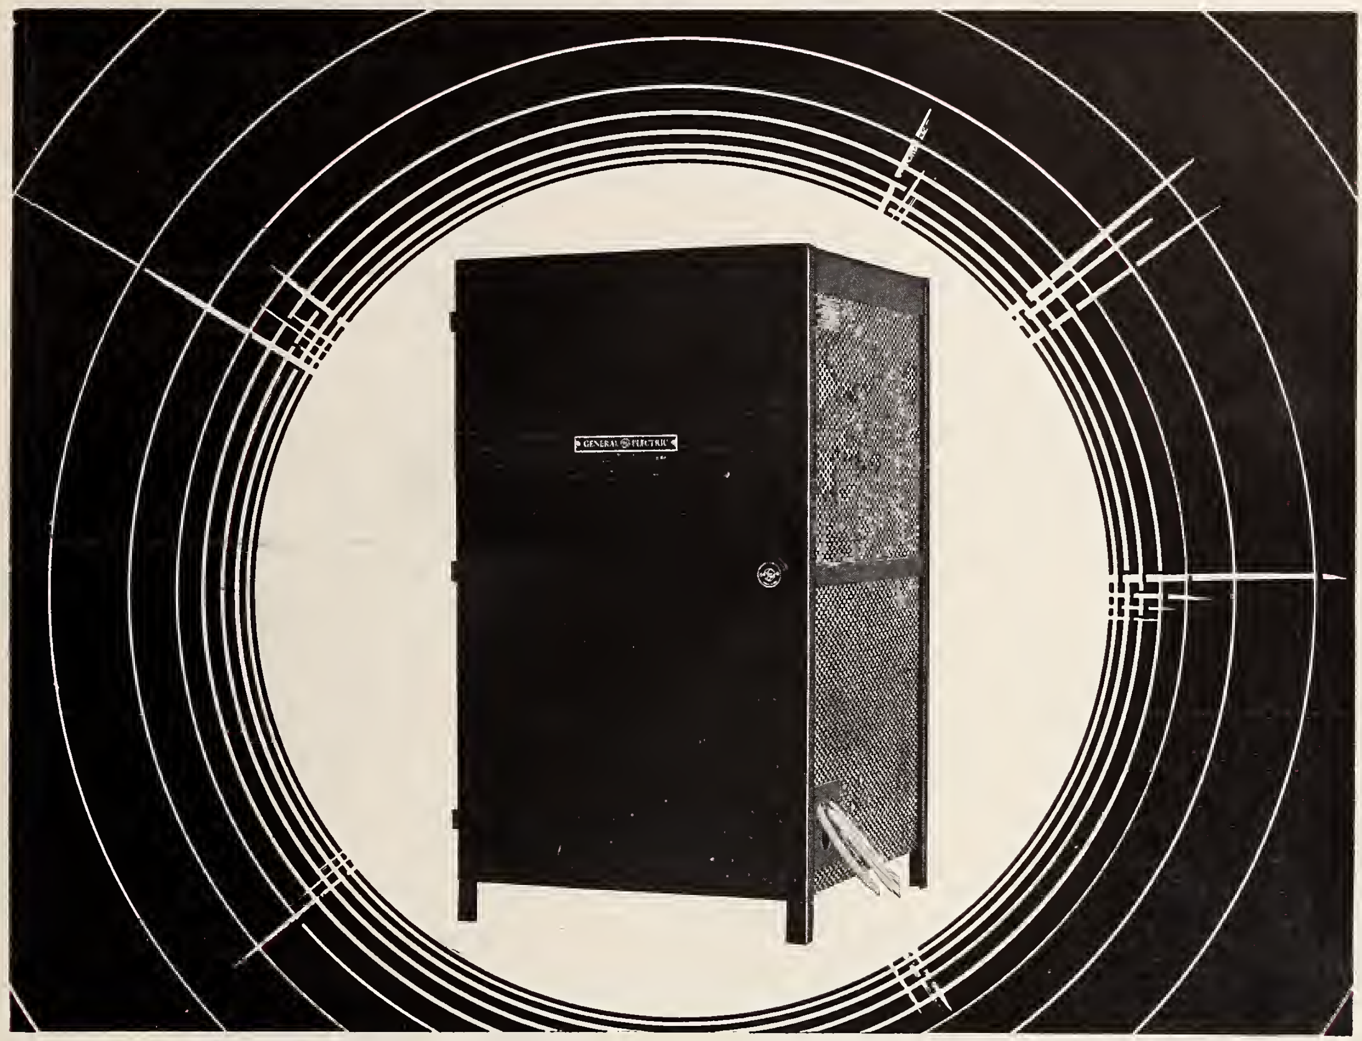
THERE IS A NATIONAL PROJECTOR CARBON FOR EVERY PROJECTION LAMP



New G-E COPPER OXIDE RECTIFIER IMPROVES PROJECTION EFFICIENCY

This new General Electric Copper Oxide Rectifier is especially designed to meet the requirements of projection lamps using the new Suprex carbons. It is a rectifying device of proven reliability, safety and economy. The G-E Copper Oxide Rectifier operates indefinitely without attention or replacement. The three-unit transformer for three-phase, full-wave rectification delivers extremely smooth output.

Great operating flexibility is provided by line voltage taps and secondary taps for adjustments in line voltage, arc voltage, and current. This wide range of adjustments meets all individual operating needs.

The G-E Copper Oxide Rectifier is available in two sizes: 40-50 amperes for the 6-7 mm. trim and 40-65 amperes for the 6.5-8 mm. trim. The overall efficiency of both is 70 per cent. Such high efficiency saves from 5 to 10 cents per hour in cost of current over other types of D-c. power equipment. Mail the coupon today for complete information on this G-E Copper Oxide Rectifier.

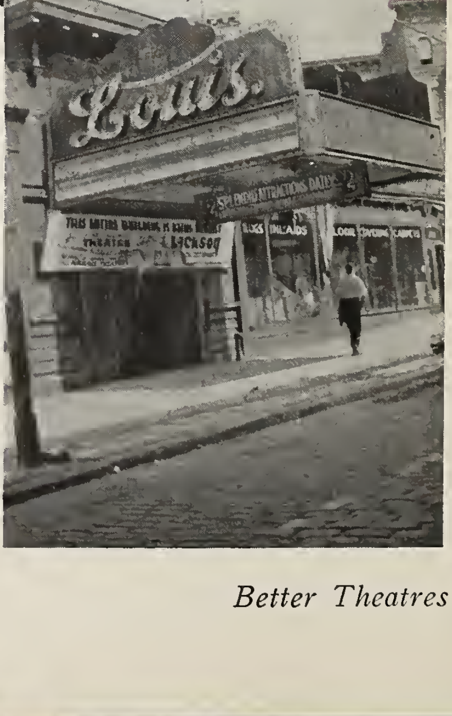
Low-Cost Front for a Theatre Charging Low Admission Prices



● The front sketched was conceived for construction at a cost of $2,600. The design was made for the Jackson theatre, formerly the Louis, in New York City, the original exterior of which is shown at right. The theatre is located in a neighborhood of extremely small incomes. The design, which is by Ben Schlanger, New York architect, calls for a marquee and marquee super-structure of galvanized sheet metal. The marquee ceiling extends in the outer lobby. The display frame background is enamelled on pressed wood. Continuous lines of neon tubes give the marquee movement and color. The Jackson is owned and operated by Louis L. Harris.

Theatres Fight Strict Ban on Standees

THE RECENT warning that the law against theatre standees and the blocking of lobbies will be enforced by the Massachusetts Department of Public Safety is in certain instances justified, certain theatremen admit. Theatre overcrowding is becoming almost as bad in spots, according to these individuals, as that at political rallies and beano parties. Almost but not quite. At a recent beano party in the fire house of a Boston suburb, the fire engines were moved into the street to make room for the players.

Acting upon the instructions of Commissioner Paul G. Kirk of the Department of Public Safety, who is in further close contact with film business because of his duties of supervising Sunday censorship in the Bay State, George C. Parsons, chief of inspectors for the department, ordered his inspectors to clamp down on theatre overcrowding.

"The many complaints that have reached this department concerning the overcrowding of aisles and lobbies and the blocking of exits," Parson stated, "indicate that this condition constitutes a serious menace to the safety of the public. I am much more interested in taking steps to prevent a possible disaster than I am in investigating the causes of one that has occurred."

One of the principal complaints is the use of lobbies for the display of merchandise or other materials, thus tending to obstruct proper egress.

Heavy spot attendance, brought about by premium nights of all sorts, is held to be mainly responsible for the clamping down on safety enforcements. Inspectors are demanding that theatres shall not be filled beyond their seating capacities. This, incidently, is causing boom days for the second-hand portable seat dealers in this territory.

The penalty for failure to comply with the present state order will result in the revocation of the license of the offending theatre, according to officials.

Theatremen, on the other hand, claim that strict enforcement of the letter of the law will seriously damage theatre business which is on the upgrade after a number of dull years. E. M. Loew, for instance, the operator of the largest independent theatre circuit in New England, has particularly protested the recent move which is said to be an action against better business. In company with Joseph Brennan of the MPTOA, Loew, who is now a member of Allied, has visited State officials in an effort to gain relief. It is claimed that his houses have been hit particuarly hard by the action.

"It's something refreshingly new," comments one exhibitor, "when theatre overcrowding in Massachusetts becomes a problem."

Perhaps the opinion of the average exhibitor on the present problem is best represented in a statement given to BETTER THEATRES by Frank Lydon, operator of the Hamilton Theatre in Dorchester and a former member of the Code Authority here.

"When certain theatre owners become so greedy that they jeopardize the welfare of others, it's time for the Department of Public Safety to take action as it is paid by the taxpayers to do," Lydon said. "Unreasonable overcrowding is unnecessary. The way to do away with it is by shifting programs around and by spotting extra shows."

What Kind of People Make Up Our Public?

THE MOTION PICTURE is the principal form of popular entertainment today, basing its appeal on the interests of average people, average families. What, then, is an average person, an average family?

Mr. Wilford L. White, chief of the marketing research and service division of the U. S. Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, has attempted a picture of both, using figures compiled by his department and other investigating agencies.

From his address before the retail merchants' section of the Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce, we learn first of all that the average family and average individual of today represents a great change from a generation or so ago. The family contains but two or three children, it lives in smaller houses or apartments, it buys in smaller quantities, it buys more selectively.

The average individual is older. With a declining birth rate, the percentage of young people in our population is diminishing, while a declining death rate is increasing the number of elderly people. In about 25 years from now 40% of the population will be 40 years old or older. Youth, so catered to since the war, seems to have had its fling.

And where do these average people live? The trend of population movement toward the great cities has been going on for a long time, of course; this is continuing. But there is something of a counter-movement, also, for Mr. White's statistics show that suburban areas have been growing at a much faster rate than the cities themselves. This means that they are moving farther away from great centralized business sections, increasing the importance of neighborhood sections and small outlying communities as factors in the merchandising of goods and services regularly used.

The movement toward cities has been at the expense of the rural areas. Even the small towns have been growing, which would seem to be placing theatres within the convenient reach of a greater portion of the population.

Mr. White referred to a tendency among business men today to base their merchandising methods on "selective selling"—to relate production and marketing specifically and restrictively to consumers with incomes which have been deliberately chosen as a primary market.

The primary market of the motion picture is probably destined by the function of the art and the financial requirements for its commercialization to remain one embracing the vast majority of the population. Employing figures for 1929, which would have to be scaled down to make them more representative of conditions obtaining today, Mr. White presented a tabulation showing that 97.7% of the nation's families had incomes under $10,000 that year. Of these 38.2% had incomes between $2,000 and $10,000, while 59.5% had incomes of less than $2,000 a year.

Pix Theatre Opens; New Type of House

THE OPENING of the Pix theatre in White Plains, N. Y., has brought into actual operation a distinctly new type of motion picture theatre, in architectural and technical plan, in administration and to some extent, in point of view. It seats but 300, is of semi-prefabricated construction, and employs strictly functional principles in its architectural design.

This house, which was described in the July 27th issue of BETTER THEATRES, is operated by Pix Theatres, Inc., of New York, which company is headed by John S. Clark, Jr. It is the first of a proposed group of theatres of the same plan and type which the company hopes to establish through the sale of franchises.

The White Plains theatre is regarded as to some extent an experimental house in which the operating methods conceived by Mr. Clark and his associates will be tried out. The policy there calls for an admission price of 25 cents in the afternoon, and 55 cents at night. The theatre is under the management of "Sedge" Coppock, with L. D. MacGonigal as his assistant. [This first Pix theatre will be pictured and comprehensively described, as completed in the January 11th issue of Better Theatres.]

The Pix theatre has a width of 35 feet, and a depth of 95 feet. Construction is largely of concrete blocks, and the architecture is functional—that is to say, the form of the building, and its architectural provisions, follow severly the requirements represented in seating, acustics, projection, air-conditioning, vision, traffic, operating routine and so on. The architects are Bianculli & Ghiani, with Ben Schlanger as associate.

To a depth of 16 feet from the sidewalk, the construction is entirely of concrete blocks, which are faced with stucco. The remainder of the building is constructed of concrete piles supporting steel roof trusses, and between the piiles, of concrete blocks laid to the cornice, which form the walls.

This main section houses the auditorium. The forward stuccoed section houses the box office, entrance vestibule, lobby, a manager's office, toilet rooms and, on a mezzanine level over the lobby, the projection room.

The front is without ornament—a plain white stucco surface relieved only by a small marquee, a theatre name sign, and a shallow indentation along the lower part where the entrance and two sets of double doors are located. This forward section takes on an eccentric form owing to strict adherence to a functional design.

Construction Active in San Francisco

SEVERAL EXTENSIVE theatre building and remodeling projects are under way in San Francisco and theatres in nearby communities that have been dark are being reopened. More activity along these lines is being noted than in several years.

The most ambitious project under way is that of San Francisco Theatres, Inc., of which Samuel H. Levin is president, for the erection of a theatre at Geary and Arguello Boulevards to represent an investment of $250,000. This concern operates a group of eight of the larger neighborhood theatres in San Francisco and is affiliated with the T. & D. Jr. and Golden State Theatre circuits, operating more than 60 theatres.

Aaron Goldberg, operating four small theatres in downtown San Francisco, has purchased the Pompeii Theatre, 1044 Market street from the Markowitz interests and will make extensive alterations before reopening the house.

Work has commenced on the remodeling of the New Fillmore Theatre, on Fillmore street, one of the city's largest neighborhood houses. The house will be virtually rebuilt, the features of the new playhouse to be a new foyer and lobby and an entirely new lounge and balcony section.

Charles Michaels, owner of the Kearney theatre, will reopen this house, following extensive rebuilding. The theatre has been closed for some time because of fire damage.

A motion picture theatre is to be built at Mariposa and operated under the direction of Frank Beck. The San Andreas Theatre at San Andreas, in the Mother Lode country, is to be reopened by Clarence Evans, and plans are being made by Joe Kenneaster for the reopening of the Rex Theater at Clovis.

A demonstration in voice photography at the General Electric exposition in New York. Lily Pons, opera star who is now appearing on the screen in her first motion picture, RKO Radio's "I Dream Too Much," is shown singing into a microphone for the first public demonstration of a new electrical process which simultaneously records and photographs a voice. Hers, of course, made a perfect picture.

New Specifications For 2,000-Foot Reel

WITH THE assurance of the adoption of a 2,000-foot reel by the distributors on April 1, the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences and the committee representing the distributors have only to determine the exact specifications of the reel. Those now under consideration place the diameter at 15 inches, instead of 15½ inches.

The Council predicts that it will be necessary to provide for 1,000-foot changeovers for only one year after adoption of the 2,000-foot size. It is recommended that exchanges requiring 1,000-foot reel releases, break the print down into lengths of approximately 1,000 feet and place appropriate changeover marks at correct positions on the reel ends.

Specifications of the reel as now submitted are being sent to all reel manufacturers. [A diagram of this reel is reproduced in this issue on page 28.]

B & K Adds 850-Seat Suburban Theatre

BALABAN & KATZ, Chicago circuit, has purchased the old Hoyburn building in Evanston and will compltely remodel it. When the work is done the two lower floors will house a modern 850-seat theatre while the two upper floors will be divided up in office space. The building was previously an office biulding with part of the space used as a theatre. The theatre, however, has been dark since 1928.

Work will start on the building about January 1, and the theatre will be opened sometime next spring. It will be of modern design and the latest improvements in theatre building will be used. Cost of the improvements are estimated at $120,000.

B & K's plans for a theatre at Belmont and Central Avenues, Chicago, are progressing and this new house will also be opened next spring.

AN EDITORIAL WHICH INSISTS THAT WHAT THE THEATRE NEEDS MOST IS SERIOUS ATTENTION

WHAT OF THE coming year, now almost upon us? Improved economic conditions cannot tell the whole story for the theatre business. Much depends upon conditions within the theatres themselves.

Young hearts once entered the business and were inspired—yes, carried away with the idea that ushers become managers, and managers become district or division managers, only to be worn out and cracked down, disillusioned, or in some cases broken. Middle age has fought its battles, but finally was forced to give way to the most enterprising and affluent "yes sir" type of youth. The older heads of the industry, through a great period of prosperity, surrounded themselves with executive cabinets so closely guarded by another circle of secretaries that those who built the industry were completely isolated from the homely touch or criticism of the manager in the field or even the public, except as weight or pressure was added by the trade press.

The business pressed into the hands of the distributors who dictated the policy to the studios, told the theatre man what pictures he could run (if any), established the price of admission and told the exhibitor what price he would pay for his pictures; the distribution branch even told the exhibitor on what days of the week he would or could run a certain picture.

Theatres owned or operated by companies in the distributing business served only as an outlet for pictures for that distributor, and so long as they did not lose too much money and the distribution company made plenty it was okay for the theatre to take the hindmost part of the deal. Under this policy men with experience in selling pictures became heads of circuits, operated huge groups of theatres, and in general, those with a background in distributing film, from trailers and shorts to feature pictures and newsreels became, so-to-speak, the oracle of the business. They knew all the answers and were to lead us out of the wilderness.

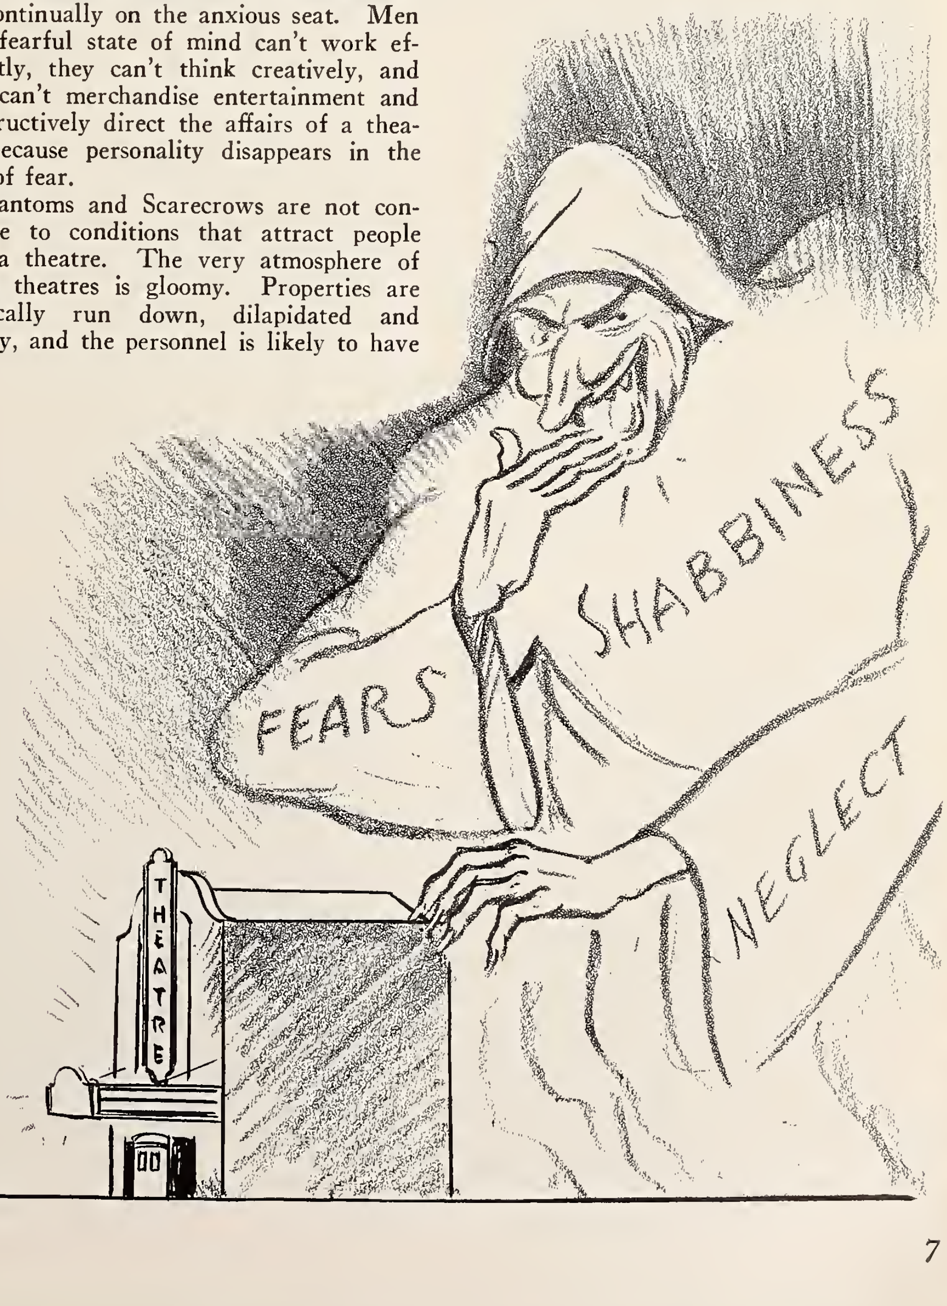
These phantoms of the pre-depression era and the early stages of the depression are largely being displaced by large money interests. A host of names appear behind these "large money interests"—shadows becoming phantoms of "a new epoch" in motion pictures. Speculation "is rife" among the rank and file, and rumors still "run riot" and play havoc in the grand guessing contest as to who is the next "big shot" that the theatre manager must sell himself and his abilities to.

The money syndicates have immediately become intrigued with Hollywood and production, and it still looks as if the theatres and theatre managers are to be the red-headed step-children of the industry. The theatres of the country make the money for the entire industry; and the general public (if we are to take the object lesson of last winter seriously) are going to have a hand in the kind of pictures to be made. Why, then, can't the phantoms come out on the daylight for general recognition, and serious attention be directed toward theatre management and personnel?

Phantoms produce fears. Today the ranks of theatre employes are more fearful than ever before. The conspicuous absence of steadying policies, and the continual shakeup among the top names of the industry, has the man who runs the theatre continually on the anxious seat. Men in a fearful state of mind can't work efficiently, they can't think creatively, and they can't merchandise entertainment and constructively direct the affairs of a theatre because personality disappears in the face of fear.

Phantoms and Scarecrows are not conducive to conditions that attract people into a theatre. The very atmosphere of many theatres is gloomy. Properties are physically run down, dilapidated and shabby, and the personnel is likely to have the jitters. The large theatres can't make money due to the cost of pictures, labor disputes and high overhead. The little theatres are making some, but the manager or owner can't guess how long it will last because the distributors stand right behind him, and next week his clearance may be changed, or the percentage boosted, or some state legislature will slap some new tax on him. Maybe the manager will get a new district manager, then he will have to draw a line through his whole record up to that point and start all over to sell himself again to a new personality!

These Phantoms and Scarecrows must be removed before the business of operating theatres can proceed intelligently. The theatre itself must be bright and fresh, in time with the times. And the personnel must be assured that the jobs of the theatre are among the important work of this industry. These are requisites to a cheerful outlook in 1936.



A Talk With Herbert Griffin, Projection Engineer, Who Believes

WIDER FILM WOULD BRING A FINER MOTION PICTURE

IN ITS SHORT but lively history, the motion picture industry has contained many men who started from scratch, men who, without any kind of "pull," built themselves up by sheer force of character and native ability, until today they must be regarded as important factors in the development of the science, the art or the commerce of the motion picture. Such a man is Herbert Griffin.

General sales manager of the International Projector Corporation, he brings to his duties in this post a technical background and training which identify him with the laboratory as well as the business office. In the projection field he is today regarded as an authority on motion picture projection and sound.

"Herb," as he is affectionately known to many in the industry, made his debut into life at London, England, in 1887 and passed through childhood and youth along essentially the same path most of us traveled. He finally entered the business of life as stationary fireman with the Haney & Miller Construction Company in Toronto, Ontario, after which he became engineer in charge of the power plant. During his connection with this company Mr. Griffin served an apprenticeship in their machine shop where he received a practical education in the handling of all kinds of manufacturing equipment. Through his connection with this manufacturing concern Mr. Griffin finally became assistant superintendent of the Toronto Water Works installation project.

Mr. Griffin came to New York City during the time when the Pennsylvania and Long Island tunnels were being constructed and in these he acted under air pressure as chief electrician superintending the installation of the electrical equipment for these vast projects.

But they also had depressions in those days, and in 1907, which is back in the days when the industry was in the nickelodeon stage, Mr. Griffin came into the motion picture industry in a rather humble capacity as projectionist.

After serving for some while in this capacity, he made connection with the Standard Motion Picture Projector Company and later with the Nicholas Power Company. From this time forward the progress through the various departments of the company was steady until in 1923 he was finally appointed General Sales Manager for the corporation, which position he continued to occupy after the amalgamation of the Precision Machine Company and the Nicholas Power Company into the International Projector Corporation. We may therefore say that Herbert Griffin has pretty well "grown up" with the industry. Today I personally regard his opinions with relation to projection equipments, both visual and sound, as at least equal to that of any man in these United States and in many respects superior.

I have asked Mr. Griffin to express an opinion as to the possibilities for further improvements in both visual and sound equipment and what his view is as to the trend in these directions. His reply was both highly informative and interesting.

"It seems to me that the trend you speak of is or should be along the lines that were very naturally neglected when sound was added to visual projection. As we all well remember, sound came very suddenly; it was literally thrown into the laps of both the manufacturer, the exhibitor and the projectionist. There was no time to investigate and study as to the best manner of procedure.

"Almost ten years of experience—some of it rather grievous experience, by the way—has taught us many things, one of which is, it seems to me, that the visual and sound equipment insofar as concerns projectors should not be two nits attached to each other, but an equipment built as a single unit. In expressing this opinion, I want to have it understood clearly that I am not trying to pull anybody's chestnuts out of the fire. I am simply saying what I believe to be the logical answer to the question you have asked.

"So far as the company with which I am connected is concerned, we look forward to vastly improving both visual and sound equipments, but such improvements will, of course, come slowly and only so fast as the industry is able to absorb them.

"I do not believe that the improvements I have in mind should be incorporated in equipment of the type at present in use. By this I mean that, in my opinion, the size of the film as used today is entirely inadequate to put upon the screen the tremendously improved results which may be obtained with a film frame of considerably larger dimensions. This matter has received very serious consideration over a great length of time by the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, manufacturers of equipment, and film producers.

"I believe that had not the unfortunate depression come upon us a few years ago we should by this time have had a film of this width inasmuch as the film producers all agreed on the dimension. Certainly there is no question as regards the improvement in the screen image that can be accomplished by this process. Far more can be accomplished in the production of films with such an increased film frame, and close-ups, flash-backs, and a great many fade-outs, could be avoided, thus shortening the length of a production and presenting to the audience a story of far better continuity. Also, due to the available space for sound tracks more than one track could readily be incorporated for various purposes, either for sound effects and the incident sound for pictures, or for equipment controls, etc. I really believe that this matter should receive serious consideration of the industry and I personally look forward to the adoption of some such improvement before long."—F. H. Richardson.

AN INTERIOR SCHEME FOR MODERNIZING

Describing the treatment used in remodelling the Criterion in Oklahoma City, erected with 1,600 seats in 1921

[The Criterion, in general pattern and plan, presented conditions typical of many theatres now needing remodelling. The changes made are here discussed by the architect himself, Robert O. Boller of Kansas City.—The Editor.]

WORKING ON the theory that the motion picture theatre, even though it be fundamentally correct as to design and construction, should periodically be revamped and renovated to create an entirely new interior atmosphere, Standard Theatres, Oklahoma circuit, has thoroughly modernized the Criterion, 1,500-seat in Oklahoma City. Opened in 1921 in the heart of the business district, this showhouse has long held a leading position in the recreational life of the capital of Oklahoma.

To modernize the facade, a new marquee has been installed, and an entirely changed appearance given to the lower section of the front by a facing of black Formica inlaid with silver in a moderne design.

LOBBY

More radical changes have taken place in the lobby. The former wainscot and floor of marble have been removed to make way for a new floor of patterned terrazzo, the latter material shading from deep rose to gold. Walls of Formica in turquoise or robin's egg blue are bordered at the ceiling level by a moderne design in yellows, blues, and reds, set off by bronze mouldings. Adjoining the border is a built-in lighting cornice, which supplements the decorative and utilitarian purpose of a series of large Lumiline tubular fixtures in bronze fittings erected on the lobby side walls.

Large, round mirrors set into the lobby walls give simulated width to the room in the same manner that the mirrored sections, broken up into a spider web pattern, give height and interest to the new ceiling treatment.

Passing into the revamped foyer one notes few structural changes, but the masking in of the standing rail with full length drapes, new carpets underfoot, and a new mirrored ceiling above to replace the original plastered area give an air of newness and freshness to this part of the house.

Significant in that it illustrates the general trend toward increased comfort for motion picture patrons, a space formerly occupied by a restaurant at the mezanine level has been appropriated by the theatre proper to provide space for a greatly enlarged lounge, now approximately 30x40 feet, and the addition of a cosmetic room and telephone booth.

The new lounge is comfortably filled with furnishings tailored to moderne specifications and finished in colors and fabrics to harmonize with the general color scheme of the room. A settee lounge of warm gray flaunts pillows of rich brown with gay yellow diagonal stripes, offsetting a deep easy chair of blue gray tone. In one corner of the lounge a davenport of bone white with horizontal black bands creates a striking note against faun colored walls and carpeting of rich dark blue.

Full length drapes of gold with green valance entirely mask in the front windows of the building from ceiling to floor, imparting a cozy and intimate air to the lounge. A necessary column in the center of the room is made a thing of beauty by being encased in mirrors to a height of several feet and is banded by an indirect lighting arrangement which carries out the latest ideas in illumination.

In addition to the telephone booth, another corner of the lounge contains the entrance to the new poudre room, a spot popular with the ladies. The most interesting object in this section is a long dressing table composed both as to top and legs of many scintillating mirrors.

The toilet rooms have been freshened with new wall treatments and new fixtures. The women's room is finished in green Formica with aluminum mouldings and has a new terrazzo floor. Orchid and chromium plumbing fixtures have also been installed.

OFFICE AREA

The office of the manager (Frank McCabe) on the mezzanine floor, is left intact by the reconstruction, but an entirely new third floor, 30x75 feet, has been constructed between the mezzanine and balcony levels. This new suite of nine rooms furnishes comfortable quarters for the general offices of the circuit.

AUDITORIUM

Fewer changes have been made in the auditorium than in other parts of the theatre, the owners depending upon the skill of the decorator to bring new life into an older type of interior at this point. To bring about a greater degree of comfort, however, the capacity was reduced from 1,600 to 1,500, and wider, fully upholstered chairs were installed in wider rows.

The dummy organ grilles of an earlier period have been removed and the proscenium spandril opening is screened by sweeping draperies of rich blue hung over an underdrape of gold. The close-in curtain on the stage adds warmth to the auditorium with a deep gold hue. The side walls of the auditorium, previously done in the type of stencil overlay popular in the 20's, have been decorated in fan-like designs shading from deep henna to golden yellow, with bordering division bands of brown.

While many of the original auditorium features remain unchanged, the formerly plain ceiling is heightened by painted waves of color lightening shade by shade as they ascend toward the central chandelier.

About People of the Theatre

NEWS OF THEIR ACTIVITIES REPORTED FROM ALL SECTIONS AND BRIEFLY TOLD

Peter Latchis has taken over four theatres in New England from Andrew Tegu. They are the Palace, St. Johnsbury, Vt.; Orpheum, Woodsville, N. H.; Gem, Lydonville, Vt.; and Strand, Windsor, Vt.

C. A. Bull, who operates the Novelty at Wichita, Kansas, has opened a new 500-seat theatre at Hillsboro, Kan.

A. J. Bianchi, president of the Akron-Falls Amusement Company, is constructing an 800-seat theatre in Cuyahoga Falls, a suburb of Akron, Ohio. It is to be called the Ohio theatre. It was designed and is being erected by John W. Egan.

M & P Publix have taken over the Empire theatre in Waterville, Me., for re-opening as a first-run house.

L. W. Bridgham has completely renovated the State, in Presque Isle, Me., which he recently took over.

Herman Foster reopened the Rivoli in Bantam, Conn., which had been dark for six months.

Harland V. Higgins has taken over the Nordica, Freeport, Me., to be open four days weekly.

O. H. Wiebe of Portland, Me., has taken a long lease on the Sunnyside theatre there. He is entirely re-equipping it and has changed the name to the Avalon.

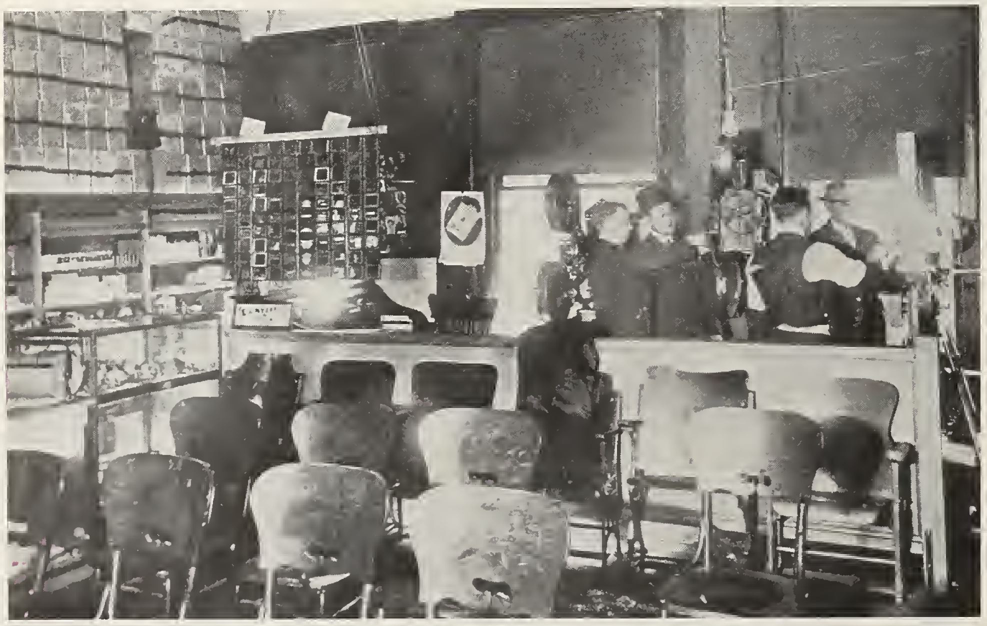
Schine Enterprises has taken over the Palace theatre in Ashland, Ohio, from B. W. Bickert, who remains as manager.

Sam Stecker, owner of the new $250,000 Shaker Heights, Ohio, theatre now under construction, reports that it will be completed about the end of February.

Southio Theatres, Inc., now operating the Paramount at Hamilton, Ohio, has just closed a ten-year lease on the Hamilton Palace and Paramount. Turberg and Silver will continue to manage the Palace, and John A. Schwalm will remain in charge of the Rialto.

Samuel Cantor and Abe Rotner of Renroe Theatres, Inc., have taken over four Rockaway, N. Y., theatres formerly operated by David Davis. They are New and Rivoli, Rockaway Beach; Boardwalk, Averne, and Edgemere, Edgemere.

The Kerrville Amusement Company of Kerrville, Texas, is completely rebuilding the Dixie theatre, which has been dark for the past six years.



Fashions! In theatre chairs. In projectors. And in theatre men's clothes. Of twenty years ago. From dusty archives has come this picture to recall a day in 1915 when A. H. Blank negotiated with R. S. Ballantyne for equipment to install in his Garden Theatre in Des Moines, at the office there of the Mutual Film Corporation. Today? Mr. Blank heads a Midwest circuit of 27 theatres. Mr. Ballantyne operates his own theatre supply business, the Scott-Ballantyne Company of Omaha. And neither, we hope, wears clothes like these!

W. H. Hall, fromerly of San Antonio, Tex., is opening a new motion picture theatre in Kerrville, to be called Rialto.

C. J. Vogel and C. C. Davis of the Liberty Amusement Company, operating a circuit in Ohio and Pennsylvania, are ready to begin construction of a 400-seat theatre in Salineville. It is to be completed early in February.

Joseph Litvag, head of the Apollo Theatre Company, has leased a site in St. Louis and will erect a 700-seat theatre, to be open by February.

John M. Smith of Hance's Point and Philadelphia, has purchased the North East theatre, North East, Md. It was erected 12 years ago, seating 450.

The Evergreen Circuit, operators in the State of Washington, have started construction of the Kiggins Theatre in Vancouver. Plans call for the construction of a reinforced concrete building of modern architecture with a seating capacity of 800.

J. J. Parker is building a $75,000 house at Pendleton, Oregon, to be opened by Christmas. Victor Keady will be in charge.

Community Theatre Company, of New York, has filed plans for a $50,000 house for the Brookdale section of Ginger Park, Richmond, Va. It will be a 600-seater for Wilmer & Vincent operation.

Sherman Krellburg, president of Joan of Arc Pictures Inc., has taken over the Bijou, legitimate stage theatre and converted it into a motion picture house, installing an RCA High Fidelity sound system. The house will specialize in foreign language pictures.

Installation of officers in the Chicago Motion Picture Operators Union was held last week. With George Browne, International president and Harry Holmden, third vice-president, present the new officers were put into office. Named as business manager was Frank Clifford, Peter Shayne, president; Glenn Sweeney, vice-president; Neal Bishop, secretary-treasurer. Members of the executive board are: Robert Burns, James Sisco, Joe Berinstein and George Karg. On the board of trustees are: Edward Schultz, chairman; Louis Skarbro, John Piotrowski. Samuel Klugman was named sergeant-at-arms. Their terms expire March, 1937.

EQUIPMENT and OPERATION

A DEPARTMENT OF PRACTICAL MAINTENANCE AND OPERATING SERVICE

● ● CONDUCTED BY J. T. KNIGHT, JR. ●

MAKING 1935 WORK FOR YOU IN 1936

A glance into the coming year when operating conditions in theatres must be still further improved

DECEMBER, the end of the year, is to the enthusiastic theatre man but a turn in the road. A turn which, when rounded, will bring new horizons, new inspiration, with hope, encouragement, progress and success. It is sometimes a good thing to stop before making a turn in the road, and look back. You will see a different perspective of the path you have just traveled. This is good, if for no other reason than to appraise the possibilities of the future, the road ahead.

That glance backward will show that for the past few years we "got by." Our properties have depreciated and the public in many localities has been tolerant, knowing full well that we have had our problems. Do you think the theatre-going public will be as tolerant next year, in 1936? No, it will not, because even now people are turning to the theatres that have modernized, cleaned up, painted, decorated, recarpeted and reseated, improved projection and sound, and put on new fronts.

To date the smaller theatre operators have led the way and set the pace, and the larger groups must follow next year.

Some months ago it was recommended and urged that theatre managers go over their theatres from stem to stern and list in all detail every item that needed attention in his theatre. I really hate to even think of the percentage of managers who have done this, as I am quite sure that the actual count would not reflect much credit upon the initiative of the managers or upon the powers of persuasion of this department. Have you as a manager got the slightest conception of what it will cost to air-condition, reseat, paint, improve projection and put up a new front? Isn't this necessary in order to lay plans for a progressive and successful 1936? Unless you have a monopoly in your neighborhood or town, the "cash customers" will elect to go to the theatre where they can enjoy their amusement in comfort among pleasant surroundings. The year 1936 is to be a spending year if it is to be a profitable year.

ARE YOU POSTED ON AIR-CONDITIONING?

LET'S CONTINUE the backward glance further: We see that there have been many opportunities to learn much, for instance, about air-conditioning. Have we learned more about air-conditioning than we knew a year ago? Do we know enough about air-conditioning to feel confident that we will get the plant that meets our needs and is the best for the money spent? A person cannot intelligently buy anything until he knows something about the equipment or item that he wants to buy.

Feeling quite sure that large sums will be spent for air-conditioning, I feel just as confident that 40% of the expenditures will go to buy headaches and trouble and no atmospheric relief in the theatre. In brief, 40% of the expenditures will be wasted. It may be astounding to have this stated so bluntly, but you must be aroused to the realization that some who sell air-conditioning equipment do not know air-conditioning, and in the final analysis they are selling fans, motors, compressors, condensers, air washers, etc., for a commission. The hazards are not all confined to dealing with incompetents. The most capable engineer, representing the finest equipment, will many times oversell the theatre operator because his conception of air-conditioning approaches a laboratory standard. Money is wasted just as much when you over-buy as when you buy too cheap in quality.

PRACTICAL NEEDS

What the theatre needs in the summer time is relief. That relief may vary from a single fan to air washer and fan (atmospheric cooling) to complete refrigeration and dehumidification of the air. The 100% complete and perfect air-conditioning job for theatres, meeting the standards of air-conditioning as set or established by engineering societies and laboratories, is practically non-existent. What is more, such perfection in air-conditioning is not necessary for theatres; in most situations it is not economically justified; and finally, the operation of such a plant is difficult even with the many marvelous automatic controls we have available today. With it all the services of a good mechanic are required constantly.

So in glancing back along the trail, 1935 should have prepared each theatre manager to meet his air-conditioning problems of 1936. His mind should be made up as to what degree of relief is required for his particular operations. Remember that if you buy a Rolls-Royce when a Ford would have done the job you've wasted money; on the other hand when you buy a Ford and you really need a five-ton truck, again you have erred in judgment and wasted money.

HAVE YOU KEPT OPERATING RECORDS?

LET'S TAKE ONE more glance down the back trail. Theatre records are the back trail. Every time we look into the records we are looking backwards. We must take our bearings from the records in order to determine our location and the extent of our progress. Other than the box office and attendance records, just what records are kept in your theatre? Perhaps you have no records from which to take your bearings. If that is the case, it is a rather sad state of affairs. Of course, the box office records are the master chronicle of any theatre, but in the final analysis they are but the summary, there are many other factors that contribute to the final results shown on the box office statement.

A worn out projection mechanism, antique lamp-houses, the need of a voltage regulator on the sound system, a dirty screen, hazardous carpet, dirty walls, uncomfortable seats, a noisy fan, or faulty, antiquated plumbing in the toilets, will all in some degree effect the net box office results.

Records, such as inspection reports made at regular intervals, summary of expenditures broken down in detail, maintenance costs, supplies, repairs and renewals, combined with recommendations from projectionists, stage managers, chief janitors, engineers, assistant manager and patron comments, all form the log of the back trail that should become our guide in forging ahead.

If you find yourself without such records, don't be discouraged; you have about you those records in the physical form. A thorough examination and inspection of your theatre now will indicate to you whether or not such records, if they had been kept, would reflect favorably or unfavorably the management of that theatre.

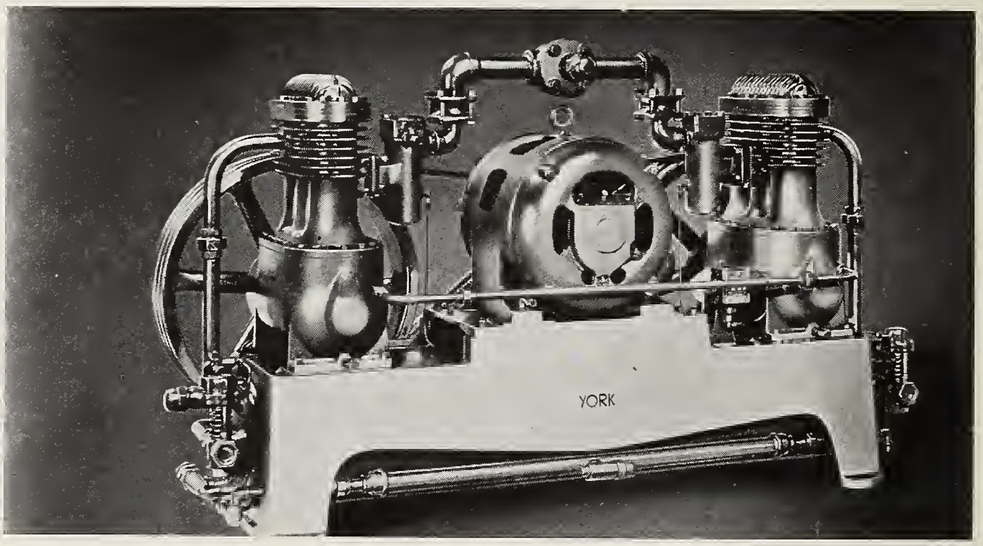
Put your hat and coat on, go out for a walk and get rid of all alibis, excuses or tolerance for yourself and your company, then enter your theatre as if you were a guest manager. Make an inspection. Then decide whether you are proud of your job as manager of that theatre, or whether you really have just a job working for a weekly check.

It is vitally important to point out right here that the entire responsibility for bringing improvement the coming year does not rest entirely on the shoulders of the "powers that be." A large portion must be assumed by the employes. The very least that must be expected of the employe is that he put himself in a receptive frame of mind. The good employe must have faith in the new conditions as represented by new executives and be willing to believe that his interests are their interests. The employe who tackles his particular job with the attitude of sodden routine has no place in the operation. Such an employe has little right to expect that the boss meet him more than half way. The employe must work with vigor towards his ideal in this business, whether that ideal is a bigger job or greater scope for his work. The theatre managers are charged with the responsibility of injecting into their employes enthusiasm, interest and a new, broad outlook for the motion picture business. When every theatre organization has accomplished this it will indicate an advanced labor condition and compensation should then be adjusted to balance the results obtained by such an organization.

No theatre manager should be satisfied to operate his theatre with the cheapest labor possible, for his (the manager's) reputation is being established by his employes.

In closing, this department extends the Season's Greetings to every theatre manager and every theatre employe, and may we all, as we round the bend, see our horizon filled with bright skies and the rising sun of progress for 1936.—J. T. K.

UNIT TYPE EQUIPMENT FOR ALL-YEAR AIR-CONDITIONING



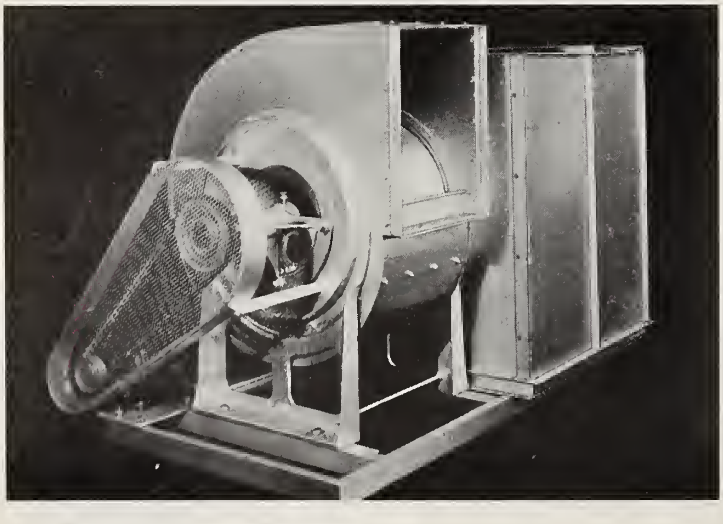
York twin-compressor refrigerating machine.

AIR-CONDITIONING equipment tending toward the complete unit type in design and therefore having special application to theatres (particularly the smaller ones) wherein, either because of cost or space, the more elaborate duct system is out of the question, has been introduced into the line of the York Ice Machinery Corporation of York, Pa. A small 15-ton unit is of horizontal type available encased where there is no basement area for installation. Other units, of capacities of 15 and 30 tons, respectively, are designed as central stations supplying conditioned air to the theatre through a simplified duct system. These may be combined to attain the required tonnage for the theatre.

The latter have coils for either Freon refrigerant, refrigerated water, or cold brine for cooling. These conditioners are adaptable to year-around service, cooling and dehumidifying in summer; heating and humidifying in winter; circulating, filtering and introducing conditioned air during all seasons. They may be obtained, however, for sumemr operaiton only. However, those of the year-around type are designed for either steam or hot water.

The fans are designed to provide low outlet velocities, the motors are mounted in supports calculated to enhance quiet operation. The motors drive the fans through V-belts. Pulleys are interchangeable to permit variable speeds to suit special conditioners.

Provisions are made in the design for automatic control through instruments of either electric or pneumatic type. Especially designed bronze nozzles atomize moisture into the heated air stream for humidification in winter, and this operation can be performed by employing a humidistat, electric control valve and water strainer.



York unit-type air-conditioning plant.

For installation of a unit conditioner with mechanical refrigeration, several new models of self-contained refrigerating machines, employing Freon, have been developed by this company. Available in models of 10, 15, 20 and 25 horsepower, the condensing units have the essential features of larger equipment. Compressor parts are largely standardized, which facilitates service and the interchanging of parts. Water valves of ample size, V-belts, belt adjustment, high-pressure cut-out, low-pressure control, liquid line strainer, a suction strainer, water coils having spiral copper fins and a "vortex eliminator" preventing the escape of gas past the expansion valve, are standard.

In installations of such unit type equipment thus far made in theatres, the type of installation more frequently encountered consists in or more of the 30-ton plants, placed in the machine room of the basement or other suitable areas in non-public portions of the theatre building. Such installations, combined with the necessary duct system at least for supplying the auditorium, give complete air-conditioning with automatic control.

GETTING FULL VALUE FROM STEAM HEATING SYSTEMS

The first two articles presenting sketches of single- and double-pipe installations and comparing their operating features

THE SIMPLEST FORM of single-pipe steam system for heating is shown in Figure 1. The nearly horizontal pipe leaving the boiler is called a steam main. There may be several steam mains from the same boiler, each main serving its own group of radiators. The vertical pipes extending to the auditorium radiators and to the balcony are called risers. The steam generated in the boiler flows through the mains into the risers then into the radiators; the air in the system is forced ahead of the steam and escapes from the system through air valves. When the steam strikes the air valves the heat of the steam causes the valve to close thereby stopping the escape of steam. It follows that when air valves hiss and emit steam that they are not functioning correctly, they need repair or replacing.

The air valve is always located at the opposite end of the radiator from the supply connection. As the steam in the radiator condenses to water the water drains from the radiator into the risers and flows by gravity into the mains and back to the boiler. It is apparent then that the direction of flow of the condensation (water) is opposite to that of the steam supplying the radiators.

This type of system works pretty well on small plants, but because the steam and water flow in opposite directions, they are likely to interfere with each other. Should the pressure in the boiler become excessive the steam is likely to force the water ahead of it and cause a crackling noise, generally referred to as hammering, knocking, or correctly referred to as "water hammer." If the mains were installed of too small pipe than at normal or reasonable pressures, water hammer would occur. In such systems the pipes and radiators must be of sufficient size so that the steam may travel at a low velocity and still provide ample space within the main for the condensation (water) to be allowed to flow back to the boiler.

A much improved layout of a single-pipe steam heating system is shown in Figure 2. The steam supply main pitches away from the boiler and condensation from the radiators entering the main flows along in the same direction as the flow of steam.

In this system, as in that of Figure 1, there may be two or three mains each serving its own group of radiators. From the end of each main there is a drip connection pitch from that point down to the boiler. The drip connection enters the boiler below the water line, consequently it always has water in it.

This is pointed out here because a hurried inspection might result in confusing this sort of hookup with a two-pipe wet return layout (to be explained in the January 11th issue).

system as shown in Figure 1 could inexpensively revise this layout. There is very much less possibility of noise from water hammer with this plan than with the plan shown in Figure 1. The size of pipe used is still but one pipe connection to each radiator and that fact establishes it as a one-pipe system. In all one-pipe systems the radiators should be decidedly pitched so that condensation can drain out of them.

for the drip connection can be relatively smaller than the steam mains.

The system shown in Figure 3 is little used today, yet the plan shows how to relieve any radiator or column of radiators by making the connection from the radiator to the drip connection. Note that the connections to the risers to each radiator is taken from the bottom of the steam main with sufficient off-set so that no condensation can run back into the main but connects directly to the drip connection which again forms a "wet" return (because it is below the water line of the boiler and therefore always has water in it).

This system is not a two-pipe system but is often confused with that type; there is still but one pipe connection to each radiator and that fact establishes it as a one-pipe system.

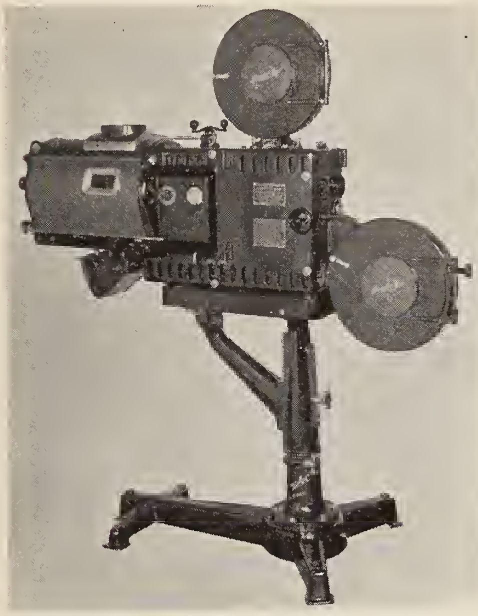
Noise in one-pipe systems is perhaps the most frequent complaint against them. When the valve of a radiator of a one-pipe system is closed, steam is pocketed in the radiator. Within a very few minutes this steam condenses to water, the water cannot return to the boiler because the valve is shut and it must lay in the bottom of the radiator. The next time the radiator is turned on the live steam under pressure must force its way into the radiator against the water, thereby causing the crackling and water hammer. This noise, which occurs when a radiator is turned on, is caused by the inrushing steam and the water, as it pours into the riser, cannot be overcome.—J. T. K.

PROJECTOR WITH FURTHER AIDS TO EASY OPERATION

THE PRESENT Simplex-Acme sound-projector, the design of which has been substantially revised, has, in addition to various refinements, a number of added provisions for easier operation and maintenance.

It is extremely compact. Aside from the base, including a suprex-arc high-intensity lamp, it measures 5 feet, 5 inches in length by 3 feet high, including the upper magazine. Including the base, the whole projector stands 6 feet high to the top of the upper magazine.

The elliptical reflector of the lamp is 10½ inches in diameter. Just below the reflector is a black and white scale by which the carbon consumption is measured—that is to say as the carbons are consumed the length of remaining positive carbon is indicated by the scale. No condenser is used. Immediately over the positive carbon, about 1 inch from the center of the mirror, is a composition guard which is dropped down by the projectionist before striking the arc. This protects the mirror from pitting and smudging. Necessary controls are placed in convenient positions.



Simplex-Acme projector.

Immediately below the scale, with its handle coming out below the lamphouse door, is a device by means of which the arc may be instantaneously struck by moving this handle backward. An advantage of this is that the carbon cannot be moved too far, therefore there is no possibility of breaking the crater when striking the arc. This whole arc striking arrangement works automatically and is always in exact position ready for use.

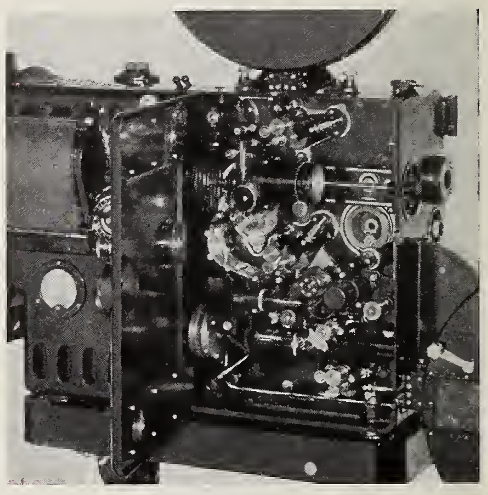
In the forward part of the lamphouse, which in a way corresponds to the old lamphouse cone, is a metallic, ventilated enclosure at the front of which is joined the projector mechanism casing. In the side of this enclosure, facing the projectionist, is an ammeter which indicates the current flow at the arc, and also a speed regulating device for the arc feed motor. The arc is controlled through an especially compounded motor, the compounding of which carries the arc current and voltage.

The mechanism of the Simplex Acme projector is extremely compact. The framing handle extends through an opening in the mechanism door on the working side of the projector. The whole aperture assemblage, including the heat dissipating unit surrounding the light beam, may be removed for cleaning by removing two small thumb screws.

On the working side of the aperture plate assembly is a bakelite knob to which is attached the removable brass aperture. All the projectionist has to do if he desires to change an aperture is simply move this knob backward a trifle and pull the aperture out. When reinserted the aperture is locked into position. Immediately at the side of the aperture is a lateral spring pressure steel guide, about 1¼ inches long, which acts to hold the film in correct lateral alignment. This obviates the necessity for a guide roller located about two or three inches away from the aperture.



Simplex Acme sound and projector heads.

Immediately above the aforesaid heat dissipating unit, to which the assemblage is joined, is an opening, over which is a pilot light with a switch located handily. Below this, with a little jigger on the side to raise it up, is a small mirror, so that by switching on the pilot light and raising the mirror, the aperture is illuminated for threading.

The gate opens horizontally by means of a large knurled knob immediately in front of the projectionist when threading. This gate movement is positive. When closed it is locked into position. The gate opens about three-quarters of an inch to provide for convenient handling of the film. The tension is provided by three joined shoes on either side, the total length of bearing surface being perhaps 2¼ inches, or 4½ inches for the two shoes.

The upper, intermediate and lower idlers are opened and closed by means of a small handle. When the idlers are closed (two to each sprocket) they are locked in that position.

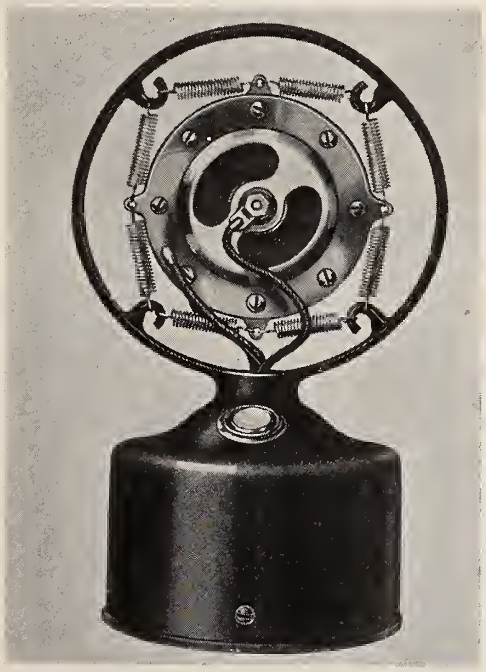
The lens focusing device is conveniently located at the front, its handle projecting through the top of the casing. The stripper design is such that it is impossible for the film to wrap around the sprockets.

The rotating shutter is enclosed in a perforated metal casing. Air circulation vanes may or may not be attached, according to the type of light source used. The shutter is conveniently got at by the removal of one section of the perforated casing.

Between the cam shaft and the rotating shutter there is just one gear connection, so that backlash in the shutter is almost entirely prevented.

The sound mechanism is of completely new design. The flywheel, located on the off-working side of the mechanism, is a floating element—that is to say, it may be freely revolved under slight tension when the mechanism is not in operation. When the projector is put into operation the slight friction of this wheel brings it slowly up to speed.

Just ahead of this flywheel is a wide helically cut free-floating gear connected to the gear which engages the sound sprocket by means of a spiral spring wound upon the shaft which operates the flywheel. This spring has the effect of absorbing small inequalities in mechanical transmission. No belts or chains appear anywhere in the design.



New model microphone developed by the Mellaphone Corporation for use in public address and sound reinforcement systems in theatres. This instrument is of the double-button type, assembled as a desk stand. A special transformer and battery are installed in the base. The microphone is designed for attachment to any sound system.

WITH RESPECT TO SOME OF THE PRODUCTS REFERRED TO THEY ARE PRELIMINARY TO MORE COMPLETE ILLUSTRATED DESCRIPTIONS IN PREPARATION FOR A FOLLOWING ISSUE.

STEREOPTICON SLIDE PROJECTOR

• The GoldE Manufacturing Company of Chicago has developed a compact stereopticon slide projector equipped with an independently-mounted chromium-plated metal reflector, which can be adjusted for focusing, and which affords 36% more light. This adjustment is in addition to the fool-proof focusing adjustment of the machine itself. Using standard G-type projection bulbs of 250, 400, or 500 watts, perfect images can be projected for any distance up to 100 feet.

When not in use, the projector takes up very little space, However, it can be brought into use immediately; plugs into 110V—AC or DC line, and is ready for operation.

The stereopticon projector is finished in durable black baked-on enamel and is fully equipped with complete lens system, slide carrier, lamp cord with soft rubber plug and the novel metal reflector.

D. C. EXCITER LAMP SUPPLY SYSTEM

• The Clough-Brengle Company of Chicago, has just brought out a new direct current exciter lamp supply system that can be added to sound amplifiers to eliminate exciter lamp batteries or A.C. supply units.

In place of the raw, hum-producing alternating current, which has been employed to illuminate the exciter lamps of the sound head in older systems, it provides a pure direct current from a copper-oxide rectifier and filter system. This results in greatly reduced hum and far more intelligibility on low note reproduction. The improvement is especially noticeable on voice reproduction which falls for the most part in the lower register.

Incorporated in this unit is a remote control switching device that permits changeover from right to left projector at any two positions within the booth.

PATCHING KIT FOR UPHOLSTERY

• The Pantasote Company, Inc., of New York, has brought out the Russialoid patching kit for the repair of damaged upholstery.

The kit includes a large piece of Russialoid especially devised for patching purposes together with a generous supply of cement and sandpaper. The kits are available in the standard colors of imitation leather generally used in theatres.

FILM MAGAZINE FIRE PROTECTOR

• Paramount Device Corporation is marketing a film magazine fire protector, designed to eliminate film fires originating in the projector head. It is composed of a pair of devices, top and bottom that are automatic and mechanical and are positive in action.

The devices prevent film fire, originating at the aperture, from reaching the upper and lower film magazines. Should a fire occur, the film slot, either in the top or bottom device, or in both, (depending on the direction of travel of the flame) is sealed by the instantaneous action of a spring-operated knife blade which is controlled by a fusible link. The knife blade cuts the film and seals the opening to the upper or lower film magazine and sound box, confining the fire to the small amount of film within the projector.

TRADE NOTES

• Messrs. Henri Barre and Charles Oliveres of the Sipla Company, Paris, exclusive French distributors for the Strong Electric Corporation, have returned to Europe after inspecting new developments in motion picture equipment in this country.

The Oklahoma Theatre Supply Company, of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, reports the installation of a 30,000 cubic foot capacity air conditioning system in W. Z. Spearman's theatre in Britton, Oklahoma; sound equipment in the Jewel, Okemah; the Empress, Waurika; and the Paramount, Wewoka, all in Oklahoma; and complete equipment and furnishings for a new 500-seat theatre which T. P. Higgins is opening in Britton, Oklahoma.

RCA reports an unusual number of installations for November and December of high fidelity sound systems. Installations were made in the following theatres: Mermaid, Coney Island; North Main, Houston, Texas; Gordon, Sudan, Texas; Pix, White Plains N. Y.; Elmwood, Syracuse; Regent, Buffalo; Bradford, Pa.; Rialto, Weldon, N. C.; Bladen, Elizabethtown, N. C.; Uptown, Lynn, Mass.; Castle, New Castle, Ind.; Cozy, Hot Springs, S. THE VELOCITY MICROPHONE IN THEATRE ADDRESS SYSTEMS

Describing the essential characteristics of the ribbon type instrument in their relation to stage and announcement requirements

THE VELOCITY or ribbon microphone consists of a strong magnetic field in which a Duraluminum ribbon vibrates (Figure 1). Being less than two ten-thousandths of an inch thick, the ribbon is so thin that you can almost see through it. Such a light mass has no natural period of its own within the audible range and, therefore, will follow speech and music with exceptional fidelity.

The vibrations of the ribbon in the magnetic field generate minute currents and voltages—too minute to send through a line. A transformer is, therefore, placed in the microphone to step up the minute voltages before feeding them to the amplifier. Depending upon the line used, the microphone can be placed at any distance up to 2,000 feet from the pre-amplifier. A 50-ohm microphone line can be run 200 feet; a 200-ohm microphone line, 2,000 feet. A 2,000-ohm microphone line, used in high-impedance microphones which operate directly into the grid of the tube, eliminating the amplifier input transformer with its inductive hum problems, can be run 75 feet.

In spite of the fact that the ribbon has practically no mass, the velocity is the most rugged microphone available today. It will stand a great deal of abuse and knocking around before affecting its operation materially.

Besides giving exceptional reproduction, feedback is more easily eliminated with the velocity. The farther the performer stands away from the microphone, the more gain is needed and the more difficult it is to eliminate feedback. Picking up the entire stage with microphones in the footlights presents the hardest job. Such extreme cases are often handled successfully with the regular velocity. In those few cases where the regular velocity does feed back, the beam type velocity can be used. This will allow relatively enormous volume before feeding back.

In principle, the beam type consists of two ribbons side by side. A reflected sound will not hit both ribbons at exactly the same angle—will not cause them to vibrate together—and therefore will not tend toward feedback. The beam type is not a damped or close-talking microphone, but has practically the same sensitivity of the regular velocity microphone, with the added feature of extremely low feedback tendencies.

An arrangement as shown in Figure 2 will pick up the entire stage and eliminate the audience noise. The beam type velocity is particularly suited to this type of installation.

Soloists will sometimes find the junior velocity microphone very convenient. Being only the size of a match box, it can easily be hidden inside the coat or even hung over the back. A violin reinforced in this way can be given many times its normal volume. An accordion can be made as impressive as an organ. High fidelity sound reinforcing, therefore, is available today at an unusually low cost. All that is necessary is a few velocity microphones, a suitable amplifier, and two or three good speakers. Such an installation will greatly increase the entertainment facilities of any theatre regularly or occasionally presenting stage numbers.

STANDARD PROJECTION room specifications approved by the Society of Motion Picture Engineers and representing prolonged study by the Projection Practice Committee of that organization, are described below, for the most part in the terms of the committee's report.

This report included three plans—one for a standard room, one for a small one, and another for an extremely large room. The plans for two of these types—standard and small—are reproduced on page 22. The committee's recommendations to theatre builders, owners and architects are as follows:

Plan.—The projection room shall be fireproof and sound-proof, and all walls exposed to the theatre shall be of tile, brick, gypsum, or other approved fire-resisting material. Minimum height 10 feet, maximum 12 feet. Minimum depth 12 feet. Length of projection room shall be governed by the quantity and the kind of equipment, as shown in the plans and in accordance with local requirements.

The projection room should be located outside the fire-wall of the theatre, and so situated that the projection angle does not exceed 15 degrees.

Floor.—A type of floor construction that is recommended consists of (1) a re-inforced concrete floor-slab not less than 4 inches thick; (2) a tamped cinder fill above the floor-slab not less than 2 inches thick; and (3) a trowelled cement finish above the cinder fill not less than 2 inches thick.

Ceiling.—The ceiling shall be of plaster or cement suspended on metal laths or other suitable material.

Walls.—The finished walls of the projection room shall be not less than 6 inches thick, including an inside and an outside layer of plaster at least ¾ inch thick. In all cases, the inside surface of the front wall shall be smooth and without structural projections.

Acoustic treatment.—The inside walls and ceiling of the projection room shall be finished with sound-absorbing material approved by the proper authorities.

Projector ports.—The finished projector ports shall be 10 inches wide and 12 inches high. The bottom of the opening shall be splayed in accordance with Table 2 on page 24.

The committee recommends the use of means other than glass in projector ports to prevent transmission of noise from the projection room to the auditorium, such as reducing the free aperture of the port to the minimum essential for projection.

Observation ports.—The free aperture of the observation ports shall be 12 inches wide and 14 inches high, and the distance from the floor to the center line of the openings shall be in accordance with the following table. The bottom of the port shall be splayed in accordance with Table 2 on page 24.

Height of Observation Port

The observation ports shall be fitted with a good grade of plate glass set at an angle as shown in Figure 0, and provided with a rubber frame between the glass and the sides of the port hole in order to reduce the transmission of sound from the projection room into the auditorium. The glass shall be hinged at the centers of the side edges so that by swinging it to a horizontal position, both sides can be cleaned from the projection room.

Other ports.—All other ports, such as those intended for effect projectors, dissolving stereopticons, single spot-lamps, shall be 30 inches wide and 36 inches high. The distance from the floor to the center line of the ports shall be 38 inches. The minimum spacing allowed between these ports shall be as shown in the plans. The bottom of the ports shall be splayed in accordance with Table 2 on page 24. The placing of these ports to the right or the left of the projectors shall be optional and according to conditions.

Floor Covering.—Where local regulations permit, the floor of the projection room should be covered with a good grade of fire-proof material; otherwise, the cement should be painted or filled.

Projection room painting.—The color of the projection room walls and doors shall be olive green to the height of the door lines. Acoustic material should either be painted in accordance with the instructions of the manufacturer of the material, or materials of the specified colors should be chosen. Walls above the door line and the ceiling shall be a buff color. All iron work of projection ports shall be covered with at least two coats of flat black paint. All other rooms shall be painted buff.

proved ceiling fixture with canopy switch shall be installed for each piece of equipment, and shall be placed in line parallel to the front wall at a distance not less than 18 inches nor more than 24 inches from the front wall. The outlet connected to the emergency lighting system shall be located in the ceiling midway between the extreme ends of the projection room and 4 feet from the back wall. Small projection rooms shall be equipped with one approved "reelite," and large projection rooms with two such lights conveniently located.

Conduits.—(a) Conduits shall in all cases be concealed, and all boxes shall be of flush-mounting type. (b) The size of conduits for projection arcs shall be in accordance with the wire sizes indicated on page 23, and in conformance with the regulations of the proper authorities. These sizes anticipate the need for increased capacity, and should be adhered to in order to provide space for pulling in larger wires as needed. (c) Conduit for sound equipment shall conform to the type of sound equipment to be installed. The manufacturers of such equipment should be consulted with regard to the proper layout of the sound system before proceeding with the installation.

Toilet and Washroom.—Hot and cold water and other toilet facilities shall be installed, and located convenient to the projection room. Suitable space shall also be provided for clothes lockers.

Projectors and Spacing.—Where two projectors are used, they shall be equally spaced upon either side of the center line of the auditorium. When three projectors are used, the center projctor shall be placed upon the center line of the auditorium. The distance between projectors shall be 4½ feet, measured between lens centers, for projection distances greater than 100 feet. For projection distances less than 100 feet, the spacing shall be 4 feet.

Projection arc supply and location.—In those cases where the projection arc supply consists of machinery that generates acoustical hum or mecanical vibration, the use of acoustical or mechanical insulation will be required. Rotating machinery used for projection arc supply shall be located as remotely as possible from the auditorium and the projection room. Arc supplies other than rotating equipment may be located in the room adjacent to the projection room, taking precautions to place it at least 4 feet away from the sound equipment.

Power Supply to Equipment.—Where line-voltage variations are greater than about 3% the power company should be requested to rectify the condition. In those cases where it is impossible to maintain a steady line supply into the theatre, either manually controlled or automatic regulators should be installed.

Projection Port Shutters.—These shall be constructed of iron guides not thinner than 16-gauge, built up of iron flats, 2 inches wide and ⅛ inch thick, with spacers 1 inch wide and ¼ inch thick, in which the shutter may slide. The shutter shall be made of not less than 10-gauge iron, or of other approved fire-proof material. The bottom sill of shutter tracks shall be provided with leather bumpers. (See page 24.)

The shutter system shall be located a sufficient distance below the ceiling line to admit of easy operation. At each port, and securely fastened thereto, shall be a chain or rod of approved design attached to a metal ring fitting loosely over a pin inserted into the rod about 45 degrees upward from the horizontal, so that the revolving of the rod shall cause the pin to fall to a down-vertical position and permit the ring to slip off and drop the shutter.

Into each shutter cord or chain shall be inserted an approved fusible link. The master control cord shall be so arranged through a system of pulleys in conjunction with a counterweight that either automatic or manual operation will permit the shutters to drop. The master manual control cord shall be located at each of the entrances of the projection room. In addition, the master control cord shall be furnished with fusible links placed approximately 10 or 12 inches above and immediately upon the center line of the projector magazine.

Peerless MAGNARC
TRADE MARK REG.

HIGH INTENSITY LAMP

SECURITY!

There is a serene satisfaction, a superlative sense of security about owning a Peerless. Those who have always choosen Peerless Reflector Arc Lamps attest to this. It was their reason for repeatedly selecting this product.

Every Peerless Lamp has been a product of Creative engineering. The PEERLESS MAGNARC is so entirely new and correct in design that we now witness the spectacle of a complete revolution in the lamp manufacturing industry.

Those who purchased Peerless afforded themselves the greatest possible economy, for the first cost was never higher than others and they do not now find their "buy" an obsoleted model.

FACTS—

The present and only model of the Peerless Magnarc has had since its introduction, every feature of construction and design now being announced as New! Revolutionary! Advance! and Triumphant by other manufacturers in their new models.

Every Peerless is "right" before it's placed on the market.

AND ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES

F H Richardson

GREEN FILM—EXCESSIVE WEAR OF PARTS—APERTURE TENSION

FROM TIME to time letters reach my desk complaining of trouble experienced in projecting green film and of excessive wear of projector gears, intermittent movement parts, etc. Some of the complaints include one or two parts which a manager believes has worn out too quickly. Others complain that the whole projector mechanism requires an inordinate amount of repairs. Still others ask why they have trouble with green film while another theatre does not.

Now there may be several causes for excessive wear of projector mechanism parts. It may be that a poor or otherwise unsuitable oil is used, or that oil is not applied frequently enough, the projectionist having the mistaken idea that giving a bearing a bath should make it run a long while. The surplus oil just runs off, doing the bearing no possible good and causing damage a-plenty otherwise. The proper lubrication for projector bearings is, as I have told you many, many times, just one drop of an oil recommended by the projector manufacturer, followed by another one drop within a reasonable time. If metallic bearings and parts working under stress are not properly lubricated, they will wear out very rapidly.

Cheap oil is just about the most expensive thing a theatre manager can buy. You may safely rely upon the recommendation of the maker of your projector. It is altogether to his interest to have his projectors perform well, hence even if he does recommend an oil he himself sells, making a profit on it, it is more than safe to say it will be in your interest to pay that profit. You may get an "oil" at half the price he asks, but you will pay much more for it later on.

So much for lubrication. Now let us consider a second source of trouble that is amazingly prevalent—excessive aperture tension. A moment of serious thought should convince almost anyone at all conversant with the operation of motion picture projectors that it very largely works under or against the stress of the braking friction set up by the friction of the tension shoes pressing upon the film as it passes under the gate. Remove this friction and the inertia of the film and intermittent movement parts would be too slight to cause appreciable wear in a year of steady running at standard projection speed. Not only is that true, but if tension pressure could be eliminated there would be little or no tendency towards emulsion deposit, regardless of how green the film might be.

Admitting the truth of this, it then logically follows that any excess in tension pressure, above that necessary to insure proper operation, automatically increases the strain and therefore the wear upon all parts of the driving mechanism, including current consumption by the motor and added wear upon its bearings; added wear upon all gears driving the intermittent movement, and their bearings as well, all parts of the intermittent movement, including the intermittent sprocket teeth that must bear the brunt of pulling the film down against the excess tension. And in addition to all this, there is the added strain and wear upon the film itself, not infrequently so severe that the sprocket holes are cracked, torn or badly strained.

Nor is this all, for common sense tells us that since excessive tension means an unnecessarily heavy pressure of the tension shoes upon the film, naturally there will be added tendency to pick up bits of emulsion if the film be in any degree green, or to pick up bits of excess film cement from dry film, and thus produce a condition imperilling the prints.

Notwithstanding the fact that a very large percentage of projectors in use have a tension much too high, there is no very practicable manner of securing evenness of tension pressure on both side of the film. It is, indeed, an extremely difficult proceeding to adjust the tension properly; also, since the springs providing the tension are merely thin strips of spring steel about ⅛-inch wide, which are intermittently subjected to high temperature (if you doubt that just stick the end of your finger in where they are) these springs are not at all stable. The pressure they exert changes, hence they should have frequent adjustment.

As matters now stand there is no commendable method by which projectionists can adjust tension properly. Several suggestions have been made for measuring the pull necessary to move the film under tension pressure, but they are for several reasons not very practicable. The method set forth in my new Bluebook of Projection is the best yet set forth, but it too has serious faults, chief of which is its difficulty of application, which means that tests will not be made often enough.

For years I have tried to get projector manufacturers to supply two things: first, a tension that will automatically equalize the pressure on both side of the film; and second, a tension adjustment in really practicable form, with an adjustment knob that may be reached and manipulated without asbestos gloves. Only deaf ears have been turned to my plea.

The reasons offered for such refusal have been that many men would "fool with it too much" and abuse both the mechanism and the film by jamming it down too tight.

In the first place that argument cannot possibly apply to an automatic equalization of tension on both sides of the film. If you think it is thus equalized, examine the device itself and be convinced. It is equal only if both of those little strips of bent steel happen to exert the same pressure. As to abuses, it is quite possible, but practically all projectors and all film are abused by excess tension—and right here and now I say they are! Of all the tension tests I have made, scarcely one projector mechanism (and that where the projectionist had followed the Bluebook instructions as best he could) was found in which the speed could not be increased to 110 feet per minute (20 feet above normal) without unsteadiness or overshooting, and in several cases the speed was increased to as fast as I dared to crank the mechanism without any apparent effect.

I believe we have every right, at this stage of advancement in projection affairs, to demand a tension adjustment in really practicable form. I have every sympathy with projector manufacturers and their troubles, but this is something they owe to projection, to projectionists and to the exhibitor. If, say, two or three thousand of you will write me indorsing this proposal I will again take the matter up and see if we cannot get somewhere with it.

Get busy, spend three cents and a bit of energy. I want at least two bushels of letters to show the manufacturers. All you have to do is to write saying you want a tension adjustment and tension equalization. I should like to hear from some of the local unions also.

PLEASE WRITE LEGIBLY

My mail is very heavy. It requires much time, and very often reading and answering it is delayed by poorly written letters. I must ask that letters be written in such manner that they may be easily read. Handwriting is all right, if properly done, penciled letters give the most trouble. Typewrite your communications if you can. If not, then write plainly and legibly, preferably in ink, and all will be well.

WAGE PROBLEM OF A SMALL THEATRE

BEFORE ME lies a letter voicing complaint that reaches me quite frequently, though not always just in this form. In quoting from it I must omit, for obvious reasons, the name and location of the writer. He says:

"I own and manage the smallest and only independent theatre in this city. It seats a little more than 200; prices, 15 cents for adults, and 10 cents for children. Rent is high, as also is electric power, light and film rentals. But by far our most disproportionate expense is wages for the operators. Daily, except Saturdays and Sundays, we show from 7 to 11 p.m.; Saturdays and Sundays, 2 to 11 p.m. We must pay the operators $29 each per week, or $58 for the two.

"I myself work from 7 a.m. until 11 p.m. each day. My sister tends door, and dad is cashier. Except for the operators, it is rather a family affair, but we are able to make only barely enough to have something to eat and keep a roof over our heads.

"Possibly from this you will assume we give a poor show, but that is not true. We have the best sound in the city. Our seats are air-cushioned, the aisles well lighted and carpeted. I ask you, Mr. Richardson, is it right that I should be compelled to work all day and half the night and my family work too, all of us almost without pay, while the operators drain $240 a month out of the receipts? To me it seems outlandish and unfair!

"Could you tell me, could I, without union interference, act as assistant operator, leaving the chief operator at his post. I am no greenhorn. I selected and bought the equipment, am a college graduate who passed the course in sound, light and electricity. Can you offer any helpful suggestions. I believe you to be fairminded. I read your department and am impressed with the idea that you try to hew to the line and be fair. Please, therefore, try to help me in this matter."

I am printing this letter almost as written, for the reason that many managers of small theatres find themselves in exactly the same position, which to them seems totally unfair. I can understand the rather bitter struggle they are making; also, exactly how they feel about it. But I think the struggle tends to make it impossible for them to examine the "other side" of the matter with an open mind.

It is not fair, of course, that any man or woman should work hard for long hours merely to get enough to eat and to provide shelter, and where that is the situation there is something very radically wrong. We are each and every one justly entitled to more than that. But is it quite fair that in order to provide better conditions for some, the living conditions of others, who themselves have barely enough to live on, should be lowered?

Your projectionists (I assume that is what they really are) are not in any degree to blame for the situation. The seating capacity is too low, as also is the admission price, though conditions may compel the latter. It is just as much work and requires exactly as much skill to project pictures properly before audiences of 200 as it does before audiences of 2,000. It is not so much that your projectionists are overpaid as it is that you are underpaid. Whether or not the scale is too high depends wholly upon the ability of the men themselves. If they are merely "machine operators" it is much too high. If they are projectionists it is scarcely high enough.

Diagram showing specifications of revised 2,000-foot reel (see page 6). The specifications call for an outside diameter of 15 inches, a hub diameter of 5 inches, and an inside clear width of 1½ inches. Center bushing must fit standard rewind and projection machine spindles, and have a ⅛ by ⅛ inch keyway. Access hole is to be provided in each flange adjacent to film slot, with minimum diameter of 3 inches. Material must be steel with anti-corrosive plating or coating, or non-corrosive alloy.

As to the remuneration of the exhibitor himself, that is determined by the fortunes of business. The projectionists receive a fixed sum each week, regardless of whether the theatre returns a profit or not; but if the theatre cleared $2,000 a week, they would still receive exactly the same sum.

In this case it is possible that you might increase attendance by working on the schools, churches and women's clubs. It is done to advantage by many exhibitors.

Having considered everything carefully, you might seek permission to appear before a regular meeting of the projectionists' union to lay the matter frankly before them in a friendly spirit, to see if some sort of solution cannot be worked out. Possibly some concession might be found practicable, though since you are in competition with other theatres a lowering of wages would not appear to be practicable. Competing exhibitors doubtless would instantly demand a similar cut.

PROPER OIL FOR PROJECTOR MECHANISM

JERRY KARR, projectionist of the Orpheum theatre in Okmulgee, Okla., writes, "Please advise as to price of the new bluebook and tell me whether or not the brand of oil named is good to use on projector mechanisms."

The price of the Bluebook is $5.25 by mail. I am not acquainted with the brand of oil you name.

At least two very different grades of oil are necessary on modern projector mechanisms for best results. I strongly advise you to obtain your manager's consent to order a supply of the oil recommended by the projector manufacturer for the intermittent movement. It will pay him well to do so. You may use any good, rather light oil on the gears. A light oil applied frequently tends to keep the dust and dirt washed off and thus to prevent the grinding that wears them out rapidly when a heavy oil mixed with dust and dirt remains on them, as it tends to do.

HAVE YOU A SLOW PICK-UP?

FRED W. WALLS, projectionist of Lisbon, N. Dak., writes, "I have been following the 'Bluebook School' in the HERALD some while, finding it to be both interesting and instructive. I ordered volumes one, two and three of the Bluebook but our jobber only had volume one. Can you advise where volumes two and three may be obtained?

"Inclosed find two clippings from an RKO leader for your inspection. You will note that beginning with the fourth frame beyond the figure 7, the film has been over-heated and warped out of level, each frame just a little more than the previous one. I have noticed this in several features.

"It seems to me, Brother Richardson,

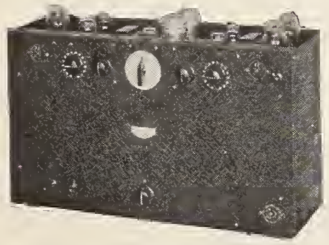
PHOTOTONE TRIPLE AMPLIFIER SYSTEM



In this amplifier are housed the three circuits that make Phototone SSS-3 the marvelous box-office producer that it is. All controls are on one panel: all tubes instantly accessible and constantly visible. Easy for the projectionist—delightful for the audience—profitable for you.

At last! Ever since you first heard a sound film you have wished shows could be like those given by Phototone SSS-3! The high frequencies are separated from the low and the voice range from both. Each is reproduced by a circuit and a speaker designed for it.

Voices are clear and natural, with no lisp or edge to the S. Bass tones are rich and true; treble sounds are pure, without any "mandolin tinkle" or "ukulele flatness." When you first hear it you'll say "I MUST get a Phototone SSS-3 right away—there's real money in a house that gives shows like this!"

Phototone SSS-3 is completely self-contained—all three amplifier circuits are housed in one cabinet, compact, accessible, handsome. The rectifier gives smooth, humless current for the exciter lamp. The screen speakers are perfectly balanced with the other units and a two-speaker monitor is included.

that some fellow projectionists using high-intensity arcs are just a bit careless and are verging on fire danger. The fact that the trouble always occurs between five and seven would seem to indicate that the offender or offenders have projectors with a very slow pick-up. The fact that the damage is so close to the start mark makes it appear that the projector is set into motion and the dowser opened almost in the same instant. I trust this will interest some of the H. I. brothers and that the damage will cease."

What Brother Walls says is supported by the clippings, though I am puzzled by the fact that in one of them the center of each warp comes almost exactly at a frame line. Apparently some "machine operator is starting out of frame," and that gives me an idea. It makes me doubt the high-intensity suggestion. I believe it is being done by someone using a front shutter and probably one of the reflector type low-intensity lamps which, with the front shutter, produces a very torrid spot. Surely no theatre large enough to use a high-intensity lamp would tolerate starting out of frame. It looks more like a front shutter hot spot, plus some village five-dollar-a-week schoolboy. However, thanks for bringing the matter to our attention.

Many village projectionists are quite competent, but unfortunately some village theatres "save" a few dollars a week by employing some kid whose projection knowledge consists chiefly in knowing that when he closes some switch a lot of wheels start going 'round. Of course in the end that theatre loses several times what is "saved."

As to the fifth edition of the Bluebook, copies are all gone. However, the new sixth edition, just published, is complete. This book may be obtained from the Quigley Bookshop, 1790 Broadway, New York, or at theatre supply dealers. The price is $5 plus 25 cents for mailing.

FROM DAUGHTER TO POP: A REPORT

RECENTLY I got a letter from my daughter a few hours after she had escaped from my house, as follows:

"Dear Dad: Here I am at Stamford, N. Y., about 170 miles from the Great White Way. I am stopping at a five-story hotel which, until my arrival, contained just one paying guest. While here I visited a small theatre, one of the Smalley chain. Driving past I saw a gentleman out front whom I took to be (and darned if he wasn't!) its manager. Your darling daughter, wondering if her dad was as well known as he should be, stopped and addressed the gentleman, asking if he was the manager. He said yes, so then I asked:

"Do you happen to know F. H. Richardson?"

"Certainly," he replied. "He writes for MOTION PICTURE HERALD and BETTER THEATRES. Most motion picture men know him."

So then I introduced him to myself and we had a real nice visit. Mr. Wesley Tefft, the manager, was once a projectionist, but was so well liked that presently the company promoted him to manager, and a bit later made him manager of this very nice 795-seat theatre.

"In the projection room I met Mr. Howard West, projectionist. The room and equipment were clean and apparently in good order, though the room itself was small. It contained two Simplex projectors equipped with Peerless low-intensity. There was also an effect projector and two discs used for music between shows.

"The lower half of the room was painted a dark gray, with (get this) passionate tangerine on its upper portion. Projection distance, 108 feet with practically no angle."

Well, I guess that saves her a spanking.

CHICKEN LIVERS AND PROJECTION

HERE'S ONE that contains a good laugh and something to think about. It comes from the wife of a projectionist in Cleveland. She writes:

"Dear Mr. Richardson: I am merely a projectionist's wife, with three husky children to look after. Now I suppose you are asking, 'Well, what are you bothering me for?' My husband's manager sends his copy of BETTER THEATRES to the projection room when he has read it so we can keep our copy right here in the house. I read your Comments, and believe it or not, they have made a projection fan of me. The 'Bluebook School' in the HERALD I am very much against, however, for as soon as it comes, my lord and master (he thinks) buries his nose in it and simply growls if I so much as speak to him.

"Have chicken livers ever been mentioned in your columns? I think not, but one of your articles in a recent issue reminded me of something that happened in the grocery-meat store at which we trade.

"I had to wait several minutes for a clerk. On the counter was a large platter piled with oozy, gooey looking chicken livers, from which ran an ugly smear of blood. Many women looked at them, turned up their noses and bought something else, even though they were specially priced for the day.

"When my turn came I spoke to the clerk, suggesting that he put most of them out of sight, place the rest in pound containers set level so that there would be no visible drainage, and garnish the tops of the containers with sprigs of parsley. As an experiment he agreed to do so while I waited to see the result. Seven out of the next eleven customers bought those specially priced chicken livers!

"And now, Mr. Richardson, if we change chicken livers to screen image and sound we have your article in a nutshell—or butcher shop."

While amusing, this letter carries plenty of food for thought by theatre managers who are permitting (or in some cases compelling) a smeary mess of screen image and sound to be placed before their customers, and then wondering why seat sales are so few. If they would clean up the goods offered, garnish the screen with a beautifully lighted, knife-sharp picture, and pack the loudspeakers with real naturalness in sound that is carried at proper

SOUND INTENSITY AND FREQUENCY

D. P. JOHNSON of Salem, Ore., asks, "Will you explain just what is the difference between frequency and intensity in sound?"

The physical intensity of sound is the vibration energy transmitted per second through a unit of cross-section of the sound wave under investigation. It records itself in the human ear as loudness. Frequency, on the other hand, is the number of sound waves per second. It records itself in the ear as pitch.

We are told that the range of sound intensities to which the human ear responds is enormous; that a painfully loud sound at about 1,000 cycles has some two and one-half trillions as much physical energy as a barely audible sound at the same pitch.

As a matter of general interest I might add, while I am at it, that unless otherwise stated, intensity level of any sound means the number of decibels it is above the lowest sound that can be heard. Here are a few informative examples:

A low whisper or the rustle of leaves, 20 decibels; faint sound, as quiet conversation, 20 to 40 decibels; moderate, as ordinary conversation, 40 to 60 decibels; loud, as telephone conversation, 60 to 80 decibels; very loud, as pneumatic drill, 80 to 100 decibels.

50 YEARS OF LOYAL SERVICE REWARDED

A RATHER amazingly complete and excellent projection department, in which are many projectors, thousands of stereopticon slides and a great number of motion picture-sound films, is maintained by the National Cash Register Company of Dayton, Ohio. All this is used in advertising and in providing motion picture shows in the great auditorium to which all employes are invited. There, without charge, they may spend the noon hour, eat their lunches and enjoy a motion picture.

This department is under the supervision of our old friend Otto Nelson, who entered the employ of the National Cash Register at its beginning, fifty years ago. Otto is known to many of us. He is a quiet, unassuming man who knows his business well. He attends almost every meeting of the SMPE and keeps right up-to-date.

On October 7, Mr. Nelson was called to the executive office of the company, where President Patterson presented him with a beautiful gold watch, chain and knife, in recognition of his fifty years of faithful, efficient service.

PLANNING THE THEATRE

A SERVICE CONDUCTED BY PETER M. HULSKEN, A. I. A.

The Question:

I AM GOING to build a theatre which will seat about 400 people. I intend to build as cheap as possible. I can purchase tile at a very cheap price and by the use of Celotex in the interior the cost will be somewhat diminished.

I would like to know what size lot I would need. Please give your measurements for the lobby and the inside, also the size of length and width of the building. May I have the above answered by your next issue?—M. D.

The Answer:

THE MOST satisfactory plan for you is one with a center bank of 12 seats with an aisle on each side, and two wall banks of four seats each across. This will make the overall width of the building 44 feet.

To obtain 400 seating capacity, you will require 20 rows or 50 feet. The lobby should be about 12 feet deep, 18 to 20 feet wide. Make stage 15 feet, add to this wall thickness and space between front row of seats and stage apron, space for cooling plant, etc. A lot 44x100 feet will be large enough to accommodate such a theatre.

The lowest estimate of the cost of such a building is 14,000.

The Question:

WILL YOU PLEASE tell me the ideal size for a picture house if one was building a new one to hold about 500, and the cheapest and best construction? I have almost decided to build a new building instead of remodeling the garage on the lot as I first intended. I am sending a sketch of the lot and present building. As the building is now located next to the post office lot nothing will ever be built that will shut off the idea from the street on two sides. But is 100 feet from the street a bad feature, and is the parking space of too great value to sacrifice?—F. R. H.

The Answer:

I AM GLAD that you have decided to build a new building instead of remodeling the old one, which should be torn down anyway. Your sketch shows your location worth a rating of between 75% and 80% and right at the beginning of the business section, which center generally is considered 100%.

A parking lot is not usually considered an attraction for a theatre, and if you plan your theatre according to my suggestions, you do not even have to sacrifice the parking space, as enough room will be left behind the theatre and along side passage court to accommodate nearly as many cars as the former parking space allowed.

NOTE:

IN THIS department Better Theatres will be glad to answer questions pertaining to the preliminary consideration involved in the planning of a new theatre or in the remodeling of an existing one. Only requests for ideas will be answered, since this department cannot assume the practical functions of an architect. All communications intended for this department should be addressed to Better Theatres, 1790 Broadway, New York.

The most economical plan for a 500 seating capacity is a center bank of thirteen seats with an aisle on each side and two wall banks of seven seats each across. This will make the width of your building 56 feet, and as the width of your lot is 81 feet there will be left 25 feet for side passage court. This court can be used for parking, and available for the same purpose is the space in the rear of the theatre, which will be approximately 85x90 feet.

The cheapest and best construction is one employing fireproof materials.

The Question:

I HAVE READ your Planning the Theatre with a great deal of interest, and as I am confronted with a very difficult problem, I am asking your advice. This house was originally built for a store building, but was remodeled into the old opera house type of theatre some years ago. The inside dimensions are as follows:

North to south, 85 feet, 6 inches; east to west, 88 feet, 3 inches. The west portion of the roof is supported by a truss, which in turn is supported by a column on either side of the auditorium. These columns are 66 feet, 6 inches apart, inside measurement, which leave a space of 66 feet, 6 inches by 88 feet, 3 inches for foyer, auditorium and stage. Inasmuch as these columns are set in approximately 10 feet from outside walls, it leaves plenty of room for lobby, office, women's and men's rooms, etc., on the ground floor without using any of the space mentioned above for them.

I wish to remodel the auditorium and cut the stage down from its present depth, 29 feet, to just sufficient depth to play vaudeville. I am contemplating gutting the building completely and rebuilding to get the best result with the space I have. There is a balcony at present and plenty of height, but I wish to get as large a proportion of the seats on the first floor as possible without cramping width of aisles or distance between seats, and would like to get as near 750 seats as possible, keeping the balcony as shallow as possible to reduce cost of construction.

Please advise proper slope for floor in a building of this size and which is preferable steps, or uniform slope.

The walls of the building are brick, stuccoed over. What construction would you advise for the auditorium and what ceiling height? I expect to employ an architect, but there are several ways of doing this and I am sure this is the most economical if I can get a satisfactory result. Hope I have not imposed too much on your good nature.—J. E. S.

The Answer:

ACCORDING TO THE description of the building in your inquiry, I come to the conclusion that the space for the auditorium proper will be 66 feet, 6 inches by 88 feet, 3 inches and that on each side of same there will be spaces 10 feet by 88 feet, 3 inches, which may be used for lobby, foyer, offices, women's and men's rooms, exits and dressing rooms.

If a stage 15 feet deep is satisfactory, you may be able to obtain a seating capacity on the lower floor of 700 seats.

Since the foyer is to one side of the auditorium, it will be necessary to provide a wide cross-aisle in about the center between stage and auditorium wall.

I cannot see the benefit of a ramp to lead to the balcony because it takes too much room. A stairway properly designed with short flights is in my opinion just as good or better and takes less floor space.

A slope of 3 feet, 6 inches for the lower floor will be satisfactory. This is based on leaving level the floor under the first four rows of seats near the stage. A uniform slope in the auditorium is preferable to steps. Divide floor space in 15-foot sections, add 9 inches to first section near stage, to second section 12 inches, third section 15 inches, etc.

The proscenium arch should be about 40 feet wide and 30 feet high. The ceiling height of the auditorium is governed by the height of the last rows of seats in balcony and should be 8 feet, 6 inches above same.

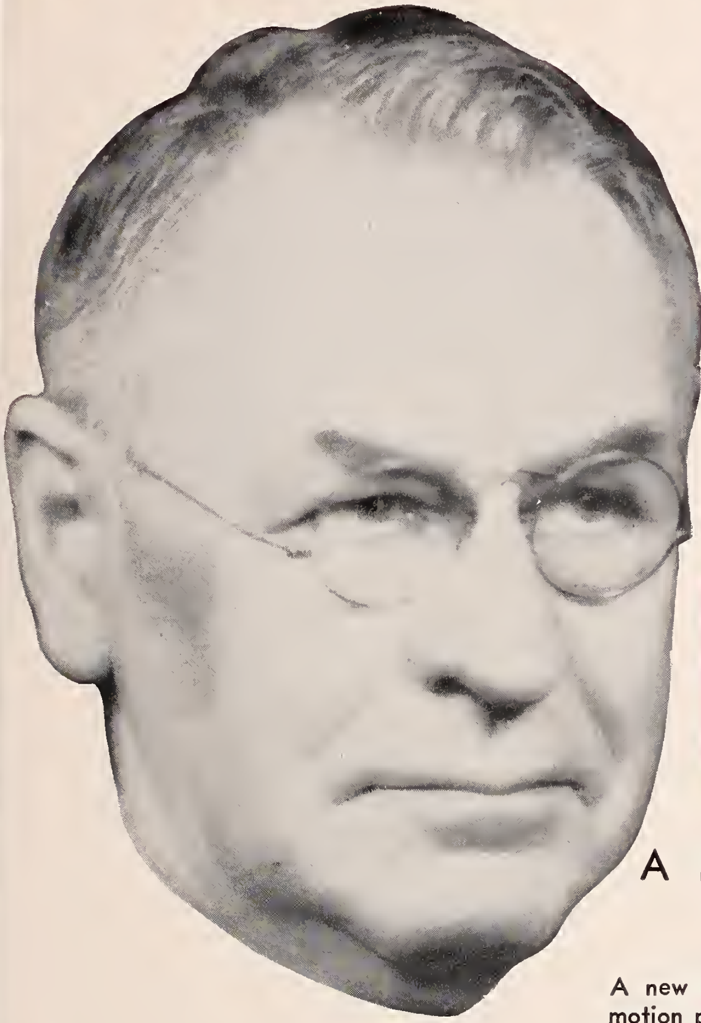
ANSWERS ALL PROJECTION PROBLEMS!!



Sixth Edition of

F. H. RICHARDSON'S

BLUE BOOK OF PROJECTION

A PRACTICAL GUIDE TO GOOD PROJECTION AND QUICK TROUBLE-SHOOTING

A new Bluebook by Richardson is always an event of signal importance to the motion picture industry. It is being issued at this time to meet the truly urgent demand of thousands of users of the old Bluebooks for an accurate, modern evaluation of the changes and refinements in the art and science of sound reproduction and projection including all the apparatus. Richardson's expert knowledge of the craft he has taught and followed for more than three decades makes this latest treatise, in the opinion of leading authorities, the most comprehensive, most useful projection manual ever published.

700 Pages of Text, Charts and Data

The new Bluebook contains 700 pages and 153 illustrations—photographs and schematics of every description. It is 6x9 in size with large readable type for easy visibility in the projection room under all conditions. It is entirely original from cover to cover, not a line of type from any of the many previous editions being used. Its low price of $5.25 and its handiness in one volume are among the many innovations.

1 IN ONE HANDY VOLUME

The new Bluebook is complete in one handy volume. It is a great improvement over the former expensive and cumbersome three-volume sets.

2 COMPLETE and UP-TO-DATE

The new Bluebook does a three-fold job: (1) it gives a detailed description of the construction, wiring and functioning of every piece of sound and projection apparatus used in a modern projection room. (2) It gives all the instructions for the operation and maintenance of this equipment and (3) it contains a complete trouble-shooting department as a first-aid in breakdowns.

3 QUICK-FINDING INDEX

An extremely simple but comprehensive indexing system makes the new Blue Book a truly great aid to working projectionists. Whatever problem comes up in the day's routine is covered on the instant with hardly more than the twirl of your thumb. Projectionists of long experience in the projection room will be first to appreciate this remarkable time-saver.

4 QUICK TROUBLE-SHOOTER

And it is, within its 700 pages, a practical trouble-shooter, which alone entitles it to a place in every projectionists tool kit.

WHOSE VOTE COUNTS?

A CERTAIN dumb humor attaches to the implications of the comment of the New York Herald Tribune, in connection with the announcement of the organization of the New York Film Critics and their annual award, saying: "The critics make no bones of the fact that they hope to oust the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences from its position of chief judge of what is meritorious in films."

The Academy awards, interesting as they are, represent what Hollywood thinks best of its own efforts. The award is tremendously interesting to Hollywood.

The decisions of the New York critics will be very interesting to the critics—also the winners will quote the critics, conspicuously.

Meanwhile, let it be considered germane to suggest that the box office champions, monthly and annually announced on the basis of the public cash vote in the pages of Motion Picture Herald and the Box Office Check-Up, represent evaluation of the pictures and their people by the customers for whom they are made. Again, Motion Picture Herald's annual poll of the showmen of the nation on the "Ten Best Money Makers" among the players would also seem to be a shade more significant. If motion pictures are made for the customers, the answers will be found in Motion Picture Herald.

Critics write for readers—pictures are for lookers.

FOR THE TROMBONE

PROFESSOR JOHN (Helen of Troy) ERSKINE, in Kansas City to lecture on cultural matters, confided to an interviewer for the Star that: "musical expression of our times still fumbles for birth." He feels that today has "struggles that cry to art for expression." There is a probability, however, that the whole job of scoring the present picture could be done quite adequately with one slip-horn in the back of a tank town barbershop.

MR. JOLSON GETS FUNNY

WEDDINGS attended by the children of the contracting parties are always likely to develop moments of embarrassment, and even Hollywood is whispering its annoyance and concealed discomfort at the publicity aspects of the radio-screen "wedlock" ceremonies attendant upon the opening of NBC's studio pumping station in Melrose Avenue the other night.

Undoubtedly with the best intent in the world, Mr. Merlin H. Aylesworth in behalf of the National Broadcasting Company had his good friend, Mr. Will Hays, there to speak for the screen.

And no doubt Mr. Al Jolson, officiating as master of ceremonies, thought he was running just a Hollywood party for the local talent and audience, when he gave the networks of the nation, right from the motion picture's production capital, the shock of sallies of ridicule addressed at the man who represents the industry before the world. Mr. Jolson repeatedly reached for a bon mot and dragged down a large faux pas.

In the more conscious upper brackets of Hollywood's personages there is a sensation kindred to that produced when the small son of the household breaks into the parlor and spills the beans before company.

This untoward happening is another of the incidental ripples that betray the objection of some parts of the production community to the regulative aspects of the industry's trade association and the functioning of the men who serve them.

Just now it would seem most important to impress upon this faction of the picture makers that the elements of the American taste and the forces expressing it that at last brought the Production Code into existence and empowered it are constants, not expressions of a flurry of agitation.

Some slight indication of the inadequacy of the acceptance and promulgation in the Hollywood community of the nature, purpose and status of the Production Code and its Administration is afforded in the sad humor of the fact that when the NRA Blue Eagle Code blew up in Washington two Los Angeles city editors, on big papers, called up the Producers Association to ask "What will Joe Breen and his staff do now?"

LET AMERICA VOTE, TOO

THE problems in international relations posed by the project to produce the tremendous story of "Musa Dagh," as pointedly discussed by Mr. Martin Quigley in Motion Picture Herald of December 7, serve to make exceedingly clear once again that the motion picture has before it practical considerations as an industry that would not obtain if it were an independent medium of expression—just an art. Because the motion picture is international merchandise it must be concerned about such extraneous matters as the attitude of Turkey and those to whom Turkey can talk turkey. The motion picture industry seems to be able to understand that clearly enough. Therefore it should be expected to understand, quite as readily, the attitude of a great American majority. The millions at home count, too.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S

More Taxes

A law of which not many in the industry are aware, but of far-reaching scope, goes into effect January 1, and will immediately be applied in nine states and the District of Columbia.

This is the Social Security Act, which levies a payroll tax on the employer, as his contribution to state unemployment insurance funds. An income tax on employees and an excise payroll tax on employers are also to be levied for old-age pensions.

All employers of eight or more persons—in some states fewer—are affected, and these must comply with the federal and state regulations, or suffer penalties.

An explanation of the law, and how it affects the employer, is contained in the story starting on page 36. A chart showing the state regulations in tabular form will be found on page 13.

Rothacker Named

The uncertainty of the future permanent construction of Paramount's top executive management in Hollywood production ended this week with the elevation of Watterson R. Rothacker to the post in complete charge and the continuance of his associates, Ernst Lubitsch, Henry Herzbrun and George Bagnall.

Other Paramount plans, such as an outline of the new $250,000 advertising campaign to be launched in daily newspapers throughout the country, the conclusion of S. A. Lynch's work as advisor to the trustees, the appeal of claim holders from the reduction of lawyers' fees and an increase of the common stock of the company on the New York Stock Exchange are all discussed in the story found on page 33.

Sabath Witness

An extended investigation of motion picture company reorganizations by the Sabath Congressional committee was indicated this week when Joseph P. Kennedy, former head of Pathe, was called from Palm Beach, Fla., to testify before the committee meeting in New York, on the financial history of both RKO and Pathe.

The Sabath committee's study of film company reorganizations will also embrace financial reorganizations of Fox Film and phases of its recent merger with Twentieth Century, Murray W. Garsson, counsel for the committee, said Tuesday. In addition, the committee is continuing its study of the General Theatre Equipment reorganization and that of Paramount Publix, both of which which were begun some time ago. The pending reorganizations of the Paramount theatre subsidiaries, Mullin and Pinanski Theatres and Olympia Theatres, will also be explored by the committee, it was said.

Harley L. Clarke, former president of Fox Film, who was scheduled to testify before the committee on Tuesday, on both the Fox and GTE reorganizations, was excused until Thursday to permit Mr. Garsson and Meyer Kraushaar, attorney for the committee, to complete their questioning of Paramount officials begun Monday in closed hearings. John D. Hertz, Paramount director and partner in Lehman Brothers, which has investments in Paramount, RKO, Twentieth Century-Fox and Warner Brothers in conjunction with the Atlas Corporation, was on the stand both Monday and Tuesday. He was followed Wednesday by Adolph Zukor, John E. Otterson and members of the Paramount board.

The questioning of Mr. Clarke Thursday will also be during a closed session, but the hearing will be opened to the press and public when Mr. Kennedy, former Securities Exchange Commission head, testifies on Friday.

No Chance

Chance games at motion picture theatres this week lost two decisions in the fight that still rages nationally to establish their legal status in municipal and state courts. Boston's mayor, Frederick Mansfield banned Bank Night and a grand jury in Texas recommended their discontinuance. Regardless, advances were made in the extension of the policy in Kansas City, Chicago, Pittsburgh and New York.

Following a special hearing, Mayor Mansfield of Boston declared Corporation Counsel Foley had classed the game a lottery, and therefore illegal in the city. Warnings had been previously sent out that the city was frowning on the games, and arguments of George S. Ryan and Roy Heffner for Bank Night and of exhibitors were of no avail.

Anti-Trust Suits

Little time was wasted this week in furthering the progress of two "key" anti-trust suits as instigated by independent exhibitors against the larger distributors as Samuel Friedman's suit against eight companies went to trial in Pittsburgh and as January 6th was set as the date for the beginning of the trial of the United States government's equity case against Warner Brothers, Paramount and RKO in the St. Louis-Fanchon and Marco matter.

Other actions started in Detroit and in Lincoln, Nebraska, along with the acquittal of Sol A. Rosenblatt of any "improper action" at the recent St. Louis criminal indictment case by the receipt by him of a letter from Attorney General Homer S. Cummings in Washington. See page 50.

One Big Union

Welding of "one big union" of all creative talent in Hollywood is the aim of various groups active on the West Coast. This appears in connection with the closer affiliation between the Screen Actors' Guild on the Coast and Actors' Equity Association in New York, recently effected through modification of their original working agreement.

Similar steps are being taken by the Screen Writers' Guild in its tie-in with the Authors' League of America. Behind these moves is the aim to force producer recognition in collective bargaining.

The developments are related in the story on page 42. Full text of the modified Equity-Screen Actors' Guild agreement will be found on page 44.

NEWS SUMMARY COVERING THE SCREEN WORLD

Music Taxes

Warner Brothers will not levy a music tax on exhibitors, relying on collections from radio stations for revenue for its 11 music subsidiaries which are scheduled to break away from ASCAP at the end of this month, according to reports in New York this week.

It was also reported that Warner has offered to license radio stations on terms corresponding to two-fifths of what they now pay to ASCAP in music fees. The Warner-ASCAP-radio music situation must be determined in less than two weeks.

Meanwhile in Canada a federal order is expected soon to reduce music taxes which were raised to as high as 20 cents a seat for theatres last January. A royal commission investigating the music tax situation has recommended a return to 1931 rates.

This action, as well as revision of the copyright laws in the Dominion and other music tax legislation, is forecast as a result of the recent inquiry. Details of the developments in both countries will be found in the stories starting on page 38.

Memorial

The national organization in charge of the Will Rogers memorial fund campaign formally closed the drive this week, although sponsors decided that any one who still wishes to give to the memorial may do so. Final reports still are to be received from many of the 2,727 local committees which functioned throughout the United States and Canada to collect subscriptions to perpetuate the memory of the cowboy humorist.

No announcement of the total subscriptions received will be made until final reports have been obtained from all the local organizations and the various other agencies, such as banks and municipal departments, which were designated in the course of the drive as official depositories for contributions.

When the financial report is completed, the memorial commission of the fund will meet to determine the exact form which the memorial is to take. This commission, which includes in its membership Herbert Hoover, Charles G. Dawes, Henry Ford, John N. Garner, Jesse Jones, Alfred E. Smith, Fred Stone, Patrick J. Hurley and Owen D. Young, has already agreed that handicapped children of the nation are to be the principal beneficiaries of the fund.

Some last minute participations by the film industry in the drive included a Will Rogers Memorial show held in Kansas City last week which raised approximately $3,700. More than 11,500 people attended the performance, which was in charge of George Goldman, H. F. McElroy, Jr., Ernest Mehl, Landon Laird and H. P. Wolfberg.

In San Francisco a joint appeal by Morgan Walsh, head of the Independent Theatre Owners of Northen California, and A. M. Bowles, president of the California Theatres Association, to exhibitors was responsible for the placing of Will Rogers Memorial Posters, pledge pads and boxes for donations in lobbies of nearly 300 theatres in Northern California. Theatremen there are also planning a monster benefit performance, in which all local showmen will cooperate. No date for the affair has been set as yet, however.

Union Objectives

The IATSE, victor over its competitor, IBEW, in the recent bitter engagement to win back from IBEW the jurisdiction over Hollywood studio union affairs, a victory which last week averted a nationwide IATSE strike in theatres, evidently will not be content until it extends its "closed shop" demands and jurisdiction over production in the east. This, and other union developments, such as the suit filed against Local 306, IATSE affiliate, in New York, and the conditions on the coast, are discussed in a story found on page 26.

Monopoly Charged

Counsel for the Raytheon Manufacturing Company of Massachusetts told the supreme court in Washington that the Radio Corporation of America "had attempted to monopolize the entire field of interstate commerce in radio apparatus."

RCA attorneys, including John W. Davis, asked the court to block a $15,000,000 anti-trust suit by the Raytheon company. Previous to oral argument this week they asserted that this claim was voided by an agreement between RCA and Raytheon under which Raytheon obtained use of patents and exemption from $1,500,000 in royalties.

Rubin Elected

J. Robert Rubin has been elected vice-president of Loew's, Inc., to fill the vacancy created by the recent resignation of David L. Loew. The other officers, from President Nicholas M. Schenck, were reelected last week at the directors' meeting, which was described as routine.

British Projects

That leading British circuits will go through with reported plans for expansion in collaboration with producing organizations is expected, but that London Films has a connection with the circuit program of County Cinema Corporation has not been confirmed, writes Bruce Allan, HERALD correspondent, from London.

That Union Cinema Company has a large development in prospect is generally agreed, but whether it will include production and distribution interests is still to be determined.

Sound City, Ltd., is increasing its capital by a stock offering. The story of British activities is on page 48.

Walker Resigns

Resignation of Frank C. Walker as executive director of the National Emergency Council was confirmed at the White House Wednesday. It was added that he had agreed to return to Government service as soon as his business affairs permit. Lyle C. Alverson was named acting director of the council.

Reports that Mr. Walker would retire from Government service to assume operating charge of the Comerford circuit followed the death of M. B. Comerford but were denied at the time by Walker.

M. E. Comerford, head of the circuit, has not fully recovered from an illness of last winter. These factors, it was reported, prompted Mr. Walker's return to take charge of the business of which he had been treasurer and general manager before joining President Roosevelt's Recovery Administration. It is expected that his time while he is serving with the Comerford theatre interests will be divided between the New York and Scranton, Pa., offices.

Join MPPDA

The regular quarterly meeting of the Hays organization directors held at the New York headquarters Wednesday resulted in the election of Harry D. Buckley, United Artists vice-president, as a member of the board, and the election to membership of the organization of Willis Bright, vice-president of Pathe Film.

There was also discussion relative to the registration of motion picture titles and the board authorized that arrangements be made for the registration of titles by foreign companies.

INDUSTRY FACES HUGE TAX FOR JOBLESS AND PENSIONS

Every Employer of Eight or More Persons in Film Business Must Pay One Per Cent of Payroll to Unemployment Insurance under Federal Act

Theatre owners, distributors, producers and others in the motion picture industry who employ eight or more persons will be required to pay a special tax in compliance with federal laws providing for unemployment compensation, effective January 1, 1936. Furthermore, employees as well as employers will be subject to another tax for old age pensions.

The great majority of theatremen are either unaware of the far-reaching scope of social security legislation or do not know what it means to them as employers.

Under the federal law, all employers of eight or more persons must pay a tax of one per cent on their payrolls, minus a credit for contributions to any state unemployment funds up to 90 per cent of the federal tax. Nine states now have unemployment insurance funds, and others are planning enactment of similar legislation. (See table on page 36.)

Widespread interest in the federal and state social security laws as it affects them as employers has been evidenced by the legal and accounting departments of the motion picture companies and theatre circuits in New York, and a study of the many phases is being conducted by the legal department of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America on behalf of producer-distributor members.

Old Age Pension Levy

The states having unemployment compensation laws and which are immediately affected are New York, Wisconsin, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, California, Oregon, Washington, Alabama and Utah. These states and the District of Columbia where such laws have been enacted represented 35 per cent of the entire payroll of the country, and the states which are expected to adopt such legislation in the next few months will bring this total to more than 50 per cent, according to A. J. Altmeyer, member of the Social Security Board.

Unemployment compensation is provided for in the federal Social Security Act passed at the last session of Congress. The act is a series of related measures intended to alleviate the principal causes of insecurity in our economic life by making provision also for old age security, aid to dependent children, public health measures and aid to the blind.

Home Offices Study Effects

Those engaged in the industry as employers are primarily interested in the sections relating to unemployment compensation and the excise (payroll) tax on employers of eight or more. The act does not set up a federal unemployment compensation system. It is intended merely to encourage, and to make it possible for, the states to establish their own unemployment compensation systems.

Home offices in New York of the large distributors and theatre circuits are studying the federal and state provisions, where they are available, to determine the extent to which enlarged or separate accounting departments may be required to fulfill the many requirements concerning keeping of records and reporting of payrolls. Also, companies having branch offices or theatre units in various states face the prospect of multiple accounting systems in accordance with the individual states' requirements.

The purpose outlined in the federal Social Security Act is accomplished (1) through grants-in-aid to the states for the administration of unemployment compensation laws; and (2) through the imposition of a uniform payroll tax on employers against which a credit is allowed for contributions made by them to unemployment compensation funds set up pursuant to state law.

Federal old-age benefit payroll taxes are an entirely separate proposition and have no relation to the state or federal unemployment insurance law, points out the Commerce Clearing House, Inc., a division of the Corporation Trust Company of New York.

The federal payroll tax imposed on employers of eight or more is in the nature of an excise tax on the privilege of employing persons. It is payable by any employer who has had eight or more in his employ at least one day a week for 20 weeks during the taxable year. But the taxable weeks need not be consecutive. The employees, who need not necessarily be the same people, need not all be employed at the same moment; it is enough if, during the day the total number is at least eight, says Commerce Clearing House.

No discrimination is made as to the type of business in which the employer is engaged except as certain services are not covered by this act. Among the few em-

IDENTIFICATION PLAN UNDER SECURITY TAX

The nation's 28,000,000 wage earners may receive social security "numbers" under an identification plan receiving careful scrutiny by officials of the Social Security Board as a possible solution to one of the vast administrative problems before them, reports the Associated Press.

If it proves feasible, a glance through the board's bulging card index system two years hence may show:

"No. 567,984, John Smith, New York, theatre manager.

"No. 689,321, Mary Smith, Hollywood, motion picture studio extra."

The idea behind this is that to determine how much an individual shall receive as an old-age pension, the Government must know not only how many years he has worked but also his salary for each year after 1938. Numbers would be used to facilitate record keeping and to prevent confusion in similarities of names.

Walter Hutchinson Fox Foreign Head

Walter J. Hutchinson, managing director for Twentieth Century-Fox in England, was officially named Tuesday general foreign manager for the company by Sidney R. Kent, president. He succeeds Clayton Sheehan, who resigned a few weeks ago.

Mr. Hutchinson is a veteran with Fox, being in point of service the oldest executive of the company. He organized all the Fox branches in the Far East and in Australia and New Zealand before being placed in charge in England, where he has been for 11 years.

Mr. Hutchinson will return to England soon to remain until his successor has been chosen and installed in London, and probably will come back to New York in March.

Cut Studio Press Credentials

Hollywood press correspondents who in the future will be granted studio credentials by the Producers' Association must show a circulation of 50,000, it was decided last week at a meeting of the studio publicity directors at the Hollywood office of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America. According to a check by the Producers' Ass'n, the list is now overcrowded with 290 accredited press correspondents.

WORKERS TO HELP PAY OLD AGE FUND

ployee exemptions, and the only one which appears to affect the motion picture industry, is service performed by an individual in the employ of his son, daughter or wife or husband, and service performed by a child under the age of 21 in the employ of his father or mother. Employers engaged in intrastate as well as interstate business are subject to the tax.

With respect to the federal old-age benefit payroll tax, the levy on employees, which is collected from the employer, and the excise tax on employers, measured by wages paid his employees, are designed, apparently, to raise funds for use in the federal old-age annuity or benefit system. All employers are subject to this tax and it does not matter whether they maintain private pension plans, unless, of course, the employment is exempted under provisions of the federal act.

The law specifies employment within the United States, and this would seem to exclude from the taxable payroll for unemployment insurance, wages paid for any employment outside the United States.

Contributions From Employers

Contributions to the unemployment insurance fund under the New York law and contributions under the federal payroll tax come exclusively from employers. No contributions are to be made by the state or employees. No person is to be relieved from payment on the ground he is engaged in interstate commerce. Contributions relating to old-age benefit systems are derived from an income tax on employees and an excise payroll tax on employers. The income tax on employees is, nevertheless, collected from the employer who must deduct the amount of the tax from the wages as and when paid to the employee. The employer is liable for the payment of this tax and is indemnified against the claims and demands of any person for the amount of any such payment.

The federal tax in connection with unemployment compensation is levied on the entire payroll regardless of the amount paid to employees. For the year 1936 the tax will be one per cent of the total payrolls of the employers subject thereto. This will be increased to two per cent for 1937 and three per cent for 1938 and thereafter. (Payroll tax requirements in states where such laws have been enacted is shown in the accompanying chart).

Credits Against Federal Tax

The credits given against the federal tax materially reduce the amount payable. The employer is credited with the amount of contributions which he may have paid into a state system of unemployment insurance that has been approved by the federal authorities. In no event may the credit exceed 90 per cent of the federal tax. Every employer, therefore, will have to pay at least 10 per cent of the federal tax. If the maximum credit is taken the federal rates will be 1/10 of one per cent of the total payroll of 1936; 1/10 of two per cent for 1937, and 1/10 of three per cent for 1938 and thereafter. However, due to exemption of employees paid at the rate of $2,500 a year under the New York law, the payroll tax in that state may in some instances be less than the credit allowed by the federal Government.

Under the New York law, contributions for 1936 will amount to one per cent of the total wages paid by employers having four or more employees engaged in non-exempted occupations. For 1937, the contributions will be two per cent and for 1938 and thereafter the annual contribution will be three per cent of the total annual payroll.

EMPLOYERS ADVISED TO CHECK ON LAWS

Since the unemployment compensation laws are effective January 1, unless delayed, it is to the advantage of employers in the motion picture industry in the states where such legislation has been enacted to acquaint themselves immediately with the requirements, according to the home office of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

Distributors and circuits who have offices or theatres in various states are advised to inquire into the status of unemployment laws in those states.

Complete information, as well as required or suggested forms for keeping records and making reports, in most instances can be obtained from the unemployment insurance commissioner at the state capital. In New York, upstate employers are to communicate with the Director of Unemployment Insurance at the Broadway Arcade Building in Albany, and employers in the New York metropolitan area are to address the Director at 342 Madison Avenue, New York City.

Old Age Tax

The tax for federal old age benefits is based on wages paid up to $3,000. During the calendar years 1937 to 1939, the rate is one per cent on employers and a similar rate on employees; for the years 1940 to 1942, the rates are 1½ per cent; for the years 1943 to 1945 they are two per cent; 1946 to 1948, two and a half per cent; and for the years following December 31, 1948, they are three per cent.

Additional unemployment insurance credits are allowed by the federal law where the state laws permit reduced contribution rates on account of stabilization of employment under so-called "merit rating" systems. The New York act directs the state advisory council to investigate the feasibility of establishing a rating system for individual employers or particular industries based on their employment records. It will, however, be necessary to amend the state law to put such a plan into operation. There is no provision in the present law for the exemption of employers who guarantee employment.

Collected by Revenue Bureau

The federal unemployment insurance tax is to be collected by the Bureau of Internal Revenue under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury and is to be paid as internal revenue collections. It is to be collected annually after the end of the taxable year in a fashion similar to the income tax. Thus the 1936 levy will not be paid until some time in 1937. Quarterly payments are permitted, subject to certain regulations.

Contributions under the New York act are to be paid into a fund to be known as "the unemployment insurance fund." Such contributions will accrue as of January, 1936, to be paid on or after March 1, 1936, and thereafter as prescribed by regulations. In the Instructions to Employers, released December 3, it was said in the accompanying letter that no contribution would be required before April 1, 1936. Upon default in any payments required the commissioner may bring civil action against the taxpayer.

For non-payment of the tax when due, the federal law imposes interest at the rate of one-half of one per cent per month from the date the tax becomes due until it is paid. In New York six per cent interest is assessed on delinquent contributions from the date on which they should have been paid.

Where an employer in New York pays less than he should a penalty of five per cent of the deficiency is assessed if such deficiency was not due to an intent to defraud, even though the rules and regulations were intentionally disregarded. In case of fraud, the penalty is 50 per cent of the total of the deficiency. The law provides that the amount due for contribution to the fund, with interest thereon, shall be a lien against the assets of the employer, subordinate, however, to claims for unpaid wages and prior recorded liens.

The New York Penalties

The New York act, in addition to penalties in connection with negligence or fraud on paying contributions and penalties for falsification of or failure to keep proper records, provides that any person who wilfully makes a false statement to obtain any benefit under the act for himself or another or to lower contributions paid to the fund, or who wilfully refuses or fails to pay a contribution, or refuses to allow authorized inspection of payrolls or other records, or any employer who deducts from the wages of an employee in order to pay contributions owed by the employer, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

The federal statute does not detail specific penalties, but provides that "all provisions of law (including penalties) applicable in respect of the taxes imposed by Section 600 of the Revenue Act of 1926, shall insofar as not inconsistent, be applicable in respect of the taxes imposed" by the Social Security Act. The same would apply to refunds and repayment of wrongfully collected taxes subject, however, to the statutes of limitation applicable thereto. The New York law makes no provision for adjustment or refunds of incorrect payments, and this point remains to be clarified.

Each employer is required by the federal law to make returns for payroll tax purposes not later than January 31 following the close of the taxable year, to the collector of internal revenue. Returns are to be made in the district in which the principal place of the employer is located, or, if he has no principal place of business in the United States, then with the collector at Baltimore, Md.

It is apparent that bookkeeping systems must be broadened to cover the requirements of the

Think Quick—Captain!

A consideration of certain aspects of the radio issue, the example of Mickey Mouse and Chinese policies in Hollywood

by TERRY RAMSAYE
In Hollywood

WITH the National Broadcasting Company's chromium studios in Hollywood's Melrose Avenue set up to sell motion picture fame as lure in behalf of pickle pedlers and soap vendors it is time indeed to consider "whither are we drifting" in the issues of the radio versus the box office.

Just at the moment gentlemen whose business is smoothing things over, talk of the "wedlock" of the arts, of the twin functions and parallel interests of radio and the screen, how the screen and the radio may supplement each other and kindred shallow verbal persiflages of the same temporizing sort.

Nevertheless the motion picture industry is confronted with as well defined an invasion, and one as ill-camouflaged, as the one before North China. Also the situation has other parallels in the degree of organized persistent purpose on the part of the invaders and the diffuse unconcern of the invaded, made up of interests so busy with the apples on their own trees that they do not have time to look at the orchard.

Further, while the subject of the "wedlock" between radio and the screen is concerned, let us for a moment, in behalf of those who came in after the show started, recall a moment a significant meeting of about 1928 at the office of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., in New York, when in sequel to "interchangeability" and related new talking matters, the topic of home-sound-movies came up. On that occasion Mr. David Sarnoff, radio titan, disclosed important plans and anticipations for that field. Such important picture makers as Mr. Adolph Zukor and others present expressed alarm as to what home-movies might do to the theatre screen. Mr. Sarnoff was quoted as saying that he did not care a hoop in the superheated hence, or words to that general effect, about what happened to the theatre. And Mr. Will H. Hays spent the rest of the afternoon relieving the situation with cold compresses.

FUEL TO KEEP THE HOME FIRES BURNING?

Just in case you have forgotten, one of the important considerations in the patent pooling arrangements between RCA and the Telephone company, meaning "Erpi" gave the Telephone company certain equipment advantages and RCA the whole of the home-sound-movie field.

Home is where the customers are. Home is where the radio sets were sold. Home is where Mr. Sarnoff was, and is, looking.

Anyway, one of Mr. Sarnoff's hired men spent a million of RCA's money, or RCA Photophone's money, or somebody's money making a horse market in the Gramercy region into a studio with which to get far enough into the movie business to find out how to make home-sound-movies—and they don't know yet. The only profit was in the horse manure they moved off the site.

But it was not a total loss. RCA did not get into the movie business very far in Gramercy, or the home-sound-movies field, but it has gone quite a distance into the home with movie entertainment and with people bought right out of the studios of Hollywood where they know how to make both movies and people. And while the studio at the sign of the gilded horse in Gramercy is a mere ledger memory, its successor, the new NBC plant in Hollywood's Melrose Avenue, is an operating fact.

Maybe when, about two months ago, RCA got so neatly out of the picture business by its Atlas-Odlum sale it was merely for the purpose of being out from under what it was to do to the pictures' great talent assets —getting out of the picture to get into the gravy.

SOME ANALOGIES FROM DAYS MORE DISTANT

The NBC Melrose plant in Hollywood, mind you, broadcasts nothing. It is just a well head pumping station that feeds Hollywood entertainment to the pipe lines of the telephone wires that go back east and feed the networks.

There will be those, certainly, who will say that radio is bound to take its course and work out its career, D. V., which now seems to demand pumping dry the Hollywood pool of screen talent, regardless. In answer to that may it not be observed that when the Telephone Company, about twenty years ago, was confronted with a competitive system based on "automatic" or machine switching, through the agency of what was called "The Chicago Tunnel Company," a way was found to do something about it, and something rather effectual from the point of view of Telephone stockholders. It is not reasonably clear that when the steam car promised to become an important factor in the automotive field arrangements were made. And that when a much better steam car got to going really well the demonstrators were abruptly retired, the patents purchased and the subject quickly rocked to sleep before the eyes of a press that looks for news in the gutters while the nation is run from pent houses?

The stage lost the amusement world in the competition of the machine of the motion picture against the handmade individual art of the footsore trouper. The screen made its way into dominant importance with its own people, with Mary Pickford "Class B" outdrawing Sarah Bernhardt Class A. With John Bunny and Charles Chaplin funnier for the price, or any price, than Weber & Fields.

RADIO METHODS AND MR. LAEMMLE'S TURKEYS

Radio covering the nation by network at a single shot, has not and can not make its personality merchandise as fast as it can consume it. It has reached into every field of personality production, even to the newspaper columnists, the fortune tellers and the amateur piccolo players, for appeal to give away with the advertising for which it is paid.

Years ago a story used to be told about Mr. Carl Laemmle and some phases of his early education in business. It seems, so the story goes, that when he was running Stern's haberdashery in Oshkosh he started a premium system of giving away a small turkey with every suit sold one holiday season. The clothier down the street saw him and raised him about five pounds per turkey. Mr. Laemmle raised back. By the time Thanksgiving Day arrived it is alleged that Mr. Stern was delighted at how many suits he was selling, but shocked to find that each sale took a twenty pound turkey. It would still have been good business if he had not had to pay for his turkeys.

Just now radio is getting its turkeys, not free to be sure, but for less than cost of production, from the motion picture.

There will inevitably be an end of that, in time, but what will have happened to the motion picture the while?

If one cared to do a bit of speculating it might be possible to cast about and see, while not an entirely perfect demonstration, at least the exemplification of a process—in the case of most impersonal and crystaline star product of the motion picture—Mr. Mickey Mouse.

Mr. Mickey is another one of those stars who works in the pictures and for advertising, but it so happens that Mickey, being who and what he is, gives the producer a sizeable cut, a commission of 100 percent on what he gets from the advertisers.

Think Quick—Captain!

Mr. Mickey was, like a number of other names, made entirely on the genius, labor and money of the producer who put him to work. Like some other players Mickey changed his name—it was at first just "Steamboat Willie." But that's not part of the story, except as an incidental part of the evidence of parallels in star making.

When Mr. Mickey got famous so that the gadget vendors wanted to lean on his goodwill and attention value, he was still, so far as the screen went no gold mine for his boss and producer. Mickey by reason of the increasing demands for quality in his pictures to keep up his fame cost a lot of money. The first real profits that he turned in, and most of the actual important profits that he has made since have come from the sale of his movie made fame to advertisers. Meanwhile Mickey's producer has been encouraged to pour the mouse's screen mite all back into screen merit and quality, enhancing the while the by-product where the profits are.

But just suppose that Mr. Mickey had had an agent to sell his spare time to the air, to the candy box makers, the toy makers, the brass watch business and the like—without a cut to Mr. Walt Disney! About where do you fancy Mickey would get off by now?

Or we might suppose there were a hundred Mickeys, working for say about six or seven busy bosses. And every Mickey had an agent working for Mickey and a split. And suppose the bosses were so concerned with their rivalries with each other, and with what they were going to get for themselves today instead of for their companies and their industry tomorrow, that they figured it was easier to let the Mickeys go out and sell the fruits of the production genius that made them—you would have what? The galloping status quo is the answer. And quo vadis?

But Mickey Mouse is under control. Somebody is tending to his business—all of it.

And screen starring is not a part time job.

Lastly, so far as Gramercy studio was concerned, RCA's home-sound movies turned out to be a lot of horsefeathers, but in case of television coming through, the fondest hope of Mr. Sarnoff, this new Melrose avenue studio plant, ample as it is, adjacent as it is, would be just as handy as a gun emplacement in a Belgian garden. Just in case.

The sequoias, they grow high in California. It's the sap that does it.

Eugene Zukor Elected to Head Paramount Pep Club

Eugene J. Zukor has been elected president of the Paramount Pep Club of the Paramount Pictures home office in New York. Joseph J. Doughney was chosen vice-president, Homer Traw treasurer and Doris Meyer secretary.

Henry Anderson and Jack Roper were added to the board of governors, of which E. A. Brown is chairman. Others are Joseph A. Walsh, Montague R. Gowthorpe, Charles Gartner, Aldyth Reichenbach, Helen Winston, Ida Wolff, Lillian Stevens and John McDermott.

The officers will be installed at a dance to be held at the Hotel Astor Saturday night.

Mrs. Hazel Cohn Dies In Hollywood

Mrs. Hazel Lent Cohn, wife of Al Cohn, well known writer and Collector of the Port of Los Angeles, died at her home in Hollywood, Tuesday, from a heart ailment. She had been afflicted for three years.

Mrs. Cohn passed away in her sleep. She is survived by three children, Jack, Dorothy and Adrian, and also her mother and a brother. She was 48.

Wilby Managers Hold Meeting

Theatre managers of the R. B. Wilby Theatres, Atlanta, Ga., held a one-day conference in Birmingham, Ala., last week, with approximately 50 men in attendance. R. M. Kennedy, district manager with headquarters in Birmingham, was host.

WPA Motion Picture Branch Holds Conference and Banquet

A dinner for the staff of the Motion Picture Record Division, Works Progress Administration, with headquarters in Washington, was held there last week after a three-day conference, attended by its expert cameramen from every part of the country, including Alaska. This newly-created organization is making a motion picture historical record of the vast Works Program of the federal government.

Sydney H. MacKean, former newsreel editor and executive, now head of this division, was the host and principal speaker at the banquet.

Van Schmus Sees Further Improvement in Product

"The product in the next six months will be very much better than release in the last four," W. G. Van Schmus, managing director of the Music Hall in New York, said upon his return Tuesday from a short Hollywood visit.

He added forthcoming attractions would stress star values heavily. "And stars are important with the public, as you know," he concluded.

British Trans-Lux Theatre Sites Sought

Inauguration of the contemplated circuit of Trans-Lux theatres in the British Isles is being delayed by inability of the sponsors to find suitable sites for the first two houses, to be erected in the West End of London, it was learned in New York this week.

Exhibitor Units Hold Elections

New Jersey Allied, Denver's Theatre Managers' Association and Cleveland's Showmen's Club this week elected new officers, and Pennsylvania and the Carolina exhibitors' organizations set meeting dates for their elections, December 19th in Philadelphia, and January 26th in North Carolina.

Lee Newbury of Belmar, N. J., has been elected president of Allied of New Jersey to succeed Sidney E. Samuelson. The election took place at the adjourned annual convention, held this year aboard the Queen of Bermuda as the organization cruised to Bermuda. Louis Levin, Newark, and Simon Myers, Moorestown, were elected vice-presidents at the same time. Other officers chosen were Jacob Unger, Hillside, secretary; David Snaper, New Brunswick. treasurer; Maurice Miller, Passaic, and Edward Lachman, Morristown, assistant treasurers.

In Denver the Theatre Managers' Association elected A. P. Archer president at their second annual meeting, and chose Bernie Hynes vice-president, Emmett Thurmon secretary, B. Briggs treasurer. Harry Huffman, B. D. Cockrill, Frank Milton, Dale Cline, Burns Ellison, Gerald Whitney and Rick Ricketson were elected directors.

The Showmen's Club of Cleveland, composed of local theatre men and those connected with allied industries, elected the following officers for the year this week: President, Harry Henderson; vice-president, Frank Greenwald; Secretary, Burt Diener; recording secretary, William J. Banks, and treasurer, Louis Swee.

The combined membership of the Independent Exhibitors' Protective Association and the Motion Picture Theatre Owners, the two organizations which recently merged, have set December 19, at the Broadmoor Hotel in Philadelphia, as the date for the meeting to elect officers and a board of governors.

In Charlotte, N. C., new dates have been set at the headquarters of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina have been set for the annual convention, and the gathering is scheduled now for January 26th. Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, will be present. Charles Picquet is expected to be re-elected president.

No Action Taken On Fox Court Summons

Judge William Bondy of the New York Federal court said this week that no action had been taken by him as yet on the order directing William Fox to appear by December 13 to purge himself of contempt of court. The judge declared he had heard no arguments on the order, but expected to do so within the next few days.

The order was presented to Judge Bondy by attorneys for the Capital Company, San Francisco corporation which had obtained a $297,000 judgment against Mr. Fox last summer as a result of rent defaults on a theatre lease said to have been guaranteed by Mr. Fox. The order was taken under advisement by Judge Bondy.

BRITAIN WELCOMES LORD TYRRELL, SCREEN "FAN", AS ITS NEW CENSOR

Sympathetic Approach Seen in Selection of Statesman Who Since Silent Days Has Attended Theatre Weekly

by BRUCE ALLAN
London Correspondent

In selecting Lord Tyrrell of Avon, K. C. M. G., to succeed the late Rt. Hon. E. E. Shortt, K. C., as president of the British Board of Film Censors, the industry in the United Kingdom has followed its own tration of selecting a well known public figure to administer its machinery of self-regulation. It is the general view that it has made a very happy choice.

Lord Tyrrell, now official representative of the British film industry, was until April, 1934, the representative of the British Government in the distinguished post of Ambassador in Paris. That appointment, which he had held since 1928, was the climax to a notable career in the British public service. He entered the Foreign Office on leaving Oxford in 1889, became senior clerk in 1907 and permanent under-secretary in 1925 and during his service was private secretary to Sir Edward Grey; he acted in that capacity at the outbreak and during the first stages of the War. Previously Sir William Tyrrell, he became a Baron in 1929.

Sympathetic Approach Indicated

Apart from the prestige which the industry must gain from its association with a personality intimately associated with the inner circles of government, the appointment of Lord Tyrrell seems to promise a definitely sympathetic approach to film problems and an outlook very far removed from the insular.

The two distinguishing characteristics of the new president are that he is a man of international experience, reputation and outlook, and that he is a confessed and confirmed "film fan"—his own term.

On the first count it is significant that shortly before his appointment to the B. B. F. C. was announced he accepted the chairmanship of the British Council for Relations with Other Countries, a body with the specific purpose of increasing international contact and friendship.

Has Patron's Point of View

On the second, there is his own confession that, right back from the days of silent films he has been a regular visitor to the cinema, "at least once a week." A censor with a patron's likes, dislikes, and knowledge of screen values is an asset which the British trade will not undervalue—and which perhaps it did not expect to find in so distinguished an appointee. From the point of view of film importers it means that decisions of serious importance to them will be made by a man who has bought and enjoyed their entertainment.

Lord Tyrrell is a man of the world who has seen the world from many more angles than most men. An early associate of the Fabian group which included Bernard Shaw, H. G. Wells and the Webbs, he is possessor of the Grand Cordon of the Legion of Honour of the French Republic, a musician who has brought foreign critics to England to hear the work of British composers, and an official who, even at the Foreign Office, established friendly relations with the press. A Catholic, his daughter was the first Englishwoman to be married at the Cathedral of Notre Dame, Paris. He is 71.

His personal qualities and his official background should both be great assets to the British Board of Film Censors, a body which has no statutory powers and the effectiveness of which largely depends on the nature of its contacts with "Whitehall."

Papers Served In FWC Suit

Papers were served on old Fox West Coast Theatre's Corporation in Thomas L. Tally's suit to have the bankruptcy reorganization set aside. The circuit has 20 days to answer. Papers have not been served on Charles Skouras, also named in the suit.

Charles and Spyros Skouras and Herman Wobber conferred in Portland last Friday with Evergreen States executives on an expansion program for the Evergreen, Rainer and Multnomah circuits.

New Kansas City Exchange

Joseph Levy, will open an independent exchange in Kansas City about January 1. Mr. Levy will join with Henri Ellman, owner of the present Capitol Film Exchange in Kansas City, in the deal and indications are that the name of Mr. Ellman's exchange will be retained.

Iowa-Nebraska Buying Combine

Theatre owners of Nebraska, western Iowa and South Dakota this week joined the growing movement in exhibition toward cooperative buying combinations as a means of protection against so-called circuit "aggression." New York owners continue at work for their $2,000,000 combine, and owners in Philadelphia were proceeding likewise.

After meeting in secret for two days independent exhibitors of Nebraska, western Iowa and South Dakota have announced the formation of the preliminary organization of a cooperative film buying group. Details of how the new group is to function will not be made known until a tri-state committee of seven members turns in its report to Charles E. Williams, president of the Nebraska Motion Picture Theatre Owners, who is handling the secretarial work of the group.

According to Mr. Williams, the group will not be known as a film buying combine, but rather as a protective organization to meet the encroachment of the circuits in smaller situations. The organization will be considerably different from the one recently set up by Allied in Iowa, where a fund of $50,000 was raised to meet circuit menaces.

On the board of directors of the new organization, which has the temporary title of Nebraska, Iowa and Dakota Association, are: H. Tammen, Dale Goldie, Dick Kehrberg, H. F. Kennedy, Mons Tompson, Mrs. Jennie Wickman and Oscar Johnson.

CARR RESIGNS FROM REPUBLIC PRODUCTIONS

Golden Withdraws as General Sales Manager; Johnston Says His Status Is Unchanged

Trem Carr this week resigned as president of Republic Productions, Inc., and disposed of his stock interests in the company and in Republic Pictures Corporation to unnamed parties reported to be Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., of which Herbert J. Yates is president.

Following Mr. Carr's withdrawal, Edward A. Golden on Wednesday resigned as general sales manager of Republic. Reports were that Budd Rogers would succeed him.

Nat Levine, identified with Mascot Pictures Corporation, takes complete charge of Republic production, and Morris J. Siegel, a Consolidated figure, becomes executive vice-president in charge of studio operations, succeeding Mr. Carr.

It was reported that Mr. Carr received $500,000 for the unexpired portion of his five-year personal service contract and his company holdings. The deal was officially closed in Hollywood on Tuesday, with W. Ray Johnston, president of Republic, on the ground.

Johnston Status Unchanged

Following Mr. Johnston's arrival in New York by plane late Wednesday, the change was announced in the following statement:

"W. Ray Johnston, president of Republic Pictures Corporation, today announced that Trem Carr had resigned as president of Republic Productions, Inc., a production affiliate of Republic Pictures Corporation. Mr. Carr has already sold his interests in both companies. His resignation has been accepted, to take effect at once. Nat Levine assumes complete control of Republic Productions activities. This does not in any way change Mr. Johnston's personal status with Republic Pictures Corporation or Republic Productions, Inc."

The implications in the statement were that Mr. Johnston denies published rumors that Mr. Carr's resignation is a prelude to Mr. Johnston's own withdrawal from the company at the end of a year.

Carr Explains Withdrawal

"The policies I have pursued successfully for many years were different from those now employed by Republic," said Mr. Carr in Hollywood, "and I could not consistently remain with the company."

As part of the deal, Mr. Carr agreed not to engage in independent production for a year and a half, but there are no restrictions on his affiliating with a major company, and Mr. Carr said he has had three offers from major studios. He plans a vacation of two months in Europe before announcing a new connection.

He added that he was "very much pleased" with the deal. Monogram, forerunner to Republic, can be resumed and is "all set to go now," he said, and he wouldn't be surprised, he indicated, if it reappears in the independent field at the end of his stipulated retirement period.

It is understood that David S. Jacobson acted as the agent for Mr. Yates, and that the president of Consolidated agreed to the terms before leaving for New York last Friday.

Report Kaufman Advancement

Hollywood reports were that Joseph Kaufman, a Republic executive, would be advanced as assistant to Mr. Johnston in an executive capacity in the distribution department. Mr. Siegel, who is listed as an assistant treasurer of Consolidated, has been assigned to the Republic studio since last spring when Consolidated and Mr. Yates effected a consolidation of Monogram, Majestic, Mascot and Liberty to form Republic Pictures. Mr. Johnston and Mr. Carr formerly headed Monogram.

John Wayne, under contract to Trem Carr Pictures, Ltd., will conclude his eight-picture series for Republic next spring. Four are already completed.

In production since 1922, Mr. Carr was vice-president of Rayart Pictures until 1919, and was also vice-president in charge of production of Syndicate Pictures. He affiliated with Monogram at its inception in 1931 as head of production.

Atlantic SMPE Hears Laboratory Practice Report

The Atlantic Coast Section of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers held its monthly meeting at the Hotel Pennsylvania, New York, Wednesday with a detailed report of the Society's Committee on Laboratory Practice featuring the meeting.

The report contained a resume of some practical methods of manipulations of raw stock, picture negative, sound track negative, duplicating picture negative, duplicating sound track negative, regular positive prints, master positive prints and special films in the various laboratories of the country.

Ross Federal Men Shifted

Five changes in the managerial staffs of Ross Federal Service become effective January 1. All the men in the changes have been with the company in various capacities since its inception.

J. J. Jonas, manager at San Francisco, to New York, succeeds Jack Kraker, formerly in charge of Philadelphia, who returns there; Ray M. Olsinger, from Philadelphia, to New York; H. W. Keitle, manager at Portland, to San Francisco, and C. W. Medley, assistant manager at Portland, being promoted to manager there.

Reverting to Weekly Publication

Film Curb, published by Tom Hamlin, will be published as a weekly after January 4 instead of on a monthly basis.

C. U. Yaeger Purchases Five Houses in Denver Area

With the purchase of five theatres in the Denver territory, making six in his possession, C. U. Yaeger, bank night originator and owner, seems to be rapidly organizing a theatre chain. During the past two months Mr. Yaeger has bought and sold one South Dakota theatre, and purchased five others: the Gem theatre at Golden, Col., the Rialto at Brighton, Col., the Granada at Del Norte, Col., and two houses at Lamar, Col. He purchased the Victory from Fred Lee, who has been in the exhibition business ever since the start of pictures, and the Isis from DeForrest Swanson, which house Mr. Yaeger expects to make into a deluxe theatre.

Mr. Yaeger also owns the Roxy theatre in the colored section of Denver. This house he built shortly after the beginning of bank night, and the theatre was pulled out of the red by it, he said. He has bought the building on film row which formerly housed the Pathe exchange and has centered his companies there. All his recent activities he has carried on through the Atlas Theatre Corporation, which he organized. In addition he operates the Affiliated Enterprises, Inc., which controls bank night, the Roxy Theatre Corporation, and the National Theatre Calendar and Printing Company.

"Modern Times" at Rivoli In New York, January 16

"Modern Times," Charlie Chaplin's new feature, has been booked into the Rivoli theatre in New York beginning January 16. It was declared that the pictures will play 12 weeks at this house and will not be booked into any other theatre in America aside from Fox West Coast and that the Rivoli has guaranteed $125,000 on the run, thereby outstripping seven competitive bids.

Donahue and Coe will handle the outdoor advertising campaign and plan to use 300 billboards along railroad rights of way between New York and Boston, Buffalo and Philadelphia.

Session On Mexico Situation Delayed

A meeting of foreign managers of major distribution companies which was scheduled to be held at the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America's home office in New York, Tuesday, to hear a report by A. L. Pratchett on industry conditions in Mexico was postponed until Thursday. Mr. Pratchett, who is the Paramout representative at Mexico City, was unable to complete his report in time for the scheduled meeting.

Major Frederick L. Herron, in charge of foreign activities for the MPPDA, said he had not been notified of any major company's intention of withdrawing from Mexico as a result of the new stringent tax legislation in force there.

Republic Talent Search

Republic Pictures Corporation has appointed Jules Schermer, assistant to Nat Levine, in charge of a talent searching department to enlarge the present list of contract players who are to be groomed for star and featured roles. The company's present list of contract players include Evelyn Venable, John Wayne, Gene Autry, Ann Rutherford, Barbara Pepper and Smiley Burnette.

IATSE SEEKS CLOSED SHOP IN EAST; LOCAL 306 IS SUED FOR $650,000

Victor Over Electrical Workers on Coast Now Turns to Laboratory and Studio Centers in New York

The IATSE, victor over its competitor, the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers in the recent bitter engagement to win back from IBEW the jurisdiction over Hollywood studio union affairs, a victory which last week averted a nationwide IATSE strike in theatres, evidently will not be content until it extends its "closed shop" demands and jurisdiction over production in the East. This became apparent during the week when it was learned that control of laboratory and studio union matters in the East is IATSE's aim, following enactment on January 2nd of the new five-year IATSE studio agreement in California.

Trouble also was brewing in other union circles, principally in New York, where a suit for $650,000 damages was filed in supreme court by independent exhibitors against Local 306 of the IATSE projectionists branch, charging conspiracy to launch an attack on the exhibitors through the picketing of plaintiffs' theatres.

The basic controversy between the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and Moving Picture Machine Operators and the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers concerned jurisdictional rights over certain skilled workers in studios and had long been raging when, two weeks ago, the IATSE threatened the industry with a strike at all theatres and studios where its members are employed, unless the question of jurisdiction at the studios was settled in its favor. The highest motion picture corporate officials in New York met on December 9th and settled by granting a five-year contract with IATSE covering the labor classifications at the studios which are placed under IATSE jurisdiction.

Hollywood "Closed Shop"

By the terms of the settlement, the IBEW's studio control of union matters shifts to the IATSE, bringing a "closed shop" to Hollywood, and giving the IATSE jurisdiction over propertymen, laboratory workers and cameramen, while at the same time retaining complete jurisdiction in the theatres where IATSE members man the majority of projection booths and back stage positions.

Film Technicians' Local 669, New York, is the principal cog in the IATSE drive for a "closed shop" in the East. Its jurisdiction over laboratory workers includes about 75 per cent of the approximately 800 involved. Its drive for the additional 200 laboratory men was begun late last week with the active cooperation of the IBEW and, if it succeeds, will mean the end of the "open shop" in eastern laboratories.

Eastern studio workers have been almost 100 per cent IATSE workers in the past, therefore the current "closed shop" drive will be of less significance there than in the laboratories.

Producers' Meeting Called

In Hollywood, Pat Casey, producers' union contact, called a producer meeting for Tuesday to issue formal notification of the IATSE "closed shop" agreement in the studios. It is expected that the effective date of the agreement will be January 2.

With the new IATSE agreement signed, all IBEW men who last week were discharged from Hollywood and Los Angeles theatres, have returned to their jobs, and IATSE is submitting a plan to the local Independent Theatre Owners whereby union men will man all non-affiliated houses in Los Angeles. A similar plan was recently adopted in St. Louis, a portion of Pennsylvania and Wisconsin.

Picketing Suit

The New York picketing suit was instigated by Times Square Theatres, Inc., operators of the Colony Theatre, Jackson Heights; the G-T Amusement Corporation, operators of the Central; Rudolph Saunders, who owns the Saunders in Brooklyn; Lewis Brandt, operator of the Globe, and the Sam-Glo Operating Company, owners of the Globe, Brooklyn. Mr. Saunders and the Sam-Glo company asking for $100,000 each, and the remaining plaintiffs who ask for $75,000 each, named Joseph Basson, individually, and as president of Local 306 in the action, which charges a conspiracy on the part of the defendant, its officers, members and employes to launch an attack upon the plaintiffs for the purpose of ruining their business.

The petition charged that Local 306 acted arbitrarily in demanding a two-man operation of a booth whereas Allied Picture Operators' Union requires only one man and that one man receives greater pay. The complaint further states that since January 1, 1934, the defendants have picketed in front of the plaintiffs' theatres.

Mandatory Increase Provided

Meanwhile, Local 306 made provisions for a mandatory increase in operators' wages after the first two years of their RKO-Loew contract, according to Mr. Basson.

In Chicago, George Hall, business agent for the Independent Motion Picture Operators' Union, Local 101, was found guilty of conspiracy to bomb by a jury in the criminal court of Judge Joseph Burke. He immediately was sentenced to serve from one to five years in the penitentiary. Mr. Hall was accused as ringleader in a plot to bomb the operators' school conducted by the IATSE union in Chicago.

Thelma Todd Dead; In Films 8 Years

Thelma Todd, comedienne, who reached the peak of her fame recently on the strength of her performances with Zasu Pitts and Patsy Kelly in two-reel comedies produced under the banner of Hal Roach, was found dead in her garage Monday in Hollywood. It was announced that she had died of monoxide fumes "that she breathed accidentally." The county autopsy surgeon, Dr. A. F. Wagner, gave the finding on the cause of death.

It was at first believed to have been a homicide case, since she had been the recipient of extortion notes during the past year. Department of Justice officials to whom Miss Todd had turned over the notes, however, had called them the work of a crank and two men later were arrested on Long Island. One was committed to a psychopathic ward of a hospital and the other is under indictment charged with extortion.

Miss Todd was guest of honor at a dinner party Saturday night, given by Stanley Lupino, father of Ida Lupino, and himself a star in England. More than twenty persons attended. Following the dinner Miss Todd drove off with her chauffeur, dismissing him a few yards from her home. She was not seen again until her maid discovered the body slumped over the wheel of her car on Monday.

Miss Todd, born in Lowell, Mass., July 29, 1906, entered pictures eight years ago by accident. She was a school teacher when an exhibitor friend of her father entered her portrait in a beauty contest, writing about her to Jesse Lasky at the same time. Mr. Lasky then was vice-president of Famous Players-Lasky. When Miss Todd won the contest Paramount was looking for young talent and she joined the company's Long Island studio group of young actors and actresses. Her first picture was "Flaming Youth." When the Long Island studio closed she went to the Coast. Her rise had been steady since, for she was featured by the major companies, finally winning her greatest popularity in two-reel comedies with Miss Pitts and later with Miss Kelly.

She is survived by her mother, Mrs. John S. Todd of Lawrence, Mass., who was visiting her daughter at the time of her death.

Among Miss Todd's more recent efforts in feature-length pictures include roles in "Counsellor-at-Law," "The Poor Rich," "Hips, Hips, Hooray," "Cockeyed Cavaliers," "Lightning Strikes Twice," "Take the Stand," "Palooka," "Bottoms Up," "Unknown Blonde" and "Two for Tonight."

St. Louis Bill Before Board

The Board of Aldermen of St. Louis now has before it a bill introduced by Alderman Schweppe to impose a special city tax of one tenth of a mill on each foot of motion picture film rented or leased in St. Louis.

HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Increased Use of Color, Musicals and Biographies Predicted for Next Year—Nine Features Started in Week, Six Finished—Public Called Humor-Hungry

Looking Ahead

A return to clear, sharp photography, an increased but not universal use of color, more musicals and biographies, and a decided jump in production expenditures are in the cards for 1936 in Hollywood, according to Edward Small, production head of Reliance Pictures.

"The new year will see further experimentation in, and the possible perfection of, stereoscopic and color films and television. More than 525 features will be produced, which is an increase by 25 over the usual number made here.

"More money will be put into production, and that money will show on the screen, for the past year has seen a new efficiency in the studios; much waste and deadwood have been dropped. Better pictures will be made and enough of these will strangle double bills."

Mr. Small believes that all studios will make a number of operettas, but urged that the release of these be properly spaced. He sees stories swinging more to down-to-earth themes and to fact, citing biographies such as "Beau Brummel" and "Napoleon."

"Fact advertising and the elimination of timeworn adjectives are on the way," he continued, "and there will be a radical change in the type of trailers."

Mr. Small cited the following as the most important events of the past year:

The untimely passing of Will Rogers, America's counsellor.

News from distributors and exhibitors that business is 40 per cent better than in 1932.

The public's appreciation of good music through general use of wide range recording and reproducing.

The many changes in studio operation and the introduction of new blood and of business men into the film plants, which, he said, have taken producers out of the rut.

New Product

With the number of pictures actually shooting at a total of 38, nine new features started during the week and six were finished. While the Charlie Chaplin picture has been reported previously as finished, final alterations were completed Friday and "Modern Times" is now ready in complete form for preview or initial release showing.

Paramount is one of three companies starting two pictures. Going at that studio are "13 Hours by Air" and "F Men." In the first, the title of which is explanatory of the character, Fred McMurray, Gertrude Michael, Elizabeth Patterson, Alan Baxter, David Holt and Brian Donleavy are the featured players. Mitchell Leisen is directing. The second feature will present Jack Haley, William Frawley and Adrian Mardin in the principal roles. Edward Cline is directing.

Two pictures also were started by 20th Century-Fox. "Everybody's Old Man" stars Irvin S. Cobb with Rochelle Hudson, Donald Meek, Warren Hymer, Ross Alexander, Johnny Downs and Charles Coleman in supporting roles. James Whale is directing. Important players in the second feature, "The Black Gang," are Paul Kelly, Arline Judge, Mona Barrie, Gregory Ratoff and Sammy Cohen. Lew Seiler is directing.

The third company starting a pair of pictures is Republic. In the first of these, "Dancing Feet," Ben Lyon, Joan Marsh, Edward Nugent, Nick Condos, Isabel Jewell and Vince Barnett will be seen. Joseph Santley is directing. The cast for "Oregon Trail," an historical western, includes John Wayne, Ann Rutherford, Yakima Canutt, Joseph Girard, Roland Ray and Fern Emmett. Scott Pembroke is directing.

"Showboat" Starts

At Universal, the long deferred "Showboat" finally got underway. A lavish musical production, names currently listed among the pretentious cast are Irene Dunne, Charles Winninger, Helen Morgan, Paul Robeson, Helen Westley, Marilyn Knowlden, Hattie McDanields and Arthur Hohl. James Whale is directing.

Radio started "The Wild West." Its title indicative, it is a Wheeler and Woolsey feature with Dot Lee, Harry Woods, Ethan Laidlaw, Richard Alexander and Delmar Watson currently listed in the cast. Fred Guoil is directing.

The final starting picture, "Face in the Fog," is a Victory feature. With Robert Hill directing, the cast includes Lloyd Hughes, June Collyer, Lawrence Grey and Al St. John.

Pictures Finished

Making room for the two starting pictures, Paramount transferred a pair to the cutting rooms. Finished as far as actual shooting is concerned, is "Desire." Long in production, it again teams Marlene Dietrich with Gary Cooper, with whom she made her American screen debut in "Morocco." Supporting cast names are John Halliday, Alan Mowbray, William Frawley, Ernest Cossart, Akim Tamiroff, Effie Tilbury and Alden Chase. Frank Borzage directed. Also under the wire is "Klondyke Lou," though the title is still temporary. Mae West is starred and Victor McLaglen and Phillip Read are featured. The lengthy supporting cast lists Harold Huber, Trixie Friganza, Helen Jerome Eddie, Harry Beresford, Conway Tearle, Edward Gargan, Julian Eltinge, Huntley Gordon, Lawrence Gray,

At MGM "Tough Guy" (formerly "The Getaway) was completed. The cast includes Joseph Calleia, Jackie Cooper, Lewis Stone, Robert Warwick, Robert Greig, Edward Pawley, Mischa Auer, Willy Mayer, Dwight Frye, William Tannen, Willard Robertson, Robert Livingstone, Sidney Bracy and the dog, Flash. Chester Franklin directed.

Radio finished "Mother Lode." Richard Dix and Leila Hyams are featured, supported by Moroni Olsen, Onslow Stevens, Ray Mayer, Ted Oliver, Art Mix, Ethan Laidlaw, Andy Clyde, George Lollier and Dorothy Colburn. Wallace Fox directed.

Republic completed "The Leavenworth Case." The cast includes Norman Foster, Gavin Gordon, Clay Clement, Erin O'Brien-Moore, Warren Hymer, Jean Roveral, Maude Eburne and Ian Wolfe. Lewis D. Collins directed.

Humor-Hungry

The public is humor-hungry and "sex no longer lures the customers," said Mark Sandrich, RKO-Radio director.

"Today," he said, "the essential quality of a love scene is the playing down of heavy-handed emotions, and the playing up of involved situations which touch the heart and the sense of humor simultaneously."

"We may gratefully thank the churches for causing us to stop writing "sex" in tall letters across every page of our scripts," he declared.

News Flashes

Pat Casey is back in town following signing of the IATSE agreement in New York. Steve Newman, studio representative for the union, is also back. . . . The appointment of three Academy representatives on the sectional committee for motion pictures of American Standards Association was announced by Nathan Levinson, chairman of the Academy Technicians' branch. They are Porter H. Evans, who will be Eastern representative on standardization matters, J. M. Nickolaus, chairman of the Research Council standards subcommittee, and Gordon S. Mitchell, manager of the Research Council. . . . The old FWC circuit, which went through bankruptcy, and the new FWC Theatre Corporation have been served with papers in Thomas L. Newsreel Turn from Baby Parade To Recording History Is Reflected

Story of Precedent after Precedent Is Told in Year's Camera Achievement

The motion picture newsreel is well on its way to a trend that will remove it, finally, far from baby parades and ship launchings, to the picturing of history in the making, the reporting of news "on the spot," and the interpreting of the meanings of sociological problems. Today the newsreel is ending 1935 giving full effect in its normal procedure to more scientific advancements than have ever been employed for coverage at any previous time in its history.

This is the conclusion of newsreel managements, as expressed this week in New York by A. J. Richard, editor of Paramount News, who analyzes the story behind the newsreel camera in 1935 as one of precedent piled upon precedent in recording the world's ten outstanding news events at a pace that was forcibly stepped up as never before because of the advancements made both by the press and radio in competitively speeding accounts of major events to the public.

Tracing the progress of the newsreel as a whole, Mr. Richard cites, in the order of their importance as news—as he views the events—the direct precedent or significance for newsreels established by the ten major news stories of the year. His summary follows:

1. Hauptmann Case

The technique employed by newsreels on this story was probably more revolutionary and far reaching than the handling of any previous story by a newsreel cameraman.

It marked the first time a complete court record was photographed in sight and sound. It started an agitation that such newsreel records should be made of all important cases, since they show facial expression and tonality of utterance, instead of cold type which the court stenographer's transcription officially represents.

Mechanically, the Hauptmann case also figured. Newsreels found that by changing certain gear in their cameras from metal to fibrous material they could reduce noise to a minimum in a courtroom. Another newsreel annoyance, powerful artificial lighting, was also partially obviated by the use of special lenses which had to be imported in order to effect newsreel coverage of this story.

2. Italo-Ethiopian Situation

It has doubtless proved to be the most expensive story of the year for all newsreels, and has probably exacted the greatest toll of hardship for working cameramen. Typically, Paramount, while covered against all material losses by heavy blanket insurance, has had wrecked two airplanes, a sound truck and a camera. Minor illnesses have been sustained by cameramen.

Primarily, however, the African fracas is of the utmost significance. It proved that newsreels must be internationalized; that they must have men spotted throughout the world so that they may be able to converge upon any given point within a comparatively few hours.

Like an army, newsreels that attempted really to cover this conflict had to have a regular staff in the field of action. Unlike an army, however, camera crews had to be under direction of a central office, familiar with every detail of the terrain.

3. Post-Rogers Catastrophe

Newsreels are becoming more and more dependent upon airplanes in the ever increasing acceleration to get important camera news on the screen while it is still spot news. A precedent established by this story was that two of the newsreels "flew" the story for 6,000 miles, one of the longest distances for any camera report to be in the air. Unknown to each other, the two reels were under the impression that the flight was being made for their own exclusive coverage. One reel got its story into its New York office 20 minutes before the other.

But the second claims it got its picture on Broadway screens five minutes before the earlier arrival.

4. Florida Hurricane

The story behind this is the method used in obtaining the story; tying up every available free lance cameraman in Florida.

From a trade perspective, this means that legionnaires, virtually lost to the newsreel field since sound, are returning to activity.

5. The Dust Storms

In other years the newsreels seemed to look askance upon such stories. But in 1935, instead of regarding their camera value as little more than a pile of dirt here, and a dead cow there, the reel editors took into consideration the fact that such a condition affected millions of people; far more, in other words, than would be concerned by the average spot news story lending itself to ideal camera angles and merchandising.

6. Huey Long

The newsreels lost one of their most colorful subjects. He was a great publicist who had an appreciation for newsreel value such as few men in national politics. He would pose any time, whether the film story was for or against him.

7. The Macon Disaster

Cameramen had developed a variable technique in covering disasters of the navy's lighter-than-air blimps. The Shenandoah had been the first, followed by the Akron. The Macon explosion has probably ended for all time this type of assignment.

8. Alaskan Colonization

This established a precedent in history since it was the first frontier to be opened since America colonized the far west. Paramount thought enough of the story to send a cameraman among the pioneers. He lived with them several weeks, before making a newsreel record.

9. The Demise of the NRA

Not so far back newsreels would have regarded this decision simply as a piece of paper that wouldn't look particularly interesting on celluloid. The Supreme Court judges wouldn't pose and no camera could be projected into the court room. This year, however, reels set about interpreting the effect of the decision upon the man in the street. It marked an important step in interpretive handling of such important news.

10. Weyerhauser Kidnaping

Newsreel cooperation with the Department of Justice, as well as extra service to exhibitors in several localities, was evidenced in the manner in which several of the reels handling this story.

Speaking generally of news on the screen, Paramount News' editor observes:

"The trend away from stilted, outworn and commonplace events, such as spectacular parades, horse races, fashion shows and the like, toward intelligent presentation of interesting problems of the day, such as the New Deal, Old Age Insurance, the Alaskan colonization, education's oath of allegience, and similar questions of widespread interest, is a significant step forward in modern newsreel reporting.

"While the chief duty of the newsreel will always be the picturing of history in the making and the reporting of news while it takes place, this news development toward interpreting the meaning of sociological problems and the importance of scientific discoveries has given the newsreel an additional function as the mirror reflecting the actual progress of mankind."

Spain Bars All Pictures Misrepresenting History

A decree has been published in Spain authorizing the minister of the interior to prohibit, in the territory of the Republic, the exhibition of every class of films produced by companies which in Spain or abroad exhibit films which tend to misrepresent historical facts or to impair the prestige of Spanish institutions or personalities.

The decree followed the banning by Spain of the Paramount picture "The Devil Is a Woman."

Quintuplets Do Their Own Script And Miles of Publicity for Fox

But When Emilie and Yvonne Cut New Teeth During Shooting, Producers Groan

by JAMES CUNNINGHAM

Out of the swirling snowstorm travels of a little Hollywood production crew of two actors and 17 technicians to the cribside of the Dionne quintuplets in the bleak, frozen backwoods at Callander in Ontario, Canada, for the filming of their "roles" in "The Country Doctor," there has accrued to Twentieth Century-Fox, sponsors of the expedition, more page-one publicity than has ever before preceded the immediate filming of a motion picture. And to the industry it has brought more good feeling from the press and populace of the two countries than could be fired by the eloquent pleadings and countrywide visitations of a dozen motion picture "ambassadors" of good will.

Whether it was a case of filming them or feeding them, anyone might reasonably expect some complications with such a bevy of babies, but the young ladies and the visitors from Hollywood parted thinking exceedingly well of each other—parted with the "quins" $50,000 richer, and the producers a "million dollars' worth" of publicity to the good. Any complications which threatened were of distinctly outside origin—and short-lived; Doctor Dafoe and the Canadian Government saw to that.

Completing the filming of five actresses, who, on their first appearance before the motion picture camera attained stardom and set an all-time record for salary, Director Henry King reported that the babes wrote their own script. All their acting consisted of whatever they happened to feel like doing at the moment. No attempt was made to have them show any special reactions or emotions. The original contractual arrangements would reveal that any such attempt would be halted unceremoniously.

And they sang, these quintuplets, in "French." Jean Hersholt, who is "The Country Doctor," and Dorothy Peterson, who played the nurse role, were not certain what they were singing, and even the Dafoe Hospital staff confessed themselves doubtful. But the tones are the strident utterances of five healthy babes—though they do lack harmony in spots.

These independent young stars also set the time at which shooting began each day—again by contractual arrangement. One of the rules laid down by Dr. Dafoe was that the children always be allowed to sleep until they wake up naturally—an all-time precedent for Hollywood production. So, each morning, camera and sound men tiptoed with Mr. Hersholt and Miss Peterson and Director King to the sleeping quarters, and there waited until young Yvonne, Marie, Cecile, Annette and Emilie elected to wake up and go to work.

It was 10 degrees below zero outside.

In terms of actual "working time" before the cameras—never permitted to exceed 30 minutes each day—the Dionnes together were paid a little over $450 per minute, $90 each—a new high in Hollywood film pay, which at times has been pretty steep.

It was Joseph Moskowitz, Twentieth Century-Fox production representative of the new Schenck-Zanuck administrative forces, who negotiated the agreement and supervised Fox's job on the spot. He revealed that one of the provisions limited the time members of the crew could be in the rooms with the babies to—besides the one half hour for filming—a half hour for setting up apparatus and removing it, and the whims of the children themselves, such as exuberant cries that drowned out the speech of the adult actors, further cut down the shooting time. On one day, only four minutes of shooting was accomplished. The tots were especially noisy and neither the great scientific mind of Dr. Dafoe, nor all of the corporate powers together of Sidney Kent, Joe Schenck, Darryl Zanuck, Twentieth Century-Fox and their Chase Bank parent, could quiet them. But with all of their calling and gurgling they were not frightened by Hollywood's invasion.

The extreme caution which Dr. Dafoe exercises to protect the babies' health was reflected in the rules provided for shooting. Special anti-glare lights, made and tested with occulists in consultation at the studio, completely sterilized clothing and equipment, rubber gloves, interne's aprons were required of each member of the filming party. Each member wore a surgical face mask, except Jean Hersholt and Miss Peterson. In their case, a thorough throat examination and spraying of antiseptics were compulsory each day before they were permitted to enter the babies' room. The Hollywoodites had never before witnessed such protection against germs.

Of more importance to Fox, the expedition produced miles of Grade A publicity; every move of the entourage was covered both by Canadian and American writers assigned to the unit for the purpose. The Hollywood party evidently made a good impression on the Canadians and this was duly recorded in great detail on front pages of the Dominion's best newspapers.

The 3,000-mile trek of the Hollywood workers to the northwoods ended in a blinding snowstorm early one morning last week, bringing out some hundred North Bayites for their first glimpse of "movie people" in the flesh.

At virtually every stop on the trip on the Grand Trunk-Canadian National Railways, photographers, reporters and the special writers boarded the train to chronicle the movements of this small company suddenly become famous because they were en route to "do" a picture with the "quins." Never before had a picture received as much attention from the press, before even one foot of the film was unrolled.

The quintuplet scenes were shot in the Dafoe Hospital, with Dr. Dafoe personally checking the physical and mental well-being of his charges as filming progressed, and nurses Leroux and Lamoureux keeping tap on the visitors. The slightest complication in the hospital would have brought the job to an abrupt end, and the potential profits would have vanished on the spot.

Judging from the reactions of the actors and technicians on their return to the States, rumors regarding possible ill-effects on the health of the babies had been much more widely circulated in the United States than in Canada. The reaction of the Canadian public was that if Dr. Dafoe said it was all right, that settled it.

At the first session, the Hollywood celebrities were the only ones ill at ease. The veteran Jean Hersholt, trying his hand at dressing one of the "quints," managed to get the young lady's nightgown on backwards. Cameramen, too, were slightly nervous, but the babes themselves toddled about unconcernedly and greeted the hardened filmers with smiles.

Director King reported, presumably for the benefit of the psychologists, one curious fact about the behavior of the famous five. When one of the group does anything, the other four will imitate exactly and without any delay. This made it much easier for Mr. King, who found that when five babies are in agreement on what to do and where to do it, there are no outbreaks of rugged infantile individualism—a condition in Hollywood.

What the producers obtained is a series of authentic shots of the babies in their natural surroundings, carrying on their normal daily activities, and scenes of the countryside. Not a single scene shows the babies sad or frightened.

According to word from the Ontario Government — official guardians of the babes, "in the name of the King"—the sum of $50,000 was paid into the quintuplets' trust fund, which already exceeds some $250,000, and to which Pathe News has variously contributed considerable for the exclusive newsreel rights of filming. The guardians chose a lump sum instead of a percentage of the picture, which was offered them by the Fox company. Evidently they were more interested in the immediate tangibilities than in potentialities.

The producers groaned at one time when they learned that Emilie and Yvonne cut new teeth during the shooting.

"Watch the letters of criticism of detail roll in when, as and if audiences notice it," said the studio workers, who pointed out that the reason for this lies in the difference—before and after—in the babies' cinematic appearance.

The press wire services picked up the yarn and within a flash reported from Hollywood to Callander, Ontario, that the arrival of a new tooth radically alters the shape of a baby's mouth, as it appears to the fine eye of the camera. Sometimes they do not look the same at all, 'twas said.

Furthermore, they pointed out, scenes are not filmed in the order of their appearance in the finished picture. There have been cases when an infant appeared, in the early part of the story, with a tooth—but in the later scenes, where the child is supposed to be older, the tooth was not there.

"In the case of the Dionnes we will not be able to do anything about the discrepancies," Darryl Zanuck in Hollywood told Associated Press. "We'll just have to hope that with five babies, audiences will not notice they do not look in some scenes as they do in others.

It was also made known in Hollywood during the shooting at Callander that test scenes of the quintuplets are valued by Twentieth Century-Fox at more than $2,000,000. Insurance policies cover every conceivable damage possible.

In fact, an expert was hired just to think of things that might happen—and insure against them.

Guarded now in a steel-lined Hollywood studio vault, the film negatives of the world's most famous babies are insured against earthquake, fire, theft, hurricane, scratches and every mishap that could prevent them from being developed satisfactorily.

There was a standing policy of $25,000 on each day's consignment of negatives shipped from Canada to the Movietone Studio in California. Premiums were paid daily on each separate shipment. Each member of the filming company was also insured.

This scene celebrated the quintuplets' second birthday—six months ahead of time for the sake of a Hollywood script—in a fairyland of toys in which the babies were placed. The girls stared wide-eyed and overjoyed as they cautiously inspected jumping jacks, wrestled with big wooly teddy bears and poked tiny fingers at blue-eyed dolls—all toys supplied by the Twentieth Century-Fox Film of Mesesrs. Kent, Schenck and Zanuck.

Newsreel pictures of the babies (taken by Pathe News, 'tis assumed) to mark developing periods in their lives, will be inserted into the picture—though the story is purely fictional.

Will Rogers was considered for Jean Hersholt's role of Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe when it was first considered.

Anyway, the quins thrived on Hollywood—gaining (besides the $50,000), from one to 10 ounces each in the week they worked.

One morning they awoke to find themselves in a bleak little room—totally unlike the warm and white-colored nursery in which they went to sleep the night before. While they slept, Hollywood, moving on the tiptoes of its technicians, had transformed the nursery into the room in which the children were born for the next "set."

The party was nearly upset the next morning when, awaiting the awakening of the quins, Jean Hersholt went sightseeing outside North Bay and slipped on the snow, suffering a severe bruise on the upper part of his left leg.

Mr. Hersholt limped back to his hotel and Dr. Dafoe was called. He prescribed a day in bed and treatment with electric lamps. That saved Twentieth Century-Fox $5,000 for each day's delay that might have ensued had Mr. Hersholt's strain caused postponement of filming.

The Hollywood troupe left the United States borderline at Port Huron, Mich., when they were stopped by Canadian authorities and told that a protest had been filed against their entering the Dominion. And it was not until Attorney Moskowitz agreed to hire a Canadian union man for every Hollywood technician entering Canada was the company allowed to proceed.

"Magnificent Obsession," the John M. Stahl production adapted from Lloyd G. Douglas' celebrated novel of the same name, has been chosen by Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, as the picture to be released in 38 different territories on January 10, 1936, the date which marks the 30th Anniversary of the veteran producer's activities in the motion picture field. Irene Dunne and Robert Taylor are co-starred. The picture also opens at the Radio City Music Hall in New York on December 30.

The protest had been made against the importation of Hollywood workers by the Canadian International Photographers' Union and the Canadian branch of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees.

Canadian union representatives declared that an agreement had been made with the Honorable David Croll, Ontario's Minister of Welfare, that Canadian technicians were to be employed and that the official permission extended by the government as the quins' custodians, which came from Mr. Croll, depended on this. Actual admission of such workers into Canada comes within the province of the Canadian Department of Immigration at Ottawa. F. S. Blair, assistant deputy minister, said he was assured that only necessary help was brought in from Hollywood —a total of 22 persons, including Director King, his assistant, three cameramen, three sound engineers, a script girl, chief electrician, a generator man and the players.

An anomoly of the situation was the fact that protests against the entry of American technicians came from unions whose headquarters are in the United States. Most of the Canadians seeking employment with the Hollywood crew were former workers in the Ontario Government Motion Picture Bureau, closed by the present administration, which disbanded the staff. The matter, therefore, had a political angle. Eventually, five Canadians were employed with the unit and sent north from Toronto to Callander.

The matter had by this time reached the point of a protest over the protest, with T. N. Fairley, acting for Toronto Projectionists' Local No. 10, of the IATSE's competitive National Union of Theatrical Employees, protesting that the IATSE men who were making the protests were vice-presidents of international unions "drawing at least a portion of their pay from over the border." At the same time a controversy broke out in the daily motion picture page of Toronto's Mail and Empire, edited by Roly Young, over the skill and abilities of the men concerned in the protest.

Regardless, no Hollywood carpenters nor electricians, other than the chief, were brought into the Dominion.

For a time the union dispute threatened to crash the expedition from Hollywood on the rocks, with rumblings heard in Canada of a countrywide strike by the IATSE unless its members secured employment with the unit.

And as the five babies finished work and graciously took their bows, raising a terrific bedlam, beating spoons against their metal food trays, to the consternation of the monitor men controlling the sound volume, the Dionne parents—Mrs. Oliva and Mr. Elzire Dionne—refused to appear in the story, protested against the use of the photographic lights, and refrained from talking with Dr. Dafoe except when absolutely necessary.

Neither of the parents visited the hospital while their children were being filmed.

A flood of quick French from the mother answered a reporter's questions.

Father Dionne said that Mrs. Dionne refused to see the children at work because of her objection to being photographed without receiving the remuneration they thought they were entitled to. It appears that the Fox company then offered $700 for the permission of the parents to cast two Hollywood players as the quins' mother and father. This they refused, and so are not appearing, in person or otherwise, the story, written on the train ride to Callander, by Charles Blake and Sonya Levien, providing no role for Oliva and Elzire.

Meanwhile, Jean (Hollywood's 'Dr. Dafoe') Hersholt, set out on return from Callander for Hollywood wearing a safety pin and with his pockets full of pebbles. The safety pin had served a normal period of use during the filming, performing the traditional function of safety pins for small infants. It has a large rubber ring attached to prevent children—such as the quints—or souvenir hunters—swallowing it. A curious French-Canadian legend has already grown up in the Callander country concerning pebbles from the vicinity of the quintuplets' home. They are supposed to have great power in the development of posterity. A pebble, if given to a childless family, so the backwoods' folk believe, is effective in remedying that lack in due course.

Work on "The Country Doctor" will be completed in Hollywood. The picture will be released to exhibitors in March. Fox undoubtedly will make much of the announcement issued this week by H. D. Clark, of the Toy Manufacturers, Inc., that the Dionne quintuplets have had the greatest influence this year in filling the bags of Santa Claus.

Already, toy tieups are being arranged, Master Art Products, of the Film Center Building, New York, announcing a contest to place prizes consisting of Dionne quintuplet dolls, with "a house and furniture," in theatres, with trailers, in place of Bank Nights, Race Nights, giveaway nights and whatnot.

And, amid all of the hullabaloo, the new British "Who's Who" for 1936 appears with a new listing, that of Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, of Callander, Ontario, who remarks, with the greatest of brevity, that he has practiced medicine since 1907, and that he has been with the Dionne quintuplets since birth.

ROTHACKER, LUBITSCH, HERZBRUN AND BAGNALL HEAD PRODUCTION

Rothacker Paramount Chief Executive in Hollywood, Lubitsch Managing Director, Herzbrun on Business, Bagnall Finances

The uncertainty of the future permanent construction of Paramount's top executive management in Hollywood production ended this week with the elevation of Watterson R. Rothacker to complete charge of the post and the continuance, as his associates, of Ernst Lubitsch, as production managing director; Henry Herzbrun, in charge of business affairs, and George Bagnall, in charge of finances. This was the outstanding development this week in a round of activities involving the corporation as follows:

Paramount detailed the plans for reaching 75,000,000 readers in a $250,000 three-month newspaper campaign which will definitely establish a merchandise setup that will include exhibitor and public.

S. A. Lynch concluded his work as advisor to the Paramount trustees on theatre reorganization.

The courts granted claim holders the right to appeal from the large reductions which had been made in fees sought, and expunged a $483,524 claim filed by Paramount International, a subsidiary, against the parent Paramount company.

Paramount common stock now totals 1,576,682 shares listed on the New York Stock Exchange.

It was indicated some time ago that Mr. Rothacker would be appointed head of Paramount production on the coast when he was elected a vice-president of Paramount Productions, Inc., but the official announcement was made by President John E. Otterson this week in a message to the men in the field. Mr. Otterson announced at the same time the association with Mr. Rothacker of Mr. Lubitsch, Mr. Herzbrun and Mr. Bagnall.

Studio Organized First

In discussing the new appointments, Mr. Otterson had this to say:

"When Paramount emerged from the long process of reorganization many problems confronted the new management of the company.

"Of primary importance to you in the field—and to all of us—was the matter of product. Due in a large measure to a change in studio management a few months previously, the producing organization was demoralized and this condition was reflected in the pictures which came from the studio.

"Therefore, our first concern was to establish a studio organization which would give Paramount the kind of product the company must have if Paramount's ancient glory was to be revived."

In next discussing details of the new appointment, Mr. Otterson described Mr. Rothacker as "an able and experienced film business man who is giving the studio sound management along business lines."

Elaborating on his recent general announcement of a Paramount national newspaper advertising campaign for the coming year, Neil Agnew, in charge of the company's sales, this week revealed the details of the plan.

Beginning in January, 1936, the company, through the medium of 131 newspapers in forty cities throughout the country, will launch a series of advertisements highlighting three or four outstanding currently-released Paramount pictures each month. Each of these advertisements will run the full length of the standard newspaper and one column less than the full width of a page.

Behind this newspaper campaign the company has planned definite merchandising tieups. Local theatre participation in the drive will be encouraged, for the prepared advertisements, as described, will be one column less than the full width of the newspaper page, leaving the remaining column at the disposal of the local theatre units to buy tiein space.

First Campaign Next Week

The first of the new campaign of advertisements is scheduled to appear next week for pictures to be released in January. It will advertise "Collegiate," "The Bride Comes Home" and "Rose of the Rancho." In addition it will mention the Grantland Rice Sportlight series and the Popeye cartoons, as well as informal chatter on Hollywood personalities, fashions and other items of general fan interest. The tenor of the advertisements "will be along casual, heart-to-heart informal talks, laden with interesting gossip, written in a chatty and engaging fashion."

S. A. Lynch, former head of Southern Enterprises and advisor to the Paramount trustees on reorganization of the company's theatre properties since 1933, has concluded his work and left last week for his home in Florida. Mr. Lynch, after the Paramount reorganization last June, was requested by Mr. Otterson to remain for the completion of a plan of reorganization for Olympia Theatres, the company's New England subsidiary. Mr. Lynch had been in retirement for a number of years prior to assuming his advisory work for the Paramount trustees and so far as could be learned has no active plans for the immediate future.

Appeal Permission Given

Meanwhile, the United States circuit court of appeals in New York has granted leave to Root, Clark, Buckner and Ballantine, and to Cook, Nathan and Lehman to appeal from Federal Judge Alfred C. Coxe's order which resulted in large reductions in the fees sought by each for their services in the Paramount reorganization. The appeal will be heard next month. Cook, Nathan and Lehman asked $350,000 for services and was awarded $115,000, while Root, Clark, Buckner and Ballantine asked $700,000 in final allowance and was awarded $200,000.

Other law firms identified with the Paramount reorganization whose applications for fees either were appreciably reduced or disallowed entirely by Judge Coxe are expected to follow the lead of the two firms mentioned above in taking their appeals of his decision to the circuit court of appeals. These include Samuel Zirn and Archibald Palmer.

Root, Clark, Buckner and Ballantine based their appeal on the size and complexity of the Paramount estate, the volume of services, the result accomplished and the setup of a fund for adequate compensation to petitioners, all of which, their application for leave to appeal stated, entitled them to additional allowances.

On the other hand, a claim of $483,524 filed against Paramount Publix by Paramount International Corporation, a subsidiary in the parent company's reorganization proceedings, was expunged under an order signed last Saturday by Judge Coxe. The claim was based on advances to Paramount Publix made by the subsidiary and was adjusted by counter claims of the parent company.

Lynch Concludes Duties as Advisor on Theatre Reorganizing; Claim Holders Given Right to Appeal from Reductions

In further line with Paramount activity, it was revealed that changes in stock listings on the New York Stock Exchange have increased Paramount Pictures, Inc., common, $1 par, by 207 shares, making the total 1,576,682.

Paramount Broadway Corporation has added 16,000, making the total 9,345,500, and 7,800 have been added to Paramount Pictures, Inc., 6 per cent, 1935, making the total 21,595,100.

Lasky Asks More Original Stories

Commenting forcibly on the lack of effort in Hollywood toward encouraging writers to turn out original works for the screen, Jesse L. Lasky said, "Hollywood should become original-story conscious. Something should be done to give original story writers a chance, the same as those who turn out successfully published plays and novels."

Mr. Lasky, in New York from Hollywood to arrange for music for the next picture he will produce for United Artists release in conjunction with Mary Pickford, and which will star Francis Lederer, is scouting for new screen material and talent among the legitimate shows on Broadway.

The Pickford-Lasky unit will not enter stage production, Mr. Lasky was quick to point out, saying that the company had already turned down offers to finance 50 per cent of two plays.

Mr. Lasky will produce four feature pictures for next season in conjunction with Miss Pickford, but the latter will not appear in any of them. One will feature Nino Martini, in an operetta, which, along with the Lederer vehicle, tentatively titled "One Rainy Afternoon," will constitute half his schedule. Mr. Lasky intimated that that schedule stands a good chance of being enlarged, and further hinted that as many as six or eight pictures may come from his production unit next season.

When asked to comment on the new broadcasting studio recently opened by the National Broadcasting Company in Hollywood he said it was a "good thing for the picture industry. You can't combat progress," he continued, "and we in the picture business may as well hitch on to it."

Mr. Lasky, accompanied by Harry D'Abbadie D'Arrast, plans to leave for Hollywood late this week.

FILM INDUSTRY FACES HEAVY TAX

new law. Payrolls should be kept in such detail as will indicate the total wages paid to each employee. The second type of record necessary, it seems, would be a detailed account of each employee's employment as well as exact dates of employment (especially if the work is irregular), whether the work is steady or temporary, and the reasons for discontinuing employment. For the purpose of the New York state laws, it seems necessary to show where the contract was entered into, and where the work was actually done.

Deduction From Wages

Furthermore, the federal statute provides that the employer is to collect the employee's income tax "by deducting the amount of the tax from the wages as and when paid." It is important to keep a record of these deductions, says the Commercial Clearing House.

Complications arise where both state and federal law are involved because of credit provisions. Where a company operates in several states, separate records may be necessary in each state, as for instance where individual reserve accounts may be kept under one state law, but may not be permitted in other states. The states will require detailed reports of payroll records.

The New York act requires every employer whether or not subject to the act, to keep an accurate record of the number of his employees and the wages paid by him, a sworn statement of which must, upon demand, be furnished the Commissioner. Failure to keep such record or the wilful falsification of such record constitutes a misdemeanor. Official instructions are available explaining the requirements and items to be included in the record.

The federal Social Security Act does not provide for the payment of unemployment compensation benefits, and all such benefits are payable by the states. The rates of benefits and other matters, such as the ratio of weeks of benefit to weeks of employment, are left entirely to the states. If the state does not enact an unemployment compensation law, no benefits are paid.

Benefits under the federal old-age pension system have nothing to do with the foregoing. The old-age benefits are compulsory, directly under federal administration.

The act created a Social Security Board to administer certain of the provisions relating to unemployment insurance and old-age pensions. This board has charge of the approval of state plans.

From Indianapolis this week came word that the Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana, which is affiliated with Allied States, is opposing agitation for a special session of the Indiana legislature to enact social security measures, favored by the state administration.

The theatre owners' opposition is on the theory that new theatre taxation might result. Governor Paul V. McNutt has indicated he favors a special session of only five days to pass social security laws, but on the other hand a number of legislators have declared they are willing to stay in session 40 days or more, and there is no way of knowing what they might produce in legislation. The Indiana Farm Bureau intends to drive for farmers' tax relief in the session, and the theatre owners fear the tax burden will be shifted to them.

ENGLAND'S SYSTEM FIRST ADOPTED

England, by the enactment of the National Insurance Act of 1911, was the first country to adopt a compulsory nationwide system of unemployment benefits. At present almost every European country has some system of unemployment insurance, either compulsory or voluntary. Canada has also adopted a system "for insurance against unemployment."

The primary reason for the late growth of unemployment compensation in the United States was that no state wished to burden its industries with the cost of such an undertaking unless similar provisions were made in neighboring states. By placing the same tax burden upon industry throughout the country the federal Social Security Act has attempted to remove this obstacle to state action.

However, social security legislation as such is not being opposed by the organization.

The immediacy of the problems involved must now occupy all employers, points out A. V. Miller, chief accountant of the New York Herald-Tribune, in an interview in Editor & Publisher, trade publication of the newspaper field. Although the A. A. A., the S. E. C. and other New Deal enterprises are featured prominently in the newspapers, he said, it is seldom that news and developments of the Social Security Act are prominently displayed. This leads Mr. Miller to observe that it is not generally realized that the Social Security law, with all its ramifications and requirements, is broader in scope and in its effect on employer and employee and on general business "than all the other various New Deal activities put together."

The rank and file of business men, in Mr. Miller's opinion, are not as concerned over the situation as they should be.

Mr. Miller sees the situation in New York state as an "eye opener" as to what will happen elsewhere, and solution of a controversy raging over the administration of this state's unemployment insurance law, which was passed to conform with the federal Social Security law, is expected to have wide influence in the shaping of policy in the administration of the law throughout the nation.

The dispute has to do with the filing of reports by employers.

The unemployment insurance state advisory council, made up of three representatives of the public, three representatives of employees and three of employers, gave their approval by a vote of six to three on November 14 (the three employers dissenting) to the proposed reporting plan as prepared by the administrator. This requires that every employer be given a registration number and that each employer report an initial payroll as of January 1, 1936, and periodically thereafter a complete payroll record of all individual employees showing time worked, wages paid, occupation, etc., for each payroll period.

In direct opposition to this plan is that of the New York State Employers' Conference, which is said to represent companies employing the majority of workers affected by the law, according to Editor & Publisher. This calls simply for a periodic report by the employer of the total number of employees and total payroll on which the tax is based, beginning January 1, 1936, and a report of each termination of employment with such data as necessary to compute benefits, beginning January 1, 1938.

The employers say that the state's plan would be wasteful and inefficient in that a large proportion of the data collected would never be used, that "to maintain a record of each individual employee requiring 3,000,000 postings each week, with the detailed information will necessitate a large clerical force, will result in a tremendous increase in the cost of administration and will cause much confusion," and that the state's plan would nullify business policy of holding information of employees as confidential.

Arguments for and against the two plans have been going back and forth for many months, culminating for the time being at any rate, with the approval of the detailed report plan by the state advisory council.

Sees Business Penalized

Mr. Miller points out that the pooling of all taxes under this law actually penalizes all stabilized businesses, to the benefit of those such as the contracting industry, where the labor turnover is rapid.

He suggests that where such laws are being worked out in other states, or where there is a possibility that the existing law may be amended, it is "urgent and desirable" to have the law specify individual plant reserves, rather than have all employers' taxes pooled.

Mr. Miller sees the present social security law proving to be a heavy burden on industry. He points out that, under this law, business in New York State will be paying in 15 years $424,450,000 annually under the unemployment and pension provisions and that the other benefits specified will require taxes amounting to $120,460,000 a year for New York State, or a total of $544,910,000 a year. The state budget, he added, has never exceeded $300,000,000 a year.

The California State Unemployment Insurance Reserves Commission has formally adopted 45/100 of one per cent as the rate of deduction to be made from payrolls in 1936 as employers' contributions to the state unemployment insurance fund. Final rules have not been decided upon and employers are counseled not to become too excited.

A special committee has been named to draw up a payroll accounting system for such industries as the motion picture producing industry where extras work first at one studio, then another, frequently working only a day or so at a time in any one place.

The California law goes into effect January 1, and under it employers will eventually contribute three per cent of their payroll totals, with each employee eventually assessed a maximum of one and a half per cent of his pay. The maximum salary assessable is $3,000 a year. Benefits to those who lose their jobs become payable in 1938, with the maximum of $15 a week for each worker.

SUMMARY OF STATE UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION LAWS, NOV. 1, 1935

Below is a summary of state unemployment compensation laws, prepared by the Social Security Board, Washington, as of November 1, 1935. Unemployment insurance, as it is usually referred to, is provided in the Federal Social Security Act, a series of related measures intended to alleviate the principal causes of insecurity in our economic life. Unemployment compensation laws have been enacted in nine states and the District of Columbia, and other states are expected to enact such laws in the next few months. The data for Oregon were not available for inclusion in the chart. Penalties are provided for failure to comply with the many provisions of the Act, and since the matter is extremely complicated, exhibitors and others who come under the requirements are advised to obtain full information from their state boards.

WARNER WILL NOT ADD MUSIC TAX; CANADIANS AWAIT LEVY REDUCTION

Broadcasters' Board Authorizes License Agreements with ASCAP and Warner, but Not to Exceed One Year

With less than two weeks remaining in which the music performance situation in many of its phases must be crystallized, there were insistent reports this week that:

1. Warner, which will set up its own music licensing system January 1, will not levy a music tax on exhibitors, who already pay a fee to the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers.

2. Warner has offered radio stations the use of its extensive music catalogue, which is being withdrawn from ASCAP, at the rate of two-fifths the royalty that broadcasters pay to ASCAP.

3. Broadcasters, as a matter of policy, have come to a decision with respect to signing new five-year contracts with ASCAP.

Also, in a few days it will be known whether the Government will proceed on January 7, as scheduled, with its trial of ASCAP seeking to declare it an illegal monopoly, or whether the prosecution will be continued. The latter is the more likely, since the Government is taking time to study phases of the situation arising from Warner's secession of its 11 music subsidiaries from the Society, and also because it wants more time to prepare a water-tight case, strengthening the weak points that were apparent when the trial started in the United States district court in New York last summer.

ASCAP and the Music Publishers' Protective Association, the co-defendants, have indicated they would be agreeable to further postponement, if the Government so elects. The Department of Justice in Washington meanwhile reiterates that the case has not been dropped, and so far as it knows now it will not abandon it, regardless of ASCAP's assertions that with Warner's withdrawal the Society can not be described as a monopoly in violation of the anti-trust laws.

Warner's policy, it is reported, will be to obtain the revenue for its four major and seven small music subsidiaries from the broadcasters, leaving the exhibitors untaxed. This, however, would mean no actual financial advantage to theatre owners, since they already pay a seat tax to ASCAP. But it would mean that Warner music, whether or not in Warner pictures, could be performed in theatres without a tax.

Herman Starr, vice-president and treasurer of Warner Brothers and in charge of the company's music business, since the break with ASCAP was announced, has been negotiating with Columbia Broadcasting System and National Broadcasting Company as well as independent stations for licensing arrangements.

This week it was learned that the company has offered to license radio stations at a rate of two per cent of their gross commercial revenue, plus 40 per cent of what the stations now pay to ASCAP in the form of a sustaining fee. ASCAP's licenses with radio calls for five per cent of the gross collections from advertisers.

Through this method Warner expects to receive more than the $340,000 it received last year from ASCAP as its share of collections from radio stations, theatres, hotels and other sources. The film company resigned from ASCAP on the ground the collections from broadcasters were inadequate. It believes its share should more nearly approximate $900,000.

There is, of course, the cost of establishing a nation-wide licensing system and legal department to check and prosecute infringements of copyright. ASCAP's overhead in the last two years has been about 25 per cent of its gross. In ratio, Warner's overhead is expected to be higher because the collections will be smaller.

Some indication of what Warner's music companies may anticipate grossing is reflected in ASCAP's revenue from radio last year which totaled $2,440,000, representing a sustaining fee of $840,000 from 600 stations and $1,600,000 in commissions. Theoretically, the commissions, while five per cent of the gross, amount to only about one per cent in the case of chain-affiliated stations.

This, explains ASCAP, is because the chain gets more for a station's time from the advertiser than the station actually receives from the chain, while the music tax is assessed on individual stations. Then, too, there are deductions for talent, program building and other expenses.

Warner's complaint has been that the independent stations pay the full five per cent tax, while the chain units escape with less. ASCAP admits the situation and agrees that its collections from radio are inadequate, but protests that it is difficult enough to get the broadcasters to agree to present arrangements.

This has proved the case, with the great majority of stations not yet having renewed their contracts with ASCAP, although present agreement extensions expire December 31.

Broadcasters Define Policy

Following a series of sessions, the board of the National Association of Broadcasters in New York this week adopted a resolution defining its policy in the muddled copyright-music situation. The resolution empowered James W. Baldwin, NAB's executive secretary, to negotiate license agreements not to exceed one year with ASCAP and Warner for any station that so desires.

The one-year proposed is in contrast to the five-year agreements already signed by National Broadcasting Company, Columbia Broadcasting System and a number of individual stations.

Declaring an emergency to exist, the resolution stressed that the copyright situation is beclouded as a result of the Warner-ASCAP split, and cautioned stations against broadcasting any music without a license on or after January 1, or without "a sufficient guarantee of indemnity from a satisfastory source" against copyright infringement. It was pointed out that "no one can now definitely say what copyrights would remain with ASCAP after January 1."

Fighting Receivership

ASCAP intends to carry to the United States supreme court, if necessary, its fight against the receivership in the state of Washington where a receiver has been appointed to administer its affairs pending adjudication of the Royal Commission in Formal Report Makes Strong Recommendation for Lower Rates on Canadian Theatres

Reduction of the performing rights' tariffs charged Canadian theatres will, it is expected, be brought about without delay by Federal Order-in-Council. It is probable that the government will deal with the matter before the year ends.

This action is forecast as a result of the formal report made by the Royal Commission appointed to investigate the activities of the Canadian Performing Right Society, Ltd. The report, by Judge James Parker of Toronto, has just been made public and it contains very strong recommendations that the charges levied against theatres should be scaled down.

In its survey of the whole tangled musical situation as it concerned everything from skating rinks to strolling troubadours, the Commission was in no case more emphatic than it was with reference to theatres. Tariffs had been substantially upped at the beginning of the present year and the conclusion of the investigators, very clearly, was that this boost was not justified.

"It seems a fair conclusion that the rate of 1931 should not be changed and that the 1935 tariff is unjust and unfair," the Royal Commission opinion reads, while a later reference to the current schedule sums up the matter by saying that the Commission considers it "excessive."

As far as the film industry is concerned, the prospect of this cut in operating costs is the most important single result from the exhaustive Canadian investigation, but it is also considered definite that some revision of the Canadian Copyright Act will be introduced at the next session of the Canadian House of Commons. An appeal tribunal is proposed both to deal with disputes over performing rights and to pass on the tariffs of the Canadian Performing Right Society before they become effective. The Society has a practical monopoly of the performing rights to copyright music and can thus, in theory, impose whatever fees it chooses. Where such a condition exists in other fields, the Canadian practice is to create an independent body to analyze and approve rates. It is very definitely the opinion of the Canadian investigators that such a body is necessary, while legislation to prevent vexatious and unwarranted legal proceedings is also urged.

Years of Agitation

The agitation and subsequent investigation of the Canadian situation date back over several years. The Canadian Performing Right Society is owned jointly by ASCAP (4,997 shares) and the English Performing Right Society (4,996 shares). Single shares are registered in the names of each of the six directors: H. T. Jamieson of Toronto, president; Holmes Maddock, Toronto; Ralph Hawkes, London, and Gene Buck, Louis Bernstein, E. C. Mills of New York. The Society was incorporated in 1925 at the instance of the British Society and reorganized in 1930 when ASCAP joined the set-up. It controls the "small rights" to approximately 2,000,000 works, but does not control stage and dramatic rights for full performances of operas, musicals, etc. Actually, the number of active works on its lists is probably under the 200,000 total. An analysis of 1934 Canadian musical programs reveals, incidentally, some interesting information regarding the comparative popularity of American and British works with Canadian audiences. There were 1,615,965 performances of 16,771 ASCAP works while 4,841 of the British Society's works were used in 377,080 performances. The balance of 162,480 performances represented 4,370 continental numbers. These figures, of course, represent all classes of performances, not merely theatres.

When the Society, following its organization, undertook to secure regular revenues for the use of its properties, chiefly through the granting of annual licenses, it met with stiff resistance. Admittedly, there was a very general feeling among music users that nothing whatever should be paid for the performance of musical works. The situation, which was not clearly understood by the licensees, continued to get more and more involved and to be marked by more and more bad feeling. Eventually, it culminated in a deluge of complaints which prompted the Canadian government to order an investigation by Royal Commission. There was considerable bitterness in evidence at the hearings and the Commission listened to days and days of testimony.

In justice to the Society, it is now made clear that it is not only legally entitled to a return for the performance of music but that it is also quite within its rights in granting licenses for that purpose and a regular user of music, such as a theatre, hotel or broadcasting station, must necessarily have such a license. The complaint that the "Society was accused of using the courts to dragoon the music users into line and obtain payment of fees" is dealt with by the comment in the report that it was "at times domineering in its attitude and perhaps a little hasty in resorting to the courts for the enforcement of its legal rights." At the same time, operating expenses in Canada were high because of the costs "incurred in persuading a public that was often unreasoning and ignorant of the Society's legal rights, to purchase a license."

The conclusion of the investigators is that, in Canada, the whole question of performing rights is still in the experimental stage and the problem of determining what is a proper fee in any case is a very knotty one.

"In 1931, the (theatre) tariff was regarded as fair and reasonable by the Society and no sound reason is given for the raising of the rates except that pressure for more revenue was placed on the Canadian Performing Right Society, Ltd.," the report said. "If anything, the rate in Canada should be slightly less than the old rate (of ASCAP) because in the United States, generally speaking, the theatres are open seven days a week.

"Bearing these considerations in mind and having regard to the fact that 10 cents per seat in the past has been acceptable to the Canadian Performing Right Society, Ltd., and was not strenuously objected to by the larger theatres in Canada, it seems a fair conclusion that the rate of 1931 should not be changed."

In the new 1935 tariff, in force since January, the fee for a house operating more than three days weekly including the right to perform at any time during the week rose to 20 cents per seat. Another point emphasized in the report is that the schedule of tariffs filed might fairly and reasonably be considered as maximum fees and that there should be a willingness on the part of the Society to make concessions under such conditions as, for instance, a theatre located in a drought area or in an industrial town where factories were closed and business slack. The fact that seating capacities in most cases were designed to cater to community needs in more prosperous times than those immediately past is also noted.

The Royal Commission heard considerable evidence on score charges which, it is mentioned, confuse the theatre issue considerably. But no recommendation regarding these is made. E. C. Mills, general manager of ASCAP, said that neither ASCAP nor the Canadian Society or both had ever received "directly or indirectly in any manner, shape or form, one single cent of that charge assessed against the exhibitors by the producers commonly called score charge." He is quoted as expressing the belief that "the producers ultimately profited very grossly on that charge," but his evidence is given in the report without comment.

Mention is made of the possibility that the ramifications of music taxes and fees by which the organized music industry has exacted millions of dollars from exhibitors and producers in the United States may lead to federal regulation with the comment that "a strong impression is left that some persons have divided copyright into many parts—distinct in themselves—so that the right hand does not or cannot know what the left hand is doing."

Judge Parker's report said that strong protests had been made during the inquiry, held in several Canadian cities, against the insistence of the Society upon returns of programs being furnished at the risk of cancellation of licenses for failure to make them.

SAYS WARING ASKED $250,000 FOR FILM

Fred Waring, leader of Waring's Pennsylvanians, named $250,000—no less—as the figure for which he would appear with his band in one picture for Paramount.

Testimony to this effect was given by Louis Diamond, head of Paramount's music publishing subsidiaries, who was a witness for Mr. Waring in an infringement action against WDAS Broadcasting Company, Philadelphia, tried in the common pleas court in that city last week. On Broadway it is known that Mr. Waring is still holding out for that amount, and has turned down Paramount's offer of $200,000.

In the suit, Mr. Waring charged the broadcasting company played his records without paying him for the privilege. The National Association of Broadcasters was allowed to intervene in the action as a party interested. It was admitted there was no special legislation on the subject to guide the court. Judge Harry S. McDevitt reserved decision.

state's suit seeking to oust the Society under the anti-trust laws.

The Society sought to remove the case to the federal courts, but the district court in Seattle held last week it lacked jurisdiction because it was a state matter. ASCAP attorneys now plan to certify the case to the United States circuit court of appeals, and will ask that it be heard in San Francisco, where it will be removed from local pressure from exhibitors and radio stations.

ASCAP suffered another blow when the Washington superior court assigned to the receiver all of its copyrights. ASCAP can still reopen the case in the state courts, on a petition to vacate the receivership and remove state control.

E. C. Mills, ASCAP general manager, said on Tuesday that he had discussed the situation with the broadcasters' board, but was not at liberty to disclose what had been discussed.

Warner's reported offer equalling 40 per cent of the broadcasters' present payments to ASCAP corresponds to the estimate made by Warner that its music subsidiaries contributed about 40 per cent of all the compositions on sponsored radio programs, and that the same proportion would hold on sustaining programs.

The extent to which sustaining fees would make up Warner's collections from radio stations is indicated in ASCAP's income from this source. In the year ending January 1, 1935, 14 stations owned and operated by National Broadcasting Company paid ASCAP $173,500 as a sustaining fee and $137,541.96 in advertising fees representing five per cent, theoretically, of gross revenue from advertisers. In the 10 months ending October 31 this year, NBC grossed $14,000,000 for commercial time only, which will mean a handsome increase for ASCAP and something to be strongly desired by Warner.

To determine for itself whether or not it could get along without Warner music, the Columbia Broadcasting System on Tuesday and Wednesday this week conducted program tests in which Warner numbers were not used. The test was applied to sustaining programs originating from New York. A CBS official explained the purpose was to decide "how the music situation would set up in case we do not use Warner music after January 1."

Meanwhile the ASCAP-Warner-Radio situation was scheduled for further discussion at a meeting of the ASCAP board on Thursday.

ASCAP's songwriters' classification committee is continuing meetings in an attempt to devise a formula that will please members in that division who are dissatisfied with the present method of distributing revenue.

Agitated by the dispute over control of the public performing rights of the music held by Warner, the songwriters are threatening suit against the film company for attempting to license something it does not control.

In another direction the music industry sought to protect its interests when John G. Paine, chairman of the board of the Music Publishers' Protective Association, protested to Harry S. Hopkins, federal relief administrator, against the ruling that only original editions of non-copyrighted works are to be used in concerts by musicians and choral groups on Government relief. This, said Mr. Paine, meant that works published by American publishers are excluded from purchase, and only foreign editions can be used.

AMENDED AGREEMENT SHARPENS ACTORS' GUILD AIM AT 'CLOSED SHOP'

All Equity and Guild Members Transferring Between Stage and Screen Must Join Both Groups or Face Suspension

Objective Is to Unite All Talent Unions on Coast in Collective Bargaining on Pay and Working Conditions; Rules Given

Complete text of the amended agreement between the Actors' Equity and Chorus Equity associations appears on page 44.

The Screen Actors' Guild—the union of studio players in Hollywood—this week hailed the amended agreement with Actors' Equity Association as strengthening the Guild's drive for the attainment of one of its main objectives: a closed shop for acting talent employed in the motion picture industry. And this, it develops, is merely one step in the campaign for "one big union" of all studio talent.

The amendments strengthen and simplify the working agreement between the two actors' unions, entered into November 15, 1934, by which the Guild assumed jurisdiction over the motion picture field which had been held hitherto by Equity. The changes also make the original agreement "more workable and more binding on the membership," the Guild pointed out.

Of major importance to the motion picture companies not only because they are directly affected but also because of the interchange of talent between the stage and screen and because of the unprecedented investments in Broadway productions by film interests this year, the amendments seeking to forge "one big union" of actors are briefly described by the Guild as follows:

Must Join Both Groups

"The amendments make it compulsory for members of each organization to join the other when transferring from stage to screen or vice versa. They also make a new and eminently fair arrangement for the payment of dues, providing that an Equity member working in pictures shall be required to pay dues only to the Guild; the Guild taking upon itself the payment of such member's dues to Equity.

"In the future, all Equity members coming to pictures from the stage will be committed to join the Guild within 30 days after signing a contract for motion picture work or within 30 days after acting in motion pictures. Failure to abide by these rules will bring about the player's suspension from Equity for an indefinite period.

"The same rule applies to all Equity members now working in pictures. If not already members of the Guild, they must join it within 30 days or face suspension from Equity. Guild officers are expecting that Equity members will voluntarily join the Guild upon receipt of their notices from Equity."

Guild Takes Similar Steps

At the same time, taking its cue from this move, the Screen Writers' Guild of the Authors' League of America has taken similar steps to bind itself more tightly to the League.

The plan behind the move, it is reported from Hollywood, is to unite all talent unions on the West Coast under one flag and thus force studio heads and producers to recognize them as representatives of all the actors and writers in Hollywood, in collective bargaining for salaries and working conditions.

The Authors' League is the parent organization of all writers, dramatists and scenarists in the country, with each branch represented on its council. However, according to Marc Connelly, president of the League—who is now in Hollywood preparing the screen version of "Green Pastures" for Warner—each of these groups is an autonomous unit, each concerned with its own branch of writing, and none of them interfering with any other branch. It is the hope of the Screen Writers' Guild to eliminate these differences, and to weld the League into one gigantic union.

Leaders of the movement in the Screen Writers' Guild are negotiating with the other branches of the League for assurance that no author will supply studios with material in the event that the Guild calls a strike, according to Hollywood advices. If this point is carried, the details of closer organization, it is understood, will follow automatically.

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, however, remains the only recognized agency through which the producers will deal with studio talent.

Attitudes Toward Academy

But the fear and distrust with which both the Actors' and Writers' Guilds regard the Academy is vividly described in a message to all members of the Writers' Guild by Robert N. Lee, its secretary, by order of the executive board. This communication warned that:

"Many efforts have been made to turn the producers' Academy Agreement for Writers into a lever to force members of the Guild to join the Academy. You will be told that all credit controversies must be adjusted through the Academy. Once you go in the Academy offices terrific pressure is brought to bear upon you to join the Academy. Guild members will not want either to join the Academy or have the Academy pushed down their throats.

"You may obtain all of the advantages, if any, of the credit clauses in the Producers' Academy Agreement without ever entering the Academy offices. Use the following procedure:

"(1) If you wish to protest the Producer's tentative determination of credits and wish to read the script, get your copy of the script at the studio, not at the Academy offices.

"(2) If your protest is denied by the Producer, do not take an appeal to the Academy committee. By the express language of the so-called Basic Agreement the decision of the Writers' Adjustment Committee on such an appeal does not obligate the Producer to change the credits on the screen. An appeal, therefore, from the Producer's determination under the Producers' Academy Agreement is merely an empty gesture. Don't do it.

"Any questions regarding your right to credits on any particular picture should be brought to the offices of the Guild. As in the past, the Guild will continue to aid you in the solution of your problem."

Plight of Actor and Dramatist

Meanwhile, the alleged plight of the actor and the dramatist was described in the current issue of the Screen Guild's Magazine of Hollywood by Michael Blankfort, founder of The Theatre Union, stage director and adapter. Mr. Blankford quoted some statistics taken from "B'way Inc.," a book by Morton Eustis.

The year "1927-28 was a boom year in the theatre," said Mr. Blankfort. "During the year approximately 70 per cent of Equity's membership worked. How long did they work? Using round numbers, of the 6,000 actors who had employment, 4,800 averaged less than nine weeks, and 2,400 averaged only three and a half weeks. And how much were they paid? 'Estimating the average salary of the actor in both musical and dramatic productions at that time as $100 a week (which is a high figure), this means that the 4,800 actors received an average income of $880 or less that year, and of these, 2,400 received $350 for the year.'

"These figures," continued Mr. Blankfort, "tell their own sad tale. Even in the best years the actor had to live on slightly under $14 a week on an average. The additional fact that with the depression five years later, there were 2,000 less actors working, makes it unnecessary for me to push the point too far."

While Mr. Blankfort agreed that it is difficult to show figures about the playwright, he declared there are two facts "that stick out."

"Number one is that from 65 to 85 per cent of all plays produced in New York are financial failures," continued Mr. Blankfort. And as number two, he found that "there are literally hundreds of plays unproduced that by any standards you choose, are better than most that are produced."

FULL TEXT OF EQUITY AGREEMENT

Agreement entered into between the Actors' Equity Association and Chorus Equity Association, both voluntary associations organized under the laws of New York, hereinafter jointly called "Equity," and Screen Actors Guild, Inc., a California non-profit membership corporation, hereinafter called the "Guild." (Additions or changes are in italics.)

Whereas, the parties hereto entered into an agreement dated November 15, 1934, entitled "Affiliation of Screen Actors Guild, Inc., with Actors' Equity Association and Chorus Equity Association"; and

Whereas, it is the desire of the said parties to modify the said agreement as hereinafter set forth,

Now, Therefore, the parties do hereby agree as follows:

It is the purpose of both organizations to further the interests of actors, wherever they work. To foster this common end to strengthen the hands of both, Equity and the Guild enter into this agreement on the following terms.

1. This agreement shall be in effect until cancelled and may be cancelled by either party on four months' written notice or immediately if the other party breaks the contract. All provisions apply only during the duration of the contract.

2. As soon as this contract goes into effect, the Guild agrees to apply to the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, a voluntary association affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, (hereinafter called the Four A's) for a charter granting the Guild exclusive jurisdiction of the motion picture actors' field in the United States of America, its dependencies and possessions and Canada, and Equity agrees to cause said charter to be issued within a reasonable time. The Guild agrees to amend its By-Laws forthwith to define its jurisdiction accordingly, and to keep such By-Laws in full force and effect. In the event of the cancellation of this contract, the Guild agrees to surrender said charter to the Four A's. The Guild agrees to elect members of the International Board of the Four A's satisfactory to Equity. The Guild agrees to abide by the rules of the Four A's and the American Federation of Labor in making labor affiliations.

Jurisdiction

3. Equity retains all its present jurisdiction except the motion picture field. The Guild has complete autonomy, its own officers, basic documents, and By-Laws. Without limiting the generality of the foregoing, each party shall determine its own policy toward aliens.

4. Neither party shall have the right to call a strike of the members of the other party. In the event, however, of a strike by either party in its field, the other party will direct its members not to work in such field and will discipline them if they do.

5. The parties shall create a Conference Board to consult from time to time on mutual problems. Wherever practicable there shall be an exchange of facilities between the parties on terms to be from time to time agreed upon.

6. Members of the Guild who are also members of Equity shall be required to pay dues to the Guild only, and shall be relieved of all Equity dues and of all arrearages in Equity dues up to but not after January 1, 1936.

From and after January 1, 1936, the Guild will pay to Equity dues for every member of the Guild in good standing who is also a member of Equity (other than Junior Guild members) and Equity agrees to look solely to the Guild for the payment of such dues. Dues from the Guild to Equity will be paid semi-annually, on May 1st and November 1st at the rate of $15 per annum for each such member of the Guild whose dues to the Guild are paid at the rate of $30 per annum, and at the rate of $18 per annum for each such member of the Guild whose annual dues are paid at a rate higher than $30 per annum. Equity shall have the option to require payment by the Guild of dues of $18 for each such member regardless of the rate at which he pays dues to the Guild from and after the 1st day of January, 1937.

Where Junior Guild members are not working in motion pictures but are working in the theatre, such members shall not be required to pay dues to the Guild and the Guild shall have no obligation to pay such member's dues to Equity. Where Junior Guild members are not working in the theatre but are working in motion pictures, neither such member nor the Guild will be required to pay Equity dues for such member.

The Guild may determine when and under what conditions said Junior member shall be deemed to be working in motion pictures, and Equity may determine when and under what conditions said Junior member shall be deemed to be working in the theatre.

A paid up Equity member who has not and is not making his living in motion pictures and who desires to join the Guild will not be required to pay initiation fees and dues to the Guild until after he enters the motion picture field and until the next succeeding May 1st or November 1st, whichever is the nearer date. During the period during which these members are exempt from paying dues to the Guild, the Guild shall not be responsible to Equity for such dues.

Except as above provided, Equity will admit to membership members of the Guild only if paid up, and the Guild will admit to membership members of Equity only if paid up.

Any charter provisions with which this paragraph conflicts are hereby waived.

Equity Actors Must Join Guild

7. Members of Equity acting in motion pictures shall be required by Equity to join the Guild within thirty days after any such member shall make or execute a contract requiring him to act in a motion picture, or within thirty days after the first day such member actually acts in such motion picture, whichever shall occur the sooner. Equity agrees that any Equity member acting in motion pictures failing or refusing to join the Guild within such time or resigning from the Guild thereafter, if still acting in the motion picture field, will be suspended from Equity for an indefinite period, such suspension to commence as of the time when such member of Equity actually returns to the stage, and shall under no circumstances become effective before the first day upon which, by reason of contract or otherwise, such member is required to or does actually appear upon a stage in a legitimate theatre. Such period of suspension shall be terminated only by the mutual agreement of Equity and the Guild.

Members of the Guild acting on the legitimate stage, now or hereafter, will be required by the Guild to join Equity forthwith on entering on employment in the theatre, and the Guild agrees that any Guild member failing or refusing to join Equity while acting on the legitimate stage, or resigning from Equity thereafter if still acting on the legitimate stage, will be suspended from the Guild for an indefinite period, such suspension to commence immediately and to be terminated only by the mutual agreement of Equity and the Guild. Otherwise, members of either organization will not be required to join the other.

The question of fact as to whether or not a member of Equity has failed or refused to join the Guild or has resigned therefrom, shall be determined by the Council of Equity in accordance with its Constitution and By-Laws. The question of fact as to whether or not a member of the Guild has failed or refused to join Equity or has resigned therefrom, shall be determined by the Board of Directors of the Guild in accordance with its Constitution and By-Laws.

Suspensions

8. The suspension of a member from either organization shall entail suspension from both organizations, and discipline (including fines and penalties) imposed upon members of either organization shall be respected and enforced by both. Without limiting the generality of the foregoing, Equity shall immediately furnish the Guild its suspended list of members, and such members shall not be admitted to the Guild without the consent of Equity. This paragraph will not require the suspension or discipline of existing members of either organization for past offenses, or delinquency in the other organization. This paragraph will not require the Guild to suspend Junior members not working in the theatre who have not paid their Equity dues, nor Equity to suspend Equity members who are Junior Guild members not working in motion pictures who have not paid their Guild dues.

9. The Guild may at any time, and on request of Equity shall, open a New York office for administrative purposes. The Guild agrees that the personnel of such office shall be satisfactory to Equity.

10. The Guild agrees to pay the per capita tax payable to the Four A's, paying the full tax on Guild members who are not Equity members and half the tax on common members. Equity states that such tax is at present seventy-five cents per year per paid-up member, and in the past about sixty per cent of the amount paid has been returned by the Four A's. The Guild shall receive its pro rata share of any such return.

11. Each party will promptly transmit to the other necessary information as to membership delinquencies, etc., as will enable the other party to carry out the agreements just made.

12. This agreement shall be construed liberally to effectuate its purpose, and shall become binding only when it is ratified by the respective governing bodies and membership of the parties hereto; and when so ratified, the respective organizations will pass all necessary legislation and take all necessary steps to carry out and enforce the same.

Except as hereinafter set forth the agreement of November 15, 1934, hereinabove referred to, shall not be modified or changed in any particular and all of its provisions will remain binding upon all parties hereto until the final approval and signing of this agreement. This agreement shall be construed liberally to effectuate its purpose, and shall become binding only when it is approved in the manner provided by the respective constitutions and by-laws of all three organizations. When so approved, the respective organizations will pass all necessary legislation and take all necessary and desirable steps to carry out and enforce the same.

THE KEYSTONE OF YOUR FUTURE

Sydney S. Cohen Dies; Was Early Exhibitor Leader

Funeral services for Sydney S. Cohen, former exhibitor leader, who was stricken last Thursday, were held Sunday in New York at Central Synagogue, of which he was a trustee. Rabbi Jonah B. Wise officiated, assisted by Cantor I. H. Weinstock. Burial was at Union Field Cemetery, Long Island.

Mr. Cohen died suddenly in front of the building in which his offices are located. Death was believed to have been caused by heart failure. He was president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America from 1920 to 1924 and chairman of the organization's board of directors in 1925 and 1926. He was a former theatre operator in New York and at the time of his death owned an interest in several houses at Middletown, N. Y., in addition to his ownership of the 125th St. Appolo and the Empire in the Bronx, which he leased to RKO for a 10-year period in 1932. With Howard S. Cullman, trustee of the Roxy, he was mentioned recently as a bidder for the house under a plan of reorganization being advanced by them.

Mr. Cohen was also technical advisor to the bondholders' committee of the Beacon theatre on Broadway and operated the Fox Brooklyn for the bondholders for about one year just before operation of the house was turned over to Si Fabian. He also owned retail stores in Connecticut and New Jersey. In recent years he had been interested in educational and philanthropic activities and had been identified with Educational Alliance.

Mr. Cohen was 50 years old, and resided at the Hotel Ansonia with his daughter, Dorothy Louise, and a son, Richard Sydney, who survive him. Mrs. Cohen died in 1918.

In addition to scores of personal friends from within and without the industry, the following organizations with which Mr. Cohen was associated were represented at the funeral services: The Educational Alliance, the Grand Street Boys' Association, Alumni Association of the Boys' Club, E. A.; Pilgrim Lodge, No. 890, F. and A. M.; Central Synagogue Brotherhood, New York Rotary Club, Samuel Tischner Society, Metropolis Country Club and Surprise Lake Camp.

Christmas Shows in Connecticut

Exhibitors throughout the state of Connecticut are contemplating special Christmas shows of a charitable nature during Christmas week. The Poli in New Haven has arranged a Saturday morning frolic, the admission to be five cents or as much as children wish to contribute, the proceeds to go to the Child Welfare Association. The Fishman houses will run special matinees, with food the admission to some houses, and free admission to the children of the unemployed to others. Warners are cooperating in various spots with townships or churches, the Palace, Danbury, and Capitol, Ansonia, having already been designated for food or toy collection.

CLARENCE BROWN LOOKS AT FUTURE

Clarence Brown, MGM director, whose "Ah, Wilderness!" opens Christmas Day at the Center theatre, New York, concludes that motion pictures are moving in nine directions, as follows:

(1) Development of color photography.

(2) Use of third-dimensional effects with "shadow players" walking across a stage just like real actors.

(3) Minimization of television, which will in no way intrude upon the commercial motion picture.

(4) Use of movies universally for school and classroom work.

(5) Study of acting technique through motion pictures rather than lecture classes.

(6) Writing of special screen operas.

(7) Screening of a systematized newsreel by every government, to be passed on to future generations.

(8) Establishment of great new production centers in India and the Orient.

(9) Development of multilingual proficiency among actors, so that virtually every picture can be made by the same cast in many languages.

GB Officials Sign American Talent

Mark Ostrer, chairman of the board of Gaumont British Pictures, sailed from New York for London last Saturday on the Aquitania following a visit of several weeks in this country, the greater part of which was spent in Hollywood signing up talent for forthcoming GB productions to be made in London. Accompanying Mr. Ostrer were Mrs. Ostrer, Michael Balcon, GB production head; Charles "Chuck" Riesner, director, and Ralph Spence, scenarist.

While in Hollywood Mr. Ostrer signed contracts with Raoul Walsh, May Robson, Constance Bennett, Joan Bennett, Victor McLaglen, Sally Eilers, Edmund Lowe, Elizabeth Allan, Robert Young, Richard Arlen and Sylvia Sidney.

Miss Robson will appear in a story based on Jules Verne's famous novel, "Michael Strogoff." Constance Bennett has contracted for two pictures to be made at the Shepherd's Bush studios, "Everything Is Thunder," from the novel by Jocelyn Lee Hardy, and "The Hawk."

McLaglen will star in Rudyard Kipling's immortal story, "Soldiers Three," while Miss Eilers will co-star with Edmund Lowe in a special feature whose working title is "The Phantom Wrecker."

Arlen will star in a story based on the building of the Canadian Pacific Railroad, tentatively titled "The Barrier."

Mr. Balcom completed talent loaning arrangements with Twentieth Century-Fox.

Warner Directors Reelect Officers; Field Staff Meets

Directors of Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., in New York, this week reelected the complete corporate personnel, headed by Harry M. Warner, the while working distribution and exhibition staffs were meeting in the field to further film and ticket sales, discussing, among other things, a national "model-building" tieup on forthcoming major Warner productions.

Harry M. Warner was reelected president of the company at the annual meeting of the board of directors Tuesday and the vice-presidents were also chosen to continue. They are Albert and Jack L. Warner, Sam E. Morris, Herman Starr, Gradwell L. Sears, A. W. Smith and S. Charles Einfeld.

Albert Warner was reelected treasurer, Abel Cary Thomas secretary and Harold S. Bareford, C. H. Wilder and E. K. Hessberg assistant secretaries. W. S. McDonald and P. A. Chase stay as assistant treasurers, while S. Carlisle was continued as assistant treasurer and comptroller.

The three Warner brothers, Mr. Thomas and Waddill Catchings, along with Henry A. Rudkin, on December 9 were reelected to the board at the annual meeting of the stockholders in Wilmington, Del. The other members of the board are Mr. Carlisle, Stanleigh P. Friedman, Charles S. Guggenheimer, Mr. Morris and Morris Wolf.

Mr. Sears, who is in charge of southern and western distribution, accompanied by Mr. Einfeld and Norman H. Moray, in charge of shorts and trailers, left New York after the meeting for Kansas City to conduct a two-day meeting of the company's district and branch managers of Mr. Sear's district. The gathering was to be held Wednesday and Thursday.

Meanwhile, eleven of the company's theatre zone managers met at the home office in New York Monday for a conference on general operations and policy discussions. Joseph Bernhard, head of the Warner theatres, presided. Among those who attended were I. J. Hoffman, New Haven; Moe Silver, Albany; Don Jaycocks, Newark; John H. Payette, Washington; Ted Schlanger, Philadelphia; Harry Kalmine, Pittsburgh; Nat Wolf, Cleveland; James Coston, Chicago; Howard Waugh, Memphis, and D. Moore of St. Louis.

At both the meeting in New York and the one in Kansas City mention was made of the recent tieup concluded by the advertising and publicity department with the Model Builders Guild of Hempstead, Long Island, effective on the company's forthcoming major productions including "Captain Blood," "Ceiling Zero," "Anthony Adverse," "The Green Pastures" and others.

Beaumont Opens New Exchange

Under a deal closed last week by Mitchell Leichter, head of Beaumont Pictures, Hollywood, with Louis Stern, the latter's New England exchange with headquarters in Boston will hereafter be known as Beaumont Pictures Exchange, Inc., of Massachusetts.

J. C. JENKINS--HIS COLYUM

Grand Island, Nebraska

Dear Herald:

Last Sunday morning we came through North Platte but it was so early that we were sure the folks were all in bed. We wanted to call on Mr. Davis, who operates both theatres for the Fox organization, but be was probably in bed and most likely wouldn't be up until around 12 o'clock, as very few theatremen are, and they always get sore when we wake 'em up, so we missed seeing him. We also wanted to see Bobby Snyder, his cashier, but most likely she had been out with some of the North Platte boys to a dance the night before and so we missed seeing her also. Doggone the doggone luck anyhow.

North Platte, you know, is where Buffalo Bill used to have a ranch back in the early days before he quit shooting buffalo for the railroad boys when they were building the U. P. road "Out where the west begins," and afterwards he framed up a "Wild West" show which was the talk of the country and which, together with his reputation, made North Platte famous.

North Platte today isn't what it was back in Bill's early days. Then they used to settle matters with a six-shooter, while now the judge fines 'em $100 and then suspends the sentence upon good behavior. Suspended sentences "have been the cause of more crime in this country than jawbone poker, for when a man knows his sentences will be suspended he isn't afraid to hit his mother-in-law with a meat cleaver. When you go to North Platte now you needn't take a gun with you, but be sure to go to the Fox theatre and see Mr. Davis and Bobby Snyder.

Cozad is where Mr. Hagadone operates the Rialto theatre, and the Rialto is one of the bright spots in western Nebraska, but when you go there we hope you have better luck seeing him than we did. Then we tried to find Glen Van Wey, who operates the Sun theatre at Gothenburg, but he had his home locked up and the window blinds down, which indicated that he and Mrs. Van Wey had gone to see the old folks to get something good to eat, although Mrs. Van Wey has the reputation of being one of the best cooks in southwest Nebraska, and there are some pretty good cooks in southwest Nebraska. Doggone those boys, why don't they stay at home when their friends are coming to see 'em?

The Alfalfa Country

Lexington is right in the heart of the alfalfa country and the hay stacks are thicker than the fleas on our skyoodle pup, and last year we understand that the boys got around $20 a ton for their hay, and when they cut on an average of three tons to the acre it would seem that the alfalfa country ought to be a few jumps ahead of the depression.

Ralph Folkenburg of the Majestic theatre says that his wife gets him three meals every day and five on Sunday, which would indicate that business was pretty good around the Majestic. It ought to be, for the Majestic is the chief gathering place seven nights a week for the people of that community. Ralph came down to the Cornland hotel that evening to visit us and we talked things over until honest people ought to be in bed. Ralph is a lover of Lexington hydrant water, and so are we, and that's why neither of us put cracked ice on our heads the next morning.

P. S.—G. F. Hayes, manager of a theatre in Orlando, Florida, has just sent us a check with a request that we renew his subscription to the HERALD. All right, G. F. Thanks very much. We have already done it and that's the kind of a letter we like to receive.

Anyhow—

You perhaps heard about the terrible flood they had last spring in which seventy lives were lost? Yeah? Well, that was down in the Republican river valley, and that is what people get for naming a river "The Republican." Well, anyhow, down there is where Franklin is located and Franklin is where George E. Hall operates the Franklin theatre. George recognized us when we were a block away. He's got a memory like an elephant, and he had a smile all over his face and it got bigger when we went over to a "parlor" and had a glass of soda water. George says he hasn't been on relief and that his wife feeds him plenty of beans and sowbelly, and we'll betcha that the folks around Franklin don't find it necessary to go away to see a good show.

If you have any Indian blood in you you probably remember the Arapahoe Indians. The town of Arapahoe is located where the Arapahoes used to hold their wardance and have their banquets of stewed dogs, (Bob Livingston of the Capitol theatre at Lincoln used to furnish the dogs) and when big chief Growling Bear and Bob smoked a couple of pipes apiece it made everything Jake around Arapahoe and so D. C. Shoemaker built his Crystal theatre there, which is being successfully operated by his daughter. Arapahoe hasn't fully recovered from that flood yet, but she will, for Arapahoe is a pretty good town.

Red Cloud is where Bert Beams operates the Auditorium theatre. Bert has two other theatres, one in Geneva and one in s'm'other town, and Bert asked us if his subscription had expired and we couldn't lie to him, for he is a pretty square chap, so we told him they hadn't, and he said, "All right, when they do I will send you a renewal." (Bert is always just like that.) Then we went down to a bank to get a draft to send to the HERALD and we found an old friend we hadn't seen for years, and maybe that Bert and this old friend are what makes Red Cloud stand out so strong in our memory and why we think Red Cloud is such a good town. If you go there be sure to call on Bert.

After we had such a lovely visit with Bert Beams at Red Cloud we drove over here to Grand Island to stay over night. We had a pretty good reason for coming over here; in fact we had several of them. One was that we wanted to see Harry Schiller, who operates one of the beautiful theatres, and Billy Youngclaus, who operates another. Another reason being that Cecil Stratton, who operates one of the principal hotels, came from our town and we felt pretty sure we could stand him off for our hotel bill.

Billy Youngclaus is soon to open a recreation parlor in the basement of the Empress and to make other necessary improvements to meet the demands of a growing city, and from all indications around the Empress, it looks like Billy is doing all right.

Harry Schiller has made the Grand theatre look a whole lot different from what it used to be and he has other important matters in his mind which are not ready for publication at this time. If you go hunting for a better manager than Harry you better take a flashlight.

Grand Island is one of the principal stops between Chicago and Denver. She has passed the flag station days and Omaha better watch her step.

In a cafe the other night they turned on the radio and we heard some guy extolling the wonderful benefits of that "Shelterbelt" and then a jazz orchestra chimed in with a classical(?) number with the saxophone playing one tune and the clarinet another, and then a crooner started sobbing a love song, and the heavyset waitress used up three handkerchiefs while she was bringing us some spinach instead of huckleberry pie, and then a fellow started on another bedtime story about the wonderful progress this country is making, when some chap got up to go out and said, "Oh Hell." After that we all took another one and then we went to bed.

2,000 Trucks To Carry First Division Posters

First Division's "Spy 77," a story of Italian spy intrigue and aeroplane warfare, starring Greta Nissen, with Don Alvarado and Carl Diehl, will be fictionized in the March issue of Movie-Action magazine on the newsstands the middle of February.

That magazine, a Street and Smith publication, will carry a full color illustration of "Spy 77" on its cover and over 2,000 American News trucks will carry posters advertising the picture to more than 150 cities throughout the country.

BIG FLOTATIONS LOOM IN BRITISH INDUSTRY

Theatre - Producer Moves Expected, but London Film Connection in County Cinemas Is Unconfirmed

by BRUCE ALLAN

London Correspondent

Publication in various quarters in London of some of the details of a draft prospectus of County Cinema Corporation, Ltd., gave rise to stories associating London Film Productions with the expansion plans of this British circuit.

The capitalization to be asked, according to the prospectus, amounted to £2,562,500 (approximately $12,812,500), but most interest was created by the facts that the directors listed were Lord Gorell, John R. Sutro, W. J. May and Charles J. Donada. Mr. Sutro is a director of London Film Productions, Ltd.

During the week, however, Mr. Sutro informed the writer that the publication of these details had been premature and that, for the time being at least, he would not join the County Board. He also said emphatically that London Film Productions had no connection, official or unofficial, with the new company.

There has been no further statement from the County interests, but it is not doubted that their plans for expansion and for new capitalization on a large scale will be continued. At the present moment County has 52 theatres and has acquired the Saville, in Shaftesbury Avenue, London; this is a modern building, a stone's throw from the Palace in Cambridge Circus and has obvious possibilities as a first-run or exploitation house. The official valuation of the whole of the theatres is £2,900,000 ($14,500,000) and the yearly profit estimate £253,448. The draft prospectus stated that the new capital would be £1,600,000 5 per cent mortgage debenture stock, 700,000 6 per cent cumulative preference shares of £ and 1,050,000 ordinary shares of 5/-.

Union Shares Rise

Union Cinema Co., Ltd., is another theatre group which has been in the news in connection with expansion rumors; its £1 shares reached £8.15.0d a few days ago, as the climax of a wild rush of buying which was, in the first instance, declared to be for control. They later reacted to £7.7.0d.

Union, in addition to completing various important theatre purchases, offered at a premium of 2/- an issue of 325,000 6 per cent cumulative £1 preference shares in a subsidiary—National Provincial Cinemas, Ltd., which controls the Southan Morris circuit and other theatres. Without question, there is a much bigger development plan for Union in the offing, but whether it will involve production and distribution interests cannot at present be determined. The trade remembers that C. F. Bernard of Union, like Charles Donada of County has been mentioned in connection with earlier theatre—studio—Wardour Street amalgamations and plans.

There was one studio plan in the various financial stories of the recent hectic period. Sound City, Ltd., Shepperton, arranged to offer 135,000 £1 participating preference 6 per cent shares, and 135,000 ordinaries at 5/- and so brought its capital to £350,000. The interesting part of this announcement was the light it cast on the demand for British studio space. Sound City, beginning as a conversion of an old country estate, has developed into a very important service studio, and found such a call for its floors that it has bookings in hand for as long as three years for the five new stages to be built with its new money. Also significant is the fact that £100,000 ($500,000) has been advanced by the Equity Law Life Assurance Society. The days when film enterprises were regarded by the City as an impossibly hazardous form of investment have definitely passed.

An interesting feature of Sound City's facilities is that they include exterior lots on an exceptional scale, with garden, woodland and water backgrounds ready to hand. These facilities have been used for a great many big British films, including "Sanders of the River," "Drake" and "The Iron Duke."

Sunday Show Strategy

Interesting new tactics in the eternal fight about Sunday Opening has been evolved by exhibitors in the Brighton area. The opposition on the part of cinemas came originally from "common informers" who applied to the courts on the strength of a law centuries old and almost obsolete, which served legally to enforce closure. The recent Sunday Entertainments Act legalized opening under certain conditions, the chief of which are that a ballot of local residents must show a favorable majority and that a percentage of receipts be paid to charity. Meanwhile various other forms of entertainment have continued on Sundays without being troubled by either of these conditions.

The Brighton exhibitors have decided to take the war into the enemy's camp by acting as "common informers" against these other forms of entertainment. Inasmuch as the Corporation, which licenses theatres, is among the opposition in its capacity of a concert promoter, an interesting test case is promised if in fact the Brighton cinema men go to court.

Of special note among the speeches at the annual dinner of the British Kinematograph Society was a plea by Theo. H. Fligelstone, vice-president of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association, for an adjustment of the Films Act in aid of the small exhibitor, who was, he said, hard hit by the demands of the increased Quota of 20 per cent. Mr. Fligelstone was following Dr. Burgin, Parliamentary Secretary to the Board of Trade, in replying for the guests. Another speaker was Sir Josiah Stamp, the railway magnate and economic expert, and Simon Rowson, President of the BKR, paid a very eloquent tribute to the technicians' influence on the industry.

London's Biggest Set

London Films used its biggest set on record for the last scenes of "Things to Come" at Worton Hall. It took the whole of a specially erected 250 x 150 feet floor and towered 50 feet high, and pictured a city of the future as envisaged by H. G. Wells; 295 arcs were needed to light it and William Cameron Menzies had to use a Public Address telephone system to direct 750 extras used in the scene. Most of the earlier scenes of "Things to Come" have been cut and the special music composed by Arthur Bliss was recorded in a West End theatre a few days ago.

20th Century-Fox Starts

Twentieth Century-Fox British unit, under the control of Robert T. Kane, became active at the British & Dominions studios at Elstree with the shooting of the first scenes of "As You Like It," the Elisabeth Bergner vehicle which replaced "St. Joan." Dr. Paul Czinner is directing this Shakespearean production on lines which suggest a definite desire to challenge pictorial comparisons with "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

Judicial Test Seen

Clarification of the legality at large of agreements covering current trading methods in the industry here, plus ramifications which conceivably may hold up delivery of product, was awaited as an outgrowth of an injunction sought by Gaumont Super Cinemas against the Kinematograph Renters' Society.

Gaumont and the KRS from which Twentieth Century-Fox recently resigned, although other distributors, American and British alike, have not, have been at cross purposes over booking combines. The distributors' organization has held, citing the recent deal, never consummated, between Gaumont and the H. and G. Kinemas, that ownership of theatre properties must be thoroughly established by stock control or face suspension of service by its members.

Gaumont Super Cinemas, in its action, charges the KRS with restraint of trade and has engaged three noted King's counsel to represent it. The men are Sir Patrick Hastings, Sir William Jowitt and Lionel Cohen. The Gaumont subsidiary also has launched proceedings against the individual members of the KRS as an alternative in the event the case against the association itself fails to produce what is regarded in the trade as a test decision.

Reunion's Chiefs to America

John W. Gossage and Norman W. File, managing director and general manager of Reunion Films, Ltd., are paying a visit to New York in the first week in January.

Reunion introduced such famous Continental pictures as "Masquerade" and "Episode" to English-speaking markets and has specialized in foreign language versions with superimposed subtitles.

Following on a reconstruction, in the course of which Victor Creer and Peter Witt have left the directorate, the company is engaging in production and distribution (of British and American films) on a bigger scale and the New York visit is connected with these activities.

PITTSBURGH TRIAL ON; ST. LOUIS CASE JAN. 6

Eight Companies Accused in Friedman Anti-Trust Action at Pittsburgh; Other Suits Filed

Little time was wasted this week in furthering the progress of two "key" anti-trust suits as instigated by independent exhibitors against the large distributors. Samuel Friedman's suit against eight companies, for $150,000 damages, went to trial in Pittsburgh and is expected to continue for three weeks; January 6th was agreed upon as the date for the beginning of the trial of the United States Government's equity case against Warners, Paramount and RKO, in the St. Louis-Fanchon and Marco matter. The government will press for quick action.

The independent exhibition firm of Schreiber, Smilay and London, in Detroit, filed suit against Universal for allegedly withdrawing product contrary to contractual arrangements.

In Lincoln, Nebraska, Independent Theatres, Inc., amended its complaint against large distributors, through which damages of $1,797,000 are sought for alleged conspiracy in restraint of trade.

An echo to the original criminal indictment complaint in the St. Louis case, of which the distributors were acquitted, was heard this week when United States Attorney General Homer Cummings, at Washington, cleared Sol A. Rosenblatt, former NRA film code director, of any "improper action" in connection with a conference on a proposed settlement of the suit which conference took place last May 17th at Washington.

Denying they have violated the anti-trust laws, eight distributors are now defendants in a $600,000 damage suit being tried before Judge Nelson McVicar, United States district court, Detroit. The action started last week and is expected to run until the end of next week, and possibly for seven days more, before it reaches the jury.

The plaintiff is Samuel Friedman, former exhibitor of Sharon, Pa., who is asking for $150,000 for business injury and three-fold damages prescribed in the national statute regulating monopolies in restraint of trade.

The defendant concerns are Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Columbia, Vitagraph, Universal, Fox, Educational, United Artists and RKO.

Mr. Friedman claims, in his statement of claim, that he was forced out of the theatre business in Sharon and Farrel, where he had operated houses until 1928. It is asserted by him that his troubles were caused by the alleged conspiracy action of the defendants, who were members of what was known as the Pittsburgh Film Board of Trade. He declares that business differences between him and distributing firms were given for settlement to a board of arbitration appointed by the Film Board.

Mr. Friedman further claims that when he refused to abide by the awards against him as made by the arbitration board the eight distributing companies withdrew film service for which he had contracted. The refusal of distributors to supply him with films resulted in forcing him out.

Mr. Friedman originally filed the suit several years ago, at which time he had two partners who are no longer associated with him, so he remains the sole plaintiff.

St. Louis Trial January 6th

Following repeated efforts by the Government for an early hearing in St. Louis of its equity action against Warners, Paramount and RKO, Federal Judge Joseph West Molyneaux, who recently was appointed to hear the action, and attorneys for the defendant corporations have agreed upon January 6 as the date for the start of argument on the preliminary injunction.

The equity suit against the three distributors alleges refusal on the part of the defendants to service Fanchon and Marco's Ambassador, Missouri and New Grand Central theatres.

Counsel for the distributors originally suggested January 27, or early in February, but Government counsel has insisted on bringing the hearing up to the first week of the new year. Meanwhile, Russell Hardy, prosecuting attorney, is expected to arrive in St. Louis January 5 from Washington, while many of the witnesses subpoenaed in the criminal action, which lasted six weeks and ended in acquittal of all indicted parties, are expected to be on hand shortly after the first of the year.

Meanwhile, in Detroit, alleging that Universal had an agreement to supply service at the Capitol theatre, Schreiber, Smilay and London have filed a complaint against the exchange charging it took the product away from them and gave it to Ben and Louis Cohen for the new Rio theatre which was recently opened in competition with the Capitol.

Universal claims that it has a contract with the Cohens, but has none with the Schreiber, Smilay and London group for the Capitol. The complaint is scheduled for an early hearing in the circuit court.

In Lincoln, Nebraska, on the other hand, petitions in the suits of State Theatres, Inc., and Independent Theatres, Inc., for $444,000 and $1,353,000 respectively, against distributors and exhibitors on conspiracy charges, have been amended in federal court. The changes were due to the recent St. Louis trial verdict mentioned above.

The defendants in the suits in Lincoln are Vitagraph, Paramount, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Fox, Universal, Radio and United Artists, as well as the Lincoln Theatre Corporation of Delaware and Nebraska, Joseph Cooper of New York and Robert Livingston of Lincoln.

Settlement Move Reported

This action moves the probability of the trial before January back to the spring session of the court, if not later, and in the meantime rumors are frequent that a strong move for settlement out of court is being made.

Sol. A. Rosenblatt, former Division Administrator for the Amusement Codes of the National Recovery Administration, and who is now practicing law in New York, did not act in an "officious" manner in connection with the recent St. Louis anti-trust proceedings, according to Attorney General Homer S. Cummings in a letter to Mr. Rosenblatt which was made public late last week.

In part, the letter reads: "With respect to the recent anti-trust proceedings in St. Louis, any statements which may have been made at the trial indicating that you had acted in an 'officious' manner are to be regretted; and I assure you that no discourtesy or affront was intended. I did not regard any action on your part that was brought to my attention as improper in any respect, and I trust that your relations with the Department of Justice will continue in the future as in the past to be pleasant—which, of course, is our wish with respect to all who come in contact with the Department."

Ampa's Christmas Party in New York

The motion picture industry in the east, and radio and stage were in attendance on Thursday, to the number of some 1,200, at the annual Christmas luncheon and entertainment of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, held in the ballroom of the Hotel Astor at Times Square, New York. Gordon S. White, advertising director of Educational Pictures, was presiding, as AMPA's president, and Grover Whalen, Will H. Hays and Louis Nizer were chief spokesmen. Paul Benjamin and Marvin Kirsch handled arrangements.

Proceeds are to be turned over to Film Daily's relief fund, which cares for distressed film members in the east.

Heading the entertainment contingent were Lily Pons, Ralph Stone and his radio recording orchestra and the Haywood vocal orchestra.

The dais held, besides those already mentioned, R. H. Cochrane, Harry Goetz, John Flinn, Martin Quigley, W. Ray Johnston, Whitford Drake, Maurice D. Kann, John W. Alicoate, Chick Lewis, Harry Thomas, John Hay Whitney, Tom Hamlin, Louis Sidney, E. W. Hammons, Pete Woodhull, Jay Emanuel, Ned Depinet, Al Lichtman, Howard Dietz, Jules Brulatour, Arthur Lee, Charles C. Pettijohn, Harry Hershfield, Gene Buck, Tony Sarg, Lew Lehr, Lowell Thomas and Victor Ridder.

Others who were listed as guests include Morton Downey, Eddie Dowling, June Knight, George Jessel, Blanche Yurka, Una Merkel, Helen Vinson, Margot Grahame, Gambarelli.

M-G-M AUDIOSCOPIKS BIG LAUGH NOVELTY

A REVIEW
in M. P. Daily

Hollywood: — Distinctive novelty gives new thrills. Should excite much comment. Cardboard glasses with one green and one red lens are passed out to the audience and the screen viewed through these gives the picture a three-dimensional effect, adding the further illusion that objects from the screen are coming straight into the spectator's lap. Thus, seltzer is made to squirt from a siphon directly into your eye, a baseball is hurled directly at your head, and a mouse crawls on the hair of the person sitting in front of you.

When Pete Smith finishes having his fun with these objects, he takes you on an automobile ride which is so realistic that every one involuntarily lurches forward as the car pulls up short behind a truck. M-G-M has dignified the reel by billing it as a "Miniature," but it should be big enough to rate marquee attention.

Two in the Dark

(Radio)

Mystery Drama

Deep, dyed-in-the-wool mystery drama uniquely contrived, involving a brand new situation and running through a whole series of expertly concealed crime incidents, the production provides enough action, suspense and thrill to puzzle and satisfy any kind of audience. The story itself, even though it presents a lengthy list of acceptable box office names, is the principal showmanship exploitation angle. Its mystery character, expertly and undoubtedly purposely planned to be highly complicated, should tax the sleuthing proclivities of the most astute amateur criminologists. Similarly it should give the professionals plenty of opportunity to exercise their imaginations.

The picture, in order to maintain and preserve its keep-'em-guessing character, is impressive and moves fairly speedily. While many characters appear, the action is confined to a comparative few. It is that of a man who seeks to find his real identity and his supposed participation in a sensational murder. The Man is found on a park bench by Marie, out of work show girl. He is suffering from amnesia. Simultaneously news of the murder breaks. Reading the story in a restaurant, The Man learns that one of the clues to the killer is that he stole five one hundred dollar bills. He finds five one hundred dollar bills in his pocket. The girl, believing him guilty but hoping he is not, as romance has developed, begs him to flee.

From this point on the show takes on its grim mystery atmosphere more rigidly. With reporter Hillyer and police inspector Florio interesting themselves in the straight criminal phases of the case, situations become highly baffling and complicated. Yet they are so presented that as The Man goes through to unravel the mystery of his own identity and amid suspicion of his part in the original and follow-up killings, the action is gripping and arresting. Comedy contrasts featuring Fish and Gheet, rather than serving to lessen tension add to it, and as The Man concentrates on Eldredge, the motive for and how the killings were accomplished is imagination-stressing but logically explained.

Not a lavish production, most of the action takes place in a few sets. Yet there is power and punch to each of the ensuing situations that keeps the whole show moving at interesting pace. The highlight, of course, is The Man trying to establish his own identity, absolve himself from suspicion and catch up with the real killer. While the drama of this dominates and naturally should dominate in building audience interesting campaigns, there are still other elements that should receive attention.

There's a human interest romance situation with plenty of heart-throbs and heart-aches to sell and this should not be overlooked in bidding for feminine attention. There's a gripping atmosphere, a sort of a phantom hand of fate idea shrouding the entire action that can be easily and cleverly transformed into intriguing showmanship and exploitation. Entirely a "question mark" show that permits exhibitors to come out bold facedly and defy audiences to solve the plot until they have seen the entire picture, it is one of those attractions that demands that those who want to have a hand at trying get in at the very beginning. Presented as a challenge, it can be expected that the feature will receive much word of mouth advertising. The more of that the better, so build accordingly.

Hitch Hike Lady

(Republic)

Comedy

A family type attraction, this production has the elements that make for substantial comedy entertainment. Where the hilarity of broadly treated person-comedy-adventure experience is appreciated, it has the elements of a pleasing all-audience feature. While there is nothing new or novel to the hitch-hike premise, the manner in which it is presented here carries an atmosphere of refreshing difference, as the factors of comedy, romance, action and deception are capably merged in dialogue and action. Moving to a fairly fast tempo, interest is created quickly, and though many odd twists are interwoven, that quality is continually maintained. In addition to its entertainment worth, it contains many features which, as part of story content, situations and action as well as worth of featured and support names, can be trickily adapted by alert showmen to arouse popular attention.

In England, Mrs. Amelia Blake believes her son Albert is a prosperous American orange grower. Actually, the boy is in San Quentin. Gaining a small inheritance she comes to New York, intent on a surprise visit, and is amazed to learn that California is not just across the street. Buying transportation in a "gyp" private transcontinental auto, she strikes up a friendship with Judith, also California bound. Both are tossed out of the machine after one exciting trip. The abandoned pair meet a young auto salesman, Peyton, who becomes interested in Judith and sympathetic towards Amelia when he learns what has happened to them. Bent on hitch-hiking, they again meet Peyton and comedy gangster Regan and confidence man Wingate. All, learning Amelia's mission, combine to keep knowledge of Alfred's true status from her. As Peyton, in order to make a hit with Judith and help the old lady, raffles off his trailer, the comedy crooks have no difficulty in getting funds to continue the caravan westward. In California, Wingate pulls a stunt that lines up financial backing on the part of a group of orange growers and as Peyton and Regan effect Alfred's release, the boy is installed as the head of the ranch. There is happiness for Amelia, who sees her dream come true, romance for Peyton and Judith, and Wingate and Regan, having done their good deed, push on to fields of new conquest.

As fun is the quality in which the show majors, it naturally should be the angle to be used in bidding for audience attention. While the character of the cast is exceptional, the picture is worthy of their talents. Though there is a possibility for building a campaign on the name strength alone, those wishing to do a complete job should find plenty of inspiration in story theme for clever catch lines and many suggestions for unique ballyhoo stunts.

Whispering Smith Speaks

(20th Century-Fox—Sol Lesser)

Action fans and exhibitors who like to sell that screen quality should find much in this picture to interest them. For the audiences, it is a George O'Brien picture. For the showman, it combines the value of his name with that of good story content in which the elements of drama, comedy, romance and suspense are well blended, melodrama is given a sort of human hokum twinge, and sustaining production values are adequate. As O'Brien discards his bucking broncho for a thrill chase stimulator, he mounts the careening cabin of a locomotive as the incident contributing to the excitement of the anticlimax.

Moving in a tempo that makes for easy understanding, the show is presented in a distinctive light comedy vein. As Harrington, Jr., O'Brien becomes bored with his cinch figurhead job on a great railroad system. Quitting and hitting the open road, he lands in a little western mountain town. Under the alias of Whispering Smith he gets a job on a little one-horse railroad owned by Nan Roberts. Romance crops up almost immediately for the pair. It has a triangular menace in the person of Wesley Hunt, who, in addition to making love to Nan, is offering her a big price for the road and land along the right of way. Sensing something wrong, Smith investigates, learns the adjoining lands are filled with valuable tungsten deposits and further that Hunt is agent for Harrington, Sr., Smith's father. Commandeering a switch engine, manned by Stone and Prouty, he stages a wild race down the line, which, as many threatened smashups are avoided, has all the qualities necessary to raise goose pimples. Arriving just in time, he prevents Nan from signing a contract and works out a deal with his father that gets her a big royalty. Harrington, proud of his son, gives him a big job on the transcontinental system and adds his blessing to the union between Nan and Whispering that evidently is not far in the future.

Novel in many phases, the picture legitimately permits showmen using that term in describing the show. Besides pleasing the O'Brien fans, it also has the stuff with which to interest patrons who like to see something a little different on the screen while retaining the appreciated familiar features.

Scrooge

(Paramount—Julius Hagen)

Dickens Drama

The spirit of Charles Dickens' "A Christmas Carol" has been caught in this British production in such an authentic manner that the resultant film version presents showmen with abundant exploitation material. All the charm of the Dickens story has been transferred from the printed page to the mobile screen and the characters are sketched with such artistry as to provide abundance of the elements for a favorable audience reaction to the production as a whole.

The author's name alone is as familiar, if not more so, to the average theatregoer of today as current writers of popular fiction or newspaper articles, and this point alone affords exhibitors a solid jumping off place from which to start their campaigns. On top of this is an English cast, composed of men and women who have been playing their present screen roles on the English and Continental stage for season after season. Rather than being a drawback in those territories where foreign actors and actresses are not appreciated, showmen may make the most of stressing the point that the characters are in the hands of those most familiar with them.

Then again, "A Christmas Carol" is presented over the radio networks innumerable times at this season of the year, with Lionel Barrymore doing Scrooge in one particular case, and the film version of this immortal literary and dramatic work should prove just as effective in theatres at this time of the year when handled properly.

The angles for arranging tieups in practically any situation seem plentiful. Carol singers, arrangements with newspapers for charitable work so common during these months of the year, radio dramatization, with schools, churches, etc., and similar stunts should be easily arranged.

The story, of course, deals with the rejuvenation of the old "Scrooge! A squeezing, wrenching, grasping, scraping, clutching, covetous old sinner! Hard and sharp as flint, from which no steel ever struck out generous fire; secret and self-contained, and solitary as an oyster!" Scrooge!

The picture opens with Scrooge maligning poor old Bob Cratchit, insulting his nephew who has invited him to Christmas dinner and his refusal to donate even a farthing to a charitable cause.

But that night as he goes to bed the ghost of his former partner, Marley, returns to torment Scrooge with his tale of woe and suffering as a result of miserly practice. The three Spirits of Christmas, Past-Present-Future, also visit poor old Scrooge during the night and show him what his life could have been and what it might still be were he to amend his ways.

The following day, Scrooge is so completely affected by the events of the night just past that he finds himself overwhelmed with the Christmas spirit and showers largess on the poor, contributes to the charitable cause as requested, makes amends to poor, harassed Cratchit and ends up with his nephew and family at Christmas Dinner.

Thus, with the current popular wave of Dickens' works on the screen, "David Copperfield" being shown and "A Tale of Two Cities" to be released shortly, to aid showmen, they should have no trouble conveying just what the theme of "Scrooge" is to prospective audiences with the wealth of material in the picture itself.—Baehler, New York.

A Twickenham Production, produced in England by Julius Hagen. Distributed by Paramount. Based on Charles Dickens' "A Christmas Carol." Directed by Henry Edwards. Running time, 90 minutes. P. C. A. Certificate No. 0751. General audience classification. Release date, December 10, 1935.

Personal Maid's Secret

(Warner)

Comedy

Here is a production which, while not pretentious by any means, appears to have the ingredients of a pleasing surprise for exhibitors, exceeding expectations of showmen and producers. It contains excellent material for exploitation, especially of the type particularly attractive to feminine elements, but with appeal for the men also, from the standpoint of comedy.

The picture appears to lack an outstanding name, but Margaret Lindsay, Warren Hull, Anita Louise and Ruth Donnelly are familiar because of their recent work in large productions. At the same time exhibitors might do well to mention Arthur Treacher in their campaigns, for it is he, along with Miss Donnelly, that audiences are more apt to comment upon because of his comedy antics.

The story, in brief, concerns a housewife and her maid, and the success, financial and social, that is won for the family because of the efforts of these two. Combined with this theme is that of the sacrifice of a mother of her own happiness in order to aid her daughter.

Miss Lindsay is married to a struggling insurance salesman, Hull. In a fit of extravagance she engages Miss Donnelly as her maid. Miss Donnelly, accustomed to working in more elaborate residences, brings about a feeling of uneasiness in Miss Lindsay's home since the young couple appear more concerned with pleasing the maid than caring for themselves.

After Miss Donnelly talks Miss Lindsay and Hull into moving into a more elaborate and fashionable apartment, the financial success of the young couple continues to mount, along with their social prestige.

Into this is woven the theme of mother love on the part of Miss Donnelly, who has renounced all rights to her daughter, Miss Louise, in order that the child may be reared in luxury by her grandparents.

Everything is progressing smoothly, and in a fashion packed with comedy supplied by Treacher, until Miss Louise is on the verge of ruining her life because of her connections with a married man. Miss Donnelly steps in and reveals her relationship to the girl and complications set in on all sides.

Showmen might do well to see this picture before mapping out any campaigns, for in that manner they can select those angles best suited for their situations. Concentration on the feminine draw and on comedy are indicated.—Baehler, New York.

She Shall Have Music

(Twickenham-British)

Comedy - Musical

Definitely bright entertainment, even though it is not staged on the Hollywood scale, but does have the advantage of featuring Jack Hylton's Band, which is well known in the United States. "She Shall Have Music" is a production which should please in any community where a variety-starved public will welcome the same type of material by way of the screen.

Essentially it is a series of good musical and comedy numbers with a thin but sufficient story link in the fact that Hylton's Band, broadcasting as a stunt from a yacht in the South Seas, is up against the myrmidons of a rival shipping line who want to kill the broadcast. Ingeniously used here is the idea that a wrist-watch television set enables the disabled yacht to get into visible and audible touch with home, so that the stranded musicians get back in time for a theatre opening, while the yacht owner is enabled to give instructions defeating a market raid on his shares.

Hylton, June Clyde and Brian Lawrence are the leads, but individuals are less important than the achievement of a bright, varied and quick moving show, which owes a lot to the musical numbers of Sigler, Goodhart and Hoffman. —Allan, London.

Stock Dealings in Columbia Scored

Charges of pool manipulations, improper dealings with bankers, falsifying records of stock purchase transactions and misappropriation of profits and bonuses against Columbia Pictures Corporation, Harry Cohn, president; Jack Cohn, vice-president and treasurer, and Joseph Brandt, former president, were made in a complaint filed in the New York supreme court Tuesday on behalf of John L. Loeb. In his complaint, filed by the law firm of Wollman and Wollman, Mr. Loeb sought $200,000 damages.

In an affidavit requesting examination before trial of the defendants, Mr. Loeb set forth the facts of his complaint as follows:

"I was induced by the defendants to purchase so-called warrants on April 17, 1933, for the purchase of voting trust certificates for shares of the common stock of the corporate defendant. These warrants were afterwards rendered valueless by the acts of the individual defendants who at all times were in complete control of the corporate defendant and all of its affairs."

Charge Banker Agreement

"The three individual defendants," Mr. Loeb's affidavit continues, "in the beginning of 1929 entered into a plan to enrich themselves at the expense of those who could be induced to purchase certificates including warrants. In March, 1929, the individual defendants, pursuant to that plan, entered into an agreement with Goddard and Company, bankers, in which the defendants caused the charter of the corporate defendant to be amended so as to authorize the issuance of 300,000 shares of no par value common stock and 25,000 shares of no par value preferred stock and on March 22, 1929, the defendants entered into an employment contract with Columbia Pictures Corporation whereby Jack Cohn and Harry Brandt received a weekly salary of $1,000 each and Harry Cohn $1,500 a week. Pursuant to the plan, the individual defendants in negotiating the agreement with the bankers did not faithfully serve the Columbia Pictures Corporation, but favored their own individual interests in dealing with the bankers. The defendants entered into certain codes with themselves and manipulated the market prices of the common stock."

Mr. Loeb also charges that the defendants retained for themselves large profits and bonuses and that jealousies and quarrels arose between the individual defendants.

The motion made by Mr. Loeb for examination before trial of the defendants was set for January 9. Nathan Burkan filed the answers of the defendants.

Columbia Heads Get $488,770

Harry Cohn, president and director of Columbia Pictures Corporation, received $182,020 exclusive of expense allowances, and Jack Cohn, vice-president and director, received $104,220, exclusive of expenses, in the year ended June 29, according to the company's application for registration made before the Securities and Exchange Commission in Washington. Al Schneider, treasurer, received $35,600; Nathan Burkan, counsel, $27,180; Samuel Briskin, general manager of studio who recently resigned, received $139,750, the report also showed.

Rogers and Cowdin Conferring in East

Charles R. Rogers has arrived in New York from Hollywood and is attending daily conferences with J. Cheever Cowdin, head of the Standard Capital Corporation, and officials of Universal Pictures, control of which will pass to Standard and a group headed by Mr. Rogers if a three-month option, which expires February 1, is exercised.

Indicating his anticipation that the option will be taken up, Mr. Rogers is attending current Broadway legitimate theatres in search of screen material, interviewing producers and talent, and learning Universal home office executives' preferences in product. He will become head of the production activities on the Coast if the deal is consummated.

Meanwhile William Koenig, former studio manager for Warner, is in New York on what he describes as a vacation. It is reported, however, that there is a strong possibility he may join Universal provided the company passes to the group now contemplating the purchase.

Willard McKay, general counsel of Universal, this week planed back to New York from Hollywood after conferring with Carl Laemmle on the possibility of the sale of the company to Standard Capital and the Rogers syndicate.

Pathe Natan Units In Receivership

by PIERRE AUTRE
Paris Correspondent

Two Pathe Natan subsidiaries have gone into receivership. They are the Omnium des Spectacles and Societe de Gerance des Cinemas Pathe, the two concerns constituting the Pathe Natan circuit of 150 houses.

Omnium des Spectacles had been formed to handle 65 houses owned by Pathe Natan as well as 85 independent spots. Business had been good and the company had a net of $66,000 yearly, but it had taken over the debts of Sofrexci, a circuit of five big houses in southern France, two in Marseilles, one in Nice, one in Nimes and one in Toulouse. This operation cost 4,000,000 francs and was to have been paid in drafts on Pathe Cinema and Pathe Consortium, the last named the distributing concern.

Pathe Cinema and Pathe Consortium are being managed by judiciary directors as the drafts were not paid.

Patrons of the Paris first run Olympia are being asked whether or not they prefer foreign pictures in the original talking version or as dubbed features. As a test, "Way Down East," dubbed in French, and "The Gay Deception," in its original English version, have been shown on the same program.

The vote was four to one in favor of the English versions.

"David Copperfield," which has been showing since Nov. 20 in the original English version at the Cinema Edouard VII is an outstanding hit. With only 650 seats and three performances daily, with a cheap special show at midnight, receipts for the first two weeks reached $18,000. The scale runs from 50 cents to $1.50.

Some criticism has developed among newspapers because Warners limited its advertising to three sheets for the opening of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" at the Cinema Marbeuf. The papers without advertising refused to mention the film. New sound has been installed for the showing.

"Top Hat" will open the new Cinema Theatre on the Champs Elysees. It is expected to be ready Christmas week. This will be a first run specializing on American films. It will seat about 1,000.

Richard, Coolidge Honored

Film and newspaper men gathered Tuesday night at the Copley Plaza in Boston at a dinner in honor of A. L. Richard, head of Paramount Newsreel, and "Jake" Coolidge, Paramount Newsreel representative in New England. A program of vaudeville, radio artists and motion pictures was arranged. Special screen shots were made by distant correspondents of Paramount News congratulating Mr. Richard on his 25th anniversary in the motion picture business.

'THEATRE PATRONS ARE NOT PUPILS'

—PETER BYLSMA, Victory Theatre, Napoleonville, La.

[The following letter from Peter Bylsma, manager of the Victory Theatre, Napoleonvile, La., is in comment on the subject of socalled "arty" pictures raised by M. A. Lightman and answered by a number of exhibitors in the HERALD issue of November 30th.]

To the Editor of the Herald:

These are merely the views of a small-town exhibitor operating a small theatre, with correspondingly small grosses. Obviously, the opinions of any or all who write upon this subject are derived from experience as a motion picture theatre owner or manager in his own particular town or towns wherein his theatre or theatres are located. This writer cannot share the views expressed by Mr. Lightman that we have fed the public mass entertainment too long, and any effort to "educate" instead of catering to the taste of our clientele is quite properly resented by the patrons who are not clamoring for "prestige" pictures.

We must not lose sight of this fact: Our patrons are our patrons and not our pupils. They know, or think they know, what they want, and it is smart business to give them just that, without any argument on our part as to the wisdom they display in stating their preferences. My quarrel, however, is not with the producer. As long as there is a demand for the "class" picture and that demand warrants a continuance of "class" production, I say go to it.

But I do most emphatically protest against the efforts that have been and are still being made to ram these pictures down a small exhibitor's throat. Small town exhibitors know, or should know, more about the class of pictures that are approved by a great majority of their patrons than all the "wise guy" critics along Broadway or any other "way." I'm not averse to showing a class picture that appeals only to the socalled "intelligentsia" (whatever that may be) occasionally, if distributors are willing to give due consideration to the fact that such pictures are really a "misfit" as far as the box office is concerned, but am not willing to pay key city prices for a lot of stuff that would, if offered to my patrons as a steady diet, result in surrendering my own key to the sheriff.

If a producer sees fit to invest a million or more of precious dollars in making a picture, as a rule that furnishes a million or more reasons why we small town guys should handle them with extreme care, if we handle them at all. Allocations are generally in classes A-B-C, and if I know my A-B-C's right, the C's are by far my best investment. If this sounds "lowbrow" these brows of mine were there without consulting me, and I have had no urge to browse for other or better ones.

In conclusion, I have decided not to advise the key city boys just what to buy, and, by the same token, do not solicit their advice on any question about which I know more than they do.

The customer is not always right, but it don't pay to show him where he's wrong. You may win an argument from a friend, but you stand a fine chance losing that friend while doing it.—Peter Bylsma, manager, Victory Theatre, Napoleonville, La.

DENIES MERGER HAS HARMED EXHIBITORS

To the Editor of the Herald:

We were surprised to read in your issue of November 2 a lengthy article from your Rio de Janeiro correspondent commenting on the present situation of the Brazilian market of films, in which he makes various statements that are far from reflecting the true situation and which are apt to mislead any reader into thinking that the merger of Luiz Severiano Ribeiro, Luiz André Guiomard and Companhia Brasileira de Cinemas was carried out with a view to establishing a trust to smother the independent exhibitor.

The merger of the two companies was a matter of an economical understanding between the parties involved, with the following results. This was not devised to sound the death knell of the small exhibitors, for they are, seven months after the alleged trust, still thriving, unharmed.

The distributing companies are not imposed upon, the percentage on the productions, in the first-hand run, and the rentals on the second being the same as before.

The correspondent goes as far as saying that "it is doubted that the major distributing companies will show New York 60 per cent of the business done last year."

If there is any abatement in the sheets presented to New York this season by the releasing concerns it is not the result of the merger, but it is most likely due to the instability of the exchange and the always increasing progress of the Continental products, which now hold fully 25 per cent of the Brazilian market, and shows sign of going ahead.

Rio de Janeiro has eight first-run cinemas for a population of 1,500,000, the figure given by your correspondent being incorrect. But it must be considered that the typographical situation of Rio is such that its population is spread over a strip of land running from north to south equal in size to that of the largest cities in the world. This distributes the population in such a way that it is impossible to consider it for purposes of theatre attendance on the basis of the millions alleged.

Therefore, the eight first-run houses serve their purposes.

The three best houses, which the writer claims to be of low standard for a city of Rio's population, are all equipped with the best Western Electric apparatus and have all conveniences, of the American type, that can be afforded by the limited possibilities of a new country which is in process of building itself up.

In spite of the alleged low standard of the first-run houses in Rio, the American film companies have received many thousand dollars for the exploitation of their films in this market.

With respect to publicity, all advertising is done by mutual agreement between exhibitor and distributor and the amount destined to such expenses is regulated by the value of the film and its commercial possibilities just as was done before the merger.

The admission prices vary here between 4$000 (about 22 cents at the present low exchange) for the first-class houses and 2$000 for the second-class ones. Amongst these the Cine Ipanema, which belongs to the Companhia Brasileira de Cinemas, was inaugurated last year in the presence of Mr. Arthur Loew, of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, who declared that this new house was good enough for any big city in the world.

It must be taken into consideration that Brazil is a new country and the acquisitive power of its people is reduced to the minimum.

Therefore it is impossible to have luxurious houses which charge prices above the reach of the cinema-going public of Brazil.

An instance of this is the recent case of the new Cinema Rio, which started with Warner Bros.' "Midsummer Night's Dream" charging 10$000 (about 60 cents) and could not hold a week, having to lower the price to half of it seven days later.

We have tried to explain the true situation of the Brazilian market of films in order to enlighten those who might be interested in it.

Thanking you for the publication of this, we beg to remain—A. L. Ribeiro, President, Syndicate Cinematographico de Exhibidores, Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, S. A.

NEWSPAPER LAUDS JENKINS' COLYUM

The following item regarding J. C. Jenkins appeared recently in the news columns of the Brady Island (Nebraska) Vindicator:

"This office enjoyed a visit from Col. J. C. Jenkins of Neligh, Nebr., last Sunday afternoon. Mr. Jenkins for the past twenty years has been the traveling representative of the Motion Picture Herald, the leading publication of the motion picture industry. Among other duties, while on the road, he writes a column for his magazine every week, and it is so good that it is universally read by the exhibitors. Mr. Jenkins is probably better posted about theatres and screen stars than any other one man in the United States. He has made numerous trips to Hollywood, visited nearly every motion picture house in the United States and most of them in Canada. This old J. C. can tell you more inside stories about "stars" than you ever dreamed of, and while out there in movieland has been photographed numerous times with the high-salaried fems."

The BLUEBOOK School

By F. H. RICHARDSON

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 2 (new series, based upon the question and answer list in the new Bluebook of Projection, sixth edition; find the correct answer and put the information therein contained into your own words—answers copied from the book will not be considered).—(A) Is there any relation between wire diameters and voltage? (B) How much amperage may be carried upon a wire the diameter of a silk thread? (C) Is it possible to convey any appreciable amount of power over a wire the diameter of a silk thread?

Answer to Question No. 288-C

Bluebook School Question No. 288-C was: (A) If, because of expense, having a sound engineer visit the theatre is impracticable, and there is fault in the sound which the manager declares to be the projectionist's fault, whereas the projectionist says it is due to faulty auditorium acoustics, in what practical way, if any, could such a question or argument be settled? (B) Why would not an old style phonograph horn attached to the outside of the projection room front wall, its small end extending through the wall and covered with a removable cap, enable, or at least help, the projectionist to judge sound quality, and after careful, extended observation, to judge of correct volume level as well?

The engineers collaborating with me in this group of questions, answer this one as follows:

"The answer to Section A as to how such an argument may be settled depends almost entirely upon local conditions. If it is assumed that the projectionist has jurisdiction over the reproduction and address equipment on the stage, and it is further assumed that the auditorium acoustics are satisfactory, it would seem reasonable to presume the responsibility for any defect in sound to rest with the projectionist. At least it is up to him to provide explanation for the fault.

"It is, however, only fair to point out that there are many things over which the projectionist has no direct control, such as, for example, quality of the film sound track itself.

"With reference to Section B, it is our opinion that such a device would have little value or merit from the standpoint of judging either volume or quality of sound in the auditorium. Certainly it would be of little value in judging quality. Conceivably it might be of some slight assistance in judging volume. A suitably located monitor should have far more value than the device described."

This does not quite answer Question A, so I append the answer of another engineering department, as follows:

"When a controversy arises such as that set forward in Section A of question 288-C, the only logical procedure would be to obtain the services of a competent engineer, usually the equipment manufacturer's field engineer, to analyze the situation and determine where the trouble lies. Of course the projectionist, to a certain extent, can analyze the situation and, if he be expert, pass judgment, but even though he is quite correct in his finding, it is highly probable the manager would not be convinced.

"He should know, first of all, whether or not the apparatus was delivering satisfactory results immediately after its installation. If so, and no change has been made in the auditorium, then that would seem to locate the fault definitely in the equipment.

"On the other hand, if the fault was present from the time of opening, or appeared only after some change, possibly a minor one only, was made in the auditorium, then the possibility (not certainty, however) is that the trouble is due to faulty auditorium acoustics, and a very careful check must be made, which it is doubtful that the projectionist could himself conduct. The only real solution to such a problem, it seems to us, is to have an engineer check both the acoustic conditions of the auditorium and the sound equipments as well

"As to Section B, the scheme proposed whereby an inverted horn is extended through the front projection room wall for judging of sound quality and volume, would not be satisfactory for several reasons. Suppose, for instance, a man at a concert placed himself in a small room at the rear of the auditorium to listen through a horn mounted in the manner suggested. Would the music sound the same to him as to a person seated in the auditorium? Definitely it would not!

"In the case of the projection room, it would be still more difficult to judge sound quality thus because of the noises present therein, which would serve to mask out certain portions of the sound frequency range. Moreover, the horn itself would tend to discriminate against certain frequency bands, depending upon the construction and size of the horn.

"The objective which sound technicians try to achieve is to present to the theatre audience an exact duplicate of the sounds recorded upon the film sound track. To judge correctly whether or not this objective is approached, one must be in the same location and surroundings as the audience itself."

There were less acceptable replies from projectionists to this one than to any question in many months. Evans and Rau; G. E. Doe; D. Danielson; P. and L. Felt; P. F. Michaelson; Nic Granby; T. Turk; M. and J. Devoy and J. McGuire are the only ones whose answers to both questions I was able to accept as at least fairly satisfactory.

Evans and Rau say, "If there is fault in the sound which the projectionist claims to be due to acoustical faults in the auditorium, he surely must have some reasonable basis for such an opinion. Possibly it is based upon listening (earphones) to the amplifier output and deciding there is no fault there. If this seems true, he may have the manager himself listen in the same manner and hear for himself that the sound is O.K. as it leaves the amplifiers. This of course does not absolve the stage speakers from fault, but that item may be investigated by comparison with results from each one, if there be more than one, or by other means, if there be but one.

"Also a comparison of results when the auditorium is empty and when it is well filled would tend to locate the trouble if it be in the auditorium. If the fault be not noticeable when full, but is heard when empty, it would tend to show the acoustics to be not quite right for the best sound projection.

"(B) Such a horn would not aid projectionists to judge of either sound quality or volume to any appreciable extent, if at all. The monitor itself would be a much better indication of quality and volume."

Personally, I am of the opinion that such a horn would be worse than useless, for the reason that it would be misleading. As the latter engineers say, the sound as heard through it would be very different in quality from that heard in the auditorium, and judging volume would be impractical.

CLEAR GAIN

THE photographic quality of Eastman Super X Panchromatic Negative is truly outstanding. Equally important, however, is the fact that the pronounced improvement which has been achieved involves no compromise. It does not mean the sacrifice or impairment of any other desirable or essential quality. It is clear gain for the industry, and for the public. Eastman Kodak Company, Rochester, N. Y. (J. E. Brulatour, Inc., Distributors, Fort Lee, New York, Chicago, Hollywood.)

A Frank Statement by

Dr. Alfred N. Goldsmith

PAST PRESIDENT OF S.M.P.E.

on

F. H. RICHARDSON'S New BLUEBOOK of PROJECTION

Dr. Alfred N. Goldsmith

In every field, there are a few books which must be regarded as "classics" and important guides by the workers in that field. Richardson's "Bluebook of Projection" compresses between its covers substantially all the information and guides which motion picture projectionists need. The projectionist who makes himself thoroughly familiar with the contents of this book and constantly applies his knowledge in the projection room can hardly fail to do a good job and to command the respect of his fellow workers and employer. In their own interests, projectionists should not hesitate to avail themselves of such a mine of information.

The convenience of using Richardson's "Bluebook of Projection" is greatly increased by a novel and helpful indexing system which the author has developed. Preceding each chapter are a series of numbered questions which adequately cover the subject matter of that chapter. In the chapter itself, the answers to the questions are preceded by the corresponding number. Accordingly, the projectionist can readily check up his knowledge of the subject material of each chapter before and after reading it; and can return to these questions at any time to make sure that his knowledge of the subject is still complete. This indexing system is a fine method of "perpetual self-examination."

We sincerely appreciate this authorized unsolicited statement from Dr. Alfred N. Goldsmith on F. H. Richardson's new Bluebook Projection. We know that you will be interested in the frank opinion of this recognized authority who as Past President of The Society of Motion Picture Engineers did so much to further the cause of projection and projectionists.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

First National

ALIBI IKE: Joe E. Brown—Played this three days at Thanksgiving to good business. It's perfectly satisfying entertainment.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

BRIGHT LIGHTS: Joe E. Brown, Ann Dvorak—Good, but not too good. Did not pull like Joe's pictures usually do. Running time, 83 minutes. Played October 29-30.—M. D. Warner, Liberty Theatre, Lakeview, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

BRIGHT LIGHTS: Joe E. Brown, Ann Dvorak—Eighty-five minutes of good, clean entertainment. Joe E.'s best. A picture the whole family will enjoy. Running time, 85 minutes. Played November 13-14.—Paul C. Morgan, Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

GOOSE AND THE GANDER, THE: Kay Francis, George Brent—A marital farce well played and directed. No draw for us, though. Good fun throughout. Played December 6-7.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

IRISH IN US, THE: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien—Has everything a picture should have. Played to a mixed audience and pleased everyone. Running time, 80 minutes. Played November 23-24.—M. D. Warner, Liberty Theatre, Lakeview, Mich. Rural and small town patronage.

PAYOFF, THE: James Dunn, Claire Dodd—A fine newspaper story with a gangster mixup. Our Saturday night crowd ate it up.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

SIX-DAY BIKE RIDER: Joe E. Brown, Maxine Doyle—A very good picture. Played on Saturday night. Brown always goes good in our town. Wish he would make more pictures a year. Frank McHugh also very well liked.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

Mascot

CONFIDENTIAL: Donald Cook, Evalyn Knapp—Sixty minutes of this picture's 68 minutes running time is consumed by dialogue that is none too well written. At no time does it excite or rise above the commonplace. Played on a double bill where it rightfully belonged. Fair audience response.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ANNA KARENINA: Greta Garbo, Fredric March—Garbo means nothing to our patrons and this picture proved no exception to the rule. Lavishly mounted, well acted, but for all that we could not get them in and those who came were not entertained. Business very poor. Running time, 95 minutes. Played November 3-5.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

BROADWAY MELODY OF 1936: Jack Benny, Eleanor Powell, Una Merkel, Robert Taylor—An excellent musical picture. Failed to draw as it should have, perhaps due to the long wait before we could get our booking in. Played November 24-25.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

BROADWAY MELODY OF 1936: Jack Benny, Eleanor Powell—They don't come any better than this. It has everything that makes for entertainment and in generous measures. Gave as near 100 per cent patron satisfaction as is possible. Running time, 103 minutes. Played November 6-9.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

CHINA SEAS: Clark Gable, Wallace Beery, Jean Harlow—Good Saturday business on this, but the only comment I had was the story was more brutal than entertaining.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

I LIVE MY LIFE: Joan Crawford, Brian Aherne—Failed to make expenses. Think Crawford is on the wane. Running time, 99 minutes. Played November 3-4.—Geo. F. Smith, Lyric Theatre, Lapeer, Mich. Small town patronage.

MARK OF THE VAMPIRE: Lionel Barrymore, Bela Lugosi, Lionel Atwill—Another horror picture that shouldn't have been made as far as I'm concerned but did a fair business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD
1790 Broadway, New York

MUTINY ON THE BOUNTY: Charles Laughton, Clark Gable, Franchot Tone—The men thought it a great show and the women thought it was terrible, and, as a result, it fell down bad at the box office.—Russell Armentrout, Clark Theatre, Louisiana, Mo. General patronage.

O'SHAUGHNESSY'S BOY: Wallace Beery, Jackie Cooper—A fine picture that should please and draw above average anywhere. Circus atmosphere makes things interesting. Played December 1-2.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PENTHOUSE: Warner Baxter, Myrna Loy—A good picture with a satisfied audience, but not enough came. Keno parties bad for us.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SMILIN' THROUGH (Re-release): Norma Shearer, Fredric March—Some patrons remarked that the clinches and passionate mutterings lasted a little too long. Drew fairly well. Running time, 100 minutes. Played December 1-2.—Geo. F. Smith, Lyric Theatre, Lapeer, Mich. Small town patronage.

SOCIETY DOCTOR: Chester Morris—This picture did us no extra business. No fault of the picture. Guess we played it too old.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

TREASURE ISLAND: Wallace Beery, Jackie Cooper—O. K. for this one. Played it pretty late but did all right at the box office. This is really a good picture and has some wonderful acting. If you haven't played it, play it. Played November 27-28.—Chas. Summers & Son, Elite Theatre, Seiling, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

Monogram

GIRL O' MY DREAMS: Mary Carlisle—This one went over good here. They liked it. Some very good comedy all through the picture. It's nothing big but a lot better than some of the stuff the majors have been turning out. Played November 24-25.—Chas. Summers & Son, Elite Theatre, Seiling, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

THE HEALER: Ralph Bellamy, Karen Morley, Mickey Rooney—One of the best pictures in a long time. The title had no box office appeal, consequently, people stayed away, but those who did come enjoyed it thoroughly. What a pity people do not turn out to this type of picture. Running time, 77 minutes. Played November 2-3.—M. D. Warner, Liberty Theatre, Lakeview, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

KEEPER OF THE BEES, THE: Neil Hamilton, Betty Furness—Three days' good business.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

Paramount

ANNAPOLIS FAREWELL: Sir Guy Standing, Tom Brown, Richard Cromwell, Rosalind Keith—A fine picture that has a most touching appeal for all who see it. Running time, 87 minutes. Played November 1-2.—Paul C. Morgan, Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

ANNAPOLIS FAREWELL: Tom Brown, Sir Guy Standing—Showed this to Movie Club and everyone enjoyed it greatly. Acting and directing is excellent and should please any audience. Deserves at least 3 stars in anybody's ratings. Played November 25.—Ted Stump, Elted Theatre, Absarokee, Mont. Rural patronage.

BIG BROADCAST OF 1936, THE: Jack Oakie, Lyda Roberti—Our patrons as a whole enjoyed this glorified variety show. Some expressed disappointment in finding that so many of the advertised stars do bits only. On the whole, however, the picture pleased and pulled above average. Running time, 95 minutes. Played November 24-26.—M. R. Harrigton, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

CRUSADES, THE: Loretta Young, Henry Wilcoxon—A big, tremendous, spectacular flop.—Russell Armentrout, Clark Theatre, Louisiana, Mo. General patronage.

GOIN' TO TOWN: Mae West—Good Sunday and Monday business.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

GOIN' TO TOWN: Mae West, Paul Cavanagh—My people do not care so much for Mae. Neither do I. Business only fair.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

HANDS ACROSS THE TABLE: Carole Lombard, Fred MacMurray—One of those surprise packages handed to exhibitors by the producers every once in a while. Not a big picture, but just darned good audience fare that goes over with a bang because the cast seems to be having a good time, too. Our patrons liked it immensely and business good in spite of cold weather. Running time, 80 minutes. Played November 29-30.—M. R. Harrigton, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

LAST OUTPOST, THE: Cary Grant, Gertrude Michael—Rather disappointing. Failed to draw well and fell far short of "Bengal Lancer." Played November 21-22.—Ted Stump, Elted Theatre, Absarokee, Mont. Rural patronage.

McFADDEN'S FLATS: Betty Furness, Richard Cromwell—Fairly entertaining comedy drama.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

MARY BURNS, FUGITIVE: Sylvia Sidney, Melvyn Douglas—Gangster theme deftly handled to throw the sympathies of the audience on the side of justice. Splendid performances of the principals in the cast, well knit story all tend to hold the interest throughout. Our patrons liked it and stopped to tell us so. Business good. Running time, 84 minutes. Played December 4-5.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

SO RED THE ROSE: Margaret Sullavan, Walter Connolly, Randolph Scott, Janet Beecher—Personally, I thought it a wonderful show, but it was lukewarm at the box office.—Russell Armentrout, Clark Theatre, Louisiana, Mo. General patronage.

TWO FISTED: Lee Tracy, Grace Bradley—Very satisfactory for one day. Played December 3.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

TWO FOR TONIGHT: Bing Crosby, Joan Bennett—Crosby's worst picture. It is truly a flop, not due, however, to the cast, but to the very weak story. Running time, 61 minutes. Played November 17-18.—Paul C. Morgan, Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

TWO FOR TONIGHT: Bing Crosby, Joan Bennett—Not up to the standard of this star's releases but on preview this gathered its shares of laughs and seemed to please, principally because the featured songs are the current hits of radio programs. Running time, 61 minutes. Played November 16.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

VIRGINIA JUDGE, THE: Walter C. Kelly, Marsha Hunt—A rather weak picture from the box office standpoint, but holds up fairly well on entertainment. Not above double feature caliber. Played November 22-23.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Republic

FORCED LANDING: Esther Ralston, Onslow Stevens—This program picture, of fair entertainment value, abounds in technical discrepancies, the most noticeable of which is an airplane that seems to change its wing position while flying. Upon leaving the airport, the plane is the type whose wings are placed below the cabin, yet, in flight during a storm, it is the type whose wings are built above the cabin.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

MELODY TRAIL: Gene Autry, Ann Rutherford—An extremely clever action picture which is distinguished by more originality than is usually found in ten westerns. Personally, we preferred it to "In Old Arizona." Gene Autry is fast becoming one of our best box office attractions, and our cashier has forgotten Gene Raymond in her admiration for Autry.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

TWO SINNERS: Otto Kruger, Martha Sleeper—One of the best independent pictures we have ever seen. From a technical standpoint it is as near perfection as could be hoped for and is as good as any major company product. The story is beautiful and intelligently presented and the acting is in complete harmony with the writing. This film is far ahead of the average independent picture. The audience reaction was very complimentary.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

WESTWARD HO: John Wayne, Sheila Mannors—I booked this after much protest because previous John Wayne pictures always made me feel ashamed for taking the customers' money. This was a pleasant surprise. It is a well played, well made, musical action western, which while not an epic is definitely of the better type western and should be played in every situation which plays westerns. Played November 29-30.—Ted Stump, Elted Theatre, Absarokee, Mont. Rural patronage.

RKO Radio

ALICE ADAMS: Katherine Hepburn, Fred MacMurray—My apologies to RKO and Hepburn. I stalled this picture off because I though Hepburn was all done in this town. However. this picture drew exceptionally well and nearly everyone made it a point to tell me it was "sure a fine picture," which shows we don't always know our public, or our Hepburn. Tom Walsh, Salt Lake, please note the above. I owe you a dr—, cigar, I mean. Played November 23-24.—Ted Stump, Elted Theatre, Absarokee, Mont. Rural patronage.

ANNIE OAKLEY: Barbara Stanwyck, Preston Foster—It is a natural. Not only a great show, but will please. Because it has Buffalo Bill's Wild West show, don't let it fool you by using on Saturday. It will stand Sunday time.—Russell Armentrout, Clark Theatre, Louisiana, Mo. General patronage.

FOUR CONTRIBUTORS JOIN REPORTERS

Four showmen this week join the ranks of "What the Picture Did for Me" reporters. Three contributing for the first time are:

Otis Page, Lincoln Theatre, Damariscotta, Maine.

R. L. Sherman, Strand Theatre, North Branch, Minnesota.

Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, New York.

George F. Smith, of the Lyric Theatre at Lapeer, Michigan, returns to the reporting staff after a year's absence.

BECKY SHARP: Miriam Hopkins—If I had seen this before I bought it, I would not have played it if RKO had furnished it gratis. Bought for a special and it was a special all right, but the wrong kind! It was a special flop. Lost heavy on this. No business second day. Don't play it unless you want to have your show disturbed by people making noises walking out during the picture. Should have been titled, "Becky Dull."—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

BECKY SHARP: Miriam Hopkins—After having seen this picture, played it against my better judgment. The color saved it and satisfied a majority of my people. Running time, 75 minutes. Played November 28-29.—M. D. Warner, Liberty Theatre, Lakeview, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

BREAK OF HEARTS: Katharine Hepburn, Charles Boyer—Picture went over pretty well. No business. Not so many of my people care for Hepburn. I have played "She," "Becky Sharp" and "Break of Hearts" from RKO and I sure hope the product improves greatly before I play many more.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

CHASING YESTERDAY: Anne Shirley, O. P. Heggie—Pleasing little story but not much draw.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

DOG OF FLANDERS: Frankie Thomas—An entirely satisfying story of a boy and his dog.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

FRECKLES: Tom Brown, Virginia Weidler, Carol Stone—Here is a honey. Not only is the picture excellent, but the book back of it means plenty. Give it your best time.—Russell Armentrout, Clark Theatre, Louisiana, Mo. General patronage.

FRECKLES: Tom Brown, Virginia Weidler, Carol Stone—A very good picture. Virginia Weidler's performance is outstanding and she practically steals the picture. Running time, 68 minutes. Played November 27-28.—Paul C. Morgan, Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

IN PERSON: Ginger Rogers, George Brent—A honey. Just the type that patrons lay their money down to see; entertainment.—Russell Armentrout, Clark Theatre, Louisiana, Mo. General patronage.

LAST DAYS OF POMPEII, THE: Preston Foster, Dorothy Wilson—Wonderful picture, but flop at box office. Probably a few in each small town that appreciates such as this. Played December 1-2.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

LAST DAYS OF POMPEII, THE: Preston Foster—One of those tremendously big pictures so astounding you cannot conceive how it was possible to secure enough money in the whole world to produce, but a grand box office flop. Your friends meet you on the street and say I wanted to see that picture but just so many things on hand could not get around.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

LAST DAYS OF POMPEII, THE: Preston Foster, Dorothy Wilson—As a rule our patrons do not turn out for the spectacular type of production, but this proved an exceptional exception. Pleased nearly everyone and business was good. Picture is intensely interesting from start to finish, lavishly mounted and well acted. Photography and sound worthy of attention. Running time, 96 minutes. Played November 27-28.—M. R. Harrigton, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

PEOPLE'S ENEMY, THE: Preston Foster, Melvyn Douglas—This took a bad beating in competition with a high school play. It's a sombre thing, with no comedy relief.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

ROBERTA: Irene Dunne, Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers, Randolph Scott—Stupendous! Glorious! Wonderful! Swell! All your adjectives denoting perfection in entertainment can be used up on this one. The dancing team of Astaire and Rogers took the place by storm! And as for Irene Dunne, well, everyone in the prison is humming, whistling or singing "Smoke Gets In Your Eyes." It was easy to see how this one got its "Four Star" rating. We are already looking forward to "Top Hat." Running time, 105 minutes. Played December 7.—J. A .Reynolds, Recreational Director, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

ROMANCE IN MANHATTAN: Ginger Rogers, Francis Lederer—A pleasing picture that did good Sunday business.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

SHE: Helen Gahagan, Randolph Scott—Nothing extra for me. Did not please. Scott should have stuck to westerns. He was good in this in a way, but not much of a picture for a fellow who is popular with the action fans. Helen Gahagan fine.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

VILLAGE TALE: Randolph Scott, Kay Johnson—One of RKO's "By Candlelight" specials. All the action that took place was veiled with Stygian blackness. So you don't know whether they are fighting or just yelling and hitting on sticks. Nothing to yell about, this one. Played November 22-23.—Chas. Summers & Son, Elite Theatre, Seiling, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

Twentieth Century - Fox

CHARLIE CHAN IN EGYPT: Warner Oland, "Pat" Paterson—Same old type of Chan picture. These pictures are about played out. Give us Warner Oland in something else and bring back our crowds. Running time, 72 minutes. Played November 19-20.—M. D. Warner, Liberty Theatre, Lakeview, Mich. Rural and small town patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN IN PARIS: Warner Oland—Double billed this picture with a western to a good week-end business. The Chan lovers say it's one of the best.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN IN SHANGHAI: Warner Oland, Irene Hervey—As good a Charlie Chan picture as we've ever played. Lots of added interest in the series results from the injection of Chan's son to the story. The folks get a kick out of his snappy characterization. Average draw. Played November 26.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

COWBOY MILLIONAIRE: George O'Brien—A below average western. Did us business but not up to Buck Jones or Ken Maynard. They seem to be our national heroes here.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

DANTE'S INFERNO: Claire Trevor, Spencer Tracy—Positively the world's worst advertising accessories are available on this picture. They succeed in keeping everyone at home. Not a mention on them of the fine players in the film. However, although we did try to let our people know the story was mostly modern and had Spencer Tracy, it still flopped miserably at the box office. Played November 27.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

DRESSED TO THRILL: Clive Brook, Tutta Rolf—Felt sorry for Clive. Running time, 68 minutes. Played November 5.—Geo. F. Smith, Lyric Theatre. Lapeer, Mich. Small town patronage.

FARMER TAKES A WIFE. THE: Janet Gaynor, Henry Fonda—A story of the Erie Canal in Lincoln's day. Below average at the box office. Most of the fans liked the picture, but Gaynor doesn't draw extra customers any more. Hope the next one will be better. Played December 7-8.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

HARD ROCK HARRIGAN: George O'Brien—Not up to the O'Brien standard. The patrons expect a western when O'Brien acts. Didn't draw so good. Too much like "Under Pressure." Give us more O'Brien westerns. Played November 15-16.—Chas. Summers & Son, Elite Theatre, Seiling, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

HERE'S TO ROMANCE: Nino Martini, Genevieve Tobin—Many patrons said that Martini's rendition of "Vesta La Jubba" alone was worth 10 times the admission price. A treat for music lovers. Running time, 86 minutes. Played October 13-14.—Geo. F. Smith, Lyric Theatre, Lapeer, Mich. Small town patronage.

HERE'S TO ROMANCE: Nino Martini, Genevieve Tobin—Martini's singing was superb. but the story was very weak. It is a picture that does not appeal to the general public, consequently, it does not draw. Running time, 86 minutes. Played November 10-11.—Paul C. Morgan, Star Theatre, Hay Springs. Neb. Small town patronage.

IN OLD KENTUCKY: Will Rogers—Rogers closed his career in a blaze of glory. By all means. book it for extra playing time. I don't care how big your house is, you'll not be able to handle the crowds.—Russell Armentrout, Clark Theatre, Louisiana, Mo. General patronage.

LIFE BEGINS AT FORTY: Will Rogers—Best business on this of any Rogers picture since "State Fair." My people are asking for reissues of "State Fair," "Connecticut Yankee," and other old Rogers pictures, and I wish Fox would put them out.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

LOVE TIME: "Pat" Paterson, Nils Asther—A very beautiful picture and done in a grand manner. It is a real tribute to the great master, Schubert. But if there had been a better name for the picture, it would have done a very large business. No one knew that it was the life of Franz Schubert, unless someone told him about it. We did tell people about it and we did 100 per cent at the box office and it also was a good print and fine sound recording, and, in all, it was a grand program for children as well as adults. Running time, 73 minutes. Played December 6-7.—Albert Hefferan, Owl Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. General patronage.

REDHEADS ON PARADE: John Boles, Dixie Lee—An hypothetical arrangement of misplaced constructions. Running time, 72 minutes. Played October 6-7.—Geo. F. Smith, Lyric Theatre, Lapeer, Mich. Small town patronage.

SPRING TONIC: Lew Ayres, Claire Trevor—I didn't see this, but my patrons said it was an irritating and futile mess.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

THUNDER MOUNTAIN: George O'Brien—A disappointment. Made from one of Zane Grey's best stories a mediocre picture results that is dull and hits a low mark for George O'Brien pictures. Played November 29-30.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

WAY DOWN EAST: Rochelle Hudson, Henry Fonda—A very excellent show, enjoyed by all.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

WAY DOWN EAST: Rochelle Hudson, Henry Fonda—Turned them away for two nights and we're playing it again soon. Running time, 84 minutes. Played November 13-14.—Geo. F. Smith, Lyric Theatre, Lapeer, Mich. Small town patronage.

United Artists

CALL OF THE WILD: Clark Gable, Loretta Young, Jack Oakie—A lively and robust drama that did well on Saturday. Buck, the dog, is very good, and be has good support.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Macon, Mich. Small town patronage.

CLIVE OF INDIA: Ronald Colman, Loretta Young—Rather heavy diet for my Sunday crowd. It didn't pay expenses.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

SCARLET PIMPERNEL, THE: Leslie Howard, Merle Oberon—This is a well made production. A little more action and less dialogue would have pleased my patrons better.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

Universal

AFFAIR OF SUSAN, THE: Zasu Pitts, Hugh O'Connell—An excellent program picture. Universal pictures appear to be improving rapidly. This was exceptionally good in this small town location because aside from its good wholesome comedy, it has plenty of scenes of Coney Island, which 99 per cent of our patronage has never seen and probably never will. I personally liked this better than previous Zasu pictures and she doesn't "Oh, dear" so much. Played December 4-5.—Ted Stump, Elted Theatre, Absarokee, Mont. Rural patronage.

BRIDE OF FRANKENSTEIN, THE: Boris Karloff—Offered a five dollar prize to the woman who would sit alone through a midnight screening of this. Got my money back with interest.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

DIAMOND JIM: Edward Arnold, Binnie Barnes—A mighty good picture. While a long way from actually depicting the life of Diamond Jim, it nevertheless is a highgrade, entertaining picture which drew better than average business and pleased all. Played November 26-27.—Ted Stump, Elted Theatre, Absarokee, Mont. Rural patronage.

DIAMOND JIM: Edward Arnold, Binnie Barnes—Universal did a neat job in transferring this biography to the screen. The results show careful care in preparation and plenty of thought. Our patrons liked the picture and business was above our expectations. Running time, 94 minutes. Played November 17-19.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

HORSE PLAY: Slim Summerville, Andy Devine—Played this picture the second time to a good house. Lots of laughs. They seemed more than satisfied.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

> The Herald is still playing a prominent part in our selections of films for local display. Frankly, I should be quite lost without it.
> —J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J.

KING SOLOMON OF BROADWAY: Edmund Lowe, Dorothy Page—The customers won't break the doors down getting in for this one; nor will they stop to tell you how they enjoyed it. Just another picture that could have been a whole lot better. Running time, 76 minutes. Played November 20-21.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

LADY TUBBS: Alice Brady—The Sunday audience found this a very entertaining comedy.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

LADY TUBBS: Alice Brady, Douglass Montgomery, Anita Louise—A top notch comedy. Pulled a fair crowd and was well liked. Running time, 68 minutes. Played November 5-6.—M. D. Warner, Liberty Theatre, Lakeview, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

LADY TUBBS: Alice Brady—A good comedy, which didn't seem to click and did no business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SHE GETS HER MAN: Zasu Pitts, Hugh O'Connell—Excellent comedy; pulled and pleased. Played November 12-13.—M. D. Warner, Liberty Theatre, Lakeview, Mich. Rural and small town patronage.

SHE GETS HER MAN: Zasu Pitts, Hugh O'Connell—A silly picture that was generally liked. And turned out an okay attraction for the holiday even thought we had our doubts. Still Zasu could be given better material and she might then mean something as a draw player. Played November 28.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

STORM OVER THE ANDES: Jack Holt, Mona Barrie—Another good air picture in a different setting. Well liked by our patrons and they responded nicely at the box-office. Better played on a Friday, Saturday run than a Sunday date. Running time, 86 minutes. Played November 10-12.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

SWEET SURRENDER: Frank Parker, Tamara—Used as a studio preview and played cold without benefit of key runs in this vicinity, we invited patrons comments with many favorable expressions forthcoming. Picture is handicapped at start by lack of star names familiar to picture audiences. Otherwise it is good entertainment of the musical comedy variety. Laid on the new liner Normandie creates interest. No musical numbers that are outstanding. Running time, 78 minutes. Played November 23.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

THREE KIDS AND A QUEEN: May Robson, Henry Armetta—A grand audience picture that clicked with the patrons, to the tune of the poorest business in many months. No fault of the picture, but we had to use this as a last minute substitute and could not properly advertise it. Clever story, with Armetta and Robson turning in fine performances. Running time, 90 minutes. Played December 1-3.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

THROWBACK, THE: Buck Jones, Muriel Evans—Three reels of good story and three reels of horses chasing horses, horse race, cattle thieves, Buck Jones and Silver, a dash of sob stuff at the start and finish emerges as a good average western which seemed to satisfy. Played December 3.—Ted Stump, Elted Theatre, Absarokee, Mont. Rural patronage.

Warner Bros.

BROADWAY GONDOLIER: Dick Powell, Joan Blondell—Excellent entertainment. Was pleasantly surprised, after reading other reports to the contrary. But Dick is losing his pulling power. They have played him too much. Running time, 98 minutes. Played October 26-27.—M. D. Warner, Liberty Theatre, Lakeview, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

DR. SOCRATES: Paul Muni, Ann Dvorak—Pretty good but Muni deserves a better story. Running time, 70 minutes. Played October 27-28.—Geo. F. Smith, Lyric Theatre, Lapeer, Mich. Small town patronage.

I LIVE FOR LOVE: Dolores Del Rio, Everett Marshall—Skip this one. Had it booked December 4-5. Pulled it after first night. Just nothing to it. Played December 4.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

PAGE MISS GLORY: Marion Davies, Pat O'Brien, Dick Powell—Light entertainment. Lacks something. Dick Powell's part was most disappointing to patrons. Running time, 94 minutes. Played November 3-4.—Paul C. Morgan, Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

SPECIAL AGENT: George Brent, Bette Davis—A very good picture. Brent and Davis are truly great stars. Picture has enough action and, of course, does not lack romance. Running time, 78 minutes. Played November 6-7.—Paul C. Morgan, Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

SWEET MUSIC: Rudy Vallee—A pleasing musical comedy. Weather and business bad.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

Short Features

Celebrity

LITTLE BLACK SAMBO: Comicolor Cartoon—This is the first colored short that I have run from this company. It stacks up as well as any similar short and better than most.—Ted Stump, Elted Theatre, Absarokee, Mont. Rural patronage.

Educational

CIRCUS DAYS: Paul Terry-Toons—A very good black and white cartoon.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Meet...
EARL OXFORD
The BRIGHTEST OF THE NEW COMEDY STARS ARE IN Educational Pictures

Distributed in U.S.A. by 20th Century-Fox Film Corporation

CLEVER CRITTERS: Treasure Chest—A good novelty showing antics of some cute animals.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

GAY OLD DAYS: Song Hit Story—Good and liked 100 per cent. Fine print and recording above average for just a short. Play it, as it is entertaining, but that's all I can say for it. No educational value; just another short. Running time, 10 minutes.—Albert Hefferan, Owl Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. General patronage.

HURRAY FOR RHYTHM: Song and Comedy Hits —An okay number that is a little above par. Contains a good glee club rendition of "When I Grow Too Old to Dream."—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

KISS THE BRIDE: Buster West, Tom Patricola—A funny comedy that made a hit with our folks. Buster West once volunteered to dance on our stage during an amateur contest we were running. Many remembered this and now look forward to his comedies.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PALOOKA FROM PADUCAH: Buster Keaton—A bunch of nonsense that was disgusting rather than funny. Running time, 20 minutes.—M. D. Warner, Liberty Theatre, Lakeview, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

PENNY WISE: Joe Cook—A poor comedy.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

HONOLULU, PARADISE OF THE PACIFIC: Fitz-Patrick Travel Talk—Another excellent colored travelogue. Every exhibitor owes it to his patronage to play these. They are so far ahead of any other travel picture on the market, that there is not even argument.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

INFERNAL TRIANGLE: A novel comedy that has a good idea for fun but none too well put across. Still it got some laughs.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

NURSE TO YOU: Charley Chase—There's been better Chase comedies and some worse. It gets by with some fun for the audience.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

OLD PLANTATION, THE: Happy Harmonies—Average colored cartoon. Running time, 7 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

PERFECT TRIBUTE, THE: Chic Sale Special—Just about the finest short we have ever been privileged to play. Running time, 21 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

PRINCE, KING OF DOGS: Oddities—A good number from the Oddities series. Most folks enjoy seeing a fine dog and this is interestingly filmed.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SLIGHTLY STATIC: Todd-Kelly—Very poor comedy; below the standard of tbis team's past pictures. Running time, 19 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

SLIGHTLY STATIC: Todd-Kelly—A good comedy. Running time, two reels.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

STARLIT DAYS AT LIDO: Oddities—An excellent colored two-reel musical showing dancing, swimming and vaudeville at Lido. An excellent subject.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Paramount

BABES IN HOLLYWOOD: Headliners—Very good; interesting.—D. E. Fitton. Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

BETTY BOOP AND GRAMPY: Betty Boop Cartoon—The best of this series in a long time. Running time. 7 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie. Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

HOLLYWOOD EXTRA GIRL: Paramount Varieties—Nothing but a boost for "The Crusades." Making subjects of this nature and selling them should be discontinued. Running time, 1 reel.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

ALIBI BYE BYE: Clark & McCullough Series—Clark and McCullough in a crazy two reel comedy which our patrons seemed to enjoy on Saturday night. —C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

BUGLES FROM BLUE GRASS: Sports with Bill Corum Series—Distributors sent us this one as a last minute substitute for "Inside the Ropes." The boys were all set to see Baer, Louis, Braddock, Dempsey, et al, but had to be satisfied with Cavalcade, Peace Chance, Omaha, Man O' War and Discovery. Oddly enough, they were satisfied! Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Recreational Director, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

DANCING MILLIONAIRE, THE: Blonde and Red Head Series—If this is comedy, give me tragedy for my fun. The Greeks have a word for it: "punk."—M. D. Warner, Liberty Theatre, Lakeview, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

NIGHT LIFE: Gene Austin—A terrible washout. No laughs but plenty of disgusted patrons on this. Gene Austin's fine singing obscured in the background. —L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

QUIET FOURTH, A: Smart Set—We were afraid of this one but it is pretty good and was well received.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

TOPNOTCHERS: Easy Aces Series—This was the first time the "Aces" have appeared here, so we had no idea of what to expect. Judging from the numerous laughs, especially at Mrs. Ace's "C'mon number two!" the boys enjoyed it tremendously. The assorted shots of leading sports figures are very good. Running time, 11 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Recreational Director, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

Twentieth Century - Fox

FOX MOVIETONE NEWS: No. 13—Another good reel and it seems to get better each time. Running time, 12 minutes.—Albert Hefferan, Owl Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. General patronage.

United Artists

MICKEY'S FIRE BRIGADE: Mickey Mouse—Donald Duck gets the laughs in this above the average cartoon in color.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

Universal

AT YOUR SERVICE: Oswald Cartoon—Not so hot; better pass this one.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

FOX AND THE RABBIT, THE: Cartune Classic—Fairly good colored cartoon subject. Running time, 7 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

THREE LAZY MICE: Cartune Classics—A swell cartoon good for any house. Our print was in tough shape though, which didn't help much.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

TID BITS: Doane Musical—A very good vaudeville show on your screen. Will pep up any show. Pleased fine.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

TWO LITTLE LAMBS: Oswald Cartoon—Above the average cartoon, concerning the two little lambs who borrow Oswald's aeroplane and do stunts at the air circus.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

TWO LITTLE LAMBS: Oswald Cartoons—A funny little cartoon with good music.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Vitaphone

CASTLE OF DREAMS, THE: Morton Downey—Very good. Running time, 2 reels.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

NATURE'S HANDIWORK: Our Own United States Series—Excellent. Would have been better had there been no music in the background; this made it hard to hear the announcer at times.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

PHIL SPITALNY ALL GIRL ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters Series—A very good band act with singing.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

PLAYGROUNDS: Our Own United States Series—A one reel travel to the beaches of America. Not much for the small towns.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

RIMAC'S RHUMBA ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—This without a doubt is one of the hottest single reels we ever played. They ate it up and talked more about it than the feature.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SURPRISE: Duncan Sisters—Very entertaining musical short. I would like to see these girls make "Topsy and Eva" again, following Universal's "Uncle Tom's Cabin." Running time, two reels.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

TICKETS PLEASE: Broadway Brevity—A very good two-reel musical.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

VITAPHONE MUSIC HALL: Big Time Vaudeville Reel—Excellent single with vaudeville act. Seal act outstanding. Also excellent singing and dancing. —C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

VODKA BOATMEN, THE: Yacht Club Boys—Will probably get by; nothing to brag about. Running time, 2 reels.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

Serials

Mascot

MYSTERY MOUNTAIN: Ken Maynard, Verna Hillie—Have run five chapters and is quite satisfactory.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

PHANTOM EMPIRE: Gene Autry, Frankie Darro —The craziest story ever filmed, even in a serial, but it held up fairly well.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

Miscellaneous

Brown & Williamson - Audio

KOOL PENGUINS: A novel cartoon which will be enjoyed by all; free advertising and realized free of charge, upon request. Running time, 9 minutes.—Albert Hefferan, Owl Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. General patronage.

Modern Woodmen of America

DAY IN ROCK ISLAND, A: Here is a grand short to play for your patrons if they like to see how the inside of business office works. It is very interesting indeed and has great possibilities for great educational value. No charge for the film. Free upon request. Give it a chance; you will not be sorry, as it has very fine sound and a clear print. Running time, 10 minutes.—Albert Hefferan, Owl Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. General patronage.

New York, Hollywood In New Charity Drive

Motion picture and radio players in New York and Hollywood will hold simultaneous meetings next Wednesday to further the drive of the Federation For the Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies of New York. Louis K. Sidney made known the plan as chairman of the artists' division before the motion picture and theatrical committee, which is seeking to raise $125,000 as its 1935 quota under the joint chairmanship of David Bernstein of Loew's, and Albert Warner, of Warner Brothers.

Performers in New York will meet for luncheon at the Astor Hotel with Mr. Sidney presiding. The Hollywood meeting will be held in the Hillcrest Club at dinner, with Eddie Cantor, who is secretary of the Federation, in charge. Assisting Mr. Cantor on the coast are Abe Lastfogel, Boris Morros, Sophie Tucker and Ada Lewis.

Film Carriers File Schedules with ICC

Directors of National Film Delivery Association, Inc., convened in Washington, D. C., last week and filed a report on the routes various film delivery companies cover throughout the country. The report was made in compliance with a recent Interstate Commerce Commission ruling.

James P. Clark, president, presided at the meeting, which was held at the Hamilton Hotel.

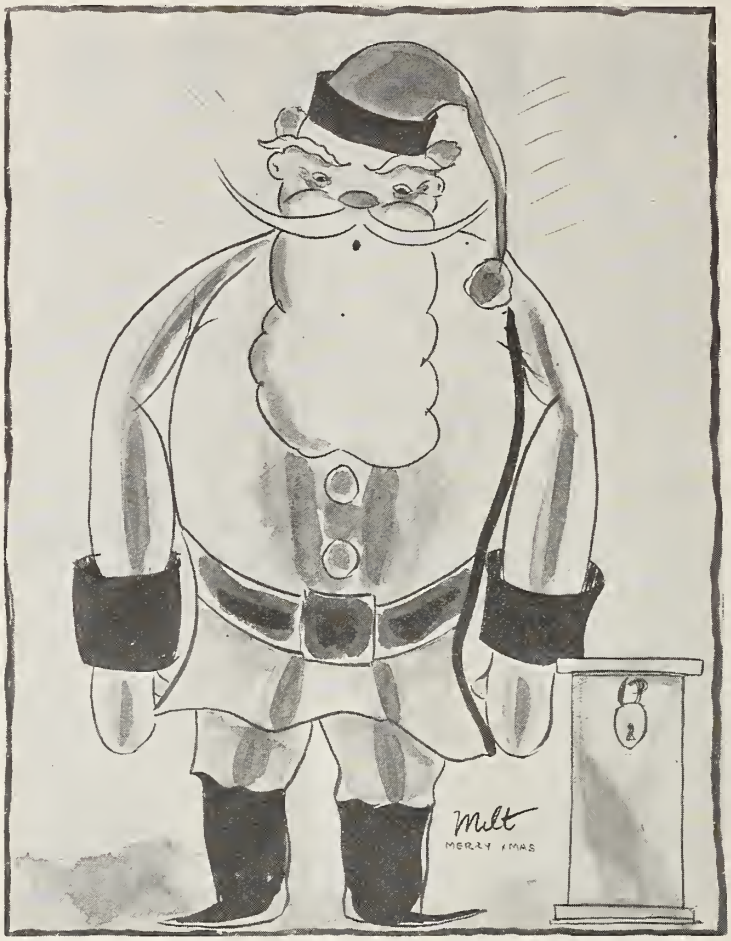
SHOWMEN'S LOBBY LAFFS!

Milt Rosenfeld extends the season's greetings with one of his typical laughs.



"Merry Christmas. Seats in the balcony."

Merchants Cooperate With Hunt for "Splendor" Premiere

In exploiting the premiere of "Splendor," George Hunt at Loew's Theatre, Louisville, Ky., secured cooperation of local merchants with bang up window displays in which picture received prominent mention. One of the department stores arranged a fashion window using scene stills of Miriam Hopkins.

Beauty parlors and barber shops used stills, special postcards were mailed to society list and cards were placed on local busses and one sheets in bus terminals.

DECEMBER DEADLINE MARKS 1935 FINALE

It's midnight of Saturday, Jan. 4, 1936, folks, the deadline for December, the last month of this year's Quigley Awards. Two weeks more to get in that entry that may mean the Big Trip to Hollywood.

The December judges are as follows: Felix Feist, of MGM; Mort Blumenstock, of Warner Brothers Thetres, and Ned Depinet, RKO Distributing Corp. Decisions will be announced in January 11th issue.

Walls Ties "Marietta" Opening to Charity

The red carpet and flood lights were brought out by Dennis C. Walls, general manager New Oxford Theatre, Manchester, England, for the opening of "Naughty Marietta." Cable received from Jeannette MacDonald was auctioned off on behalf of local charity, as were two puppets, also sent along by the star. Papers came through with plenty of free publicity and as notables arrived at theatre they were greeted by Walls and city officials.

Radio gramaphone was connected to theatre's sound equipment and placed in foyer, together with credit card for local dealer lending apparatus. Actual tunes from picture were relayed for benefit of bystanders.

Preview Breakfast Held By Hardwick for "Annapolis"

A breakfast preview for newspapermen, school heads and officers of the National Guard was held by Russ Hardwick, Lyceum Theatre, Clovis, N. M., on "Annapolis Farewell"; comments were obtained from them and published in papers.

Special matinee was held for all school children as a result of contact made with superintendent of schools who had announcements made in all classes. Lobby was decorated ahead and during run with special art panels and entire color scheme was red, white and blue.

Circuits Cooperate On "No Mercy" Stunt

Unusual angle to put over a slant originated on "Show Them No Mercy" at the New York Rivoli was a prize offer based on redeemed dollars that had the cooperation of all the Skouras and Randforce houses in the metropolitan area.

Fifty one dollar bills were distributed in various spots. Numbers of these bills were listed on the Rivoli front, run in trailers at that house and also on the screen of the above mentioned theatres. Offer was made that anyone turning in the bills with these numbers would be rewarded five dollars in cash. As the offer was also good for the dates at the other houses, the tieup not only aided the Rivoli date but also the cooperating subsequent runs. Window cards with these numbers were placed in prominent spots through the district.

Giant Banner Features Front

Other stunts selling the G-men angle were stainless finer printing equipment in lobby and display in frome out front of various equipment used by the government to combat criminals, such as gas bombs, riot guns and similar accessories. Street bally had dog similar to one in picture wearing lettered back-banner led about town by man in police uniform. Imprinted napkins and special tabloids were also distributed.

Front was attractively made up with 90-foot banner (see photo) spread across face of theatre. Enlarged heads of gangsters with tiein copy, statements on rollers from Mayor LaGuardia and Commissioner, and blowup reviews were used in addition to sound record made from sound track played over loudspeaker.

See Searches for "Bard of Avon" to Plug "Dream"

A. M. See, executive director of the Rochester Musical Association, who handled "The Dream" date at the Eastman Theatre in Rochester, N. Y., secured plenty of advance publicity for the date. Taking advantage of the proximity of Avon, a search was announced in local daily for the "Bard of Avon, N. Y."

Principal of Avon high school cooperated on a poetry contest, pupils writing four-line verses extolling beauties of Genesee Valley, where New York's Avon is located. Cash prizes awarded winner of contest with tickets to "Dream" for runnersup.

Editorials Feature Pollock's Campaign

The highly effective and well rounded campaign put on by Manager Les Pollock for his plaque-winning drive on "Mutiny" at Loew's, Rochester, N. Y., was featured by a number of smart selling slants, not the least of which was the commendable and unusual planting in the three different dailies of editorials on the picture. This publicity tied in with the hundreds of inches of free publicity stories, art layouts, cartoon strips, roto breaks, serials, co-op page, newspaper contests, etc., secured by Pollock for the date. To indicate the coverage received stories broke well in advance, continued through the first week and up to the last days of the holdover engagement.

In addition to the regular picture art, Les also planted shots of local newsboys examining traveling ship's model and eight-column strip with story of crowds in front of theatre seeking admission. The ship's model shown in advance built up interest in the local shipbuilding contest that was part of the campaign. This was further encouraged by stories in all papers. Contests included want ad tieup and limerick slant, the latter offering cash prizes.

Many Letters Mailed

The "questions and answers" letter was mailed to the thousands of names on mailing list and through telegraph tieup, these were also inserted in statements and distributed on street by uniformed messengers.

Tahaitian love flower gag was used in tab form, these with inserted flowers also distributed and roto page heralds given out house to house. Giant wall banner in heart of city was planted weeks ahead.

Orchestras plugged the Tahaitian love song from the picture as did song shops, book stores tied in and other prominent windows landed. Imprinted cigarette samples helped advertise the date, as did the special advance lobby, mezzanine and foyer.

Interest in the holdover of the picture was built up with other slants by the fast-moving Pollock with one-column full hand lettered ads, additional publicity and art, blowup of editorial used in letter with underline on the holdover date, this letter mailed to professional men, associations and clubs. Street bally parade of 50-piece juvenile Knot Hole band brought extra attention, the youngsters making the rounds of the business district and putting on concert (see photo) in front of the theatre.

VAUDEVILLE

The THEATRE with 50,000 REGULAR CUSTOMERS!

OUT of the hundreds of thousands of vaudeville and movie fans who attend Loew's State theatre, there is a group of about 50,000 who are State "regulars." Week after week they come, scarcely ever missing a show! Few, if any, Broadway theatres can boast such a loyal following. New York amusement seekers may be fickle—but not when it comes to Loew's State!

If you haven't the Loew State weekly habit, this new show should start you on the right road to fine entertainment at surprisingly low cost.

The MOST REMARKABLE THEATRE on BROADWAY

LOEW'S State stands unique among New York's leading theatres. It is the only Broadway theatre that has never changed its policy—and today enjoys greater popularity than at any time in its 14 year career!

It is the nation's leading, "big-time" vaudeville theatre. It presents the finest Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Paramount and United Artists screen productions. Its admission prices are sensationally low.

There may be larger, newer or more ornate theatres—but there is none quite so popular, week after week, year after year, as Loew's State, flagship of the great Loew's circuit of theatres in New York!

And shows like this explain why

A tip

—TO THOSE WHO HAVE JUST COME TO NEW YORK!

WE are told that 141,000 persons move to this city every day, not to mention the 130,000 out-of-town visitors. Welcome, all you New Yorkers—and here's a tip for you: Thousands upon thousands of old-time New Yorkers (who know their New York) never miss a show at Loew's State theatre. They like the "big-time" vaudeville shows plus the finest motion pictures. The State is the nation's one important vaudeville theatre! You'll be right in the New York stride when you visit Loew's State!

Cowen Thwarts Pickets On "Red Salute"

When Larry "Badges" Cowen at the Fox in Brooklyn, N. Y., got a tipoff that a delegation of students were going to picket his house during the "Red Salute" engagement, he met the onslaught by stationing color guard of V.F.W. with flags and rifles in front of theatre. Larry also placed a 40 by 60 sign alongside box office announcing a party that evening for Legionnaires.

Members of naval post paraded in uniforms to theatre, manoeuvering in front and then entering. Boy scout band was on hand, students gathered, they came, they saw and left without conquering.

Valliere Animates "Top Hat" Dancing

Rear view construction view is self-explanatory. Belt from motor to wheel with one end of long arm attached to wheel and the other to two other arms attached to cutouts of dancers. With motor in operation turning of wheel causes dancers to go back and forth in dance movements. Art work is credited to house artist, M. La Montagne.

Valliere gets a lot out of these advertising displays in motion, a recent effort entitled "the Magic Eye" for use on various attractions being described and illustrated fully in the September issue of Meccano Magazine.

Merchants Aid Greenman In Selling "Melody"

Harry Greenman, Fox Theatre, St. Louis, Mo., received a little extra publicity for himself on "Melody" by stressing fact that George Houston at one time was a singer at the local municipal opera there. Special mailing pieces were sent to their regular subscription list.

HOLDING JUVENILE BUSINESS

Floridian Gives Views on Kiddie Patronage in Article Reprinted From Wometco Circuit 'Contact'

by MARK CHARTRAND, JR.
Manager, Tower, Miami, Fla.

Everything attempted must have a fundamental principle; a basic rule which governs all subsequent developments. When I was asked to write an article containing some, more or less valuable, information on building and holding juvenile patronage, I racked my brain to blast out that subject's fundamental.

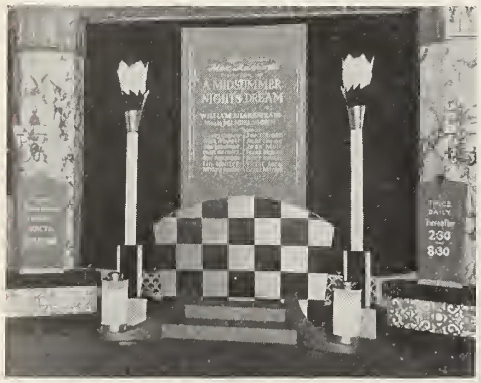
I believe the prime requisite to overcome is the almost irresistible impulse to strangle the youngsters. I have found it is a good idea to have a large rubber ball sponge handy, so when one of the neighborhood worry-warts is taking a fifth lap around the center section, and doing it in record time, you dig your fingers into the ball to relieve the necessary self-control. It's a swell substitute. The sponge rubber feels remarkably like the youngun's neck—ten-ninths of them being the rubber-necks they are. Besides it's excellent exercise for the forearm muscles.

Kids Are 70 Per Cent Advertisers

But before we go into any "do's" or "don'ts" on this subject, let's be sure we want this kid business. They only pay a dime admission; they take up as much space as an adult, and usually for twice the length of time; cause more disturbance while they're in the theatre than ten full-price patrons. If you happen to be in a deluxe house those objections will outweigh anything that could be said in favor of the youngsters but you'd better not be too ready to include your house in the deluxe class. In any event that's a lot of weight on one side of the scales, so let's see if we can make them balance.

We have a clipping from a national publication concerning show business which says that seventy per cent of all the children who see shows discuss what they have seen at home and with their friends. It is beyond me to see how anyone could arrive at this estimate but I am inclined to believe the writer was a radical conservative, if there be such. Nevertheless, accept his figure for the moment.

Suppose seventy per cent of all the heralds you put out were read and talked about; seventy per cent of the newspaper readers discussed your ads each day; seventy per cent of all the publicity you get clicking one hundred per cent. Yes, there's a lot of seventy per cents in dreamland, but we are convinced the little fellow who circled the center section of seats in such remarkable time is at least seven-tenths for us if he is treated right.



"DREAM" DISPLAY. Dignity was the keynote of Rodney Collier's "Dream" lobby display at the Stanley Theatre in Baltimore. Illumination was supplied by torchierres.

The youngsters not only review the present program to the homefolk but know your coming attractions better than you do. If you do not believe so, ask a few of the regulars.

We don't think anyone will take issue when we say that if a child likes you, and you like the child, his parents also will like you, so we won't waste words telling you that if you can forget your glorified position for a while and meet a youngster half-way he'll be a good-will builder for the house.

Then too, the more popular each member of the theatre's personnel is, the more popular the theatre. The only way to be popular with those animated ballyhoos is to make catering to them one of your most popular pastimes. The child you've catered to becomes a contact man for your theatre and doesn't know it. It will happen something like this—he's coming to the show with his parents, spots you and tells them, "There's the fella who lifts me up to the drinkin' fountain every Saturday!" or some such triviality which has established you as being a nice guy to have around.

Greets All Children

When the family gets within speaking distance you immediately recognize him (perhaps, but he thinks so), with "Whadda ya say, fella? How ya been?" After his answer you smile like you think he's tops and nod to the parents with a "Good evening" and Lloyd's won't give you many odds that the child's mother won't say something about the swell build-up he has given you at home. From then on it's up to you with the parents. The little fellow has introduced, on a friendly basis, two prospective boosters for your theatre.

Those old country "baby-kissing politicians" weren't so dumb. And we don't mean for you to literally kiss the kids, nor do we suggest that you kick them literally or figuratively. "If the hand that rocks the cradle rules the world" it stands to reason that the fellow who influences the occupant of that cradle will have it rocking toward his box-office.

ESSANESS CIRCUIT ALLIANCE WITH RKO IN CHICAGO SEEN IN THE OFFING

Silverman and Stern Confer with Leo Spitz; Response to the Movie Christmas Basket Parties Is Outstanding Event

Balaban and Katz Club Goes Into Action with a Winter Sports Program; Henri Ellman Leases an Exchange Building

by BILL CROUCH
Chicago Correspondent

There's a lot of talk these days about the part the Essaness theatres may play in the RKO circuit setup. With the recent appointment of Leo Spitz as president of RKO the rumors have been flying thick and fast along film row. Eddie Silverman of Essaness has been with Mr. Spitz a great deal of the time since the attorney became president of RKO, and there are many who believe that the announcement of a close affiliation between the two circuits is but a matter of time.

Emil Stern, another Essaness executive, has also been in conference with Spitz several times of late, it is learned. Sidney Spiegel, third member of the firm, is reported to be opposed to having Essaness take over the management of any theatres other than those which are located in this territory.

When all the conferences have ended there may be an announcement to clarify all the activities that have brought about these rumors.

Ben Hecht, who once upon a time called Chicago his home, spent a few hours between trains here en route to New York from the coast. To reporters at the train he proceeded in his usual explosive style to berate Hollywood in no uncertain terms.

"Everybody in Hollywood is nuts and drunk," he said. "I'm going to make my next picture, 'The Monster,' in Long Island, because the smartest people ain't in charge in Hollywood."

Mr. Hecht made a few other comments and hurried to the Blackstone where he proceeded to call up some old acquaintances and arrange for a luncheon party.

Una Merkel, also on the same train, said she couldn't be sure about everyone in Hollywood but she knew her friends and associates didn't come under the Hecht classification.

"But," she added, "I don't travel in the same circles as Mr. Hecht."

Another passenger arriving on the Santa Fe Chief at the same time was Jesse L. Lasky. En route to New York with H. D'Abbadie D'Arrast, who will direct the first Pickford-Lasky production, the veteran producer announced that he was making the trip to look for new talent and a story for the company's next picture.

We had a happy chat with D'Arrast, who said that shooting on the picture, which is titled "One Rainy Afternoon," would start December 30th. Francis Lederer will have the leading role with Ida Lupino playing opposite. This is a break for the British girl who is fast making a name for herself here. Also in the cast are comedians Edward Everett Horton and Joseph Cawthorn.

Lasky plans to spend about ten days in New York, returning home in time for the holidays.

The loyal support of Chicago's motion picture industry is making the Movie Christmas Basket Parties one of the most outstanding charity movements ever sponsored in the Windy City. Newspapers, radio stations and all other forms of advertising mediums have joined with the motion picture folk in telling Chicagoans about this great event.

Sol Edwards, of Educational Films, stopped over in Chicago last week to visit friends. He was en route to Buffalo for the holiday after completing a midwestern tour.

"A Midsummer Night's Dream," which closed a three weeks' run at the Apollo last week, will be brought back for a two weeks' engagement starting Christmas Day. The picture will be shown on the same basis as before. Two shows daily with the prices ranging from 50c to $1.50. The last week of the picture here was excellent and this gave B. & K. confidence in a return engagement.

Twentieth Century-Fox will have three pictures with top bookings in the city area during Christmas week. "Littlest Rebel" opens this week and plays through Christmas at the Chicago, while "Thanks A Million and "In Old Kentucky" will play the "A" and "B" week houses.

The winter sports program for the Balaban and Katz Employees Club will get underway shortly. Basketball teams are now being organized and practice is starting. The first games will be played on January 7th. The teams are divided into two leagues, the winners of which will vie for honors at the end of the season. Trophies have already been contributed by Lou Lipstone, Morris Leonard, Jules and M. L. Rubens. Other trophies will be added. Bowling and ping pong contests have started with the theatres supplying teams.

Ben Cooney has sold his interest in the Echo Theatre in Des Plaines to Harry Balaban. Cooney plans to redecorate the Dante Theatre at Taylor and Halsted streets and open it the first of the year. This 600 seat house has been dark for some months.

Another Chicago house to be reopened soon is the Lyric, which has been dark for several years.

Miles Concannon, manager of the Roosevelt, won a $50 prize in the B. & K. "No Accident" contest. Awards were made on a computation of the comparative ratio of accidents to the number of patrons, over a six months period. Other theatres getting prizes were the Tower, Belpark, Alba, LaGrange, Manor and Varsity. Each of these theatres received a $25 award. A special prize of $20 was awarded the Uptown theatre for unusual effort.

Glenn Davis of the Southtown theatre will make a tour with the NBC marimba band this summer. Last year Davis toured Europe with the group. He is an usher at the Southtown.

Henri Ellman's announcement of the leasing of the building at 839-843 South Wabash as the new headquarters for his Capitol Film Exchange is one of the most important along Film Row in some time. The building, which has been unoccupied for months, will be thoroughly remodeled in modern style. More than $10,000 will be spent in making this one of the finest film exchange offices in the country. A private projection room and many other new features will make this ground floor office a most suitable place for Ellman's fast growing string of Exchanges. Remodeling starts in the next few days.

William McGuiness, engineer at the Terminal theatre, has patented a new high-pressure steam boiler.

Morton L. Clark, formerly of Lustrolite, Inc., of Davenport, Iowa, is now vice-president and sales manager of Artkraft Sign Company, of Lima, Ohio.

John Joseph held a midnight preview of "I Dream Too Much," on Friday-the-thirteenth. All reports on the picture were very favorable as the crowd departed early on the morning of the fourteenth.

Warner's Chicago and Hammond theatre staffs will see a preview of "A Night at the Opera" at the Shore theatre, Friday night. These special previews are held by the Warnerites every month.

Charles Ryan, Warner theatre executive, will be in charge of the fourth annual Christmas Kiddie Party to be staged by the Chicago Warner Club, at the Warner building, Tuesday, December 24th. Santa Claus will be present with toys and candies.

And speaking of Santa Claus reminds us that sincerest wishes for the merriest Christmas ever, are extended to one and all from your Chicago correspondent.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Running times are those supplied by the companies. Asterisk indicates running time as made known by West Coast studio before announcement by home office in New York. Variations also may be due to local censorship deletions. Dates are 1935, unless otherwise specified. Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1935-36 season.

CONSIDER THE AGENT

IF YOU will listen, you will be told that the big bad wolf of Hollywood is the agent.

The agent is the villain who puts the prices of talent up. He is the scoundrel who tells the stars what to do, when to do it, how many pictures to make, when to get ill in the middle of a production, what contracts to sign, how to break contracts and play for new ones, when to quit and go home in a huff, what to say to the papers, how to approve or disapprove roles and stories, what to wear to the Trocadero, ad infinitum.

Examination of the facts indicates that he does all this. And what of it?

About ten or at most a dozen men in authority in Hollywood sit, or can sit, in final authority on the deals that are made by, with and through some two hundred agents, real and alleged. Of the agents there are perhaps a dozen really important and about three or four of dominant importance.

None of these agents are of greater calibre or cunning than a majority of the ten or a dozen super-employers of the studios.

It would appear practical, if these super-employers care, for them to present a united front with respect to talent, as they do in some other concerns of the industry. They are not to be played the one against another in deals for labor, for instance, nor for other commodities.

It is to be observed that the studios most abundantly supplied with talent are not those from which come most of the emanations and laments about the agents.

It can be discovered without resort to a detective agency that agents and their apparently untrammelled powers have been and can be used as instruments in the hands of manipulators of the talent pools.

Hollywood vociferates, for eastern consumption, about the agents, but it accepts them professionally, commercially—and socially, with a decided accent on the social aspect in many instances, a sort of emphasis which would tend to make some of the plaints a little less than sincere.

And speaking of acceptance—there are among the many able, urbane and distinguished gentry of the agents, here and there a few who developed their special skill in other fields. In the case of one, for instance, there is quite a stack of documentary material in the files of the United States district attorney pertaining to traffic in various merchandise held socially contrabrand. This is no secret in Hollywood—and no handicap whatever to the agent in his relations, social and professional.

It may be pointed out that research reveals no instance of an agent manipulating a deal to the disadvantage of one studio in behalf of another, and himself and his client, that was not accepted, and approved by the acceptance, by a principal of the production machine.

In most industries the purchasing agents set the standards of ethics and conduct for the salesmen who bring them wares.

Finnagle gets its power only from finnagle.

DOLLAR PUBLICITY—AGAIN

YOU have read about the thrill of the discovery of a nova—the effulgence of some cosmic, radiant, creative spasm occurring ever so many light years away, bursting into the vision of the ecstatic observing astronomer.

And so, you know, too, just how we felt at the moment of the discovery in the headlines of the press, technical, semi-technical, and the lay press, too, and semi-lay, which proclaimed the other day that in the year 1936 the motion picture box office of these United States would gross a billion four hundred millions of dollars, although some conservatives put it at only a round billion.

It was presently to be found that the emanation of optimism came from Mr. Ernst Lubitsch, creative artist, talking to a gang of salesmen, in Chicago. Further research revealed that a publicity office handy man, assigned to the collection of what the great directors might say, and reaching for a headline hope, consulted the envelope entitled "figures" in the reference file of a Hollywood office which keeps track of what the press says about our industry. Taking an average of the income figures in the published guesses of the last half-decade, adding in the annual rainfall for Puget Sound, multiplying by the height of a sequoia, and dividing by one times nothing, assisted by a lift from a Camel, he arrived at the exact figure which is now spread over the land in the banner lines which decorate the movie sections of the Sunday papers.

All this discussion would be beside the point and irrelevant save for the possible service to the motion picture of setting down the genesis of this particular billion, contemporaneously, for the record against the day, probably not far off, when the statesmen and their wide-winged condors of taxation begin circling over American industry looking for something that smells like ripe opportunity.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S

Music Tax Discord

Warner this week inaugurated its own licensing arrangements for copyright music performance, and ran into its first snag when the broadcasters indicated rejection of the proffered contracts because the terms are considered excessive.

The American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers meanwhile announced its intention of offering exhibitors five-year contracts guaranteeing no seat tax increases, but no reduction either.

While postponed once more, the Government's anti-trust suit against ASCAP will not be dropped, reiterates the Department of Justice. The many developments of the week are recorded in the story starting on page 17.

Screening Criminals

Theatre screens of the nation are to be enlisted in a widespread plan of detecting and apprehending criminals which Colonel H. Norman Schwartzkopf, head of the New Jersey State Police, hopes to have underway by next spring.

Universal has agreed to process and distribute films of "public enemies" wanted by the authorities, and special equipment is being negotiated for with RCA Photophone.

While Colonel Schwartzkopf is taking the first steps, the industry broached the idea of film identification at the Washington crime conference last year. Developments are recorded in the story on page 36.

Television Theatre

United Artists theatre in Los Angeles, Thomas D. Soriero, manager, is now engaging the attention of the entertainment-seeking public as "America's first television theatre." Crowds are attending the exhibit in the theatre, staged independently of the regular screen performances. Mr. Soriero on page 55 explains the technical, entertainment and merchandising aspects of the medium.

Meanwhile, some dozen new developments in television threw the spotlight on the subject from other angles. The Federal Communications Commission was holding hearings on applications for television licenses; handicaps facing television were discussed by radio and television manufacturers; Hollywood's Academy has taken up a study of the subject; the electrical division of the United States Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce predicted 3,600 television photos a minute; Paris was given a look at television programs in five places; Graf Brothers, California producers, started to build a television laboratory in addition to their picture-making plant at San Francisco; David Sarnoff again predicted the appearance of television—this time by 1940; British exhibitors called a conference of all motion picture interests to protect the trade in the event films are used for television; a chain of television "schools" has been started; Minnesotan sees television by spring; experts in England rush work for television tests in London. See page 55.

Soviet Studio

A new Hollywood is to be constructed in Southern Russia, costing $40,000,000 to $60,000,000. Soviet leaders say it will be the world's largest studio.

Part of the huge expansion program of the Soviet film industry, the studio is designed to fill the need for increased production as 40,000 additional theatres are planned for the U. S. S. R. Production is being geared to 1,000 features a year in 1937.

Meanwhile Soviet propaganda films continue as subjects of controversy, and a film critic raises the question of what constitutes propaganda. For particulars, see the stories on page 61.

Science Progresses

The year 1935 returned motion picture engineers and technicians to the steady development of the science of motion picture making and exhibition without curtailed budgets, which during the depression prohibited, to a considerable extent, any outlay of large sums for changeovers of new mechanical procedure.

The technical advances made in the industry now foreshadow sweeping changes, as recording, reproducing, color and lighting standards, especially, begin to reflect the improvements both of a basic nature and of detail that were noted during the year.

The American Society of Cinematographers reports on the technical status today of sound, projection, general film standards, color, lighting, laboratory procedure, third dimension, raw materials, cameras, accessories, lenses, process cinematography and art direction—on page 53.

Critics

A first-class feud between critical opinion in the East and studio appraisal in Hollywood is in the making, as the New York film critics seek to rival the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences in deciding annual awards. The critics will announce theirs first.

The New York critics have taken exception to Academy prize selections, having felt a suggestion of behind-the-scenes maneuvering, says the New York Times. And some of the critics agree.

What the critics say and what the Academy is doing in preparation for its eighth annual selection of screen "bests," is related in the story starting on page 16.

Problems in Spain

Representatives of American companies in Spain were jubilant when a favorable report was reached in the Cortes on the bill to reduce the blanket tax on films, but the rejoicing ended abruptly when the Left Wing party successfully challenged the Government to produce a quorum. Now the matter is held in abeyance.

Adding to the discouragement was the introduction into Parliament of a quota law which would exempt all domestic film activity from any class of tax, direct or indirect, for ten years. Theatres in the capitals of provinces would be required to show monthly at least two socalled national productions, and theatres in other centers at least one national picture in each thirty exhibited.

The ministry of agriculture, industry and commerce is to provide an annual award for the best Spanish picture. The story on developments in Spain is on page 80.

NEWS SUMMARY COVERING THE SCREEN WORLD

Radio vs. Theatre

Vigorous competition to small town theatres in the form of radio reception on the farm is acknowledged by agricultural authorities contributing to a symposium just published by the Radio Institute of the Audible Arts.

It was found that a great many farm homes pay for radio sets by attending fewer picture shows, and that the radio keeps rural residents at home.

In another report, the Child Study Association of America finds a danger in the increasing intrusion of propaganda in sponsored radio programs. The surveys are reported on page 48.

Briskin at Radio

M. H. Aylesworth, chairman of the board or RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., RKO's producing subsidiary, announced that at a special meeting of the Board the following officers were formally elected:

M. H. Aylesworth, chairman of the board; Leo Spitz, president; J. R. McDonough, executive vice president; Samuel Briskin, vice president in charge of production; Ned Depinet, vice president; B. B. Kahane, vice president.

Mr. Briskin's election was the only new order of business, his alignment with the organization having become known late last week. He was formerly general manager of Columbia studios, and departed for his new post over the weekend after conferring with Mr. Spitz. Mr. Spitz will join Mr. Briskin at the studio in a week.

It appears likely that Mr. Briskin will not produce himself, but will act as general production manager.

Mr. McDonough's former post of president of the producing subsidiary caused his election to a vice presidency and the election of Mr. Aylesworth to the presidency.

Fox to Control

Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the directorate of Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation, on Monday was reported to have indicated in Hollywood that the corporation is or is about to come in complete control and the sole owner of National Theatres (formerly Fox West Coast) and all of its subsidiaries in California and the west, through the purchase of Chase Bank's 58 per cent holdings, Fox having previously held the remaining 42 per cent.

The sale price was reported as between $15,000,000 and $20,000,000. National Theatres owns and operates a total of 155 theatres in California, Arizona and Montana.

Mr. Schenck, however, declined to reveal the actual cash consideration involved. Negotiations have been under way for two months. Later, Sideny R. Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox denied that the deal had actually been consummated, and then came word from Hollywood that its consummation lacked only the adjustment of minor details.

In St. Louis the United States Circuit Court of Appeals during the March term at Kansas City probably will hear the appeals in Fox Midland Theatre Company and Fox Rocky Mountain Theatre Company bankruptcy cases.

Vincent at Republic

Walter W. Vincent of the Wilmer and Vincent theatre circuit, has been elected chairman of Republic Pictures Corporation, according to an announcement Thursday by W. Ray Johnston, president of Republic.

Mr. Vincent is treasurer of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America and a member of the board of trustees. He is also first vice-president of the Actors' Fund of America and a vice-president of Consolidated Film Industries, Inc.

Other changes concerning Republic are recorded on page 38.

Chaplin Deal

What Loew's said was one of the biggest individual deals in the history of talking pictures was closed Thursday when Charlie Chaplin, personally handling negotiations at the other end of a coast-to-coast long distance phone, approved contracts giving first run exhibition privileges for "Modern Times" to the Loew's theatre circuit in some 46 important cities outside of New York.

Mr. Chaplin's terms, it was said, set a new high.

The contracts include the Poli theatre circuit, under Loew operation, in New England, and 38 other cities extending from Providence to Houston, Texas.

Golden Elected

John Golden, Broadway producer, was elected a member of the Paramount board Thursday, filling the vacancy caused by the recent resignation of George G. Schaefer.

Oscar Serlin, eastern talent scout for Paramount, has been named as liaison in the company's plans for eastern production, working under Russell Holman, in charge of production in the East.

Schools Protest

Charging that schools and churches are being shut out by film distributors, leaders of a dozen Oklahoma City, Okla., character building agencies have organized to delve into the situation. Just what can be done, however, to obtain features, newsreels and travelogues for visual education programs the crusaders admit they don't know, but it will be the business of the Motion Picture Council of Oklahoma, organized this week, to find out.

The school leaders all reported they do not get satisfactory answers from local distributors about their inability to buy pictures they want, but that they have been told that the Publix theatre chain has an exclusive contract with distributors which tends to shut out schools, churches and independent theatres.

Motion pictures are operated in the Oklahoma City schools by the Parent-Teacher organization under school supervision.

Paul Harrup, YMCA boy's secretary, has been elected president of the newly formed council, with Carl Cress vice-president and Mrs. Clifford Loucks secretary-treasurer.

Pin Feathers

The few remaining pin feathers of the Blue Eagle will be plucked on January 1st, President Roosevelt by executive order having ordered dissolution of the National Recovery Administration on that date. Fourteen hundred NRA employees will keep their jobs until the NRA extension act expires April 1st, by allocation to the Department of Commerce of the divisions of review and business cooperation and the Advisory Council, while the consumers' division, lasting until June 30th, was moved to the Labor Department.

The action of the President was taken in Washington to mean the end of the Administration's efforts to regiment industry. It counteracted the reports of earlier in the year that new legislation to circumvent the supreme court's decision in the Schechter case would be asked of Congress.

Census Starting

Under the supervision of the Census Bureau, about 35,000 enumerators recruited from white collar relief rolls will begin a census of American business, including the motion picture, on January 2. Twice before, in the distribution census of 1929 and in the census of American business in 1933, the bureau has taken a similar census.

This Week in Pictures

ANOTHER YEAR. Announced, presumably on the sands of time, by several ladies of the ensemble of Warners' "Colleen."

NEWSREEL REVIEW. Of 1935, in reproductions of actual clips from issues of Paramount News. While not exhaustive of the eventful year now closing, these selections yet testify to the significance of the film in reporting.

Bruno Richard Hauptmann, convicted of Lindbergh slaying, is led to prison.

Ethiopians prepare defenses against invasion of Mussolini's legions.

Will Rogers and Wiley Post board their plane in Alaska on what proved to be their last flight.

Cattle seek vainly for grass on American prairie turned into a desert by sand storms.

United States warships stand by in the Pacific following crash of the Navy dirigible Macon during maneuvers.

Louisianans at capitol in Baton Rouge for funeral of Huey Long, felled by an assassin.

SIGNED. (Below) Paula Stone, daughter of the comedian, Fred Stone, whom Warner has placed under contract. Her first is "Slide, Kelly, Slide."

HORN-PIPE. Receiving a classic interpretation (left) by Fred Astaire, as in RKO Radio's "Follow the Fleet," wherein he co-stars with Ginger Rogers.

FROM BRITAIN. Henry Wilcoxon, English actor, arriving in New York en route to Hollywood to appear in Paramount productions.

ADVERTISERS HOLD BENEFIT. Scene at Hotel Astor, New York, as 1,200 gathered at the AMPA's third annual luncheon in behalf of the Film Daily Relief Fund. Among those on the dais were Will Hays, Adolph Zukor, Howard Dietz, Martin Quigley, Maurice D. Kann, Arthur Loew, C. C. Pettijohn, Louis Sidney, Louis Nizer, Lew Lehr, Eddie Dowling and Lily Pons. Gordon White, president of the AMPA, presided, and Jack Alicoate, publisher of Film Daily, was toastmaster. In short addresses, Mr. Hays, Mr. Dowling, Mr. Quigley and others commended the purpose of the fund for its practical charity.

STUDIO VISITORS. (Above) At Universal City: Willard S. McKay, New York attorney; W. G. Van Schmus, managing director of Music Hall, where Universal's "Next Time We Love" is booked for the week of December 30; Margaret Sullavan, star of that picture; Paul Kohner, the producer; Leonidoff, Music Hall stage producer; and Edward H. Griffith director of "Next Time We Love."

HER FIRST FILM PORTRAYAL. Gladys Swartout, mezzo-soprano of the Metropolitan Opera, as she appears in her initial screen role, that of Rose in Paramount's "Rose of the Rancho," adapted from a celebrated stage operetta.

ANIMAL TAMERS. (Left) Clyde Beatty of the circus lions, and Gene Autry of the cinema bronchos, meeting up on the Republic lot. Autry is starring in Republic Westerns, while Beatty is making a serial "Darkest Africa," for the company.

FEATURED. Eadie Adams, whose fetching technique in jazz vocalizations at Los Angeles cafes, won her a part in MGM's "Riffraff."

THE BIGGEST MONEY MAKING STARS OF 1934-35

Independent exhibitors judge the box office ranking of 200 players

SHIRLEY JANE TEMPLE with her six and one-half laughing years has danced to the peak of public favor, and the independent exhibitors of the United States have placed above her curls the laurel as THE Money Making Star of 1934-35, in Motion Picture Herald's annual canvass of the motion picture box office. (Complete standings appear on the following pages.)

It is the ticket office that is speaking, not the exhibitor himself. The verdict is from the week's receipts, not from the showman's personal preferences as to type of product or style of acting. The question placed before the independent theatre owners was this: "Please list the ten players whose pictures drew the greatest number of patrons to your theatre from September 1, 1934, to September 1, 1935." Hence the Herald survey, year after year, serves the industry in a way not even approached by other canvasses of player popularity; the Money Making Stars are chosen by the box office itself.

Independent Voters

The vote was by the independent exhibitors of the nation, with the figures of the counting house before them as they cast their ballots, the dollars and cents totals which reflected the popularity of the players in the minds of the public that placed those dollars and cents upon the sill of the ticket window. The questionnaire was limited to theatres without producer or distributor affiliation, with the purpose of eliminating any outside factors that might have influenced the voting by the manager of a producer-owned picture playhouse.

More sweeping changes were reflected this year in the voting than in any previous season's questionnairing of the exhibitor in the Herald survey. Six players won their way into the coveted first ten positions who the year before had been accorded widely scattered rankings.

Outstanding in the story told by the results was the rapid advancement of little Miss Temple to the highest ranking of all. In the 1933-34 ratings a child player for the first time was placed among the ten elect, in eighth place. Shirley then had had her first season of appearances in feature productions. The Fox contract star-ette, born April 23, 1929, had entered motion pictures in 1932 in the Baby Burlesque short product of Educational. Her first role in a feature had been in Paramount's "To the Last Man," released in September, 1933. From that point on came increasing appearances in features; in 1934 there were "Stand Up and Cheer" and "Baby Take a Bow" for Fox and "Little Miss Marker" and "Now and Forever" for Paramount, followed by frequent starring in Fox product in the last season.

3. Clark Gable
4. Fred Astaire* and Ginger Rogers
5. Joan Crawford
6. Claudette Colbert
7. Dick Powell
8. Wallace Beery
9. Joe E. Brown
10. James Cagney

(* Exhibitors listing Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers divided in reporting them as a team and as individuals, the majority, however, as a team.)

Miss Temple's triumph returns the feminine players to the top rung among the Money Making Stars. Will Rogers, who won highest ranking in 1933-34, was the first male star to lead the procession, and had been among the ten leaders each year since the inauguration of the surveys.

While there were ten positions represented, as in previous years, actually eleven players won the honors. The divergence came in the balloting on Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers. Exhibitors variously listed these two stars both as a team and as individuals, for the most part as a team. Each of the two players therefore was given one-half a vote in cases of mention as a team, and a full vote where mentioned individually. Thus they shared fourth place in the final ranking.

The rise of Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers in box office was little less rapid than that of Shirley Temple. It was as late as November 24, 1933, that there came the release of "Dancing Lady" in which Astaire danced with Joan Crawford. A month later—December 29th—was released "Flying Down to Rio." In this Astaire and Miss Rogers danced together; Gene Raymond and Dolores Del Rio were starred. Ginger Rogers had been in pictures for several years, her initial feature "Young Man of Manhattan," a 1930 release. With "Flying Down to Rio" the swift pace forward had started, and then came "The Gay Divorcee," "Roberta" and in the current season, "Top Hat."

Noted also has been the consistent achievement of several players in winning ranking among the first ten year after year. Clark Gable, third this year, took second place in the 1933-34 season. Wallace Beery, eighth in the current survey, was fourth the year before and in 1931-32, and fifth in 1932-33. Joan Crawford, in fifth place this year, was sixth the previous season.

Type of product in which the winners of the ten leading rankings appeared classifies generally as follows: comedy, two; comedy-drama, two; romantic drama, three; drama, one; musical comedy, one; and musical comedy drama, one.

Total player representation showed little change from the previous year's results. There were 200 mentioned for positions this time compared with 208, both being a considerable increase over the 163 named in the 1932-33 survey.

Basis of Tabulation

Determination of final standings was made on the basis of the total number of times a player was mentioned in the exhibitors' replies, regardless of the relative specified position among the ten nominations. This plan was adopted as giving the truest picture of the balloting, inasmuch as a number of exhibitors pointed out that, while they had been given the opportunity to state relative positions of the players in order of box office returns, the sequence they indicated was only approximately based upon actual box office criteria individually, and others said that they definitely were not attempting to define relative positions.

Therefore it was deemed necessary to treat Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers in the tabulations as a team and also as individuals. Their team rating credits a full point for every vote registered for the team, plus one-half point for each vote for each individual. Their individual ratings in the tabulations are based upon individual votes without consideration for team votes.

On these pages is a complete compilation of the returns in the inquiry to determine "The Biggest Money Making Stars of 1934-35"; the ranking is according to the number of times a player was mentioned in any relative position in the returned questionnaires. NEW YORK CRITICS AT ODDS WITH HOLLYWOOD OVER PICTURE AWARDS

Dissatisfied with Academy Vote, Say Some Members; Simply Want to Judge Winners for Themselves, Say Others

A feud between New York film critics and industry factors in Hollywood is brewing in organization of The New York Film Critics, which is to meet next Monday to start balloting on its 1935 motion picture awards, even as Hollywood is preparing to vote on the annual awards of the Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

As announced, The New York Film Critics was formed for the purpose of making awards for (1) the best film of the year shown in New York, (2) the best male performance, (3) the best feminine acting job, and (4) the best direction.

Eileen Creelman, critic of the New York Sun, resigned this week, objecting to the publicity which had been given the group in the press, which she said had been "undignified." John Mosher of the New Yorker also quit, since only one other weekly magazine is included and he feels the group is a newspaper critics' organization. Noel Busch of Time denied that he too was resigning. The Brooklyn Times-Union critic has been admitted to membership.

The New York newspaper critics, individually if not collectively, made no secret that they are dissatisfied with the Academy's awards, that they think they can do a better job of selecting the year's best," that the move resulted from a belief that the Academy is studio-controlled and has not been "entirely unprejudiced" in its awards in recent years.

That charge was made by the New York Times, whose film critic, Andre Sennwald, is a guiding spirit in the organization. Said the Times: "Just as the metropolitan drama critics have been dissatisfied with the annual Pulitzer award in the field of drama, the New York film critics have taken exception to the yearly prize bestowed by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. The critics have felt that there always has been a suggestion of behind-the-scenes maneuvering in the Academy's awards, that Hollywood was too insular a community to appraise the motion picture with complete non-partisan honesty."

Call New York Better Qualified

There was also the word of Frank S. Nugent, motion picture editor of the Times of "the belief that New York was in a better position to appraise Hollywood than was Hollywood itself."

The Herald-Tribune went a step further: "The critics make no bones of the fact that that they hope to oust the Academy from its position of chief judge."

At the same time the critics denied that they harbored "resentment" against the Academy, as had been reported elsewhere.

Several of the organization's members were queried as to the objectives.

Said Andre Sennwald of the Times: "Although several of the newspaper critics—myself included—do actually feel that the Academy is fast losing its usefulness as an arbiter of screen achievement, it would be inaccurate to say that this entered into the decision to form the organization. As a matter of fact, several of the critics feel that the Academy is very much alive and that its yearly awards are fully entitled to the respect they have won in the past

"I might say that a number of the critics would like to shift the critical focus from Hollywood to New York and hope that The New York Film Critics as a group may help to accomplish this. Many of us feel that we in New York are in a better position to appraise the achievements of the screen both because of our remoteness from studio politics and because a more representative cross-section of the world cinema is presented in New York's film houses than in Hollywood. But this point is solely a matter of geography and has no relation to what we, as individuals, feel about the Academy awards."

Expects Similar Results

Miss Creelman of the Sun, before leaving the group, had said: "Some critics, I know, have been outspoken in their disagreement with the Academy. They did not, however, speak officially for us all.

"Although I frequently disagree with the Academy awards, I have never taken it seriously enough to grow upset.

"It is a Hollywood organization; and Hollywood organizations seldom go very long without a lot of wire-pulling and studio control. It serves its purpose, whatever that may be, well enough. Hollywood likes it. I see no reason for 'resenting' it."

Thornton Delehanty, screen seer of the New York Post, said: "It wasn't 'resentment' that engendered our organization but one or two congenial luncheons at which we decided to follow the lead of the drama critics and establish awards based on pictures—foreign as well as domestic—shown in New York.

"The question of the bias of the Academy was a side-issue. I believe there is an impression in film circles that the Academy awards are prejudiced.

Saying that launching of the organization "had nothing whatsoever to do with the Academy or with that organization's awards," Leo Mishkin of The Morning Telegraph said his reaction toward the Academy and its awards was one of "gentle disinterest."

Academy Going Ahead

No repercussions have been heard from Hollywood, where the machinery is being set in motion for the Academy's "best of the year" competition, now in its eighth year. Nominations will be made in January, and the polls will close in February. The gold statuettes will be presented at a banquet late in the month.

Critics elsewhere were coming out with their own selections. Edwin Schallert, film critic of the Los Angeles Times, made his as follows:

First prize (acting—male star): Victor McLaglen in "Informer."

Second prize (acting—feminine star): Merle Oberon in "Dark Angel."

First prize (production): "Mutiny on the Bounty."

First prize (direction): Frank Lloyd, John Ford and Henry Hathaway—"neck and neck."

The Associated Press' Robbins Coons, a Hollywood staff veteran of seven years, selected as the three outstanding performers in 1935: Katharine Hepburn for "Alice Adams"; Victor McLaglen for "The Informer," and Charles Laughton for "Les Miserables," "Mutiny on the Bounty" and "Ruggles of Red Gap." Mr. Coons named as the three best films "The Informer," "Les Miserables" and "A Tale of Two Cities." He called "Sequoia" a picture in a class by itself and rated Shirley Temple in a class by herself as a player.

But Academy Goes Ahead with Plans for Annual Selections; Actors' Guild Making Its Own Choices; Awards Committee

The Screen Actors' Guild in Hollywood will make its own annual award for the best performance of the year ending June 30, 1936.

Academy Committees

Regardless, Hollywood is again all a-flutter over the forthcoming Academy awards. Dance directors are being included for the first time, and Mervyn LeRoy, Warner producer, has been named to handle this phase.

This year's awards committee, named by Frank Capra, president of the Academy, includes representatives of the Academy's five branches as follows:

Actors—Lionel Atwill, Lionel Barrymore, Reginald Denny, Clark Gable, George Irving, DeWitt C. Jennings, J. Farrell Macdonald, Mary Pickford, May Robson and Frederick Santley.

Directors—Clarence Brown, George Cukor, C. B. DeMille, E. H. Griffith, Howard Hawks, Harry Lachman, Mervyn LeRoy, Frank Lloyd, Rouben Mamoulian, Victor Schertzinger, King Vidor and William Wyler.

Assistant Directors—Clem Beauchamp, Sid Bowen, Gordon Hollingshead and William Wyler.

Producers—Harry Cohn, Henry Ginsberg, Henry Herzbrun, B. B. Kahane, Nat Levine, Charles R. Rogers, David O. Selznick, Hunt Stromberg, J. L. Warner and Darryl F. Zanuck.

Technicians—Martin G. Cohn, Carl Dreher, Arthur Edeson, Bernard Herzbrun, John Hughes, Louis F. Kolb, William A. Mueller, J. M. Nickolaus, Max Parker and S. J. Twining.

Writers—Howard Estabrook, Howard J. Green, Grover Jones, Joseph Moncure March, John Meehan, Jane Murfin, Robert Riskin, Paul Gerard Smith, Carey Wilson and Waldemar Young.

The committee representing the art directors' section of the Technicians' Branch consists of Stephen Goosson, Robert M. Haas, Charles D. Hall, Bernard Herzbrun, Fredric Hope, John Hughes, Max Parker, Van Nest Polglase, A. Tobuloff and Gordon S. Mitchell, manager of the Academy of Technical Bureau.

Carl Dreher, sound recording director at RKO Radio studios, will serve his fourth term as chairman of the board of judges for the scientific or technical award, which includes John Arnold, Farciot Edouart, Harris Ensign, Virgil Miller, William Rudolph, Lloyd Goldsmith, Burton F. Miller, S. J. Twining and Gordon S. Mitchell.

BROADCASTERS REJECT WARNERS' TERMS AS MUSIC LICENSE AGENT

Proposal Calling for Payment of Two-Fifths of ASCAP Charge Is Turned Down by Stations; Claim Terms Prohibitive

Warner Brothers' first move to establish its own music licensing agency struck a loud discord this week when James W. Baldwin, executive secretary of the National Association of Broadcasters, comprising 400 radio stations, said they in general would reject the company's terms as excessive.

The offer was submitted to the association in typewritten form, and printed agreements were to be ready for presentation late this week. The proposal calls for payment of two-fifths of what is now charged the broadcasters by the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers. Mr. Baldwin has been empowered by the broadcasters' directors to negotiate with Warner and for contract renewals with ASCAP.

With January 1 as the deadline when the fog surrounding the music situation must be lifted, matters stood this week as follows:

The Government's anti-trust suit against ASCAP has been postponed, as anticipated, but the Government insists it will be prosecuted later this winter.

ASCAP will not reduce its music taxes as a result of the Warner secession, and is offering exhibitors five-year contracts with a guarantee against increases.

It was virtually certain that exhibitors playing Warner pictures or films containing Warner music will have to pay a music tax to the company.

There was no chance of a reconciliation with ASCAP, Herman Starr, vice-president and treasurer of Warner Bros., in charge of music matters, said emphatically.

"ASCAP was working for us and we fired them," Mr. Starr asserted. "They did a bad job for us. When you fire a man you don't take five months deciding whether to take him back, do you?"

Three-Months' Contracts Offered

He said Warner felt it had an obligation to the broadcasters not to deprive them of the use of Warner music; for that reason, pending the negotiation of more permanent agreements, contracts have been offered for three months, with a clause providing that if any chain or station obtains better terms than those which had already signed, those terms would become effective for all and retroactive to January 1.

Meanwhile the Canadian Performing Rights Society cannot take legal action for copyright infringement or license violation until February 28, and exhibitors are not required to pay more than 10 cents a seat until that date, under the latest Government order. The ruling links with the recent judgment of Judge James Parker, who investigated the Society, that the present rate of 20 cents a seat is excessive. It is understood the Copyright Act will be amended at the next session of Parliament.

Warner plans to announce its policy with respect to an exhibitor music tax in a statement which will deal with the entire situation as a whole. Company officials are reported to have decided to levy on theatres, pointing out it would be unfair to Warner authors and composers not to do so, since authors and composers affiliated with ASCAP are benefiting from such a tax.

ASCAP in 1935 split a melon of approximately $3,200,000 to its publisher and author and composer members, representing distribution after deduction of overhead. The Society collected about $4,000,000, an increase over 1934, of which $800,000 came from exhibitors.

Radio stations contributed the largest share of the ASCAP revenue, and other sources were hotels, night clubs, dance halls and miscellaneous establishments.

Disbursements of $800,000 for the last quarter of 1935 were made this week, subject to adjustment when all collections for December are in. This figure is slightly under the previous quarter. Revenue is divided equally between the publisher and author and composer divisions.

Mr. Baldwin, in New York on Tuesday, said that broadcasters as a whole would not want to pay the amount asked by Warner, which is 40 per cent of what is now paid to ASCAP in sustaining fees and 2 per cent of the net revenue of radio stations.

Calls Catalogue 18 Per Cent

Warner through these terms hoped to garner more than the $340,000 it received last year as its share of the ASCAP collections.

Mr. Baldwin said he had informed Mr. Starr that in a check of 23,000 selections played over 23 stations over a period of a week, and other stations for different periods, it was found that Warner music constituted only 18 or 19 per cent of the whole. Warner claims that its catalogue comprises 40 per cent of the ASCAP repertoire, and has based its quotation of rates accordingly.

"It is conceivable that in a particular week in which Warner may have made a check, one or two stations through a coincidence would have played a large proportion of Warner music from the company's pictures to constitute a high percentage of the whole, but over a period of a year it is not possible," said Mr. Baldwin.

In anticipation of a showdown with both Warner and ASCAP by January 1, Mr. Baldwin by Thursday had been granted power of attorney by 275 member stations, and many others were expected to follow suit. His unconditional powers are to consummate agreements for individual stations as he sees fit, with the cooperation of an advisory committee.

Mr. Baldwin disclosed that 55 stations had signed unconditional extension agreements offered by ASCAP last June 17, and that since that time all contracts negotiated have allowed for cancellation in event ASCAP's repertoire is reduced. This was in anticipation that Warner's 11 music subsidiaries would withdraw at the end of the year.

Government Insists It Will Prosecute Anti-Trust Case Against ASCAP Despite Delays; Society Maintains Tax Rate

Variance in Contracts Cited

The confusion the broadcasters find themselves in is due to the variance in contracts, Mr. Baldwin pointed out, adding that if all stations had been given the same treatment, the present turmoil could have been avoided. He said he intends to negotiate only one form of contract for all stations.

Recently the Broadcasting Association directors wired members to accept ASCAP's unconditional extension agreement which was offered last summer, but the directions later were rescinded. In the interim 73 stations wired acceptance to ASCAP. These applications have not been acted on by the Society.

While the NAB directors have authorized one-year contracts with Warner or ASCAP, or both, the Society is demanding a five-year term, as National Broadcasting Company and Columbia Broadcasting System and others have signed, but the terms may be altered during further negotiations.

Five-Year Contracts Authorized

Meanwhile with all music publisher members of ASCAP, except the Warner companies, renewing their membership agreements for five-year terms, the ASCAP board has authorized the Society to offer exhibitors five-year music licensing contracts at the present rates, with a guarantee against increases during the life of the contract.

This, explained ASCAP, assures exhibitors the same treatment as the radio corporations, and permits them to gauge expenses in anticipation for the period.

ASCAP further assures exhibitors that it will not restrict the performance of any number recorded in a picture, as has occurred infrequently in the past with short subjects.

Mills Announces Stand

ASCAP's statement to theatre owners was issued Tuesday by E. C. Mills, the Society's general manager, as follows:

"All exhibitors may have license agreements for five years commencing January 1, 1936, at the present rate for the ASCAP repertoire as it then exists, with the further privilege of cancellation at any time on one year's notice in writing.

"ASCAP agrees that it will not during the five-year period withdraw from its repertoire for use by exhibitors any composition which has been licensed for reproduction in a sound picture when presented by means of or in connection with that picture.

"ASCAP is renewing its membership agreements with all of its publisher-members previously belonging to the organization except Harms, Inc., T. B. Harms, M. Witmark and Son, J. H. Remick and Company, Shubert Music Publishing Company, Victoria Publishing Corporation, New World Music Company and subsidiaries. (All are Warner companies).

"There is considerable question as to the actual technical legal ownership of the performing rights in compositions included in these latter catalogues. A careful item by item check now being conducted indicates that the repertoire of ASCAP will not be substantially reduced by the withdrawal of this, as it is commonly known, 'Warner Bros.' group.'

"It is well known that Victor Herbert, Jerome Kern, Sigmund Romberg and many other well known composers have made it a practice to convey only the mechanical and publishing rights and to reserve the performing rights. As to such rights they remain in ASCAP by way of the membership agreements with the composers."

Litigation Foreshadowed

The last paragraph foreshadows litigation to determine whether Warner has the performing rights to its music, or whether the rights remain in ASCAP's control by assignment.

The Society's statement means that no reduction in the music tax will be made as a result of the Warner withdrawal. The guarantee against higher rates is offered by way of compensating exhibitors for loss of the Warner music.

Heretofore the ASCAP contracts with exhibitors have been for one-year periods and have been automatically renewable unless canceled by either party.

The delay in contract renewal by the publishers was due to their position that if Warner were offered special privileges to remain with ASCAP, they wanted the same treatment. Also, those controlling standard works were awaiting adoption of a new classification system for purposes of revenue distribution, as they feared their income would be impaired. However, all obstacles have been removed.

Deny U. S. Case Dropped

The Government's monopoly suit against ASCAP was marked off the calendar in the United States district court in New York last Friday, subject to reinstatement on notice to the defendants. Agreement to the move was reached in conference between Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard, Arthur Schwartz of the Nathan Burkan law firm, counsel for ASCAP, and C. W. Roberts, representing the United States attorney general's office.

The official reason for the postponement is to permit stipulation of facts in order to speed up the trial when resumed. The stipulations, it was said, will shorten the trial from many weeks, which would be required without them, to two or three weeks.

The case will not be dropped, however, the Department of Justice has assured Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

What is not being shouted is that the Government was influenced in asking a further delay by the imminence of a Congressional session in which the Duffy copyright bill is scheduled to be acted upon in the House.

Because of pressing legislation, such as the veterans' bonus, which will sidetrack other matters, the Duffy bill, expected to provide material relief to theatre owners, will come up February 1 at the earliest. The Government's suit seeking to declare ASCAP an illegal monopoly was scheduled for resumption January 7. Government officials considered it unwise to proceed with the court action just prior to the Duffy bill consideration, because during the trial ASCAP will be in a position to publicize considerable material favorable to ASCAP but detrimental to the music users.

For that reason, the case will be docketed to be heard after the House has had an opportunity to act on the Duffy measure, which is sponsored by the State Department to bring domestic copyright laws in conformance with the international convention, according to reliable sources.

Ask Relief for "Little Fellow"

In any event, the Government is determined to press for relief in the matter of music taxes for "the little fellow," exhibitors and others, Washington sources declared.

Also, the completion of the stipulations is attended by thorough research by both sides into the amount of music held by ASCAP and that available in the public domain. ASCAP has a staff of a half dozen attorneys working on the stipulations, and some 15 to 20 investigators. They have been delving into the RCA Victor phonograph recording catalogues at Camden, N. J., public libraries and other sources to find all available information which would indicate that there is an abundance of music not controlled by ASCAP, with the purpose of proving that the Society is not a monopoly. The Government, it is understood, is making a similar check.

Prepare to Fight Suit

Electrical Research Products, Inc., and the motion picture producing companies are preparing to fight the suit for $149,948 filed in the New York supreme court by the Music Publishers' Protective Association. The sum is alleged due as the balance of $1,300,000 which was to have been paid by Erpi in the export of films made here to foreign countries. Erpi was made the defendant because of its music recording pool in which all companies participated. The film companies, however, will be obligated to pay the judgment, if one is returned.

Warner announced that on January 1 it would inaugurate "a new system of publishing and selling music," effective with its resignation from ASCAP. In a formal statement, the company said that the services of about 50 persons are being dispensed with, mainly in the professional and arranging departments of its music division.

Reduction Explained

The reduction was explained by Warner as follows: (1) Warner will not employ "song plugging" methods, especially on the radio, and will conduct its publishing companies as "an independent and self-sustaining business; and (2) with the secession from ASCAP, the music subsidiaries will be deprived of income heretofore derived from its membership in the Society. "Until the new basis on which these companies will be conducted has been firmly established, it is obviously necessary to make all possible retrenchments," the statement added.

Heads of the departments affected and certain key men are, however, being retained.

Composers and song writers under contract to Warner are siding with ASCAP in the controversy over performing rights, and intend to support any litigation other composers or the Society may undertake to decide the rights. E. Y. Harburg and Harold Arlen have refused to grant Warner the so-called small performing rights, and that clause has been stricken from their contract.

Jack Bregman, executive of Robbins Music Corporation, MGM music subsidiary, was elected an ASCAP director at last week's board meeting, succeeding Mr. Starr. This gives MGM its second representative on the ASCAP board, Jack Robbins being the other.

Three of the 12 songs chosen for prize money by ASCAP last quarter were from Paramount pictures, including "The Big Broadcast of 1936," "No Other One" and "Accent on Youth."

Paramount Claim Ordered Expunged

Expunging of a claim of $2,098,000 against Paramount Publix in its reorganization was ordered this week, the while the corporation's theatre subsidiary in the northwest started to prepare for an expansion program in four states.

The claim of $2,098,000 had been filed against Paramount Properties, west coast subsidiary, and was expunged under an order signed by Federal Judge Alfred C. Coxe. Paramount held a counter claim against the subsidiary for more than $2,000,000. Expunging of the claim was provided for in a plan of reorganization for Paramount Properties which was consummated recently on the coast.

Judge Coxe also signed an order authorizing the settlement of a suit brought against A. C. Blumenthal by the Paramount trustees to recover on a financial settlement made with Mr. Blumenthal by Paramount in 1932, prior to the company's receivership. In that year Mr. Blumenthal instituted a bondholders' action against the company, which was subsequently settled by the purchase of his Paramount securities at par, although their market value was considerably less at the time. Mr. Blumenthal agrees to repay $3,750 to Paramount under the settlement of the suit brought against him by the Paramount trustees.

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals has set January 6 for hearing of the appeal of Sir William Wiseman, former Paramount director, from a ruling by Judge Coxe that the Paramount trustees had the right to subpoena Mr. Wiseman in their recovery action in which former officers and directors of Paramount are defendants.

Minnesota Amusement Company, Paramount's northwest theatre subsidiary, is preparing to launch an expansion program throughout Minnesota, North and South Dakota and western Wisconsin. John J. Friedl is operating head.

Acquisition of theatres through outright purchase, partnership arrangement or leasing will be considered, it was said. Mr. Friedl has been looking over various possibilities in the territory preparatory to discussing deals which would further enlarge the circuit of 78 houses. Minnesota Amusement would not enter any situation to the detriment of an independent exhibitor already established, but would negotiate only where present operators are interested in discussing a sale, lease or partnership deal with the circuit, it was pointed out.

Y. Frank Freeman, Paramount vice-president in charge of the company's theatre department, said in New York that he knew of no planned expansion program for Minnesota Amusement Company, but that he assumed that if desirable theatres were available on the right basis deals would probably be made by the circuit from time to time.

Gaumont Staff in Holiday Film

Arthur A. Lee, vice president of GB Pictures in New York, was host on Tuesday at an office holiday celebration at which a luncheon was served to the accompaniment of the unreeling of a two-reel picture that had been filmed of the staff. The film was to be shipped to the London office for New Year Day.

Tax Bills Signed

Governor Martin L. Davey of Ohio signed the three per cent sales tax bill and another bill extending the three per cent admission tax, both of which are in force, last week to March 1, 1937.

Somebody at the studio got the idea of filming a big outdoor "musical", filled with riding, shooting, singing, romancing. So we got beautiful Gladys Swarthout to play the heroine (you've often heard her golden voice on the radio) . . . and John Boles as the hero . . . We hired practically a whole Mexican army. We gave David Belasco's grand story of gold rush days in California a grand production, directed by Marion Gering. And then we got the best song writers on the coast to write a whole set of new tunes! . . . P.S. Herb Williams and Willie Howard for laughs!

FROM OUT WHERE THE STYLES BEGIN . . .

Doesn't Miss Swarthout look the very picture of a most alluring Spanish Senorita in this picture? . . . Notice the wide flaring skirt of dainty organdy ruffles — contrasted by the fitted dark taffeta bodice repeating flattering organdy ruffles at throat and wrist, and the dark lace "mantilla." When next you are invited to a costume party — remember this! Claudette Colbert has an interesting wardrobe in "The Bride Comes Home." Claudette plays a girl whose millionaire father lost his fortune . . . so she has to look well-dressed even though she can't spend much for apparel — even as you and I! . . . You'll adore the two-piece black-and-white frock that blends so well with the black Breton hat worn in the illustration.

HAPPY NEW YEAR!

POPEYE and OLIVE OYL are going to do their stuff in a new and bigger way this year. In short, we're casting that spinach devouring sailor man in a new series of shorts! The first one is "Vim, Vigor and Vitaliky."

ASIDES & INTERLUDES

By JAMES CUNNINGHAM

The Lost Opportunity Of Czar Nicholas

THE opening in New York on Christmas Day of David Selznick's production of Charles Dickens' "Tale of Two Cities" set some of the old-timers reminiscing about the time, 20 years ago, when David, now 33 years old, was being trained by his dad, Lewis J., for motion picture work with the view to eventually becoming an executive. Young Dave's eyes in those days popped with amazement frequently from the promotional fancies that flared from the old man's mind.

On one of those mornings young Dave and the elder Selznick awoke to discover that the news headlines screamed of revolution in their native Russia and the overthrow of the soon-to-be-murdered Czar Nicholas. Mr. Selznick wrapped a widely decorated brocaded silken dressing gown about him, rang for Ishi and demanded tea from the samovar. A secretary came panting, pencil poised, to take dictation. It was a cablegram, sent paid by Mr. Selznick, which, translated from the Russian, read:

NICHOLAS ROMANOFF,
PETROGRAD, RUSSIA.

WHEN I WAS POOR BOY IN KIEV SOME OF YOUR POLICEMEN WERE NOT KIND TO ME AND MY PEOPLE. I CAME TO AMERICA AND PROSPERED. NOW HEAR WITH REGRET YOU ARE OUT OF A JOB OVER THERE. FEEL NO ILLWILL WHAT YOUR POLICEMAN DID SO IF YOU WILL COME NEW YORK CAN GIVE YOU FINE POSITION ACTING IN PICTURES. SALARY NO OBJECT. REPLY MY EXPENSE. REGARDS YOU AND FAMILY.

SELZNICK
NEW YORK

Dave's father, feeling the greatness of the producer of "colossal" productions, was disappointed when he did not get a reply from the deposed Czar. If Nicholas had arrived in Hollywood he would have got the job, and perhaps a percentage of the profits.

The Czaristic incident was typical of the film "game" that was played by Dave's father. He played that and all other games with a dash and zip intended to take away the breath. He was willing to stand pat on the lowest hand in the deck and bet five grand before the draw. His Ishi, a Japanese servant, was promoted to major-domo and was duly instructed in the art of marinated herring. He rode in a Rolls-Royce, and in the velvety depths of his Park Avenue apartment his eyes were soothed with Italian marbles and great vases from the Orient.

Whether the typographer or proofreader, or both, were to blame, the deponent sayeth not, but when Val Linton, of the Avenue theatre, Columbus, Ohio, advertised a special preview of "She Married Her Boss," the last line of the newspaper display ad read:

IT WILL BE HELL AT 9 P. M.

1757 KALANI STREET
HONOLULU

PARAMOUNT PICTURES,
HOLLYWOOD, CALIF.
GENTLEMEN:

The company I am writing for is known as the Aloha Cotton Factory.

This concern wishes to deal in old posters which you have used after advertising. The posters will be used as material in mattresses which this company deals in.

If you will consign to the Aloha Cotton Factory a bulk of these old posters, and if the material is good for their purpose a business arrangement with you can be made.

Very truly yours,
ALOHA COTTON COMPANY
(Signed) J. K. Harris

The idea may be a good one from the standpoint of the Aloha Cotton Factory, but for the sake of the health and the peace of mind of young America we earnestly request Paramount to refuse the offer. Imagine the fire hazards in mattresses made from Mae West's "I'm No Angel" or "She Done Him Wrong." And how do they expect anyone can rest on mattresses stuffed with posters from Paramount's "Anything Goes," "Two for Tonight," "This Woman Is Mine," "Stolen Harmony," "The Scoundrel," "People Will Talk," "Four Hours to Kill," "Desire," "The Eagle's Brood" and such?

Boined to the quick over the accusations of his friends that he can't even write his name, James (Schnozzola) Durante has written a book.

"For a time I suffered this ridicule," he tells us.—"I tolerated the jibes and innuendos that were shot at me like poisoned darts from a prairie bow-man—but then came the day—the day when one of those poisoned-points pierced the hardened skin of me and lodged itself in my heart (figuratively speaking). Someone with malice afore and aft had been informed that I was about to write a book. 'Write a book,' they countered, 'why he can't even write his name.' This, then, was the retort that broke down the flood-gates and let loose a torrent of literary waters that will in time engulf the world. This was the remark that made me girdle on my writing armor and with my pen for a sword enter the fray. I ACCEPTED THE CHALLENGE!—Both challenges:—one to prove that I could write a book and the other to prove that I could write my name.

"I wrote my name on walls, on barroom bars, on parked automobiles, on restaurant tablecloths, on steam-frosted windowpanes, on subway billboards. I could go on ad nauseam, but this list will suffice to prove that I could write my name. And then—then I fell to with a vim and vigor that startled my intimate friends—I began writing a book, and soon it was completed—not only completed but eagerly awaited by a skeptical public—but there it was—a book—effervescent music coupled with lyrical effulgence."

—SEASON'S GREETINGS—

Fuzzy Knight, Hollywood actor, was showing off his new car to a friend the other day, writes Gus McCarthy from California.

"But your old car was practically new, what was the matter with it?"

"No getaway," complained Fuzzy.

"What do you mean, no getaway?"

"No get away from the finance company," cracked Knight.

Lifting the Shades On the Yesteryear

WILLIAM S. HART of "two-gun" movie fame, the god in the flesh for many a cowboy-and-Indian playing youngster, was 61 years old the other day. If he did not remember his birthday when he woke up, he did as soon as he opened his bedroom door and found, propped against it, a big horse furiously sleeping. That was old Fritz.

Time was when Bill stumbled over his famous pinto pony film mount every morning. Now, however, far removed from motion pictures, Hart refuses even to discuss Hollywood and the days when he used to give his son, William S. Hart, Junior, $650 toy drums with gold and silver encrustments and rosewood sticks to beat them.

Old Fritz, the horse, who is now 27, is permitted to sleep near the big boss only on birthdays. The procedure never varies. During the night, some one unlatches the corral. Presently, old Fritz lumbers up La Loma de los Vientos (The Hill of the Winds), at Hart's ranch near Newhall, California, and nuzzles open the patio door, paws the Spanish rope mat into a comfortable wad, and, too, settles into dreams of the days when he was a famous "actor," carrying Hart over the plains of the ornamentally "Wild West" for the camera and for millions of coins for Thomas Inc, Adolph Zukor and the United Artists owners.

In 1914 Hart left the stage, where he started at 19, for work in pictures in California for his old friend Ince for $75 a week. Some two-reelers and then 13 feature pictures made him so famous and so prosperous that in 1922 he said he had to quit work to save income taxes. (So, William Randolph Hearst's idea of California's "too high" taxes, and that of some film folk who follow him, is not new.)

—SEASON'S GREETINGS—

Unlike the motion picture, radio does not afford any privacy in the home. Take the case of the McDonald family in Philadelphia. Mrs. McDonald wrote in to Station WDAS that Mr. McDonald always lets his suspenders down and propped his feet on the kitchen table the while listening to the Four Provinces Irish broadcast. Pat Stanton, in announcing publicly over the air the next program appearance of the Irishers, gruffly ordered McDonald to pull up his straps and take his dogs off the table. Mrs. McDonald reported that pots and pans then flew through the parlor door at the radio, as the master of the household essayed a long-winded tirade against Pat Stanton, the radio and the invasion by both of the sanctity of the home.

—SEASON'S GREETINGS—

Frank Boucher, of the Paramount theatre down in Lynchburg, Virginia, hears that Warners are considering starring Papa Dionne in "The V Man."

—SEASON'S GREETINGS—

The year's biggest ingrate is the patron of a New Haven theatre who won a $200 "Bank Night" award and on the way out complained to the manager that "the picture was lousy!"

USE OF FILMS TO CATCH CRIMINALS WILL GET FIRST TEST IN JANUARY

Universal Newsreel Agrees to Make and Distribute Pictures, with New Mobile Apparatus from the RCA Photophone

New Jersey Police Superintendent Says Most Exhibitors in State and Warner Circuit Cooperating to This End

Theatre owners of America would be organized into an important arm of the law enforcement machinery of the nation under a plan which is to get underway in January for identification and apprehension of the most sought-after of "public enemies" in the ever-present war on crime.

Audiences would be turned into detectives as films of the hunted criminals are flashed on theatre screens.

Universal Newsreel disclosed this week that it has agreed to participate in the plan and that it will be the agency through which the films will be supplied to theatres and local police departments.

RCA Photophone is also figuring importantly in the plans. Colonel H. Norman Schwartzkopf, superintendent of the New Jersey State Police and chief sponsor of the idea, for some weeks has been negotiating with the company for the manufacture of special recording and projection equipment that will not require an expert technician to operate.

He is the same Colonel Schwartzkopf who attained national prominence as head of the investigation into the kidnaping and slaying of the Lindbergh baby with its resultant capture and conviction of Bruno Richard Hauptmann.

First Tests Soon

First tests are to be made in Trenton in January, with camera and projection apparatus being constructed for 35mm. and 16mm. film. Among those who are to have observers present are the United States Department of Justice, state and municipal police heads and officials of the New York police department, as well as motion picture companies and the newsreels.

The majority of exhibitors in New Jersey have agreed to cooperate, according to the Colonel, and the Warner circuit, with many theatres in the state, and heads of the organized industry in New York also have promised their cooperation.

The industry, however, will participate nationally through its film distribution system and theatres only in manhunts of major consequence, where the need for such cooperation is considered great; pictures of run-of-the-mill criminals will not be allowed to clutter the screens. If local police departments adopt the film identification method—and Colonel Schwartzkopf anticipates that many will—it is expected that they will request the cooperation of theatres locally in instances of less than national importance.

Universal to Handle Job

It has been agreed that Colonel Schwartzkopf's department will provide the equipment, and Universal will handle the actual work, including the camera work, printing, editing and distribution.

For the time being the plan will be confined to New Jersey, but where the circumstances warrant, the films will be distributed nationally and may be included in the newsreels.

Colonel Schwartzkopf's idea is to have mobile apparatus. It is estimated that it would cost $15,000 to equip a police department.

Universal will receive no compensation for the service, other than contacts with police officials and newspaper publicity. Some exclusive news shots of crime "breaks" also may accrue to Universal.

Colonel Schwartzkopf hopes to have all New Jersey prison inmates photographed.

Sees International Library

"Despite all the reclamation work by the various agencies," he said, "police experience has been that about 80 per cent of regular criminals continue at crime after they escape or are released from institutions. If we have sound films of them on hand, they could be distributed around the country as soon as we knew they were again violating the law."

A film library of such criminals built up from all county, state and federal prisons, the New Jersey official believes, would soon include all the known criminals in America. He is in correspondence, too, with British, French and German police authorities.

The idea came to Colonel Schwartzkopf when, while working under pressure on the Lindbergh investigation, he dropped into a theatre for relaxation. The feature was a gangster film. For several days he remembered all the physical characteristics and mannerisms of the leading racketeer. Then a notorious criminal, in the hands of the police, was permitted to walk out because he had not been recognized.

The plan to use films, said the Colonel, was a development of the recent crime conference at the invitation of Governor Harold G. Hoffman of New Jersey and attended by delegates from 43 states. Some of these, it was said, are now seeking to introduce the plan on a nationwide scale.

The idea, however, was presented by the industry itself in an offer, of cooperation by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America to the Washington crime conference sponsored by Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, in December, 1934. It had been suggested intermittently years earlier, notably in New York and Chicago.

Would Post Stills

"The present practice of photographing convicted criminals and the use of such photographs for purposes of identification at a later date may be improved by the use of motion picture apparatus," the MPPDA told the conference.

"Still photographs made from these motion pictures could continue to be used for bulletins in post offices and other public places and for general distribution to the press, but the greater additional value would come in the search for notorious criminals, whose crimes command nationwide attention and who are being sought throughout the country."

The first significant example was given recently in New York when six young gangsters, after a night of fruitless grilling by District Attorney William F. X. Geoghan, fell prey to their own overweening conceit of wanting "to be in the movies," and confessed for Hearst Metrotone News to the murder and robbery of a Brooklyn-Manhattan Rapid Transfer Company collector. A print is to be admitted in evidence at the trial.

When the newsreel was shown in a Philadelphia theatre, by two members of the audience who were witnesses to the crime, said one of the youths was guilty of a murder in that city. Authorities said an indictment would be returned.

Colonel Schwartzkopf said three sets of talking films would be made of every major criminal; one when arrested, one when he begins his sentence and one upon release.

"The pictures then will be available for nation wide distribution the next time the man is wanted," he said, "Then all America, will know the appearance, the walk and the voice of the criminal. If this had been available with such men as Dillinger and 'Baby Face' Nelson, they would have been rounded up far sooner and much loss of life avoided."

The apparatus now being prepared consists of a standard size background screen on which would be outlined the dimensions of an average man and a Bertillion measurement chart. On the floor in front of it would be placed a chart with letters marked in the various corners. Engineers would develop a standard focus for this chart and standard lighting equipment. If all apparatus were placed properly, the theory is, all recording would be similar.

Criminals would be made to stand full length at a certain spot so their physical measurements could be noted. They would be made to turn sidewise, to walk to and from the camera, to bend, wear a hat and remove it, to use any common disguise they practised frequently, and generally to reveal as many identification points as possible.

While all this was going on the prisoner would be asked questions about his life and quickly checked up from his record where evasions were attempted. Trick questions would be thrown at the criminals so that shifting expressions of their faces and voice intonations could be noted.

"If search by the police proved unavailing, meaning that criminals were keeping under cover," Colonel Schwartzkopf continued, "the films could be turned over to the newsreels and shown in every theatre in the country."

He wants simple apparatus developed "that the average smart cop can learn to handle if he follows directions."

Couldn't Hide Identity

"One of the major values of the plan," added the police official, "is that criminals could not hide their identity by being on their guard. When they are forced to stay before a camera and microphone for several minutes and required to obey various commands, against which they could not guard against in advance, even the wiliest of them would be off guard some of the time.

The New York Herald Tribune, commenting, editorially, feared that Colonel Schwartzkopf's plan "may have unfortunate consequences," while agreeing that it might be worth a trial.

Governor Hoffman of New Jersey requisitioned 20,000 feet of film on the Lindbergh case from Universal in a check-back of the evidence.

Another possible aid in the identification of criminals was announced recently by Herbert Duval of the General Electric Research Laboratories in Philadelphia. This is a device which pictures voice and speech characteristics in a recorded sound track.

PRODUCERS FINISH 1935-36 FEATURE STORY PLANS WITH 53 PURCHASES

Total of 29 Originals, 17 Books, and 7 Plays Bought in Two Months, Low Point for Any Period of Same Length

Indicating the extent of the completeness of this season's product schedules from the standpoint of story availability, producers in Hollywood in the past two months purchased but 53 manuscripts, an all-time record low. Seven originals, five books and two plays were bought in October, a total of 14, and 22 originals, one magazine story, 11 books and five plays were acquired in November, for a total of 39. This compares with purchases made in previous months as follows:

TOTALS FOR 15 MONTHS	401	313	96	810

 Including 4 published magazine stories: † Including 1 published magazine story.

Although numerically low, October and November purchases are high in quality, promising good screen material for box offices in the final months of this season, running through to early summer. Sinclair Lewis' book, "It Can't Happen Here," was taken by MGM, which also purchased the play, "Paradise Lost," by Clifford Odets. Rupert Hughes wrote an original, "Static," acquired by Radio, and Ellen Glasgow's new novel, "Vein of Iron," made the third Metro purchase.

Vincent Chairman of Republic; Rogers Is Sales Manager

Election of Walter W. Vincent, head of the Wilmer and Vincent circuit, as chairman of the board of Republic Pictures Corporation was announced Thursday. Mr. Vincent, who is a vice-president of Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., presumably will represent Consolidated and its president, Herbert J. Yates, in Republic. The election was said by the company to be a preparation for an expansion plan.

Other changes in Republic since resignation last week of Trem Carr as vice-president in charge of production and Edward Golden as sales manager, were:

Budd Rogers was appointed Republic sales manager.

Edward Golden became sales manager of Chesterfield and Invincible.

Nat Levine flew in and out of New York from Hollywood to talk with Herbert J. Yates, Republic's financial backer, and with Ray Johnston, president, on a new concentrated drive on production.

Trem Carr said that he would not be surprised if Monogram Pictures—Republic's predecessor—was revived.

Mr. Rogers comes to his new post after serving as assistant general sales manager at Republic. He was brought into the organization as representative of Liberty Pictures, one of the companies which merged by Mr. Yates with Monogram and Mascot to form Republic. At Liberty, Mr. Rogers held the position of vice-president and general sales manager.

The appointment of Edward Golden to head a new sales department for Chesterfield and Invincible Pictures was made known by George Batcheller and Maury Cohen, heads of the two companies.

Mr. Golden will organize and direct the new sales division for the two companies. Heretofore, Chesterfield and Invincible sales have been handled by the First Division sales staff alone. Mr. Golden's appointment will not alter the existing distribution arrangements with First Division, but will add a direct sales effort applied exclusively to the product of the two companies, augmenting that supplied by First Division. The two companies release between 20 and 24 features annually.

Nat Levine, Republic Pictures' new production head, announced that a concentrated drive is being made toward speeding up pictures now in production at Republic studios in North Hollywood.

With 19 productions ready for January release, six other pictures have either been completed or are ready for the cameras. This brings Republic's activity status up to 25 productions, according to Mr. Levine.

From Hollywood came word that Trem Carr is very much pleased over his deal with Republic. One of his first moves to carry out his agreement to stay out of independent production for a year and a half will be to take a two-month vacation trip to Europe.

Monogram can be resumed, he says, and he wouldn't be surprised, he indicated, if it reappears in the independent field at the end of his retirement period. He has had three offers from major studios, he says, but will rest before deciding.

Fred Steele resigned as Republic studio comptroller, and was replaced by Max Schoenberg, recently in the bookkeeping department.

G. A. Skinner Dies; Helped Organize Research Council

George A. Skinner, who helped organize the Motion Picture Research Council, died unexpectedly Friday in New York from a heart attack. He was 64. For more than 25 years Mr. Skinner was identified with the motion picture industry, especially its educational aspects. He was a graduate of Hobart College and had studied engineering at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He was a director of the Motion Picture Producers and Exhibitors Association, predecessor of the MPPDA.

Mr. Skinner was treasurer of the Payne Fund, which carried out a three-year survey of the effect of motion pictures on children. Mr. Skinner often wrote for Education, Screen and other periodicals.

National Review Board Lists "Ten Best" Films

The committee on Exceptional Photoplays of the National Board of Review has made its selection of the best pictures for the year between December 20, 1934, and December 20, 1935. The best picture of the year, made anywhere, was judged by the committee to be "The Informer." The Ten Best American pictures, and the ten best pictures made in other countries, listed alphabetically, were: "Alice Adams," "Anna Karenina," "David Copperfield," "The Gilded Lily," "The Informer," "Les Miserables," "The Lives of a Bengal Lancer," "Mutiny on the Bounty," "Ruggles of Red Gap" and "Who Killed Cock Robin."

Foreign selections were: "Chapayev," "Crime Et Chatiment," Le Dernier Millairdaire," "The Man Who Knew Too Much," "Marie Chapdelaine," "Le Maternelle," "The New Gulliver," "Peasants," "Thunder in the East" and "The Youth of Maxim."

Exhibitor Wins Pittsburgh Suit; New U.S. Move

A federal grand jury in Pittsburgh awarded Samuel Friedman, independent theatre owners of Sharon, Pa., $24,000 under the Sherman Anti-Trust Law on his charges that eight Pittsburgh distributors conspired to restrain his business.

The jury's verdict was for $8,000, but that amount automatically was increased to $24,000 under a provision of the Sherman Act tripling damage awards.

The distributors were: Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Distributing Corporation, Columbia Pictures Corporation, Vitagraph, Inc., Universal Film Exchange, Inc., Fox Film Corporation, Educational Films Exchange, Inc., of Pittsburgh, United Artists Corporation, and R. K. O. Distributing Corporation.

Mr. Friedman's dispute in 1928 with F. B. O. (now RKO) and M. G. M. resulted in the suspension of film service by all eight distributors, it was charged.

There is little likelihood of an appeal being taken from the verdict.

A spokesman in New York for the defendant distributors said that no legal precedent was involved as the contracts on which the case was brought are no longer in use. It was added that the judgment involved probably was not large enough to warrant the expense of an appeal.

If reports from Minneapolis and St. Paul are to be accepted, United States District Judge Joseph West Molyneaux will not waste any time in disposing of the Department of Justice's petition for a preliminary injunction to restrain Warner Brothers, Paramount and RKO and various subsidiaries from refusing to furnish first run motion pictures to Fanchon and Marco for use in the Ambassador, Missouri and New Grand Central theatres at St. Louis.

Judge Molyneaux will be in St. Louis on January 6. The equity case is tentatively set for hearing on that date, but this does not necessarily mean that the case will be disposed of at that time. It may be that after Judge Molyneaux gets here and sizes up the situation he will set a later date for the actual trial.

Determined to win the civil suit, Attorney General Homer S. Cummings is bulwarking the legal staff to assist Russell Hardy. He has just appointed Walter Rice of the Government's staff in Washington as assistant prosecutor for the equity hearing.

Harold L. Schilz, who assisted Mr. Hardy in the criminal action, is being retained for the second action and it is understood several other government attorneys from the capital also will arive at St. Louis the end of next week.

Harry M. Warner, Herman Starr, Gradwell L. Sears, George J. Schaefer and Ned E. Depinet, defendants in the criminal action, also are respondents in the civil proceedings. They are under subpoena, as are the 35 others. It is understood that about 25 additional witnesses will be summoned by the government the end of this week.

HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Holiday Season Busy with Ten Pictures Started and Four Completed — Futter Short Asks Public to Find Kidnaper — Stories on "Mercy Killing" Topic Are Rushed

Busy Season

Despite the Holiday season Hollywood's production mill jumped up a few notches as ten new pictures were started during the week of December 13 to 20 though but four were completed. Currently there are 50 productions actually in work, which is an increase of 12 over the same period in 1934.

The Laemmle management of Universal added two features to the four it already has actively in work, to give the studio its most intensive production program it has known in months. The two are "Love Before Breakfast" and "Tomorrow Is a Better Day." In the first, which Walter Lang is directing, Carole Lombard is starred, supported by Preston Foster, Janet Beecher, Diana Gibson, Nan Grey and Priscilla Lawson. The second picture will present James Dunn and Sally Eilers with Pinky Tomlin and Doris Lloyd. William Nigh is directing.

MGM started "The Garden Murder Case." The cast to be seen includes Edmund Lowe, Virginia Bruce, H. B. Warner, Gene Lockhart, Nat Pendleton, Etienne Girardot, Freida Inescourt, Robert McWade, Olaf Hytten and Henry B. Walthall. Ned Marin is directing.

At 20th Century-Fox "Every Saturday Night" went on the stages. It will present June Lang, Thomas Beck, Jed Prouty, Spring Byington, Florence Roberts, Kenneth Howell, William Mahan, June Carlson and George Ernest. James Tinling is directing.

Warner Brothers' contribution to the new work is "Treachery Rides the Trail." A western, it features Dick Foran with Monte Blue, Graigh Reynolds, Don Barclay, Jim Thorpe, Paula Stone and Wade Boteler. Frank McDonald is directing.

Chesterfield, working on the Pathe lot, started "The Last Trap." The cast includes Ray Walker, Irene Ware, Hobart Bosworth, Hedda Hopper, Berton Churchill, William V. Mong, E. E. Clive, Aggie Herring and Miki Morita. Charles Lamont is directing.

Adding to the many current westerns Paramount started "Desert Gold." Larry Crabbe and Marsha Hunt are featured, supported by Robert Cummings, Tom Keene, Raymond Hatton, Monte Blue, Glen Erickson, Walter Miller and Frank Mayo. James

Two of the completed features are credited to MGM; one is a special, the second a run of the mill product. The special, "Rose Marie," will present Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy in their second co-starring roles. The supporting cast lists James Stewart, Allan Jones, Robert Greig, Lucien Littlefield, George Regas, James Conlon, Una O'Connor, Gilda Grey, Reginald Owen, Allen Mowbray, Halliwell Hobbes, David Nivens and Paul Porcasi. W. S. Van Dyke directed. In "The Three Live Ghosts" will be seen Richard Arlen, Cecelia Parker, Beryl Mercer, Claude Allister, J. M. Kerrigan, Charles McNaughton, Dudley Digges, Nydia Westman, Harvey Stephens and Forrester Harvey. Bruce Humberstone directed.

Paramount completed the Walter Wanger production "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," which was photographed in color. Sylvia Sidney, Fred MacMurray, Henry Fonda and Fred Stone are featured, supported by Fuzzy Knight, Beulah Bondi, Spanky McFarland, Nigel Bruce and Ricca Allen. Henry Hathaway directed.

"Find the Man"

A two reel featurette produced by Walter Futter introduces a brand new picture making idea and suggests one of the many possibilities other than a medium of entertainment the world's theatre screens can become. Titled "Find the Man," it is exactly that. It invites theatre audiences to cooperate with the Department of Justice and police forces in the search for William Mahan, the one missing participant in the sensational George Weyerhauser kidnaping case. Besides the unlimited exploitation possibilities which the picture itself affords, Mr. Futter personally is offering $1,000 reward to any member of the Clue Club, membership in which becomes automatic and free upon seeing the featurette, who provides a clue that leads to Mahan's capture.

Two hours after news flashes of the Weyerhaeuser kidnaping shocked the country, Mr. Futter dispatched sound trucks to the scene of the crime. At the time it was his intention to make a feature picture of authentic and not re-created personalities and incidents. The chase taking the trucks all over the northwest from Tacoma, Spokane and Butte to Salt Lake City, thousands of feet of film were shot. After a ukase of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America tabooing kidnap pictures, the find-the-man idea developed.

As the various incidents in the case leading up to the capture of the Waleys, which made sensational headlines, are recorded, the featurette provides a use of a screen attraction actually to track down a known criminal still at large. Mahan is pictured and described at considerable length. His finger prints, physical deformities, habits and suggestions of places in which he might be found are graphically presented.

Given the tacit but not avowed approval of the Department of Justice, and also carrying a Production Code Administration certificate number, "Find the Man" opens a new door leading to endless possibilities, and fits in with the plan of Superintendent Schwartzkopf of the New Jersey state police to employ the screen in tracking down criminals. Details of the New Jersey plan appear elsewhere in this issue.

'Mercy' Killing

Few sensational news stories break without an aftermath of screen tales within a few months. There would have been an epidemic of kidnaping pictures following the Lindbergh case had not the Hays office placed a ban on the subject. At that, to a certain extent producers have contrived to use the theme in quite a number of features. The newest cycle is suggested by the controversy over euthanasia.

Twentieth Century-Fox is rushing "The Mercy Killer" before cameras. B. F. Ziedman has announced the title "The Right to Kill," and Warners has been so busy rushing through a script on the subject that it has not had time to decide upon a title yet.

Pictures of this kind are constructed for a quick cleanup. The first in the field are usually the ones to make money for the exhibitor who turns the news value of the story to account. Few stories of this kind last long on front pages, however, and it will be the clever showman who books such films at the earliest moment and arranges debates between local doctors, churchmen and editorial writers, and then returns to his routine.

RADIO FOUND FILMS' RURAL RIVAL; PROPAGANDA IS HIT IN CHILD STUDY

Farmers Paying for Sets by Attending Fewer Motion Picture Shows, Wyoming Leader Says in Published Symposium

Radio as a strong competitor of motion pictures in the rural communities, bidding for the increased leisure time of the inhabitants of America's 6,000,000 farmsteads, is the picture presented this week in a symposium on the relation of radio to rural life. Farm organization leaders, editors, college specialists and others were among 250 agricultural authorities who cooperated in the survey.

The symposium has just been published by the Radio Institute of the Audible Arts, a public relations organization founded a year ago by Philco Radio and Television Corporation, "to cultivate a broader appreciation of the audible arts."

Alienated from Theatre

It was agreed that radio has alienated many farm dwellers from motion pictures, at least to some extent.

H. J. King, president of the State Farm Bureau of Wyoming, a large rural state, concluded after a statewide study:

"It is surprising to find how many families have more than paid for their radio BY ATTENDING FEWER PICTURE SHOWS, being perfectly satisfied with the entertainment that comes over the network."

Harold M. Finley of the Los Angeles Times noted that most of the farm folk in California "can easily get to the bright lights and movies," but "they undoubtedly devote more of their evening time to listening in on musical and other programs on the air than do urbanites."

Keeps Them at Home

Floyd H. Lynn, secretary of the Farmers Educational and Cooperative Union of America, wrote:

"Automobiles and good roads have tended to take farmers away from home. The radio, on the other hand, tends to keep these same folks at home. It is, therefore, a counter influence in its relationship to those influences which have come with mechanical and scientific development and which have had the tendency to eliminate or stifle the social life and identity of rural communities."

C. M. Douglas, editor of The Transylvania Times of Brevard, N. C., said that "entertainment is the principal shortage in the average farm home, and in this way the radio is doing a great work in rural sections."

Arch S. Merrifield, editor of Better Farm Equipment and Methods, added: "Those who lived in rural communities 20 or 25 years ago, when the traveling circus, the home talent play and the church 'sociable' afforded the principal forms of entertainment, can well appreciate the social, cultural and educational advantages of the modern radio."

Listening Groups

From many sections came reports of "listening groups" in rural neighborhoods. Not only is the broadcast heard but it is supplemented by group discussions.

However, radio programs as entertainment for rural listeners, especially in the evening hours, can stand considerable improvement, a number of contributors said. Typically, T. B. Symons, agricultural extension director at the University of Maryland, hoped "that the radio will not become so commonplace that they will fail to turn on the radio from a sense of habit in not desiring to hear several of the programs that are uninteresting, and in consequence miss those that are most appreciated."

Among the findings were that the farmer possesses the same general alignment of cultural interests found among city listeners; that he prefers high class music to jazz; plans his listening more seriously than do those in the city; and uses his radio a greater number of hours, because of the nature of his occupation.

The concentrated listening periods for the farmer, the survey showed, are the hours after the evening meal. In several cases, however, it was recorded that he takes his set with him when he works indoors or in the barn.

Radios Return with Business

Edmund deS. Brunner, professor of education, Teachers College, Columbia University, pointed out that at the very beginning of the improvement of business conditions in rural America, radios went back into service. In Iowa, for instance, he found the number of farm homes using the radio increased 20 per cent between New Year Day of 1934 and the same day in 1935.

From other sections of the Middlewest, however, it was reported that because of the sharp drop in farm income many farmers cannot afford radios. William Hirth, publisher and editor of the Missouri Farmer, Columbia, Mo., said that "in these desperate times not one farmer in 20 (in Missouri) can afford and maintain a radio." And H. J. Gramlich, acting dean of the College of Agriculture of the University of Nebraska declared that "it has been necessary for many Nebraska farmers to temporarily discontinue use of their radio."

Musicals Sure to Stay, Says Sears

With "every producer on the alert to find new material" there is less talk of cycles now, Gradwell L. Sears, southern and western sales manager of Warner Brothers, told the sales forces of those territories at their Kansas City meeting last week.

Mr. Sears said that "the whole industry can be proud of itself for its handling of musicals" and that by the releasing of an average of one in every six weeks "the public is not surfeited with musicals, which are here to stay."

The sales staff joined in discussion of fourteen Warner pictures to be released in the next four months. In order of release they are: "Dangerous," "Captain Blood," "Ceiling Zero," "Petrified Forest," "The Story of Louis Pasteur," "Colleen," "The Singing Kid," "Anthony Adverse," "Sons O' Guns," "Charge of the Light Brigade," "Green Pastures," "Hearts Divided," "Walking Dead," and "Over the Wall."

S. Charles Einfeld, advertising, publicity and exploitation director, also conferred with the men.

Listeners Must Guard Against Propaganda, Though the Children's Programs are Improving, Says Child Study Head

Radio listeners must guard against propaganda broadcast along with entertainment, but programs for children show "distinct evidence of efforts to improve the radio's offerings along the lines demanded by an increasingly informed public."

Those are the chief conclusions of the radio committee of the Child Study Association of America, in a survey just completed for the Radio Institute of the Audible Arts.

Films Prime Interest

In a previous report, Mrs. Sidonie Matsner Gruenberg, director of the Association, while attempting to prove that school children up to about 14 years of age give radio a high place in their calendar of amusements, conceded that motion pictures are still the leading entertainment of juveniles, quoting from a study of the amusement preferences of 3,500 children in New York schools. (HERALD, July 13, 1935.)

The committee concerned itself primarily with analyzing and listing programs intended for children up to 13 years of age.

The committee concluded: "A development which tends to complicate the parent's problem of managing the radio is the intrusion of propaganda. There are programs which are entirely acceptable in themselves as to entertainment or as to music, but which more or less subtly present political, social or economic issues with a definite bias as to which some parents will take exception.

"Increasingly we may expect the public concern with war and peace, with public or private ownership of utilities and with many current political controversies, to be reflected in the sponsorship of radio programs."

Programs were selected by a committee of adults and checked by children serving as "junior reviewers." Programs approved were Singing Lady, Popeye the Sailor, Billy and Betty, Bobby Benson and Sunny Jim, Buck Rogers in the Twenty-fifth Century, Let's Pretend, and Girl Scouts.

The following adult programs were approved as suitable for children: Little-Known Facts About Well-Known People, Roses and Drums, Dream Drama, Dog Drama, Echoes of New York Town, Alexander Woollcott, Vanished Voices, and Hendrik Willem van Loon.

For special interests the following were listed: Animal Close-Ups, Chats About Dogs, Bird Talk. News and sports broadcasts selected were: Junior Radio Journal, Boake Carter, Gabriel Heatter, Edwin C. Hill, H. V. Kaltenborn, Lowell Thomas, Ted Husing, Stan Lomax, Eddie Dooley, Lou Little, Fritz Crisler and others.

Jolson Back On Air

Al Jolson will return as master-of-ceremonies of the Shell Chateau radio program January 4th, replacing Wallace Beery.

THE CUTTING ROOM

Advance outlines of productions nearing completion as seen by Gus McCarthy of Motion Picture Herald's Hollywood Bureau

Klondike Lou

(Paramount)

For showmanship purposes this title, particularly in relation to the picture's star, Mae West, is of more than usual value as a medium of quickening potential audience interest.

Quite naturally Mae West, who as common to all her starring pictures wrote the story, from an idea suggested by Marion Morgan and George B. Dowell, and did the screen play and dialogue, is the feature's dominating exploitation factor. In the language of the publicity department it's a story of "Mae who starts a heat wave north of the Yukon, and answers the call of the wild in a sizzling story of the coldest country on earth." Surely that is a definite cue of what to expect.

Actually it is the story of Frisco Doll, queen of San Francisco's Chinatown in its most hectic days. Innocently though circumstantially involved in a murder, she escapes on a northbound boat captained by Victor McLaglen. To evade police and trailing murderers whose identity she knows, she takes the name of a settlement worker who died en route. From then on it is a colorful, exciting saga of her adventures and misadventures in the roaring Yukon as an all-sweetness-and-light doer of good deeds, in an atmosphere that is hoped will give the star the funniest of all her roles.

While Miss West and McLaglen, who probably will be appearing in "Professional Soldier" about the same time this picture is released, are the standouts from a name value point of view, the supporting cast is worthy of showmanship consideration. Listed in it are Harold Huber, Phillip Reed, Lucille Gleason, Helen Jerome Eddy, Harry Beresford, Conway Tearle, George Walsh and Edward Gargan. Also included are Soo Yung and Tetsu Konai.

Music and lyrics by Gene Austin and Sam Coslow will be sung by Miss West and Phillip Reed.

Direction is by Raoul Walsh, recently credited with "Every Night at Eight" and "Baby Face Harrington."

Don't Bet on Love

(Radio)

In story idea this is comedy romance. To fulfill that purpose, it has a unique plot premise which is promising of much hilarious amusement. A harum scarum young fellow bets his uncle that, clad only in his underwear and penniless at the start, he can get from New York to Los Angeles within ten days time and in the same period meet and become engaged to marry a beautiful girl.

Story is an original by Kenneth Earl with screen play by P. J. Wolfson and Philip Epstein. Direction is by Leigh Jason.

Players in the production are Gene Raymond as the boy; Wendy Barrie as the girl he meets, woos and wins. Helen Broderick is her aunt and William Collier, Sr., will be seen as Raymond's uncle. Morgan Wallace and Eddie Gribbon are a pair of escaped convicts upon whom the picture's only comedy drama sequence is centered and Erik Rhodes is the man from whom Raymond steals the girl.

Being produced solely for the purpose of amusement, with no other idea than to generate the maximum amount of laughter, the picture is depending upon the manner in which the various situations are merged to attain that result. Thus, while there is definite exploitation value to the title as well as cast names, the spot showmanship is being concentrated in the situations. Among the many that can be made available for showmanship are the surprising initial meeting of the boy and girl; the cross country auto trip; the cider drinking contest between Raymond and Miss Broderick; the episode with the escaped convicts; Raymond's selling of his reward for ten per cent; sequences in an airplane and the final hectic race against time sequence in Los Angeles to win the girl and collect the bet.

Red Apples

(Tentative Title)

Warners

The idea of which this production is woven, is anticipated as one that will arouse better than usual audience and showmanship interest. Primarily, it is not being produced with any pretensions of being a so-called "big" picture. Nevertheless, it is the intent that the attraction shall include elements in the way of natural fun and love interest that have a direct and quick appeal to those who are primarily concerned with being amused.

The production is based upon a stage play, "Apple Sauce," which was written by Barry Connors and which has been adapted to the screen by Ben Markson, with William McGann in the director's chair. In reality it is a character comedy. It deals with the experiences of a young fellow to whom work is something to be studiously avoided, but who, having a flair for flattery and cajolery, manages to do pretty well for himself in the worlds of love and business. Knowing just how to "red apple" everybody, he manages to get his very practical rival off his neck, confuse and mortify his rival for the affections of the town belle and through a rare streak of luck that sometimes comes to those who are apparently doing nothing, invent an apple-packing contraption that makes him some sort of a scientific-commercial genius.

Ross Alexander, currently in "Backfire," and recalled for his role in "Shipmates Forever," is featured in the lead. As Anita Louise is the object of his affections, Richard Purcell will be seen as his rival. The role of the uncle is played by Joseph Cawthorne, with Gene Lockhardt, Alma Lloyd, Mary Treen and Craig Reynolds listed in the supporting cast.

Rose Marie

(MGM)

MGM considers this production one of the most important on its program, one providing all the essentials for showman and patron to cause it to rank with "China Seas," "Mutiny on the Bounty" and other late successes. Co-starring Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy it has from a production credit standpoint much in common with "Naughty Marietta."

The same producer, Hunt Stromberg, is functioning in a similar capacity. W. S. Van Dyke, who made "Naughty Marietta," is directing. Thus four persons who contributed much to that picture are prominent in this. The combination should augur well for the production's entertainment and exploitation worth.

The show, which is a musical, with a logical dramatic romantic plot, was originally a stage presentation. The book on which it is based is by Otto Harbach and Oscar Hammerstein, II. The adaptation is by Alice Duer Miller, with screen play by Albert Hackett and Frances Goodrich, who did "Marietta," the music by Rudolph Friml and Herbert Stothart.

The production, which in the main was photographed against the scenic beautiful backgrounds of the High Sierra Mountain country, spins to the tune of heart warming romance, vivid drama and the spectacle of pageantry. It tells of a grand opera singer who, tiring of the world's acclaim, goes into the Northwest to find romance and love with a member of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

As the well remembered "Rose Marie" song hits, the title number "Indian Love Call" and "Song of the Mounties" are retained, in sequencies with Allan Jones, remembered for his work in "A Night at the Opera," Miss MacDonald sings operettic arias from "Romeo and Juliet" and "La Tosca." Gilda Gray is presented in modern specialties, "St. Louis Blues," "Dinah" and "Some of these Days."

The supporting cast, in addition to those mentioned, includes Reginald Owen, James Stewart, Robert Greig, Una O'Connor, Lucien Littlefield, Alan Mowbray, Halliwell Hobbes, David Niven, Herman Bing and Paul Porcasi.

Preview

(Paramount)

In idea this story is mystery melodrama. There's nothing brand new about that premise, but in the opinion of the producers there should be plenty to stimulate patron interest and exploitation attention in the wheres, whys and hows of its happening. Even in these situations, though a familiar background is used, belief is that there will be plenty that is absolutely different.

The production has a Hollywood picture making background. A famous picture star is killed while attending a preview. The director is murdered on the lot. Police isolate the studio and during the time their investigation is underway the entire personnel, from executives to laborers, are compelled to live within its walls. While there is undoubted patron interest in such a situation and the manner in which a wise cracking reporter finally solves the riddle, there should be an equal amount in the manner in which, for substantiating detail, intimate glimpses are given into the technique of movie making and the habits and idiosyncrasies of many of the screen's most famous personalities.

The title being one that should provoke quick public interest and more or less generally establishing the feature's locale and atmosphere, it is the evident intention of the company to concentrate on story value and revelations of intimate inside stuff in its publicity campaign. Accepting that as a cue, worth of cast names will not be overlooked. While but few of the players are high rank draws, the names, for most purposes, are adequate. Those to be seen include Reginald Denny, Frances Drake, Ian Keith, George Barbier, Rod LaRoque, Gail Patrick and Thomas Jackson, who are among the better known members.

EXHIBITOR MADE ROBOT, SAYS ALLIED IN NEW DRIVE AGAINST BLOCK SALES

New "White Book", Issued Just Ahead of Opening of Congress Session, Calls Pettengill Bill the Solution

With Congress opening its winter session January 3d, Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors this week launched a new campaign for the Pettengill and Neely bills in its fight against compulsory block booking and blind selling.

The "Allied White Book," stating in a foreword that "we believe that the subject matter of this booklet is of interest and concern to every person into whose hands it may fall," is replete with nine divisions of material and in addition Appendix A, consisting of the text of the Pettengill bill, Appendix B with a list of endorsers and finally a Glossary as Appendix C.

Under a section defining the subject, Allied officially states that "not only does compulsory block booking enable the distributors to pass on all losses to the exhibitors and consumers, but it enables the Big Eight virtually to monopolize the playing time of the theatres and thus to exclude independently produced pictures from the screens." Similarly, of blind selling the charge is made that "the Big Eight" . . . force the exhibitors into contracts to accept and publicly exhibit pictures without sample, warranty or any information whatever as to what they may expect or as to the suitability of the pictures to be delivered."

The exhibitor, says Allied, is reduced "to the status of a robot" by these practices "and any attempt to hold him to responsibility for the pictures he exhibits inflicts upon him the onus of matters wholly beyond his control."

Of the Legion of Decency movement and the Production Code Administration, Allied charges that "the condemned pictures had mostly been played by the first-run producer-owned theatres and the wrath of an aroused public fell upon the independent exhibitors, who had nothing to do with the making of those pictures and no choice but to exhibit them in accordance with their contracts—unless, perhaps, they chose the alternative of bankruptcy." Allied adds that "the gesture made by Mr. Hays toward allowing the exhibitors to cancel such pictures was only a gesture."

The Allied White Book names as evils of compulsory block booking the following:

"It forces the showing of undesirable pictures.

"It prevents the showing of many highly desirable pictures.

"It deprives the local or neighborhood exhibitor, acting with the advice and cooperation of his patrons, of all discretion as to the kind of pictures he will exhibit."

Contrasting conditions of 1935 with those of 1922, Allied cites 800 features from 24 distributors in the earlier year as against 300 to 350 features in the current year, and then asks the exhibitor and the public: "Have you stopped to realize that the introduction of 300, or 250, or even 150 worthwhile features would rid you of 90 per cent of the evils in the 1935 picture?"

After further exposition of results of the selling practices, the booklet goes into definitions of the Pettengill bill and then, in a chapter headed "Big Eight Propaganda Exposed," refers to "two anonymous booklets" defending block booking which it traces to the Hays office. It adds that "Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer had circularized the exhibitors urging opposition to the bills," and that "one Ed Kuykendall, head of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, accompanied by a representative of the Hays Association, has toured the country in a campaign against these measures."

Five Films Barred by Kansas Censors

While numerous deletions were made in features and shorts, no major company's films were disapproved in entirety by the Kansas State Board of Review, according to its report for the last fiscal year.

The censors did, however, find five films distributed by state rights exchanges or independent companies that fell short of the standards set in Kansas, and banned them in full. These were "Broken Lives," Majestic; "Dillinger, Public Enemy No. 1," "Outlaws of the West," "The Pretty Boy Bandit" and "A Nous la Liberté."

Miss Hazel Myers, board chairman, pointed out that "A Nous la Liberté," wellknown French Production directed by René Claire, failed to measure up to the Kansas censor laws and the industry's Production Code, and the film was unacceptable from both viewpoints. The censors held that the picture suggested a bad moral lesson in describing a prison break by a criminal and his subsequent wrongdoing without compensating punishment.

The moral content of films as a whole has improved materially since the Production Code Administration became effective, recently said Miss Myers, but product of small independent companies still invites major surgery. The Kansas board objected to a generous sprinkling of oaths in some British-made films. Otherwise the censors find them generally wholesome.

The board reversed its stand of previous years and approved without elimination four world championship fight pictures.

A large proportion of the deleted scenes and dialogue had reference to liquor or unfavorable observations on prohibition. Kansas still is a prohibition state.

Nudity, reference to anticipated "blessed events," scenes of bruality or criminality, indecent suggestion and dialogue, profanity and blasphemy comprised the bulk of other cuts.

New Drives by Congress Waited

by FRANCIS L. BURT

Washington Bureau of The Herald

New drives against the motion picture industry are expected to be launched during the session of Congress which convenes January 3 for its final session before election.

Anti-block booking legislation will be brought to the fore by the organizations which last year prepared measures giving the Government control over the industry through the formation of a Federal commission.

A new phase is expected to be interpolated by the introduction of legislation dealing with the patent situation, on which hearings have been held the last few months by committees headed by Congressmen Sabath of Illinois and Sirovich of New York. The Sirovich investigation received a serious loss of prestige when it developed that two of his most important assistants were men interested in patent suits against the companies he was investigating. As a result, his investigation of film and sound patents was brought to an abrupt conclusion.

Industrial Control Bills

Of major importance to the industry will be the expected Administration proposals for industrial control, designed to regain some of the ground lost through the invalidation of the recovery codes. Prominent among the measures which are expected to come up in this connection are those providing for the adoption of the 30-hour week and for acquisition of a federal license by all corporations engaged in interstate business.

While the question of taxes may be discussed at length, it is not anticipated that any new revenue measure will be sought by the Administration.

Measures Carried Over

A number of measures affecting the motion picture industry are pending in Congress, having been carried over from last session. Chief among these in importance, of course, are the bills aimed at block booking and other practices, providing for the creation of a Federal Motion Picture Commission, and modernizing the copyright law.

Other bills pending would lift the ban on interstate transportation of fight films, prohibit public performances by jurors who have served in criminal trials, amend the Clayton act to prohibit unjust or unfair price discriminations so as to apply to the film industry, establish a Department of Science, Art and Literature, require the recording of patent pooling agreements and contracts, and investigate all activities of the motion and sound picture industry. The three last-named measures were authored by Representative Sirovich.

TECHNICAL ADVANCES IN INDUSTRY FORESHADOW SWEEPING CHANGES

Marked Tendency Toward Higher Budgets and Longer Shooting Schedules Permitting Greater Care in Technical Treatment

Recording, Reproducing, Color and Lighting Standards Show Improvements of Basic Nature and Detail During Year Past

Nineteen thirty-five has brought almost complete recovery from the depression's setback to the laboratories of the technical engineer and inventor from which flow the tools and machinery that advance the science of the motion picture.

In addition to a multitude of detail improvements, the year brought forth a number of technical advances of a basic nature; and although there was no change even approaching the completeness of the introduction of sound, none the less, certain of the year's innovations foreshadow sweeping changes which may logically be expected in the relatively near future.

The depression caused a curtailment of engineering activities, or, if developments were reported, they were ordered in most instances held in abeyance by the large companies, because of their reluctancy to pay out during the period of stress any huge sums for changeovers or readjustments in existing equipment. That attitude has now given away to a willingness to support new practices which will advance the motion picture to fuller technical perfection.

Reviewing the advances made in 1935, especially in studio procedure—which has a direct bearing on the technical quality and nature of the product eventually received by theatres, the American Society of Cinematographers in Hollywood notes considerable progress during the year, both in production and exhibition science, reporting as follows:

Sound

A general improvement in sound-quality has been noticeable.

Both Western Electric and RCA developed so-called "push-pull" recording and reproducing methods productive of more natural quality, lessened ground-noise, and a much greater volume-range. The system used in conjunction with Western Electric recording was developed by Douglas Shearer, A. S. C., and his associates of the MGM studio, where it is in use.

In consequence of these high-quality recording methods, it is understood that several major studios are supplying two types of release-prints: one carrying the "push-pull" sound-track, for theatres equipped with reproducers and amplifiers capable of reproducing from such a track, and a re-recorded version for theatres with older equipment.

An interesting development was the Miller-Phillips Mechanographic recording system. This uses a stylus to cut a mechanical record in an opaque coating on the film, which record can then be either re-recorded mechanographically or printed photographically for releases. Greater resolving power and consequent improved quality are claimed.

The Berndt-Maurer Corporation introduced a new type of oscillograph (galvanometer) recorder which may be substituted for a glow-lamp, and produces a variable area track.

Considerable use was made of vertical cut ("hill-and-dale") disc recording for recording musical selections, and some studios used acetate discs similar to home-recording phonograph records for immediate playbacks.

The renewed interest in color cinematography brought the problem of high-quality film records on color prints to the fore.

16 mm. sound-on-film appeared at last to be wresting substandard supremacy from the more unwieldy sound-on-disc. A number of new 16 mm. sound-on-film projectors—all using the RCA single-perforation standard—were introduced. Among them are such familiar names as Bell and Howell, Ampro, Victor, DeVry and the like.

Bell and Howell announced the formation of a 16 mm. sound-film library, while reports indicated that British and other producers were reducing their 35 mm. theatrical releases to 16 mm. very quickly after general release of the 35 mm. version. A Hollywood producer, Edwin Carewe, formed a company to produce religious features for 16 mm. non-theatrical release.

Bell and Howell perfected a reduction printer for optically reducing sound-tracks to 16 mm., and DeBrie, of Paris, entered the American field with reduction printers, developing machines, and other substandard apparatus.

Projection

Professional projection problems seemed heightened by the increase in density, and the consequent need for more intense light, resulting from natural-color films. Partly to meet this need, National Carbon Company developed several new types of projection carbons, and lamp manufacturers, optical firms, and the like contributed advances in projection-lamps, condensers and lenses.

In the substandard field, a general increase in the power of projection-lamps was evident. 16 mm. projectors of 1,000 watts were introduced, and 8 mm. projectors of 300 and 400 watts placed on the market.

With the increased use of 8 mm. cameras, a new interest in projectors capable of interchangeably projecting 8 mm. and 16 mm. film became evident in many quarters.

Film Standards

In the United States, five dimensional standards now are well established. The professional standard of 35 mm. film, with the so-called "Academy Aperture" and a standard .084-inch sound-track, is well known. In the amateur and non-theatrical fields, two 16 mm. standards apply: the familiar 16 mm. for silent films, and the RCA 16 mm., with one row of perforations eliminated and the edge of the film utilized for the sound-track, for sound-on-film. Two standards are known in the 8 mm. field: Eastman's original type, in which specially perforated 16 mm. film is split lengthwise after processing, resulting in a projection-standard of 8 mm., single perforation film; and the newly-introduced Bell and Howell pre-split 8 mm. film, in which both camera and projector use single-perforation stock 8 mm. wide.

Abroad, in addition to these standards, several others are found in the substandard field. Among these are the Pathe "Rural" 17.5 mm. non-theatrical standard, upon which a sound-track is sometimes added by suppressing one row of perforations; a 16 mm. sound-film in which both perforations remain, and sound-track and picture are in the same relation as in standard 35 mm. film; and Pathex 9.5 mm. amateur film, which is center-perforated.

Sponsored by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, a movement took root to standardize release-prints on 2,000-foot reels. Despite the cost of the new equipment involved in theatres and exchanges, important economies are anticipated, and several of the major distributing firms have agreed to make such a change for domestic releases after the first of the year.

Color

Professionally, the major interest in color was centered on Technicolor's three-color process, the only three-tone method commercially available; but a considerable amount of undercover development work is under way by both studios and color-firms. With both "La Cucaracha" and "Becky Sharp" showing sufficient financial success to warrant the added expense of color photography and laboratory work, several American firms—notably Pioneer, Walter Wanger Productions and Selznick-International—have scheduled a large group of color features for early production. The number will probably total nearly a score. Abroad, Technicolor is erecting a plant to handle negative development, daily and release printing in England, and Alexander Korda's London Film Productions is reported to be planning an entirely Technicolor program as soon as facilities are available, with other producers likewise interested in using the process.

With major-studio interest centered in Technicolor, independent producers and makers of short-subjects are giving various two-color processes a new lease on life. Coincidentally came improvements in some of these systems which, had they occurred before the commercial advent of three-color cinematography, would have been of front-rank importance. Among these are the use of single-coated prints and dichrotic dyes by Cinecolor and the Dunning Tri-Tone process, the introduction of the Harrison Multichrome system and the Gilmore system, both of which produce two color-separation negatives on a single film by use of optical units which divide the picture into two half-size images, rotated 90 degrees and occupying one normal frame; printing is done optically, with the images restored to normal size and position, superimposed and colored subtractively.

Regal Productions are producing a program of eight independent features in Consolidated's "Magnacolor" (Bipack) process, and a number of shorts, Spanish-language features, etc., have been made in Vericolor and other similar processes.

In the substandard field, Eastman's new "Kodachrome" 16 mm. process (not to be confused with the earlier, two-color process of the same name abandoned many years ago), is undoubtedly the outstanding achievement. This is a monopack, three-color subtractive process, involving the use of a multilayer film and intricate laboratory processing, but imposing no special requirements in taking or projection. It is understood that intensive research is under way to transform this reversal process to one which can be used professionally.

Almost simultaneously, Dufaycolor was introduced. This three-color process makes use of a ruled mosaic color-screen, and the material is available for 35 mm. and 16 mm cinematography and for many types of still photography. It is understood that some professional productions using Dufaycolor sequences have been made in England.

Methods

There has been a marked tendency toward longer production-schedules and more generous

FILM TECHNICS MAKE LONG STRIDES budgets, permitting—if not actually demanding—the exercise of greater care in the technical departments.

There was also a definite increase in the number of location-made "Class A" productions, and in the utilization of bona fide exterior scenes rather than stage-built exteriors or process shots.

Although, for various reasons, the Technicolor "boom" which, early in the year, many expected to follow the release of "Becky Sharp," the first three-color Technicolor feature, did not materialize, the later months have seen a revival of interest in all-color films, with several in production, and at least a score projected for the coming season. Abroad—especially in England—enthusiasm for color is reported at a high point.

In several studios definite progress was made toward standardization of photographic equipment.

Influence of Foreign Elements

The influence of foreign elements was not as marked as it has at times been in the past. Production in England made notable advances, economically, artistically and technically, drawing heavily upon Hollywood for expert technicians of all kinds, especially cinematographers, special-process technicians and make-up artists.

The tremendous interest in natural-color cinematography shown by the British film industry is directly responsible for the creation of a British branch of the Technicolor Corporation, and indirectly is undoubtedly an accelerating factor in the revival of Hollywood's interest in color.

Lighting

With faster films in use, there was a marked tendency toward the use of fewer lighting units, but more efficient ones, and simpler lightings. The arc made notable gains in monochrome cinematography, due to the introduction of more modern equipments.

Mole-Richardson introduced the "Junior Solarspot," a Fresnel-lensed 2,000-watt unit producing a remarkably even beam of high power, which is rapidly supplanting the 18-inch parabolic-mirror reflector sunspot. A similar 5,000-watt unit known as the "Senior Solarspot," is being introduced.

The same firm developed a Fresnel-lensed arc spotlight known as the "Hi-Arc," which is rapidly superseding both the 80 ampere rotary-carbon condenser spotlight and the 24-inch (reflecting) sun arc. Although developed primarily for color cinematography, this lamp has been extensively used in black-and-white productions.

The "Vitachrome," an interesting, double-reflecting portrait lamp (1,000-2,000 watts) was introduced by A. C. Jenking.

Two high-power professional photoflood units were introduced for industrial and location use. They are the "Artreeves," made by the Hollywood Motion Picture Equipment Company, and the Mole-Richardson "Cinelite."

In the amateur field, Lights, Inc., and Bell and Howell made available a range of aplanatic (faceted) metal reflectors for use with photoflood globes.

Laboratory Methods

The commercial application of the involved processing required for Kodachrome 16 mm. color-film, which is stated to involve more than 35 separate operations, was undoubtedly one of the greatest achievements in the laboratory field.

Competition from studio laboratories appears to be forcing the modernization of commercial plants.

The Eastman Kodak Company introduced the "Argentometer," a device for determining the silver content of hypo solutions. A buffered sodium sulfide solution is added to a standard quantity of the solution to be tested, which is then placed in the argentometer, in which the altered transmission of the solution alters the reading given by a microammeter connected to a photronic cell.

Several laboratories have been experimenting with photocell-densitometers. In some instances, such devices are understood to be used commercially controlling the processing of sound-track.

LOS ANGELES MUSEUM HAS CHAPLIN FIGURE

The life-size figure of Charlie Chaplin, modelled by Katherine Stubergh, has been accepted by the Los Angeles Museum. The museum has for some time been in possession of the first complete costume worn by Chaplin on the screen—baggy pants, tight coat, derby hat, oversized shoes and cane—and it was for the purpose of representing the comedian in his costume that Miss Stubergh was commissioned to make the figure. Chaplin himself will supervise the dressing of the figure.

Stereoscopic ("Third Dimensional") Cinematography

Nothing of any commercial importance has been done in this field, though it is known that several studios, among which may be mentioned MGM and Universal, have conducted experiments with various processes behind locked doors. At the fall convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, an experimental stereo process involving the use of polarizing spectacles similar to Eastman's "Polo-Screens," was demonstrated. MGM released a Pete Smith novelty short-subject entitled "Audioscopics," in which a third-dimensional process securing the effect by complementary-colored images and spectacles, was used.

Raw Materials

Eastman introduced "Super-X" panchromatic negative film. This product, which was originally intended for use in photographing "transparency" or projected-background process composites, has come into general use for production camera work. It is rated as 40 per cent faster than the previous supersensitive emulsion, with slightly different color-sensitivity characteristics, and requires an average of two minutes longer development.

Agfa introduced a 35 mm. reversal-type panchromatic film, of excellent characteristics. This product was intended primarily for the making of background projection "key plates." However, due to the general need for post-development control of the density and contrast of these keys, the film has not been commercially used to a great extent. It is, however, spreading into the miniature-camera field with considerable success.

Agfa also introduced "Finopan" negative film, a medium-speed, fine-grain panchromatic emulsion which is meeting considerable success as a film for transparency-background keys.

The Agfa firm likewise introduced an infrared sensitive film which has been excellently received, and "Portrait Superpan" cut-film for "still" photography.

The introduction of "Kodachrome" and "Dufaycolor" color films (the former available only in 16 mm., the latter in 16 mm., 35 mm., and roll, pack and cut-film) was of considerable importance.

In the substandard cinefilm field, aside from the advent of Kodachrome, Bell and Howell's introduction of pre-split 8 mm. "Filmopan" was the greatest innovation.

Pellex introduced what is claimed to be the fastest panchromatic emulsion yet produced in "Super-Pellex," which is given a Weston-meter speed rating of 50 for daylight and 40 for tungsten light. In common with all Pellex-films, it is of the reversal type (16 mm.) and coated with the "Triplex" anti-halation backing, a part of which is left after processing to reduce projection flare.

Cameras

The Twentieth Century silent camera, developed by Grover Laube and others of the Twentieth Century-Fox studio, was probably the outstanding camera development of the year.

In the substandard field, Bell and Howell's "Straight Eight Filmo," using pre-split 8 mm. film, set up a new 8 mm. standard.

The Fearless Camera Company, of Hollywood, produced an interesting custom-built professional type 16 mm. sound-on-film camera.

Abroad, the Zeiss "Movikon" exhibits many excellent features, especially a built-in range-finder coupled to the lens after the fashion of a miniature camera, and the Siemens and others introduced inbuilt photocell exposure-meters interconnected with the diaphragm controls.

Accessories

The most startling innovation in this category was the development of the Eastman "Pola-Screen," a device for controlling glare, reflections, etc., by polarizing light.

Improvements in blimping were noted at Warner Brothers and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, and various forms of synchronizing lens and finder for follow-focus shots came into general use.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer developed an intermeate-sized camera-crane adapted to location work and high-speed transport as well as to studio use.

The Fox-Fearless "Velocilator" became standard equipment in many studios here and abroad, replacing tripods and earlier types of small cranes.

Lenses

Bell and Howell introduced a new super-speed lens for professional use, the new Taylor, Taylor and Hobson "cooke" f:1.3 "Speed Panchro."

Process Cinematography

No basic developments were noted, though many detail improvements were made by individuals and studios. Several films, released or in production, include unusual special-effects problems. Among them may be mentioned "The Last Days of Pompeii," "The Invisible Ray," "Peter Ibbetson," "A Midsummer Night's Dream," "Transatlantic Tunnel" (British), and "The Shape of Things to Come" (also British).

Art Direction

"Becky Sharp" proved that much of the success or failure of natural-color films will depend upon intelligent art direction, and it is generally conceded that the future of color rests on the shoulders of the art directors and the cinematographers.

PUBLIC VIEWS WITH INTEREST FIRST TELEVISION THEATRE IN AMERICA

United Artists Theatre in Los Angeles Presents Unique Exhibit After Regular Show and Patrons Are "Televised"

The American public now is taking up the matter of television as an entertainment medium in the country's first television theatre, the United Artists theatre at Los Angeles. And thereby Thomas D. Soriero, the manager, becomes America's first television showman.

"Television in its present stage is only a scientific novelty and a curiosity, as far as the public is concerned, but television equipment on display and in use within the theatre by the patrons makes good publicity for any house and entertains as much; those who see it marvel at it." That is the opinion of Mr. Soriero, who has installed the first television exhibit at his house in California.

The exhibit is in two parts, he explained: "The first part is a complete television transmitter and receiver. The second part consists of six television telephones and a television telephone switchboard, all of which is set up in the lounge rooms in the theatre basement.

"The patrons, after witnessing the regular show, visit the television exhibit, which is set apart from the rest of the theatre. Five times a day a lecturer comes up onto the stage, just before the showing of the feature picture, and there explains television and tells patrons that at their convenience they may file down into the 'television theatre' where all may be televised. The United Artists theatre is, therefore, the first theatre in the United States ever to show television and television telephones to the public.

"These television telephones are similar to ordinary telephones with the added feature that the parties may see a picture of each other on a small screen attached, the while carrying on their conversation in different places in the exhibit. The television telephone switchboard appears to be especially interesting to the public because through it it is possible to see the pictures of all the parties in the different booths, as well as to hear what they are saying. The entire equipment weighs about 8,400 pounds and costs approximately $75,000 (see photo)."

Mr. Soriero, who addressed his remarks in explanation of the technical and merchandising aspects from an exhibitor's standpoint, concluded, however, that, "theatres do not need to fear any invasion by television for some years to come—anywhere from five to ten years—as it is now much in the same stage as motion pictures were when they first came out, when the pioneers had to work hard to educate the public to go to see them." Mr. Soriero said he is "one of those pioneers."

"What is most amusing to me," he added, in describing results at his theatre, "is the fact that usually the people going into the television booths at the exhibit first thumb their noses at each other and make 'wisecracks,' and how the young ladies' faces turn red when they

First television equipment to be installed in a motion picture theatre arrives at the United Artists Theatre of Thomas D. Soreiro, Los Angeles. It cost $75,000, weighs about 8,400 pounds, and was operated for patrons, all of whom were invited to be televised, independently of the regular screen performances.

Television Field Alive with Many New Developments

THE while Californians this week were eyeing with much curiosity America's first television theatre, as described in the adjoining column, a dozen new developments threw the spotlight on the subject from other angles, both in this country and abroad.

The Federal Communications Commission at Washington, where applications now are trickling in daily for television licenses, indicated that the new problem child of the communications family is finally preparing for the long stride it must take from the nursery to the outside world.

Television applications are being turned down unless the subject contributes substantially to advancement of the art, although the Commission said unofficially that "we now have good laboratory television," and that most of the problems of the development have been met under laboratory conditions.

Indications that several stations may inaugurate television transmission next spring were also heard. It was said, however, that the immediate barriers to widespread reception will be high cost of receivers and limitation of transmission to distances of from four to five miles. The American Telephone's coaxial cable is expected to lengthen transmission distances. The FCC has not yet ruled finally on the Telephone corporation's application for a license to continue experimentations.

The American Standards Association's new committee on radio-electric coordination has finally taken up the problem of radio interference with television. They will develop a new set of standards to reduce or eliminate these "man-made" interferences, with manufacturers, radio set owners and broadcasters.

Unless something is done to curb this interference, the cost of television equipment, both transmitting and receiving, will be prohibitive, according to the Association.

The scientific committee of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, in Hollywood, met and presented accounts of demonstrations current television system which they witnessed recently.

One of the major activities of the subcommittee the past few months has been to watch the progress of television development, and to compile a record of available information of various systems, from which it is planned to issue a report in the near future on television as related to the motion picture industry.

Possibilities within reach through introduction of television on a broad scale were outlined by Andrew W. Cruse, chief of the electrical division of the United States Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

His predictions for television included:

1. Neutralizing ether waves to kill all sound, both indoors and outdoors.
2. Transmission of pictures at the rate of 3,600 a minute.
3. Action pictures flashed from planes flying realize that the television operator who is in on the main switchboard can see both parties and listen to what they are saying, and that their conversation was not a secret between the two participants!"

"Television," continued Mr. Soriero, "is exactly what the word implies. That is, 'tele,' meaning far away and 'vision' meaning sight. So you have the word 'television' meaning to see far away just as you have 'telephone meaning to speak far away and 'telegraph' to write far away.

"Television is not, as a good many people believe, a recent idea," he added. "In fact, since earliest time man has always wanted to be able to see what was happening in another place or, if possible, to look into the future. You can probably remember in 'Tales of the Arabian Nights' how they tried to accomplish this by gazing into magic crystals.

"On record as early as 1884, a German inventor, Paul Nipkow, actually tried to transmit a picture. Of course in his day and age he didn't have the equipment that we consider commonplace today, such as vacuum tubes, photo electric cells, etc. So, from Nipkow's time until about 1925, when vacuum tubes became more or less common, very little was done in the field of television.

Calls It Husky Infant

"Television today is still in its 'infancy.' It is comparable, you might say, to the radio of 10 or 15 years ago. However, it is quite a husky infant, and anyone who is commercially minded can readily see what it will mean to the business man in the future, when he can not only talk about his merchandise over the air, as he does in radio, but can demonstrate it as well. Students will appreciate its value in the future when the outstanding and eminent professors can not only address the members of their classes, but can also be seen and heard by thousands of other students. Even today it is possible to send talking pictures so that some time in the future one will sit at home and see the latest movies as well as current events and stage productions.

"The way a picture is transmitted is by dividing it up into so many thousand small particles, then analyzing, transmitting and receiving each one of these parts separately and individually. Imagine, for a moment, having 45 horizontal and 45 vertical lines drawn through a picture. That divides it into 2,025 small squares, each one of which is an element of the picture, can be analyzed, transmitted and received as such. We analyze these elements by the amount of light that they will reflect; that is, at the transmitter there is a pencil of light equal in diameter to one of the elements, and it is a known fact that whenever light strikes an object, a certain percentage of it will be reflected. The amount will be determined by whether the element is smooth or rough, dark or light. We catch reflected light energy and focus it on electric eyes or photo-electric cells. They change the reflected light energy into electrical energy and we amplify the electrical energy by about 1,500,000 times, at which point it is sent to the receiver. At the receiver there is a crater arc tube which changes the amplified electrical energy back into light energy. Then the only problem is to put this light energy in its proper position on the receiving screen. This is accomplished by means of synchronous motors.

Synchronous Motors

"Everyone is familiar with synchronous motors in their simplest form: electric clocks," he continued. "We use the synchronous motor at the transmitter to move the pencil of light which does the analyzing. We use another synchronous motor at the receiver to move the pencil of light which rebuilds the picture. The speed of this transmission is approximately the speed of light, namely, 186,000 miles a second.

"Although there is never more than a single element in transmission or appearing upon the screen, it is possible to show a complete picture. This is due to a feature of the eye, known as persistence of vision, which enables the eye to retain an image for approximately one-tenth of a second. Other industries beside television utilize this feature of the eye. Few people realize when they watch a moving picture for two hours, that the picture is actually on the screen for less than one hour. In fact 55 per cent of the time the screen is totally dark."

New Developments Many and Varied

over battle fields showing the trend of conflict to officers sitting in headquarters.

Mr. Cruse is said to be the Government's outstanding authority on television, and this year completed for the United States a study of the medium in England, Germany, France and Holland.

He predicted that television will be an aid rather than a deterrent to motion pictures and will develop a greater number of first-class actors for the screen.

Problem of Supply

Television producers will not be able to depend on film producers for their programs, Mr. Cruse asserted, explaining that present domestic production, plus imports, would provide material for only three hours' television daily. On the contrary, he predicted, the necessity for perfect performances of television players in contrast to retake allowances in Hollywood's studios, will require the development of a higher type of talent from which the screen will recruit.

"Television is not going to keep people away from the film or legitimate theatres any more than radio broadcasting or home movies," he declared.

Sees Other Fields Open

Many fields other than that of entertainment will be open to television, Mr. Cruse told a convention of combined engineering societies at Schenectady last week. He enumerated the future possibilities of its use by astronomers, the army and navy, ocean salvage expeditions and noise elimination in homes, factories, hospitals and public buildings. The greater field for the new art, he added, may be found in these uses rather than in entertainment, the cost of which, as television nears perfection, is a source of increasing anxiety to television engineers and experimenters.

First showings of television in Paris the other day drew tremendous crowds to five spots. Admission was by free tickets distributed by the Minister of Posts and Telegraphs, but the ticketholders had to exercise considerable patience before they were able to see the screen.

The programs were broadcast from the Eiffel Tower and were shown on screens measuring seven and a half inches by eight and a half inches. Only 30 persons at a time could see them. The entertainment was made up of stage numbers such as songs, dances and comedies and lasted two hours.

The French television apparatus can also reproduce films. A seven-metre wave length with one kilowatt power is used. The scanning has 180 lines with 25 frames per second. The sound is synchronized with the pictures and is broadcast at ordinary wave length from the Eiffel Tower by Station PTT. The sound can be picked up by home receiving sets.

Programs are to be continued every Sunday at 5:30 and 7:30. The showings are purely experimental as the screens are too small for a big development. Home television will probably be limited for some time, as receiving sets in France cost about $400.

Establishing Laboratory

With the conviction that television is not far off, and that its introduction will revolutionize the amusement industry just as sound did in 1926, Max and Louis Graf, of San Francisco, are establishing a television laboratory in their electric transcription plant there.

The Grafs were well known independent film producers some years ago, operating a studio in Hollywood and at San Mateo, near San Francisco. For several years they have managed Titan Productions, manufacturing records and electrical transcriptions.

David Sarnoff of RCA, who has been busy expressing predictions in the press about the future of television, told the New York Times, which published his remarks in a copyrighted story that New Yorkers will see by television within five years, but as far as the immediate future is concerned, Mr. Sarnoff said the pessimists now have a little the better of the argument. The technicians who understand the problems ahead are the pessimists, he asserted, and the optimists are those who know little of the problems. But looking a little ahead, Mr. Sarnoff declared "we are all optimists.

British Conference Called

From England came word that the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association has taken first steps to call a conference with producers, distributors and representatives of the Baird and E.M.I. television interests in order to protect trade interests in the event films are used for television.

The association is particularly concerned about the television of news films and hopes to effect an agreement on the basis of the suggested standard contract clause that no news film shall be televised until three months after the date of the last booking.

And the Scripps-Howard newspapers reported that, anticipating that television is close at hand, with a great need for engineers, technicians, mechanics, service men, the National Schools of Los Angeles, with offices in Radio City and Boro Hall, Brooklyn, announced that it had increased its facilities here and throughout the country.

At the home office in Los Angeles the National Schools maintain a complete television broadcasting studio, which students are taught to operate, it was said.

Associated Press reported from Minneapolis that Professor James Webb, of the University of Minnesota, said television would be an actuality by next spring.

RUSSIA PLANS $40,000,000 STUDIO; PROPAGANDA FILM FIGHT IS RENEWED

Project Will Be Located in Crimea or Caucasia for Scenic Advantages; U. S. Technicians and Equipment Used

The largest motion picture studio in the world—as large as any two or three company properties in Hollywood—is to be built on the shores of the Black Sea in Southern Russia, according to Vladimir I. Verlinsky, president of Amkino Corporation in New York, the liaison organization here for the All-Union Motion Picture Trust of the Soviet republic.

It will be a new city, rivaling Hollywood in facilities and extent, Mr. Verlinsky said. Construction is scheduled to start in 1936, as part of a building program on which Soviet Russia says it will spend between 15 and 20 billions of dollars in the coming year. It represents the largest expansion in the Soviet industry's 15 years of existence.

The "new Hollywood" will cost 200,000,000 to 300,000,000 rubles. This, at the rate of exchange effective early in 1936, will be equivalent to between $40,000,000 and $60,000,000, and in valuation of Russian materials and Russian labor represents $130,000,000 to $200,000,000.

Doubles Film Investment

The expenditure will be more than double the total investment in Soviet production facilities since the beginnings of the industry in 1919.

A site will be chosen in Crimea or Caucasia, where climatic and geographic conditions approximate those of Southern California. In that region may be found lofty mountain ranges, deep forests, snow-capped peaks, sandy steppes, rivers, sea and a variety of other scenic advantages.

American equipment manufacturers are expected to benefit since the Soviet motion picture trust has decided to purchase all its technical equipment here.

U. S. Technicians to be Employed

American laboratory technicians are to be employed. Mr. Verlinsky has forwarded to Moscow a list of 30 technicians he interviewed recently in Hollywood who expressed a willingness to work in the Soviet studios. Mr. Verlinsky said he did not know how many would be chosen.

Two Hollywood film engineers are already in Russia. Herbert Houston, an inventor of developing machines, has been signed for one year, and Leon DeBeaulieu, an inventor and builder of the same type of equipment, arrived this week in USSR under a two-year contract. He formerly was in the Twentieth Century-Fox studio laboratory.

The Russian industry also has obtained rights to patents controlled here with a view to improving production methods, and new processes are being adopted.

The rapid expansion of the Soviet industry is indicated in the fact that while 300 features and some 120 shorts were produced in 1935, the industry plans in 1937 to increase production to 1,000 features and a large number of shorts. The stress, however, will be on features. During 1935 the number of studios increased to 19, allocated to state districts.

Film production has been ordered to keep pace with the planned construction of 40,000 additional theatres by the end of 1937, in a program aimed to bring sound films to the remotest parts of the country. There are now some 30,000 theatres in the seven federated republics, only 4,000 wired for sound.

Development of the Russian film industry is entirely a product of the post-revolutionary period. In Czarist Russia production was almost unknown and comparatively few motion picture theatres existed. With the state-controlled industry came the era of propaganda films, designed to stimulate revolutionary spirit and industrial achievement under the Five-Year plans.

150,000 Employed

The cinema industries in the USSR now employ 150,000 persons. In 1935 Russia's own factories produced nearly 300,000,000 feet of film stock of all kinds, which is 53 times greater than in 1931, said Mr. Verlinsky. Raw film manufacture covers every domestic need.

An international conference of motion picture engineers will be held in Moscow next spring in conjunction with a cinema festival.

Through Amtorg Trading Corporation, New York, the Soviet's export and import organization, the USSR has given Radio Corporation of America an order for radio equipment and machinery totaling $2,000,000. The contract is chiefly for receiving sets and equipment.

VERLINSKY CONFIRMS CHAPLIN'S STAND

Vladimir I. Verlinsky, president of Amkino Corporation, supports Terry Ramsaye's exposition in the December 7th Motion Picture Herald regarding the furore aroused by Boris Z. Shumiatski, head of the Soviet film industry, and the thunder on the left engendered by Reds and Pinks over the alleged influence Comrade Shumiatski claimed he had had on Charles Chaplin in producing his forthcoming "Modern Times."

Mr. Verlinsky said this week that in a seven-hour conversation with Chaplin recently in Hollywood, Chaplin told him he makes pictures solely for entertainment, that Chaplin believes he is a comedian and nothing else, and that as far as he is concerned, his pictures are entirely devoid of social significance.

Six Arrested for Picketing in New Orleans Include Three Tulane Students, and State Secretary of Socialist Party

While Communists and pacifists this week were renewing their attacks upon the screen, and police, patriotic societies, the American Legion and church leaders were condemning Russian productions on the ground of revolutionary propaganda, Thornton Delehanty, motion picture editor of the New York Post, was making the observation, in print, that whether a film is propaganda or not depends upon one's point of view, upon the sympathies of the viewer.

In Detroit, Soviet films are definitely banned. But in New York, Chicago, New Orleans, Philadelphia and other large cities the Reds, Pinks and pacifists are urging boycott against newsreels and feature pictures which they consider hostile to their cause.

"A Russian picture without propaganda would simply be no picture at all," said Mr. Delehanty, "and yet I wonder if the Russians themselves are aware of the ulterior purpose in which their film fare is guised.

Calls Sympathies Determinant

"The question whether or not propaganda is sinister depends entirely on the sympathies of the audience. A person violently opposed to matrimony might regard the conventional 'happy ending' in pictures as a concerted effort to put marriage over on the public. . . .

"An outstanding doctrine in the films is hero-worship, and for a long time we had underworld dramas in which the gangster was idealized. Then, to show our broad-mindedness, we turned around and began idealizing the men who put the gangster out of business.

"It seems unfair to pick on the Russians for their propaganda films when we have an excellent example of our own in 'So Red the Rose.'"

Six Arrested Picketing

In the latest skirmish of radicals against "Red Salute," United Artists-Reliance film which has been the object of a concerted attack by radicals in a number of cities, six persons were arrested while picketing Tudor theatre, New Orleans. Three were seniors at Tulane University, among them Mrs. Louise Jessen, state secretary of the Socialist party.

A petition, signed by 100 Tulane students and presented to the authorities, described the arrests as "illegal." "Red Salute" was attacked as "un-American" and "openly in favor of war," in another petition presented to the Tudor management.

Dr. Mack Swearington, of the Tulane faculty, called on Mayor Walmsley to prosecute the persons ordering the arrest of the pickets.

The Film and Photo League in New York and the Film Forum in St. Louis are among groups sponsoring showings of Russian product.

In Hollywood "The New Gulliver," a Soviet propaganda film in which an army of puppets are the actors, was shown privately to an invited audience of about 200, among them many directors, studio writers and players. The picture ran several weeks in New York.

SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS

This department deals with new product from the point of view of the exhibitor who is to purvey it to his own public

Riff Raff

(MGM)

Comedy Drama

Here's the kind of modern geared picture the like of which has not been seen on the screen for some time. In a way it's a daring adventure; not that its moral value should be subject to question by any but the most straightlaced, but nevertheless it has a definite vestige of daringness, more ribaldry than anything else, with which to set off unusual popular enthusiasm for the show.

Actually it's the story of a couple of lugs, a fellow and a girl who, no matter how tough and hard boiled they appear, are none the less human. As their experiences in living life are detailed upon the screen, many entertainment qualities are precipitated. The action is vivid, dialogue crisp, brittle and pointed and some of it of the quality that may provoke gasps; there's comedy that is comedy, drama that's drama, romance that's real love interest, human interest to touch anybody's heart for an occasional tear amid the successive storms of laughter, and enough excitement to sate the appetities of the most avid sensation seekers.

The title keys the tenor of the story and the characters it presents, common folks. It's a waterfront story and the people are all waterfront people. Dutch is an ace tuna fisherman. Hattie is the voluptuous, volatile Venus of the fish cannery. She's madly in love with him, a state which, however, does not prevent her from accepting presents from Nick, boss of the works. Dutch sort of likes Hattie, but plays around with other girls and Hattie has strange and surprising ways of demonstrating her affection.

Anyway, after Dutch has a hand in settling a threatened strike, he and Hattie marry. Getting funny ideas of his own importance, he gets his fisherman mates in a jam that results in his being expelled from the union and fired by Nick, who still figures he'll grab Hattie for himself. Deserting Hattie, who is forced to return to the shack occupied by her father Pops and sister Lil, Dutch makes for the open spaces. Hattie, after a while, goes searching for him; she never quite catches up but she does learn that her roaming spouse needs money. To get it she steals and is sent to the pen.

There a baby is born and given into the care of Pops and Lil.

Hattie makes her escape, thinking Dutch has planned it. Like a returning bad penny, Dutch comes back to the water front, as does Hattie, who hides in Pop's hovel. Neither knows of the other's presence. Through the kindness of Brains, Dutch gets a job as watchman on an oil tanker. There he frustrates a plot to dynamite the ship, and is pretty well battered up . Meantime the cops have caught up with Hattie.

As dignity is handed a tough wallop in the picture, it should be sold with the kind of campaign that convinces patrons of its character. Any possibility of moral objection should be eliminated by telling audiences that the story, its situations, action and dialogue are handled with realism, sincerity and truth.

Previewed in Alexander theatre, Glendale, a first-run suburban house in which many previews are shown. The audience, a cross section of patronage in similar localed theatres though definitely preview goers, was enthusiastic about the showing.

Comedy

Fun in a girls' school is the tune to which this adaptation of Alice Duer Miller's "Charm School" spins. Always light and gay, breaking up its straight story continuity with cleverly interpolated gags, it bubbles and froths merrily. Built to catch the fancy of the masses, with a particular intent to stimulate the curiosity of the younger folks, it provides quite a bit of entertainment and plenty in the way of novel story idea and established cast names for advertising and exploitation purposes.

In the yarn, Jerry Craig, happy-go-lucky playboy, no matter what the state of his fortunes, inherits a girls' seminary. Not knowing what to do about it, but anxious for a whirl at a new adventure, Jerry decides to look the place over with his valet, Sourpuss, and a newspaper pal, Scoop, whose chief previous job was that of keeping Jerry's more hectic escapades out of the papers. On the way, they pick up Joe Penner, a chap who has more money than ideas how to spend it. The school is a typical seminary attractive only to Jerry in that it houses a demure, mouselike secretary, Miss Hay.

Deciding that the only way to put the place on its feet is to scrap old educational theories, Jerry and his pals transform it into a charm school. The student body is given illuminating lessons in all that the modern girl should know. Courses are instituted in the art of makeup, smart clothes, wearing, riding, dancing, polo playing and how to make love in the 1935 mode. Student Dorothy, showing remarkable proficiency in all classes, makes a hit with Penner. And when under the spur of Scoop's great advertising campaign, the school becomes a sensational success, Miss Hay can do nothing but accept Jerry as a man to be admired.

Fast moving, peppy with music and dancing and other colorful sustaining assets provide appeal for those who like their entertainment amusing. Ideas for clever exploitation that should do much to attract attention are to be found in large quantities. The more trick stuff used, the better should be patron reaction.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

(Warner-Cosmopolitan)

Comedy Drama

Plenty of the stuff audiences like to see upon the screen is provided here. Likewise it has more than enough potential exploitation values in story content, names and production features on which showmen can base interest-compelling campaigns. Essentially, dealing with aviators and commercial aviation, it is comedy drama with a thrill action motivation. Though long in running time, it moves with an attention gripping pace. Marked by splendid individual performances, which several times caused the preview audience to interrupt with applause, and spectacular production effects, the story has a tense sympathy stimulating human interest quality. It is soundly produced, there being ample evidence of careful preparation with a view to establishing quality screen merchandise.

The setup is ideal for James Cagney and Pat O'Brien, who have established themselves as one of the outstanding current screen teams. O'Brien is boss pilot of Federal Air Lines. Locating his old wartime buddy, Dizzy Davis, he offers him a job. Dizzy, still a pushover for the ladies, makes a characteristic harum scarum arrival at the air port, bringing down upon himself the wrath of a Government inspector and causing Jake no end of trouble with the line's big boss, Stone. Though Dizzy, greatly respecting Jake, makes promises to settle down, he can't resist girl lure. All agog about air hostess Tommy, Dizzy shams sickness to keep a date and Jake sends Tex, third of the trio, out on a run. Trapped in a fog with ceiling zero, Tex crashes to death, an incident that brings about a thrilling dramatic speech by Tex's widow, Lou.

Heartbroken at the tragedy he has caused, Dizzy determines to atone for it. During Jake's absence from the field at a time when the line is experimenting with some new safety device to be used under the worst possible weather conditions, Dizzy replaces the pilot assigned to the test. Without a parachute he takes off in a blizzard. By radio, in sequences that are vividly dramatic, he keeps Jake informed of his progress. The de-icing apparatus proves only partially efficient. As Dizzy strives to maintain altitude and reach safety, the plane becomes overloaded with ice. The radio goes dead and Dizzy crashes to death, but not before he has conveyed information that will make blind flying safer for other fliers.

Showmanship elements of the picture are the worths of a good thrill story, excellent individual performances, suspense created by throat tightening drama and punchy production values. There is also hilarious comedy, just enough but not too much love interest and a definite trend of understandable human interest. —McCarthy, Hollywood.

Comedy Romance Drama

Keyed to a pitch of warm human interest, this nicely developed comedy romance drama has much to make many hearts glad. High in sympathy stimulating quality, it's that kind of show which, in blending its various elements, aims to provoke smiles and light laughter. Built on a semi-hokum formula, it's of the character that usually gets under the skins of the masses. As it treats of ordinary human beings involved in situations that might happen to anyone, all traces of forced or artificial theatricalism are intelligently eschewed. Of particular potential appeal to family type audiences, it also affords much to engage the attention of the sophisticates. At the same time, it gives the exhibitor who likes to sell his shows plenty in the line of story content and cast names with which to work.

The locales are rural New England and New York. Like many country girls, Jenny Yates is stage struck. Besides her own natural inclination to be an actress, she has the inspiration of her dead mother's unrealized dream urging her on. Two forces work against her. Her stern grandfather, Uriah, will not countenance such an ambition. Knowing that if she ever goes on the stage, he'll lose her, Jenny's bumpkin sweetheart, Michael, tries to discourage her. While she is attending a little theatre performance, Michael locks her out of the house, so contriving the situation that it appears as though Uriah is responsible.

Jenny runs away. She is found hiding in the rumble seat of Philip's car. As he was the only person to encourage her ambitions, she pleads with and succeeds in getting him to take her to New York. There, spurred on by sympathetic Emily Tipton, Philip persuades producer Fisher to give her a chance. Interluded by several dramatic and comedy incidents featuring a laugh packed boasting contest between Uriah and Philip's father, the show goes on. Instead of it being the tear jerking melodrama Jenny expected, it turns out to be a ridiculous burlesque. Heart broken Jenny rushes from the stage into the arms of Uriah. Homeward bound, Philip is found hiding in the rumble seat of the car. He pleads for a chance to win Jenny. The finale is a definite indication that he will not plead in vain.

While not a pretentious attraction, the show is one in which audiences are quite apt to find more entertainment worth than they sometimes do in more elaborately staged features boasting a host of sock names. Nevertheless names are adequate and results of previous pictures in which Anne Shirley has been seen, particularly in the neighborhood and smaller town theatres, should give exhibitors plenty of confidence in the possibilities of this.

Previewed in Pantages theatre on Hollywood Boulevard to a mixed Christmas shopper audience which reacted favorably to the showing.

The Perfect Gentleman

(MGM)

Comedy

A picture predominantly one of comedy, involving an impoverished former major in the English Army and a music hall performer, this production succeeds in capturing, due chiefly to the fine characterization by Frank Morgan, comedy that should appeal to audiences, whether American or English. The story first appeared some eleven years ago on the pages of the Saturday Evening Post, and was then titled "The Prodigal Father." It was written by Cosmo Hamilton, well known novelist, and was rewritten into play form by Edward Childs Carpenter. The locale of the story is London and various small countryside towns of England.

The major, while down on his luck, is ever happy and expectant that his ship will soon come in. It does arrive in the form of a stage performer, who becomes a success in London with the valuable aid of the major, with whom he teams with a good deal of public acclaim until, rearing their heads in protest, the family as represented by the major's sister and Vicar son put a stop to the goings on.

The cast fits excellently into the story and while it is all English with the exception of Frank Morgan it has names that are well-known to American audiences in American productions. Besides Morgan the cast includes Cicely Courtneidge, comedienne of the English stage and screen, Heather Angel, Herbert Mundin, currently in "Mutiny on the Bounty." Una O'Connor, Richard Waring and Henry Stephenson. Exploiting the picture as straight comedy with emphasis on the name of Frank Morgan would seem to be the best method of approach to the selling campaign. It would seem appropriate, too, in some situations, to point out that, despite the locale and Anglican cast names, the picture was made in Hollywood.

In the story, Major Horatio Chatteris, accustomed to the best and ever remindful of past exploits in the army, is in an impecunious state, has lodgings over a fish shop, and is wary of his creditors. Fleeing London he repairs to the home of his son, a vicar in a small village, but the reception is decidedly cool. He returns to London by train. On the train he strikes up an acquaintance with April Maye, singer and dancer, who is to make her debut on the London stage. The major promises to be on hand the opening night. The opening night arrives and April, instead of arousing the audience to applause, is jeered, but the major saves the situation by getting on the stage and winning the theatre going public's acclaim.

April and the major form a team and have a great success in the music halls. They visit the major's son at his home and arrive just as the vicar and the major's sister are leaving to attend a garden party given by the bishop of the community. April and the major invite themselves to the party and are the cause of spoiling it when their efforts to auction off furniture end in discomfiture for the bishop's guests. They return to London but the major is visited by his sister who convinces him that his present life is ruining his son's career in the church. The major leaves April and the act and is very shortly where he began, impoverished. The son is promoted in the church and marries. The major attends the opening of April's new show and later backstage they profess their love for each other and decide to marry.—Mooney, New York.

Interesting

An interesting short of the Stranger Than Fiction series, number 17 has a particularly good shot of thoroughbred fish racing in which the fish have individual lanes in their race to the tape. Harvard tennis players try out a new court device which automatically returns the balls to the server. In Lawrenceville, Ga., the County Court House, has had six new fences in its ninety years all due to the whittling tendencies of the natives. Also shown are glass blowers, a community run on electricity, a golf course that has an automatic elevator to take the players to the fairway, a fly that feeds on the destructive earwig, a dog with three tails and last but not the least a farm that instead of harvesting crops contains an array of ghostly figures.—Running time, 9 minutes.

Good

In this Oswald Cartoon, Oswald is relegated to the background and two little lambs take the spotlight. The lambs, rebelling against a steady diet of spinach, steal away from home seeking more palatable food. They encounter Mother Hubbard but have no luck for her cupboard is bare. Jack Horner has a large pie but he insists on all the plums for himself. They relieve a pieman of his pies and when he starts in pursuit they use the pies as ammunition. Oswald and Humpty Dumpty join the pursuit and they in turn are pie-slapped. The lambs get a taste of their own medicine when Oswald goes into action.—Running time, 7 minutes.

40 MILLIONS IN 3 HOURS FOR BRITISH FLOTATION

Result of Share Offering of the National Provincial Cinemas Reflects New Invesment Attitude of England's Bankers

by BRUCE ALLAN
London Correspondent

Indicating alike the amount of money in London banks awaiting investment opportunities and the new commercial estimation of film enterprises, the result of National Provincial Cinemas' recent share offering was highly significant.

The amount asked was £357,500 ($1,787,500) for £325,000 £1 6 per cent cumulative preference shares at a premium of 2/-, or 10 per cent. The lists were opened at 9 a.m. and closed in a few minutes on a full subscription. By midday the amount offered had reached £8,000,000 ($40,000,000). The market price of the shares at opening was 24/- and rose during the first day to 33/-.

The enormous demand for this issue is even more clearly indicated in the details of the share allotments actually made, which were as follows:

Asked	Allotted
1 - 100	Nil
101 - 1000	20
1001 - 2000	30
2001 - 5000	50
over 5000	100

There was a preference in the allotment to shareholders in the associated companies, Union Cinema Co., Ltd., and Oxford & Berkshire Cinemas Ltd., which between them also absorbed 1,000,000 ordinary 5/- (dollar) shares.

Changed Attitude

A very few years ago, film enterprises of any type had the greatest possible difficulty in obtaining finance from City sources and the suggestion of an appeal for public money would have been regarded as a bad joke. Even after the passing of the Films Act, prospectuses based on the rosy future of British production for a secured market were received in a decidedly lukewarm way. It is generally believed that the underwriters of the Gaumont-British flotation were left in the first instance with 80 per cent of the shares and, at a considerably later date, a well covered A. B. P. issue also failed to fill.

Today, with theatre issues in the offing demanding at least £6,000,000 and possibly £9,000,000 it is a practical certainty that the public will absorb the lot and ask for more. Simultaneously, good money is being put into "private" companies on a scale new in the history of the trade. Just how many millions of pounds sterling are involved in these enterprises it is impossible to state exactly, but certainly, if all the studio plans recently announced are realized, production alone will absorb from £3,000,000 upwards in 1936.

Typical of the sort of enterprise which does not find it necessary to go to the public for money is Amalgamated Studios Ltd., which is erecting a large service studio at Boreham Wood at a cost of £500,000 ($2,500,000), providing eight 200 x 100 feet floors, two review and re-recording theatres of 1000 seat capacity, sixteen cutting rooms, four projection theatres, individualized administration facilities, workshops covering 20,000 square feet and 20 acres of exterior lot.

Behind this project, which will begin to function before next summer and be completed by October, 1936, are Major Charles H. Bell, E. A. Stone and S. H. Soskin, and the construction is being undertaken by Sir Robert McAlpine & Sons.

Major Bell is a well known cinema consulting engineer. He was in control of Paramount's first British studio at Islington (now the Gainsborough studio), and has been associated with the design and erection of Paramount theatres in England.. Mr. Stone is a wellknown theatre architect. Mr. Soskin, a Russian by birth, is a financier and ship-owner and uncle of Paul Soskin, producer of "While Patients Sleep" and "Ten Minute Alibi" who was recently announced as having taken over production of half of the British and Dominions features to be made for United Artists release.

Concentration Expected

It may be expected that in due course all B & D productions for United Artists will be made in the Amalgamated studio. That Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's directly produced British pictures also will be located there is another probability, and Major Bell's association with Paramount indicates, as something like a certainty, that when that company renews serious British production it will be at the new plant. Major Bell comes to New York in February.

B & D Changes Policy

British & Dominions' annual report emphasizes the change of policy which seems to be indicated in the Amalgamated plan. It has been found desirable, it is stated, for the company to produce certain of its films in association with other companies, and it also has been found remunerative to lease space in the B & D studios to independent producers. The situation seems to be developing that a considerable amount of the floor space there will be occupied by Herbert Wilcox Productions and other companies, several of them associated with C. M. Woolf—General Film Distributors, while B & D will itself make films at Amalgamated.

B & D's balance sheet shows a loss of £37,031 against a previous year's profit of £80,000; the debit is due to the fact that, against a revenue surplus of £41,096, there is a provision for depreciation of £78,127. Of this amount £58,836 applies to depreciation in film productions because "revenue anticipated during the period under review was not realized." No details are given but it is known that several B & D productions failed to obtain American release in circumstances where it might have been anticipated.

Booking Circuits Again

Since reaffirmation of its decision to refuse Gaumont-British the right to book for the H & G halls the Kinematograph Renters Society has made no new pronouncement regarding booking circuits, and the latest indication of distributor policy comes from a report to the General Council of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association from the legal committee of that body, which has had charge of negotiations with the distributors.

The committee indicates very definitely that the KRS is following a policy of moderation in applying to particular cases its own very drastic definition of a booking combine. This, in effect, applied that description to every booking arrangement which was not in the hands of the interest controlling share and voting rights.

"Practically all the cases which have been referred to the Association have now been admitted for booking purposes by the KRS," says the report, which also indicates that distributors have relaxed their "control" definition for the purpose of permitting an exhibitor to book for a new cinema which he has built with the aid of public money.

All this lends interest to the further statement that, in the case of Gaumont Super Cinemas (the specially floated company which absorbed H & G Kinemas, Ltd.) the KRS, in face of a CEA statement that this case also complied with its requirements, has disputed this statement "without giving any reasons."

"The action of the KRS in discriminating against this company is not understood," says the report ". . . It seems that anything that is not a booking arrangement, other than the Gaumont Super Cinemas' case, is likely to be accepted."

Distributors Protest

The obvious comment seems to be that if the legal committee of the CEA cannot understand the reason of the KRS determination to maintain its opposition to the G-B-Hyams deal, it is alone in its innocence.

Distributors are against this deal for the obvious reason that, if big circuits are allowed to book for other managements, they easily will be able, on the strength of their buying power, to rope in so many independents as to create a booking dictatorship. The KRS regards the principle as so vital that it is willing to accept the secession of Fox rather than to sacrifice it, and this attitude is understandable enough.

The real interest in the situation is, nevertheless, accurately diagnosed by the CEA Committee. To generalize its case against G-B, the KRS emunciated a series of general propositions which, applied regardless of circumstances, might have entailed the cancellation of booking arrangements of five, ten and twenty years' standing. They have met the difficulty by accepting the explanation of the interested parties in all cases except that of G-B.

There were rumors that a test case ultimately would be taken. Whatever plans the CEA had to this end are, presumably, suspended.

Agreement on Televised Films

Following conferences between news reel editors and the Council of the CEA this week, "complete accord" was announced on the subject of televised films. It is unofficially understood that, when the British Broadcasting Corporation starts experimental television early in 1936, the news reel companies will not supply films for transmission until a date later than their last display in cinemas. A similar agreement in regard to feature films can be expected.

A. T. and T. Suit Nears Close

Final oral arguments supplementary to the trial of the General Talking Picture suit against American Telephone and Telegraph, and subsidiaries, will be held January 13, 14 and 15 in Wilmington, Del., now that the defendants have been given additional time in which to file briefs. Reply briefs will be filed by General in advance of the date set for the opening of the oral argument.

A Collateral Pass By William Fox

Three blocks of securities, rights and credits which had been assigned to All-Continent Corporation by William Fox as collateral and security for debts owed by him to that corporation were purchased at public auction in Atlantic City last week by All-Continent. Eva Fox, wife of Mr. Fox, controls All-Continent.

Included in the transacton were 108,000 shares of old Class A Fox Film stock; 9,000 shares of Twentieth Century-Fox preferred; 4,500 shares of Twentieth Century-Fox common and some additional securities sold in a single block for $600,000. Real estate, credits due and maturing from American Tri-Ergon Corp. and other considerations sold in another block for $250,000, while a block of capital shares of Fox Chicago Realty Corporation brought another $5,000.

The sale was conducted by Paul M. Salsburg, president of Atlantic County Bar Association, as agent for All-Continent designated by former Circuit Judge Clarence L. Cole of this city. The latter declined to name whom he represented.

The All-Continent bidder, who declined to identify himself, was not opposed by any other bidder. No money or checks changed hands at the public sale, which led to the belief among those present that All-Continent would merely exchange the debts owed it by Fox for title to the securities it had bid in at the auction. It was assumed that Fox's indebtedness to All-Continent, thus, was in the neighborhood of $855,000.

Mr. Fox on Monday obtained leave to appeal from an order signed by federal judge William Bondy citing him for contempt of court and directing him to submit to oral examination at Toronto, January 6th. It was considered unlikely that the appeal can be heard before the U. S. circuit court of appeals within a month.

Mr. Fox was cited for failure to answer a subpoena served on him some time ago by Capital Company of San Francisco, which holds an unsatisfied $287,000 judgment against him for liability on the lease of the Fox, San Francisco. Attorneys for Capital Company have been endeavoring to question Mr. Fox on his financial status as a result of his alleged inability to satisfy the judgment. The former film executive is said to be under the care of physicians at Toronto. Judge Bondy ruled last week that Mr. Fox could purge himself of the contempt charge by submitting to examination by Standard's attorneys on January 6 at Toronto or some other mutually agreeable location.

Deitch Joins St. Louis Amusement

Joseph Deitch has been named by Leto Hill, supervisor of the St. Louis Amusement Company, as chief booker of the 20 local St. Louis houses. Mr. Deitch, formerly with the A. H. Blank circuit, in Des Moines, assumes his new post December 23. He succeeds Bess Schulter, who recently resigned to operate her two neighborhood houses. Morris Plessner, formerly neighborhood theatre advertising contact for the Star-Times, has replaced Al Zimbalist as advertising, publicity and exploitation head. Mr. Zimbalist has joined the Cinema Circuit in a similar capacity.

CALLS SHOWMANSHIP KEY TO ARTISTIC FILM

Kuykendall Says Exhibitors Want Finer Pictures; Says the Hollywood Intellectuals Set Pace

Exhibitors "want the screen to ever reach out for better and finer entertainment, but the industry cannot afford to get too far ahead of public taste nor to neglect the popular modern dramatic story as screen material," Ed. Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, said this week in the MPTOA Bulletin, in expanding upon the subject which last month brought out an expression of exhibitors in which the socalled "arty" picture of limited appeal was roundly criticized. (HERALD, issue of November 30th).

"I would not have anyone think that MPTOA is opposed to the progress of this industry towards the production of a finer and more artistic type of motion picture," said Mr. Kuykendall, who recently completed a long tour of key centers studying exhibitor reactions on product. "Artistic pictures do not fail because they are artistic; they fail because the producer forgets to put showmanship into them."

"Too often, I am told by experienced exhibitors, the fine expensive picture relies entirely for its entertainment and box office appeal upon spectacular scenes, beautiful (and expensive) costuming and photography, mass movements of actors, elegant and poetical dialogue, fantasy and intellectual discussion of philosophical problems, and forgets all about the essentials of dramatic suspense, human interest, romance and conflict of the sexes, and really funny comedy," he said. "In other words, the picture fails to tell a fascinating story, lacks kick and novelty, though it may be an 'artistic' triumph."

Elements of Good Entertainment

Many artistic and socalled "classical" pictures are outstanding successes because these elements of good entertainment are prominently present, many strictly modern pictures fail because they are absent. No matter how fine or artistic a picture may be, it is of little use to the theatres unless it provides genuine entertainment for the audience.

Caution must be exercised by the producers in not overdosing the market with too many spectacles, classics, fantasies and "high brow" pictures, generally lacking in human interest and dramatic suspense. The almost universal opinion among exhibitors is that the saturation point has about been reached in this type of picture. A further increase in the percentage of photoplays of this type will be disastrous.

"This is no plea for the ultra-sophisticated picture nor for injecting dirt and vulgarities to 'pep them up.' What is needed is a wide variety of stories, locales and the constant development of new and fresh ideas, but always emphasizing the fundamentals of good entertainment."

On the same subject of high standard story, Chester B. Bahn, motion picture critic of the Syracuse (N. Y.) Herald, recently chided the industry for its attitudes and practices which, he said, have continued to lay the industry open to the branding as "low-brow" whereas "Hollywood itself has been setting the intellectual pace, with marked if gradual improvement from season to season."

"Then, too," Mr. Bahn said, "the studio having brought a classic to the soundscreen, too often ignores common sense in formulating a sales campaign. The fact that it has a picture designed to appeal to a universal reading audience is, as a rule, impatiently brushed aside, and heavy emphasis is placed upon everything from the solid gold production and 'million dollar' cast to the story liberties taken by the adaptor and the director." Yet, he pointed out, "to tens of thousands of readers the story itself is the attraction."

Mr. Bahn followed with a long list of classic subjects planned by producers, forewording it with this caution: "You will quickly sense the opportunity which is Hollywood's to shed, once and for all time, its lamentable inferiority complex and establish its position as an honest merchant!"

Cites Screen Superiority

Of the stage play parallel, Gilbert Seldes, columnist, wrote recently in the New York Journal, "one reason the movies are successful is that they are made for money and the money comes from people who like movies; they are not made in the hope that they can be turned into good Sunday School lectures if they fail in the picture houses. That is what makes them different from plays which, as the critics more and more often testify, are being written in the hope of ultimate movie sales. It is like making a souffle and saying it will be a good pudding when it is cold. Drama, like souffles, must be served hot."

Mr. Seldes wrote of having attended two "much-praised" stage productions in one afternoon, "and figured they might make one good feature picture." He added that he had gone to two openings in one night "and found that both plays together wouldn't equal the amount of entertainment in an average double bill at a neighborhood house."

Young Reviewers Pick Classics

The Young Reviewers of the National Association of 4-Star Clubs, the junior review group of the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures, have chosen the following as the ten best pictures of 1935, listed alphabetically, and literary and historical masterpieces are by far in the lead:

The Crusades
David Copperfield
The Informer
Les Miserables
The Lives of a Bengal Lancer
A Midsummer Night's Dream
Mutiny on the Bounty
Naughty Marietta
Shipmates Forever
Top Hat

Runners-up were Broadway Melody, Alice Adams, Anna Karenina, Call of the Wild, The Dark Angel, Roberta and The Three Musketeers.

The Dumas, Shakespeare, George Eliot and their fellows were favored as sources for screen stories by 10,342 voting in a poll conducted by the Boston Herald-Traveler, while only 87 voted against picturization of the classics.

FILM UPSET RETURNS BULL RING TO FAVOR

Matadors Getting Rich While Strike Shuts Out Best Product from Studios of United States

by JAMES LOCKHART
Mexico City Correspondent

Bull fighting, which progressively lost favor with the increased popularity of motion pictures in Mexico during the past two decades, is retrieving much patronage as a result of upset cinematographic conditions down here, a prominent factor of which is the strike of clerical help and labor against the eight major American distributors that began on September 27th and is still going strong, entailing the shutting off of high grade screen entertainment from the United States.

The management of the largest Mexico City bull ring announces that its first three performances of the season, each held on a Sunday, the "gravy" day for motion picture exhibitors in these parts, had a combined gross of $64,750. This is a record revenue that has not been matched by the sanguinary "sport" of Old Spain in the Mexican capital since the days, 15 or 20 years ago, when the average Mexican man in the street would go without dinner and hock his shirt to raise the price to get into a blood and sand arena.

Diminishing Attendance

The crowds at the bull fights tell a graphic tale of diminishing attendance at the cinemas. The arena shows are nothing extra; they are neither worse nor better than those that have been presented during the past several seasons. But they are certainly drawing the crowds—and their money. Picture fans are finding that cinema fare these days is not much to their fancy. It has been demonstrated as an outstanding fact that product of independent American producers and those from England, France, Germany, Russia and Spain does not provide sufficient top material to the Mexican cinema box offices as prosperous as do the pictures of the ace United States studios. Hence hundreds, aye, thousands of Mexicans are returning to their old love; the bull ring.

There is much pessimism in Film Row over this situation, which at this writing, looks as if it is going to obtain for some time yet. Right now, the picture industry in Mexico is just twiddling its thumbs. The more optimistic exhibitors say that things will come their way from the bull rings when the strike against the major Americans is ended and when a definite settlement of the duties and taxes matter is obtained. But when those happy days are going to arrive, not even the optimists can predict.

The theatre in Mexico, which was moribund, if not worse than that, at the time the film situation went blue, is now showing signs of robust life. Better business than they have enjoyed in ages is being done by Mexico City stage houses. Musical comedies, revues and other girl-lingerie and even bare fact shows are getting a very profitable attendance. High brow diversions, such as concerts are also doing well. Reciters and lecturers are claiming more of a hearing than they had before the cinema commanded a dominant place in the Mexican amusement field.

Only neighborhood and other grind houses that can afford to undersell the theatres at such ridiculous prices as from seven to ten cents are able to ride over the stormy times.

Villa's Ghost

Gen. Francisco (Pancho) Villa, the gory guerrilla warfare chieftain who cut such a swath at home and abroad before meeting an early and violent death, and whose grotesque person and exploits have been the theme of many a motion picture, has bobbed into public attention by act of congress. As Pancho died broke, after having had his hands on several fortunes, the federal congress decided that Señora Austreberta Renteria de Villa, proven to be the only legitimate Villa widow, and their sons, Francisco, Jr., and Hipolito, shall receive a daily pension of $2.80 each for the rest of their lives. Numerous persons claimed a government pension on the ground that they are close Villa kin; but congress decided that only these three have a legitimate right to the stipend.

The stipend was awarded as a token of government appreciation for Villa's work in bringing about the downfall of Victoriano Huerta who usurped the presidential chair in 1916.

Mexican production has been somewhat slowed down by a strike that has lasted for several weeks, of employees of the National Motion Picture Production Company, operator of Mexico's largest studios. As a result of the strike, much work has come the way of a smaller studio operated in Mexico City by George M. Stahl.

Music Clubs Support Pons Picture

Exhibitors will receive the cooperation of 5,000 music clubs throughout the country in supporting and publicizing the Lily Pons picture, "I Dream Too Much," soon to be released nationally by RKO Radio, Mrs. E. H. Cahill, national motion picture chairman of the National Federation of Music Clubs, has written letters to all state chairmen, who in turn are giving full information and instructions to the various clubs in their districts.

Bartlett Returns to Erpi

W. A. Bach, vice-president of Electrical Research Products, Inc., Picture Consultants, has appointed Don Bartlett to a production post in his department. Mr. Bartlett returns to the Picture Consultants department of the company from Paramount where he held an executive production position with Paramount Pictorial.

Situation Clearing In Mexican Field

Major distributors are receiving the cooperation of the Mexican Government in their efforts to settle trade difficulties there and, consequently, will not withdraw from operation in that country at this time, it was said by Major Frederick L. Herron, in charge of foreign activities for the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, following a meeting of foreign distribution managers, held last week, in New York.

Information that the Mexican Government was cooperating was contained in a report submitted to the meeting by A. L. Pratchett, Paramount representative at Mexico City. He added that the labor organizations arbitrary policy is proving chief stumbling block in the distributors' efforts to resume normal operations. The action of the unions has kept Mexico City offices of the distributors closed since mid-September, despite the contention that only a minority of the organized workers favor a strike and national labor laws in Mexico require a majority vote on a strike.

Mr. Pratchett's report, offered encouragement on the basis of the Mexican government's willingness to aid in effecting a settlement and for this reason no action is being taken by the distributors on a withdrawal from Mexican operations.

Attending the meeting, which was held at the MPPDA, were George Weltner, Paramount; Mort Spring, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; Joseph Seidelman, Columbia; Robert Hawkinson, RKO Radio; C. A. Kirby, Universal; Joseph Hummel and Karl McDonald, Warner Brothers; Irving Maas, Twentieth Century-Fox; Thomas Mulrooney, United Artists, and L. J. Wooldridge, Educational.

154 on Warner Contract List

With its production roster the heaviest in years, the Warner Brothers-First National-Cosmopolitan Burbank studios in Burbank, Calif., report 154 under contract. These include 22 stars, 54 featured players, 20 directors, and 51 scenarists and 7 associate producers. The stars are Marion Davies, Leslie Howard, Dick Powell, James Cagney, Fredric March, Rudy Vallee, Warren William, Boris Karloff, Paul Muni, Joe E. Brown, Ruby Keeler, Claudette Colbert, Joan Blondell, Bette Davis, Claude Rains, Kay Francis, Al Jolson, Pat O'Brien, Edward G. Robinson, Guy Kibbee, Jean Muir and Gene Raymond.

Hal Roach May Increase Feature List, Says Loew

Plans are being considered by Hal Roach to increase his feature production from six to eight to 10 for next season, according to David Loew, vice-president. There is also a possibility of increasing the short subject schedule, currently 24 two-reelers, for 1936-37, Mr. Loew continued.

Because it has been decided four-reelers are not the best length, Mr. Roach's intention to make four 4,000-foot comedies with Laurel and Hardy have been abandoned, Mr. Loew also revealed.

Films Are Publicized to Death In Fan Press, Says Theatreman

Can't Shake Eucalyptus Tree Lest Feature Writers Fall Out, He Adds

by D. S. LAWLER
Director of Publicity and Advertising
Fox Midwest Theatres, Kansas City

Motion pictures are being publicized to death by faulty kinds of publicity, in the opinion of the writer of the accompanying article in commenting upon the protests of theatre publicists in Chicago that the newspapers there are showing favoritism to night clubs, beer taverns and the like in allotment of space on their amusement pages.

The criticism expressed in the article is not directed against legitimate publicity and advertising methods as employed by theatremen themselves, but the misguided extremes to which publicity has been extended (or permitted to extend) by "those higher up the scale".

"By the time a picture gets to a theatre," he complains, "its really salable elements have been so highly publicized there is nothing left to sell. So many peeps have been granted at knotholes in the fence that no desire remains to buy a ticket in the grandstand."

So the Chicago motion picture exhibitors are griping because they don't get an even break on publicity!

Just another example of the brilliant intelligence that characterizes the movie business from the inception of an idea until the finished production is played on its last double bill at the Cozy Theatre down west of the tracks.

They don't get enough publicity!

Ye gods! Every important wire service with a special correspondent in Hollywood. You don't dare shake a eucalyptus tree for fear a feature writer will fall out on your head. Candid cameramen and keyhole peepers all over the place. So many movie stars with radio contracts that it's cheaper for the broadcasting companies to move their main studios to the Coast than to pay the performers' expenses back and forth to New York. The newsstands plastered with fan magazines. The ten-cent store windows full of movie stars' pictures. Every national publication with a column, a department, a page or a feature article every month—with art. Songs from pictures plugged over the air and by dance bands from hell to breakfast. Everything from bellyache medicine to Rolls-Royce cars endorsed by this or that film celebrity. And a thousand self-appointed critics writing drivel about movies in the daily papers!

And we don't get enough publicity!

Publicity, hell! The cold, hard truth is, we get too damned much publicity. Even from the viewpoint of a man who makes his living at publicity, there's too much of it. It has long since passed the saturation point.

Says Glamour Is Gone

There isn't any glamour to the screen any more; no secrets, no mystery about screen personalities. The illusion, that precious and slender thread upon which hangs the whole past and future of the theatre, is gone.

We know what kind of freckle remover the movie stars use. What kind of cheap tobacco they say they prefer. What kind of toilet paper hangs on the bathroom wall. We know that this beautiful star is really cockeyed and bandy-legged—"Notice she never appears in a bathing suit or a short skirt!" We have been told that a half-dozen or so great lovers really wear toupees; that another has a wooden leg; that still another wears an artificial foot—"There, didn't I tell you! See that limp!" We know that when a play is produced on the New York stage, it's going to be made into a movie. When a new book appears, we are informed that the author is already on his way to Hollywood to help with the dialogue or the script for filming it. Magazine serials, most of them, are patently written with an eye on screen possibilities.

The Build-Up

The build-up starts on a production, sometimes, before a story is bought. Producers bid against each other until finally one gets the prize for the "highest price ever paid for screen rights." A new gag is to ask the public to cast the picture. A most recent example of that is "Anthony Adverse." Almost two years of build-up on that one before it's ready to start shooting. They're still crying "Romeo, wherefore are thou, Romeo?" for Norma Shearer's Juliet. Meanwhile, whatever happened to "Marie Antoinette?"

Before a picture is released, it's been written up (and down) in every fan magazine, by every Hollywood special writer; there have been behind-the-scenes shots in most of the national magazines, showing, in many cases, all the mechanical contrivances and tricks used to create an illusion—and destroying the illusion at one and the same time. The private lives of all the players have been exposed again. If it's a musical, the songs have been worn out long since on the radio. If it's a "literary" picture, it's been made a classroom task for most of the high-school students through so-called study guides. Who wants to see a movie after all that? There isn't anything left to see. It's about as good showmanship as booking the Siamese Twins for a personal appearance in their own home town.

Not enough publicity. The movies are rapidly and effectually being publicized to death.

Here's what I'd do, if I were Lord High Chamberlain of the Motion Picture Industry in America.

I'd quit buying space in the fan magazines. After a month or so there wouldn't be any more fan magazines, and Sophie Glutz would have to go to the theatre to find out something about her favorite movie star.

I'd cut out the radio contracts and the endorsement rackets. Who wants to pay money to hear or see anyone whose voice you can hear by turning a dial, or whose mug you can see by picking up most any magazine off your library table?

I'd not advertise a production in any national publication that had a feature writer in Hollywood or that printed a line about movies or movie personalities.

Bulk Newspaper Contracts

I'd buy newspaper space on a straight bulk contract basis, cutting my costs almost in half, and I'd cancel the contract with the first newspaper that printed a criticism or review of a program, either good or bad. Furthermore, I'd deal in the same way with any newspaper that printed a line about any movie star that wouldn't be judged as news if applied to any other individual.

In short, I'd make people buy theatre tickets to find out about movies and the people who make them. I'd restore some of the mystery, the glamour and the illusion to an art that has become, through publicity, as common as canned corn.

Then, when I booked a picture, no one would know anything about it except the producers, the players, and me. When I advertised it, I'd have something left to sell. It would be new, instead of being shopworn. It wouldn't have been prejudged in every prospective patron's mind. I could make it "sound good," for I'd know more about it than they do (now it's the other way around), and they'd want to see it. They'd believe my ads, and if I was honest they'd continue to believe them. Under the present system, motion picture advertising is about as effective as going into battle with a pea-shooter long after the Big Berthas have devastated the field.

These guys who are always screaming their heads off for more publicity (Chicago is only an immediate instance) seem to overlook the one important fact, that publicity detracts in the same ratio that it attracts. While you're selling 50 per cent of your public, you're telling the other 50 per cent to stay away.

And don't bring up that old argument about the sports pages. At least, the fans don't know in advance how the game's going to come out!

THE PICTURE IS A CINCH SMASH

"REACHING A

A DASHING GHOST WHO MADE LOVE TO EVERY PRETTY GIRL HE MET!

Overflowing with mirth and surprising situations, this romantic comedy tells the incredible adventures of a ghost who had a way with the ladies.

THE Hollywood REPORTER

It looks like Alexander Korda and United Artists have another sizable hit on their hands.

Audience filed out of theatre yelling its praises and claiming it "Korda's best since 'Henry the Eighth'."

The story, originally written by Lajos Biro and transferred to the screen by Robert E. Sherwood, is a brilliantly written satire, aided by the superb direction of Rene Clair, the aorgeous settings of Korda's brother and the beautiful photography of Hal Rosson.

The cast is as brilliant as the other picture ingredients, with Robert Donat adding new laurels to his career as a picture star in the dual role of a modern and a historical Tristram. Jean Parker is both beautiful and accomplished in the chief feminine role, and Eugene Pallette is a delight. These standouts were ably supported by Elsa Lanchester, Everley Grega, Patricia Hilliard and an unusually fine acting cast.

The picture is a cinch smash and will move Korda and his London Films a step higher on the amusement ladder.

NEW MARK IN SCREAMING COMEDY!"

MOTION PICTURE DAILY

"The Ghost Goes West" has effective satire, broadening frequently into the realm of farce. Rene Clair has handled the ingenious story with great humor and imagination.

A penniless Scottish aristocrat sells his ancestral castle to an American millionaire who transports it piecemeal to New York. The family ghost accompanies the stones and haunts the liner. The news is flashed to New York. On arrival, there is a fine travesty of a civic reception, with an empty car reserved for the ghost and other farcical scenes due to the desire of two rival magnates to tieup the ghost for publicity purposes.

There are many original touches including conversations of the ghost with his disembodied father in limbo, Scottish clan warfare, the American love of antiques and the ballyhoo which is equally well satirized.

The picture has American appeal. Robert Donat is excellent as the ghost and modern descendant and Eugene Pallette is next best as the American millionaire father. Technical qualities at their best are scenes in which the castle is re-erected in a Florida palm grove with modern improvements.

THE Film DAILY

New Korda Film Scores. "The Ghost Goes West," produced by Alexander Korda of London Films and directed by Rene Clair, scored a triumph on its premiere here Tuesday night before a royal audience that included Queen Mary. The picture, a hilarious comedy, has a cast headed by Robert Donat, who makes a hit in a dual role; Jean Parker and Eugene Pallette. Story is by Robert E. Sherwood, and United Artists will distribute the film.

Wireless to the NEW YORK TIMES

Queen Mary sees premiere of film. "The Ghost Goes West," comedy, achieves triumph. The famous French director Rene Clair's first English film, "The Ghost Goes West," which had its premiere here tonight before Queen Mary, was a triumph for all concerned.

The performance placed another feather in the cap of Alexander Korda, London film producer, while the young actor Robert Donat gives one of his best performances in the dual role of an eighteenth-century ghost haunting a Scottish castle and the ghost's twentieth-century descendent. The play is taken from the story by the American writer Robert E. Sherwood.

Mr. Clair delightfully blended his Gaelic theme, rich in satire, at the expense of both Scotland and the United States. Eugene Pallette came from Hollywood to play the part of the American purchaser of Glourie Castle, which he transplants to Florida complete with the ghost. The heroine, Jean Parker also is from Hollywood.

One of the most amusing touches in the play is the New York reception, rivaling Lindbergh's, for the ghost, who achieves notoriety on board the ship bringing the castle to America. Reaching a new mark in screaming comedy.

Dear Herald:

After leaving Grand Island we drove over to Aurora to see Harold Schoonover, who operates the Mazada theatre. We found Harold sober, as usual, and laboring to convince the folks of Aurora that they can find as good entertainment at the Mazada as anywhere else, and generally a little better. Harold would be all right if he would break himself of eating so many dried apples. Harold's father used to be postmaster of Aurora until the "brain trust" decided that a member of the "New Deal" could read postcards and sales bills more accurately than he could, but in spite of that Aurora will still remain in the Union.

In Passing

We saw a cartoon in the paper this morning of a skeleton with a hood on and a cloak over his head and with one arm around old John Barleycorn and in his other hand was a card which read "Nation-wide increase in drunken driving fatalities" and John was glancing at it out the corner of his eyes. An editorial recently stated that fatalities from drunken drivers had increased in one state 200 per cent and in another 113 per cent since the days of prohibition. This called to mind the slogan of "Beer and Prosperity" that used to be shouted from the housetops.

We've got the beer all right, but the only prosperity we are able to observe is around the cemeteries of the country. "Personal Liberty" was also a universal slogan. Why shouldn't people have personal liberty? If a man wants to get drunk and get behind a steering wheel and run over men, women and children, whosse business is it? Every man should have plenty of "Personal Liberty," and it's our opinion that there should be paper furnished some judges upon which to write their resignations. This is our opinion of the matter regardless of what anyone else thinks about it.

The other night we saw "Thanks a Million," and, while we are not a reviewer of pictures, nevertheless we give it as our opinion that if the theatre-going public are allowed to express an opinion this one will be classed well up to the top of "The Ten Best Pictures." We rate this picture as about the most satisfying picture we have seen in many a day. It is our opinion also that this one slipped out of Hollywood before the expert reviewers got a look at it and before the ballyhooer got out his bass drum. If you want something that will satisfy your customers you better get "Thanks a Million" and use your own bass drum.

A fellow said to us the other day, "Say Colonel, if I send you a check to renew my subscription to the HERALD will you do it?" We looked at him a moment and then handed him a cigar. Speaking of good eggs: A neighbor of ours put a setting of porcelain door-knobs under a hen last spring, and believe it or not, she hatched out one Plymouth Rock rooster, two Muscova ducks, one Lovesong Crooner, one New Deal and five Blue Pelicans. That's the kind of hens we have here in Nebraska.

We are afraid that this cold snap will prevent the boys from setting out those twigs on that "Shelterbelt." Then where can those poor Blue Pelicans find a place to roost? Doggone the doggone luck, anyhow.

When this gets in print we will be near the New Year and it will be a time for us to review our past lives and see if there has been anything that should have been eliminated, and we should resolve that in the future we will try and adapt our lives closer to the Golden Rule. We often harbor bad thoughts; we often give expression to bad sentiments; we often accuse others wrongfully. And at this season especially, we should remember that "unto us a Christ was born and unto us a Savior given," and in this connection we are reminded of the words of Will Carleton when he said—

"And now I'm mostly done; my story's o'er;
Part of it never breathed the air before.
'Tisn't over-usual, it must be allowed,
To volunteer heart-story to a crowd,
And scatter 'mongst them confidential tears:
But you'll protect an old man with his years;
And wheresoe'er this story's voice can reach,
This is the sermon I would have to preach."

The above is but a part of what Mr. Carleton wrote, and then he winds it up with the following bit of poetry which we consider pretty good advice—

"Boys flying kites haul in their white-winged birds;
You can't do that when you are flying words.
'Careful with fire' is good advice, we know;
'Careful with words' is ten times doubly so,
Thoughts unexpressed may sometimes fall back dead
But God Himself can't kill them when they are said."

We want it understood that we will positively and emphatically refuse to run for president on either ticket, no matter what the boys think about, and if they have raised a campaign fund for that purpose they can send the money out here. We might be induced, however, to throw our hat in the ring for Justice of the Peace.

Some people argue that there is no such a place as hell. Well, maybe there isn't, nobody knows, but it would seem to us that the good people of the earth would not be required to spend eternity in the company of the dictators of some nations and be required to eat spaghetti and limburger cheese. Personally we would prefer huckleberry pie.

We called on Jack Riggs of the Sun theatre here in Central City, and found him running loose without a halter. Jack is a pretty swell guy, which is probably largely due to Mrs. Riggs. Jack says that the Government was going to kill a lot of his pigs last year but he fooled 'em, he didn't have any pigs. He says if the Government will pay him for the wheat he didn't raise he ought to get through the winter all right. If Jack would stop snoring so loud maybe the night watchmen might get a little sleep.

Another Tax

The Nebraska legislature has put another tax of one cent a gallon on gasoline, making a total state tax of five cents in addition to the federal tax which has been put on everything in sight. We are thankful, however, that the air and our drinking water are still on the free list.

We went down town and bought a shirt and the salesman assured us that it would be a perfect fit, but when we tried it on this morning we found that it fitted about like a saddle on a sow. That's what a man gets for being a sucker. We are two of 'em.

It is our earnest hope that you will have a happy, healthful and prosperous New Year, and that you will receive all the good things to which you are entitled, and farther than that deponent sayeth not.

The BLUEBOOK School

By F. H. RICHARDSON

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 3 (new series based on the question and answer list in the new Bluebook of Projection, sixth edition; find the correct answer and put the information therein into your own words—answers copied from the book will not be considered).—(A) What is important with regard to immediate surroundings of the screen? (B) What two kinds of trouble are caused by imperfect contacts in amplifiers? (C) May anything less than a No. 14 wire be used inside a theatre? (D) In what conductor of electricity does resistance decrease with rise in temperature?

Answer to Question No. 289

Bluebook School Question No. 289 was: (A) What is considered the best method of lubrication for a generator commutator, and how is one to be sure lubrication is needed? (B) How does a split-phase start motor compare with the synchronous motor for speed regulation; also how is the speed governed? (C) If the field circuit of a loudspeaker is broken, but all other parts in good order, would or would not it deliver sound?

Two groups of engineers have prepared answers to Section A. One replies as follows:

"In the old days when copper or pure carbon brushes were used, there was need for lubrication of generator commutators. With the advent of the electro-graphitic brush and the natural graphitic brush, which contain relatively large amounts of lubricating material, the use of lubricants on commutators is not only unnecessary, but very detrimental to the life of the commutator.

"Oil mixed with the electro-graphitic materials in brushes makes a most effective grinding compound out of the carbon. It will cut just like a stone, though of course more slowly. We therefore recommend lubricating commutators only when straight carbon brushes are used. Even then the lubricant should be used very sparingly."

The foregoing is by the engineers of one of our largest motor-generator set manufacturers. Engineers of another company high in the ranks, but not manufacturing either motors or generators, say:

"The best modern practice regarding the lubrication of generator commutators is to use a brush that will contain in itself whatever lubricating material is necessary for that particular commutator. If there is a tendency for the brushes to squeal, a small amount of paraffin or light oil, applied with a moist cloth, may offer some improvement. Occasionally on new machines, or where the commutator has recently been turned down, a light application of oil will hasten the formation of the dark glaze that is usually associated with good commutation."

To Section B, the same engineers reply, "We assume Mr. Grant has reference to a split-phase induction motor. While the synchronous motor will run at synchronous speed, the induction motor will run at slightly below synchronous speed, depending upon the design of the particular motor and the load it carries. Normally the induction motor is regarded as a constant speed motor, and the amount it runs below synchronous speed (usually called the slip) is proportional to the load it carries."

To Section C they answer, "Most loudspeakers will deliver some sound, though at greatly reduced volume, if the field circuit is open."

The following projectionists did well with this one: S. Evans and C. Rau; G. E. Doe; W. H. Edmonds; J. Wentworth; H. Edwards; T. Van Vaulkenburg; P. Itt; T. T. Golley; D. L. Sinklow; R. and K. Wells; S. Spooner; J. Lansing and R. D. Oberleing; P. and L. Felt; J. L. Hupoll; C. Umphrey; G. N. Guidotti, F. L. Savlor and N. Savlor; O. L. Daris and F. Simms; B. M. Ferguson, J. L. Samuels, R. Tompkins and O. D. Lantry; F. H., S. and P. Dalbey; N. L. Haynes and A. Richardson; H. T. Granger; K. H. Hartley; B. H. Thaller, D. Howard and J. Gurts; F. H. Klar, L. Klar and T. H. Morton; D. L. Lode, B. H. Sanders and J. Gensen; W. M. Powell; H. J. Billingsworth; D. Emmerson; J. T. Stanhope; F. Ferguson and D. D. Lally; T. H. E. Richman; G. Johnson and L. R. Spooner; S. T. Rogers; R. G. Crews and T. T. Davidson; M. and J. Devoy; S. E. Gay; J. Bascombe and G. L. Thomas; W. T. Murphy; H. T. Lansing and G. Thomas; T. L. Bradbury; N. L. Tomlinson and G. Lathrope; B. R. Mills and N. Prane; T. Danielson; T. Thomas; P. L. Perry, W. Williams, C. O. Bartlett and D. Carille; M. D. Fitzsimmons; B. B. Hornstein; M. M. Sitman; T. L. and G. Daniels; R. G. Squires; M. Spencer and D. Allen; Nic Granby; H. T. Todd and L. A. Dodson; L. L. Samuels and L. Denis; I. F. Fifton and B. L. White; D. L. and M. Rice; J. Genson; R. and K. Wells; N. Tomlinson; F. N. Giddings; I. B. Bancroft; E. W. Ford and T. W. Peterson; T. E. Mantrol; H. W. Bower; K. N. Kirkpatrick; D. U. Granger and L. B. Proctor; R. E. Salisbury; J. J. Jennings; L. Henderson and K. L. Knight; L. L. Daniels; T. R. Fanning and W. Burns.

(A) Daris and Simms say, "If lubrication is required, the best method is to make a canvas pad six inches square as described on page 502, fifth edition of the Bluebook, as follows. Spread thin coat of vaseline on one side. Lay in warm place until same is absorbed. Fold into pad two inches wide, vaseline side inward, and apply lightly to commutator. This is only necessary where hard (carbon) brushes are used. If soft brushes are employed, they contain lubricating materials to serve all purposes."

P. and L. Felt answer Section A, "We believe, and are supported in our view by the makers of our two sets, that if the right kind of brushes are used, no lubricant is required on commutators; that lubrication other than that from the brush itself does harm rather than good. Commutator lubrication was required with the metal and hard carbon brushes used some years ago, but modern brushes supply all that is necessary."

(B) T. Van Vaulkenburg says, "The split-phase motor is an induction motor having a split-phase starting device. It has no speed regulation, except that it will run a little below true synchronous speed, the amount of lag being dependent, I believe, upon the amount of load. Induction motors are generally held to be constant speed motors. The amount of lag is termed 'slip.' It does not amount to much. Synchronous motors must operate in step with the driving current alternations. I would say that, disregarding 'slip,' there is little if any difference between the two and that they are not susceptible to anything that could be correctly called speed regulation."

(C) W. H. Edmonds says, "In the event the field circuit of a loudspeaker is broken, but all other parts remain in working condition, the speaker will deliver sound, but it will not be sufficient to carry on with.

AMERICANS' JUBILANCE OVER CUT IN SPANISH TAX IS SHORT-LIVED

Political Maneuver of Radicals Shelves Bill; U. S. Companies Also Find Money Conversions Tied Up by the Many Delays

Quota Law Is Introduced in Parliament; Local Industry Would Have Ten Year Exemption From Levies of All Kinds

by HARRY CHAPIN PLUMMER

Barcelona Correspondent

Representatives of the American motion picture industry, and other foreign entities, in the last few days have alternated between hope and despair as events at Madrid either have promised relief from the high impost on picture imports and production or have threatened the long-dreaded contingent law.

A favorable report was reached in the Cortes late last week on the bill by which the blanket tax, of 7½ percent on all pictures, Spanish and foreign, would have been reduced to 3 percent for imported foreign language films; 2.25 percent for foreign films dubbed in Spain and 1.50 percent for straight Spanish language pictures produced in this country. The industrial factors here were jubilant over what they prematurely hailed as a triumph for the Camara Defensa Cinematografica de España (Film Board of Spain) and the American Chamber of Commerce in Spain.

But their satisfaction was short-lived, for by a political maneuver on the part of the Left Wing, or Radical, forces, a re-votation became necessary when the Government was challenged to establish a quorum. This the Party in power was unable to do. The matter is now held in abeyance—almost indefinitely, it is feared.

On the heels of this disaster came the news that the not unexpected contingent law had materialized, to the extent of being introduced in the National Parliament. The outstanding feature of this legislation is that for a period of ten years the production of films and all complementary production within the Republic are declared "exempt from all classes of taxation and tribute, direct or indirect." Theatre operators in the forty-nine provincial capitals would be required to show at least two films of "national production" every month and those in other centers would be required to show one such home-produced film in every thirty. The bill also would create an annual award by the Ministry of Agriculture, Industry and Commerce for the best Spanish film production. A respite will be afforded by the fact that the bill undoubtedly will go into committee for lengthy debates.

Handicapped by Money Law

The American branch industry here finds itself more and more handicapped economically by the money conversion law. The position of the American importers and distributors is even worse than that of other foreign nationalities. For some time it has been the practice of the Government to require every business entity desiring to purchase dollars to file an application, stating the sum of pesetas sought to be converted. At first a delay of but a few weeks was occasioned, but the interval gradually lengthened, until now eleven months is a common period during which the sum to be converted must remain on deposit at the obviously nominal interest rate of one per cent.

The motion picture group is but one of many affected by this condition, which has had its most serious result in the American motor company branches represented here. Cars of American manufacture are virtually unobtainable and importation is now confined to the German and Canadian plants of General Motors and the British and Canadian plants of Ford.

February Applications Now Up

American picture house applications for dollar conversion filed last February are but now being granted, while applications upon behalf of branches of French, Russian and German units filed as late as May are coming through. All this, of course, is due to the international exchange situation and the position of the Spanish Ministerio de Hacienda in relation to American currency.

However, when the American film representatives cast a glance afield to the motor industry, they are inclined to realize that their situation could be worse. For not only are the branches and agencies of the motor interests affected in equal degree by the money conversion delays and all other import difficulties, but since August 31st they have had their motor-truck sales and accounts—almost all of the latter in time paper—seriously threatened and actually affected by a decree imposing burdensome and prohibitive highway and street taxes upon motor-truck and 'bus operation of every character.

Only last week threat of a general strike upon the part of the individual operators brought a suspension of the decree's operation, but not its rescinding, and it still hangs over the heads of the industry and the transport operators like the traditional sword of Damocles.

Despite these difficulties, however, the motion picture factors representing American capital thus far have been able to rely upon the wholehearted cooperation of the powerful motor group in their efforts to resist too restrictive legislation.

New Exploitation Methods

In continued pursuance of a carefully and intelligently planned publicity campaign, Warner Brothers-First National in increasing measure is appealing to the intellectual and artistic elements of the Spanish people in their exploitation for "Sueño de Una Noche de Verano" ("A Midsummer Night's Dream"), now definitely scheduled for its premiere in Spain at the Cine Maryland here. Robert Schless, general European director of the organization, with headquarters at Paris, has arrived here and will have the "Dream" opening in Barcelona and Madrid among the subjects most actively engaging his attention.

Among the measures adopted for reaching the cognoscenti of Old Spain has been the placing of advertising copy of an exceptionally conservative tone in the programs of Barcelona's greatest musical institutions—the Orquestra Pau Casals, led by Pablo Casals, the cellist, whose concert appearances in the United States are so well remembered, the Asociació de "Musica da Camara," and the Gran Teatro del Liceo, chief opera theatre of the Catalan capital.

These are among Europe's most famous artistic organizations, and as each is maintained by private subscription by the artistic and social forces of Barcelona, the extremely restricted advertising space in the respective programs literally has to be "sued for." But the Shakespeare-Mendelssohn-Reinhardt triumvirate of names, coupled with the ingeniousness of the Warner Brothers-First National publicity bureau, have won the day. The exquisite sticker insert in gold in the opera prospectus, showing a still of one of the love duos in the "Dream" and harmonizing with the opulent golden cover of the book and with the text couched in Spanish, was an example, while the yet quieter and more severe copy, in the Catalan language, in the printed programs of the big symphony orchestra and similar sober-toned Catalan text in the programs of the exclusive chamber-music organization further visualized the idée fix of the "Dream" producers.

Schless Sees Radical Changes

Talking picture exploitation may undergo sweeping and radical changes henceforth, Mr. Schless told the writer.

"The precedent established by scheduled performances and the rule of seating no late-comers after the start of the showing is likely to be followed by a new principle upon the part of theatre managers everywhere, with the gradual elimination of the wasteful continuous run, at least in the higher grade theatres," he said. "In other words, future productions in any way approaching the character and finesse of the 'Dream' will be exploited by producers much after the manner of the road circuits of theatrical and musical attractions of the past. This will result in placing the major film offerings upon a higher artistic and moral plane.

Tobis Films Set for America

Two Portuguese features produced by Tobis in Lisbon, "Song of Lisbon" and "The Vicar's Pupils," have been sold for exhibition in the cities of the United States where there is a Portuguese population.

THEATRE RECEIPTS

The total of theatre receipts for the calendar week ended December 21, 1935, from 101 theatres in 17 major cities of the country reached $886,035, a decrease of $78,300 from the total for the preceding calendar week ended December 14, 1935, when 106 theatres in 17 major cities of the country aggregated $964,335.

CLEAR GAIN

THE photographic quality of Eastman Super X Panchromatic Negative is truly outstanding. Equally important, however, is the fact that the pronounced improvement which has been achieved involves no compromise. It does not mean the sacrifice or impairment of any other desirable or essential quality. It is clear gain for the industry, and for the public. Eastman Kodak Company, Rochester, N. Y. (J. E. Brulatour, Inc., Distributors, Fort Lee, New York, Chicago, Hollywood.)

Carewe Forms Second Non-Theatrical Firm

Edwin Carewe has formed a second company to handle the increased demand for complete programs in the non-theatrical field. The new company, Edwin Carewe Productions, Inc., is capitalized at $1,040,000 and will produce 10 features and 60 shorts during 1936 for school, church and civic institution consumption.

Carewe Pictures Corporation will continue as a distributing organization, releasing all the new company's product plus several independent productions suitable for school and church exhibition. Mr. Carewe is president of the new organization. There will be no public stock issue. Production begins January 15 on "Birth of America," featuring lives of George Washington, Patrick Henry, Paul Revere and Betsy Ross and on "Joseph and His Brethren" for release in one reel episodes for seven month period.

Difficulty in securing pictures for use in schools has caused representatives of various groups in Oklahoma City to organize a Motion Picture Council to see what can be done about it. The group representatives are the Parent-Teachers Association, Y. W. C. A., Y. M. C. A., Council of Jewish Women, Rotary Anns, Girl Scouts, First Presbyterian, First Christian and St. Luke's Methodist Churches. Paul Herring, Y. M. C. A. boys' secretary, is president.

Backers of the group contend they are not in competition with theatres although their plans call for presenting newsreels and selected features in schools at 10 cents admission. The proceeds are designed to buy film equipment for school use.

Senator Wagner Scheduled to Attend Hershfield Dinner

United States Senator Robert F. Wagner will be one of the guests at the testimonial dinner to be given Harry Hershfield by the Cheese Club in New York on January 26.

Others who will attend will include: Postmaster General Farley, Grover Whalen, Supreme Court Justice Aaron J. Levy, J. Montgomery Flagg, Daniel Frohman, Max Steuer, Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine, Louis Sobol, Ed Sullivan, Joe Weber, Rear Admiral J. Yates Sterling, Lawrence Tibbett, Frank Buck and Max Reinhardt.

Receipts above expenses will be donated to the Actors' Fund, Episcopal Actors' Guild, Catholic Actors' Guild, Jewish Theatrical Guild and the Newspaper Guild.

West Indians To Form A New Theatre Group

Globe Cinemas of the West Indies and South America, Ltd., is being formed in Trinidad Island with an initial capital of $300,000, according to a report to the Department of Commerce in Washington by Vice Consul Wallace E. Moessner in Trinidad. Ramcharan Gokool has the backing of six other shareholders, and the object is to erect new theatres; two in Trinidad, two in British Guiana, and one in the Barbados.

The new company will also take over control of the existing Globe in Port of Spain and the Globe in San Juan, Trinidad, in addition to all the present independent theatres in British Guiana, Netherland Guiana, St. Vincent, Grenada and Barbados.

Dubinsky Increases Circuit Properties

With the opening of the Capitol, Jefferson City, Mo., the Dubinsky Circuit has reached a total of twenty-two theatres, Ed Dubinsky, president, said recently in Kansas City. Mr. Dubinsky revealed plans to build a similar theatre in Leavenworth, Kan., and negotiations for additional properties.

Drive on Minors Is Awaited

A periodic drive by the Children's Society against admittance of persons under 16 to theatres unless accompanied by guardians is expected to be started late this week or next week in New York.

Six Paramount Features Are Planned for French Studios

A production schedule of six features has been set for the Paramount studios at Joinville, France, by John W. Hicks, Paramount foreign manager who returned late last week from a five-weeks trip abroad. No changes in production policy for the French unit are involved in the new season's plans, Mr. Hicks said.

Republic Plans Memphis Office

Republic Pictures Corporation has leased a new building at 395 South Second Street, Memphis, and will remodel the building prior to opening a branch office early next month.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

First National

BRIGHT LIGHTS: Joe E. Brown, Ann Dvorak—A great picture. Everyone said that it was the best he ever made. Everyone liked it.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. General patronage.

BRIGHT LIGHTS: Joe E. Brown, Ann Dvorak—Very good and did nice business. Brown gets them in where a lot of "specials" fail. Running time, 85 minutes. Played November 27-28.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

BRIGHT LIGHTS: Joe E. Brown, Ann Dvorak—A swell picture which everyone should like, whether they like Joe or not. It is much different than his preceding pictures. Drew well and pleased all. Played December 6-7.—Ted Stump, Elted Theatre, Absarokee, Mont. Rural patronage.

CASE OF THE LUCKY LEGS, THE: Warren William, Genevieve Tobin—Did not go over here. Drew less than ordinary business and did not please any too well. Played December 1-2.—Alvin A. Hables, Reel Joy Theatre, King City, Cal. Small town patronage.

GOOSE AND THE GANDER, THE: Kay Francis, George Brent—Good show that fell down at the box office. The few that came enjoyed it very much. Played November 24-25.—Alvin A. Hahles, Reel Joy Theatre, King City, Cal. Small town patronage.

IRISH IN US, THE: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien—A very fine picture and splendid entertainment. All players well cast. Running time, 83 minutes. Played December 1-3.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

OIL FOR THE LAMPS OF CHINA: Pat O'Brien, Josephine Hutchinson—Very good. Should please anyone. Did average business. Running time, 97 minutes. Played November 1-3.—Harry M. Newman, Liberty Theatre, Lynden, Wash. Small town patronage.

PAYOFF, THE: James Dunn, Claire Dodd—Very poor draw on this. Dunn is not well liked here and this show was not up to the Warner standard. However, their product is above all others here on the whole. Played December 4.—Alvin A. Hables, Reel Joy Theatre, King City, Cal. Small town patronage.

PAYOFF, THE: James Dunn, Claire Dodd—Very pleasing program picture. Running time, 64 minutes. Played December 10-11.—R. L. Sherman, Strand Theatre, North Branch, Mich. General patronage.

SHIPMATES FOREVER: Dick Powell, Ruby Keeler—Broke all records for Warner Bros. pictures. Running time, 109 minutes. Played October 20-21.—Geo. F. Smith, Lyric Theatre, Lapeer, Mich. Small town patronage.

SHIPMATES FOREVER: Dick Powell, Ruby Keeler—Good draw. Saw nothing to rave about but the Academy pictures seem to pull them in. Played November 28-29.—Alvin A. Hahles, Reel Joy Theatre, King City, Cal. Small town patronage.

GB Pictures

CLAIRVOYANT, THE: Claude Rains, Fay Wray—A very interesting picture. Gave good satisfaction. Different from the rest, but all liked it. The acting splendid.—Bert Silver, Silver Theatre Co., Inc., Greenville, Mich. City and country patronage.

TRANSATLANTIC TUNNEL: Richard Dix, Madge Evans—This is a wonderful picture. Gave 100 per cent satisfaction and we shall bring it back very soon. Having an American cast helped the picture very much, but the direction and settings were wonderful. If you ain't bought it, buy it, and it will satisfy your patrons, all of them. Played November 28.—Bert Silver, Silver Theatre Co., Inc., Greenville, Mich. City and country patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BABES IN TOYLAND: Laurel and Hardy—Fairly good picture to no business. Lost money.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

BISHOP MISBEHAVES, THE: Edmund Gwenn, Maureen O'Sullivan—Just a no good picture at the box-office. No pull whatever.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. General patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

What the Picture Did for Me
1790 Broadway, New York

BISHOP MISBEHAVES, THE: Edmund Gwenn, Maureen O'/Sullivan—Too much dialogue and Gwenn over-acted. Showed that he did not have the training for pictures that should go with a picture such as this one. No good at the box office, too slow temtempoed for the average audience.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

BISHOP MISBEHAVES, THE: Edmund Gwenn, Maureen O'Sullivan—This is a very fine program picture. Story very interesting. Star fine, in fact the whole cast was extra good. A good picture. Played on a double bill, but it would stand alone in any house and give satisfaction.—Bert Silver, Silver Theatre Co., Inc., Greenville, Mich. City and country patronage.

BONNIE SCOTLAND: Laurel and Hardy—One of the funniest of the funniest pictures ever made. You have got to see this in order to appreciate the laughs in it. Nothing silly but just a great comedy and clean comedy at that. Played December 4-5.—Bert Silver, Silver Theatre Co., Inc., Greenville, Mich. City and country patronage.

BROADWAY MELODY OF 1936; Jack Benny, Eleanor Powell—Eleanor Powell is marvelous, gigantic. But no one knew her. No star names, no business. Let's keep Benny on the radio. Played December 12-14.—R. L. Sherman, Strand Theatre, North Branch, Mich. General patronage.

CALM YOURSELF: Madge Evans, Robert Young—Just a fair program picture. Running time, 70 minutes. Played December 4-5.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

CHINA SEAS: Clark Gahle, Jean Harlow, Wallace Beery—Another big one from Metro. A great picture, but it failed to bring them out.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. General patronage.

CHINA SEAS: Clark Gable, Jean Harlow, Wallace Beery—Very good picture well produced and well acted. The men liked this fine, but the women did not go for it so good. Too gruesome in spots. Running time, 87 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

CHINA SEAS: Jean Harlow, Clark Gahle, Wallace Beery—Swell show. Cast and everything. People came out and said O. K. Played December 8-9.—R. L. Sherman, Strand Theatre, North Branch, Mich. General patronage.

HERE COMES THE BAND: Ted Lewis, Virginia Bruce—Very fine picture to extra business.—R. V. Fletcher, Lyric Theatre, Hartington, Neb. General patronage.

HERE COMES THE BAND: Ted Lewis, Virginia Bruce—Very good picture should please any audience. Plenty of good music and good singing.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

HERE COMES THE BAND: Ted Lewis, Virginia Bruce—Good program picture that pleased all that came. Average business. Running time, 87 minutes. Played November 12-13.—Harry M. Newman, Liberty Theatre, Lynden, Wash. Small town patronage.

HERE COMES THE BAND: Ted Lewis, Virginia Bruce—Broken to bits. The customers must have guessed it. Poorest Wednesday, Thursday in months. Played December 4-5.—R. L. Sherman, Strand Theatre, North Branch, Mich. General patronage.

I LIVE MY LIFE: Joan Crawford, Brian Aherne—Don't expect too much and you won't be disappointed. Average business. Some said good and the majority just went home.—Harry Musgrave, Cozy Theatre, Minneapolis, Kansas. Small town patronage.

MURDER MAN, THE: Spencer Tracy, Virginia Bruce—Just fair. Nothing big. Used it on Bargain Night. Had no complaints.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. General patronage.

MUTINY ON THE BOUNTY: Clark Gable, Charles Laughton, Franchot Tone—Unquestionably a fine production with Laughton and Gable outstanding. However, I believe that many women missed it because of the cruelty and torture they had heard about in it; and I don't blame them. There is enough suffering in this world without going to the movies to see more of it. Played December 5-7.—John A. Milligan, Broadway Theatre, Schuylerville, N. Y. Small town patronage.

NAUGHTY MARIETTA: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy—The greatest picture of its kind ever produced. Used this as a Parent-Teacher's benefit and they barely grossed expenses. It did not draw but pleased all that came.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. General patronage.

NAUGHTY MARIETTA: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy—Old but worth running. Some even asked for return engagement, so you can bet it's good. Running time, 100 minutes. Played December 7-8.—H. Bettendorf, Opera House Theatre, Foley, Minn. Small town and country patronage.

NO MORE LADIES: Joan Crawford, Robert Montgomery—We booked this one on the strength of its great array of talent and its splendid reception reports from coast to coast. Possibly its snappy sophisticated chatter was just a bit too snappy and sophisticated for some of the local boys who like plenty of action in their films; but the greater majority of the men pronounced it excellent entertainment. The modernistic and lavish furnishings were brought out by nigh-perfect photography. Running time, 82 minutes. Played December 14.—J. A. Reynolds, Recreational Director, State Prison, Trenton, New Jersey. Prison patronage.

O'SHAUGHNESSY'S BOY: Wallace Beery, Jackie Cooper—Very good. Played on Sunday. Drew extra business.—R. V. Fletcher, Lyric Theatre, Hartington, Neb. General patronage.

O'SHAUGHNESSY'S BOY: Wallace Beery, Jackie Cooper—While this is an excellent picture there is not enough comedy relief and the tear-jerking is overstressed. Due to bad weather and usual pre-holiday slump, played to below average business. Running time, 88 minutes.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

O'SHAUGHNESSY'S BOY: Wallace Beery, Jackie Cooper—A mighty good circus picture. Great acting by stars and all the cast, and well directed. Pleased them that likes the circus. I personally thought it was great. Gave general satisfaction. Played November 24-25.—Bert Silver, Silver Theatre Co., Inc., Greenville, Mich. City and country patronage.

PURSUIT: Chester Morris, Sally Eilers—Just like the old days, chases and action with some clever dialogue and Sally does nice work. Moves fast and is a nicely paced picture that is not a big special but satisfactory to an audience that likes some action set in the outdoors.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

RENDEZVOUS: William Powell, Rosalind Russell, Binne Barnes—Very good picture, well balanced with comedy and drama.—John A. Milligan, Broadway Theatre, Schuylerville, N. Y. Small town patronage.

RENDEZVOUS: William Powell, Rosalind Russell—An extra good picture. Very interesting story and a great cast of characters. Gave splendid satisfaction. Played December 10-11.—Bert Silver, Silver Theatre Co., Inc., Greenville, Mich. City and country patronage.

SEQUOIA: Jean Parker—Something different and it pleased them all. Just average business.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. General patronage.

SMILIN' THROUGH: Norma Shearer, Fredric March, Leslie Howard—Played this one when it first came out at our regular 10 cents and 25 cents admission prices. This time we played it two days at 10 cents admission and grossed more than we did when it was new. A great picture.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. General patronage.

WEST POINT OF THE AIR: Wallace Beery, Robert Young—Fine picture. Only fair business.—Sammie

Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

WOMAN WANTED: Maureen O'Sullivan, Joel McCrea—Excellent melodrama. Many favorable comments.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. General patronage.

Monogram

DESERT TRAIL: John Wayne, Mary Kornman—Just a very ordinary western. Business below average. —M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. General patronage.

DESERT TRAIL: John Wayne, Mary Kornman—One of the best of the John Wayne's with some good rodeo shots. O. K. on a double bill. Running time, 54 minutes. Played December 11.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

KEEPER OF THE BEES: Betty Furness, Neil Hamilton—Nothing big but it brought out a few that hardly ever attend the theatre. Not as good as "Girl of the Limberlost."—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. General patronage.

KEEPER OF THE BEES, THE: Neil Hamilton, Betty Furness—A good Gene Stratton-Porter picture. Just as good as "A Girl of the Limberlost" or even better. Good acting by all the players and good photography of beautiful seaside scenery. An old picture but one that will satisfy at the box office, while some of the newer and sophisticated productions will flop. This class of picture is steadily gaining popularity with our patrons.—O. Ingmar Oleson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town patronage.

Paramount

ACCENT ON YOUTH: Sylvia Sydney, Herbert Marshall—A little too highbrow for us. I don't suppose this is exactly "art," but it is probably up there somewhere close to it.—Harry Musgrave, Cozy Theatre, Minneapolis, Kansas. Small town patronage.

ANNAPOLIS FAREWELL: Tom Brown, Sir Guy Standing—An excellent production. As good an entertainment as any one could ask for. Patrons complimented us on this one.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. General patronage.

BIG BROADCAST OF 1936, THE: Jack Oakie, Lyda Roberti—Rated to us as a special. Drew some extra business and seemed to please. However, seems to us that it was over-burlesqued a bit. Among the clever parts was Ethel Merman's songs and the elephants' and Chorus girls' dance. Played December 8-9. —P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

BIG BROADCAST OF 1936, THE: Jack Oakie, Burns and Allen—Considerable criticism has been leveled at this one, but it did above average business and most of the comments I had were favorable.—Harry Musgrave, Cozy Theatre, Minneapolis, Kansas. Small town patronage.

CRUSADES, THE: Loretta Young, Henry Wilcoxon —A spectacular production well suited for those who like spectacles and historical drama, but not for those who are looking for outright entertainment. See it before you buy it. Has it done any extra business for you who have played it? Played December 8-9.—John A. Milligan, Broadway Theatre, Schuylerville, N. Y. Small town patronage.

CRUSADES, THE: Loretta Young, Henry Wilcoxon —Was in bed with flu when this played. From receipts of three days, indications were that people here are not interested in Biblical stories. Barely paid film rental and advertising in three days' run. DeMille will have to get "modern" before I buy another. Running time, 125 minutes. Played December 1-3.—W. M. Nolen, Colonial Theatre, Monroe City, Mo. Rural patronage.

CRUSADES, THE: Henry Wilcoxon, Loretta Young —A mighty fine picture which everyone should see, but one which many didn't see. Most of our patronage never heard of the crusades. It is a typical DeMille spectacle, well done and one which every clergyman, regardless of denomination should and would recommend. I advertised this strongly, was all set for a big time, and got just average business. But it s still a good picture, if you can get them out. I couldn't. Played December 8-10.—Ted Stump, Elted Theatre, Absarokee, Mont. Rural patronage.

HERE COMES COOKIE: George Burns, Gracie Allen—A crazy concoction that clicked nicely on a dual. Running time, 65 minutes. Played December 4. —Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

LAST OUTPOST, THE: Cary Grant, Claude Rains —At last Rains in a show that is good. It is an unusual theme of army life in Algeria and the music accompaniment is monotonous and almost gives one the Jimmies, but nevertheless it is a good picture. Business not average, but no fault of picture. Running time, 77 minutes. Played November 26-27.—W. M. Nolen, Colonial Theatre, Monroe City, Mo. Rural patronage.

MAN ON THE FLYING TRAPEZE, THE: W. C. Fields, Mary Brian—This one brought extra business. They say they don't like Fields, but still they always turn out for his pictures.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. General patronage.

MEN WITHOUT NAMES: Fred MacMurray, Madge Evans—Everyone seemed to enjoy this one. Some said it was better than "G Men."—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. General patronage.

VIRGINIA JUDGE, THE: Walter C. Kelly, Marsha Hunt—Locally this picture went over good. Marsha Hunt lived here in this country for a time, and has relatives here and of course we got front page notices on that. The picture is quite good. Marsha shows signs of becoming a favorite, and Walter Kelly is so natural in this part that he seems really to be the Virginia Judge. Shown last three days of week to good business.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

WANDERER OF THE WASTELAND: Gail Patrick, Dean Jagger—Just ordinary for a Zane Grey picture. Just the same it brought us a little extra business.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. General patronage.

WANDERER OF THE WASTELAND: Gail Patrick, Dean Jagger—Even though we do not have the cast we used to have in these Zane Grey westerns, they still do business. Somebody must like them.—Harry Musgrave, Cozy Theatre, Minneapolis, Kansas. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

ALICE ADAMS: Katharine Hepburn—Used this on a church tieup and it was satisfactory. Hepburn will not attract general patronage and neither does she please. This, however, was above average in entertainment. Running time, 99 minutes. Played November 12-13.—W. M. Nolen, Colonial Theatre, Monroe City, Mo. Rural patronage.

ANNIE OAKLEY: Barbara Stanwyck, Preston Foster—A few years ago, RKO released an epic picture that has never been forgotten, "Cimarron." Now, this same company has released to the screen another epic, taken from an entirely different slice of early American life, and this picture will go down as equally great as "Cimarron." Exhibitors everywhere, do not fail to give this your longest and best playing time. Business above average first four days of the week.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

ANNIE OAKLEY: Barbara Stanwyck, Preston Foster—Excellent entertainment. Drew extra business.—R. V. Fletcher, Lyric Theatre, Hartington, Neb. General patronage.

ARIZONIAN, THE: Richard Dix—At suggestion of St. Louis exchange played this on Sunday to only fair business. Believe it would have done better on week-end. Dix gives good performance, but sticks his chin out too far in showing determination. Running time, 75½ minutes. Played November 17-18.—W. M. Nolen, Colonial Theatre, Monroe City, Mo. Rural patronage.

FRECKLES: Tom Brown—Fair entertainment. Not a knockout, but good. Running time, 70 minutes. Played December 8-9.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

FRECKLES: Tom Brown, Virginia Weidler—Good story and a picture that is made for the small town. Business above average. Running time, 68 minutes. Played November 15-17.—Harry M. Newman, Liberty Theatre, Lynden, Wash. Small town patronage.

FRECKLES: Tom Brown, Carol Stone—A fine old story and well acted. Stars very good but the little girl stole the picture. We played it after all the tanks around had played it and it had lost its draft, but all that did see it was satisfied.—Bert Silver, Silver Theatre Co., Inc., Greenville, Mich. City and country patronage.

HI GAUCHO: John Carroll, Steffi Duna—Just 59 minutes of truck. Actors trying to deliver Spanish words. Played it on a doube bill. If you can get rid of this one do so by all means. It certainly is terrible. Running time, 59 minutes. Played December 14.—Warner McLaughlin, Empire Theatre, Port Henry, N. Y. Small town patronage.

HIS FAMILY TREE: James Barton, Maureen Delany—I hope the rest of you boys and girls use better judgment than I and let this one stay home. It's no earthly use.—Harry Musgrave, Cozy Theatre, Minneapolis, Kansas. Small town patronage.

HOT TIP: James Gleason, Zasu Pitts—Interesting action picture with several good running races. Pleased generally but business was away off due to tournament at high school. Running time, 69 minutes. Played November 15-16.—W. M. Nolen, Colonial Theatre, Monroe City, Mo. Rural patronage.

JALNA: Ian Hunter, Kay Johnson—A splendid entertainment. Very interesting story and a fine cast of characters. Good satisfaction.—Bert Silver, Silver Theatre Co., Inc., Greenville, Mich. City and country patronage.

LAST DAYS OF POMPEII, THE: Dorothy Wilson, Preston Foster—This was a surprise. We expected it to be a big flop, but it played to good business. Everyone who saw it liked it. It is really a very fine picture. Running time, 96 minutes.—Warner McLaughlin, Empire Theatre, Port Henry, N. Y. Small town patronage.

POWDER SMOKE RANGE: Harry Carey, Hoot Gibson, Guinn Williams—Unusually good. The three leads were excellent.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

POWDER SMOKE RANGE: Hoot Gibson, Boots Mallory—Good western for Saturday. Drew extra business.—R. V. Fletcher, Lyric Theatre, Hartington, Neb. General patronage.

RAINMAKERS, THE: Wheeler and Woolsey—The rainmakers were a complete washout for me on this one. Too long locomotive sequence killed what little chance it had.—John A. Milligan, Broadway Theatre, Schuylerville, N. Y. Small town patronage.

RAINMAKERS, THE: Bert Wheeler, Robert Woolsey—Our people still like this team and they do a pretty good business. Consider this better for us than the last two.—Harry Musgrave, Cozy Theatre, Minneapolis, Kansas. Small town patronage.

ROBERTA: Ginger Rogers, Fred Astaire, Irene Dunne—Personally, I think this one their weakest picture. It failed to draw and it did not satisfy. Our patrons don't go for Astaire and Rogers.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. General patronage.

SILVER STREAK, THE: Charles Starrett, Sally Blane—Not anything extra in program class. No business, no comments. Arthur Lake and Big Boy Williams were very good.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

STAR OF MIDNIGHT: William Powell, Ginger Rogers—This one is a real picture. Of course, Powell is the whole show and he is good and will please any moving picture patrons anywhere. Played November 23.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

THREE MUSKETEERS, THE: Walter Abel, Margot Grahame—Pleased the ones that came to see it. Did average business. Played December 6.—Alvin A. Hables, Reel Joy Theatre, King City, Cal. Small town patronage.

THREE MUSKETEERS, THE: Margot Grahame, Walter Abel—A great picture. Big story, wonderful settings, fine acting, but it did not draw here as a special. Satisfied all we got on it, but not a box office success, but no fault of the picture. Just the kind that won't draw in this town. Played December 1-3. —Bert Silver, Silver Theatre Co., Inc., Greenville, Mich. City and country patronage.

TO BEAT THE BAND: Hugh Herbert, Helen Broderick—Not big but pleasing. Drew as well as the average Sunday picture. The gentleman tap and fancy dancer drew a round of applause from my patrons. Running time, 75 minutes.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

TO BEAT THE BAND: Royer Pryor, Phyllis Brooks —A frothy program picture that seemed to please. No extra draw. Played December 11-12.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BAD BOY: James Dunn, Dorothy Wilson—Just passable. Fair entertainment. For those that like Dunn its O. K. Running time, 70 minutes. Played November 30-December 1.—H. Bettendorf, Opera House Theatre, Foley, Minn. Small town and country patronage.

BLACK SHEEP: Edmund Lowe, Claire Trevor—Fair program picture. Running time, 75 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN IN EGYPT: Warner Oland—Quite an interesting Chan picture and average entertainment, but not more than just a fair production. Played November 30.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN IN SHANGHAI: Warner Oland, Irene Hervey—Spotted this on a Saturday and it didn't pull like a horse picture. We must have our horses or it is no go. Chan followers would like a change in story for him—robbery, kidnap, or what have you?—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN IN SHANGHAI: Warner Oland, Irene Hervey—Good. Always please. Running time, 70 minutes. Played November 29-30.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN IN SHANGHAI: Irene Hervey, Warner Oland—Average Charlie Chan picture. Seems that these Chan pictures are only good midweek or one day. Believe I could struggle along without them. —Harry Musgrave, Cozy Theatre, Minneapolis, Kansas. Small town patronage.

CURLY TOP: Shirley Temple, John Boles—Another great picture from Shirley—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. General patronage.

DANTE'S INFERNO: Spencer Tracy, Claire Trevor —They don't make them any worse than this one.— M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. General patronage.

DANTE'S INFERNO: Spencer Tracy—Played on pay day night with big pot up. Drew unusually well and generally pleased. Very little "hell" to it, but is a good lesson in money madness. Running time, 88 minntes. Played November 14.—W. M. Nolen, Colonial Theatre, Monroe City, Mo. Rural patronage.

FARMER TAKES A WIFE, THE: Janet Gaynor, Henry Fonda—Drew well and pleased all. Gaynor quite popular here, and should be a box office attraction to any theatre. Early dawn effect in photography a little monotonous to manager, who thought lens cloudy or light bad. Running time, 91 minutes. Played December 7.—Harlan C. Dodd, Charlestown Theatre, Charlestown, Ind. Small town and rural patronage.

GAY DECEPTION, THE: Francis Lederer, Frances Dee—Many patrons said that this was the best picture that they had seen in months.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. General patronage.

GAY DECEPTION, THE: Frances Dee, Francis Lederer—This is a clever picture but Lederer is no great shakes here. Result was average business, but those attending went home satisfied. Running time, 76 minutes. Played November 21-22.—W. M. Nolen, Colonial Theatre, Monroe City, Mo. Rural patronage.

HERE'S TO ROMANCE: Nino Martini, Genevieve Tobin—Another flop for the small town exhibitor. Cancel it out if you can. A few saw it the first day, a Sunday. Just a handful on the second day. Running time, 86 minutes. Played November 24-25.—Warner McLaughlin, Empire Theatre, Port Henry, N. Y. Small town patronage.

IN OLD KENTUCKY: Will Rogers—I think this Rogers' best picture. Drew extra business.—R. V. Fletcher, Lyric Theatre, Hartington, Neb. General patronage.

IT'S A SMALL WORLD: Spencer Tracy, Wendy Barrie—Quite a nice little picture, but not anything big. I vote it as a fairly pleasing production. Played November 16.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

METROPOLITAN: Lawrence Tibbett, Virginia Bruce—While this picture is a credit to the producer, the recording to Tibbett's singing splendid and the entire production commendable, the B. O. appeal was lacking. Tibbett fans raved about the picture, but you can count them on your fingers, and the majority of the regulars stayed away and the gross just about hit an all time low. Running time, 79 minutes. Played December 1-3.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

METROPOLITAN: Lawrence Tibbett, Virginia Bruce—Among the handful who saw this picture were a few music lovers who liked it. Played the picture two days to the worst business in our history. Why are small exhibitors forced to buy such stuff. Certainly some flop. Running time, 79 minutes. Played December 12-13.— Warner McLaughlin, Empire Theatre, Port Henry, N. Y. Small town patronage.

OUR LITTLE GIRL: Shirley Temple—Exceptionally good, as usual. Hardly the equal of "The Little Colonel" for want of Barrymore's support. Running time, 65 minutes. Played November 27-28.—Harlan C. Dodd, Charlestown Theatre, Charlestown, Ind. Small town and rural patronage.

REDHEADS ON PARADE: John Boles, Dixie Lee— You don't exactly have to hide when they come out from seeing this, although you may get a dirty look or two.—Harry Musgrave, Cozy Theatre, Minneapolis, Kansas. Small town patronage.

REDHEADS ON PARADE: John Boles, Dixie Lee— Drew big business on pay day but I considered it only fair. Patrons, however, registered no kicks. Might have been unusual in color, but redheads in black and white photography show no distinction. Running time, 77 minutes. Played November 28-29.—W. M. Nolen, Colonial Theatre, Monroe City, Mo. Rural patronage.

STEAMBOAT ROUND THE BEND: Will Rogers, Anne Shirley—Excellent! Rogers fans seem to think this was his best picture—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. General patronage.

STEAMBOAT ROUND THE BEND: Will Rogers —Will Rogers still lives. Our attendance showed a good pickup and as far as we have learned everyone was satisfied. Played December 7.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

STEAMBOAT ROUND THE BEND: Will Rogers —As always, Will Rogers can be depended on to please everyone and do the biggest business of the month. Running time, 82 minutes. Played November 22-24.—Harry M. Newman, Liberty Theatre, Lynden, Wash. Small town patronage.

$10 RAISE: Karen Morley, Edward Everett Horton —Pretty good comedy. Running time, 72 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

THANKS A MILLION: Fred Allen, Dick Powell, Patsy Kelly, Ann Dvorak—Excellent entertainment. Drew extra business.—R. V. Fletcher, Lyric Theatre, Hartington, Neb. General patronage.

THANKS A MILLION: Dick Powell, Fred Allen, Ann Dvorak, Patsy Kelly—This new organization that joined Fox made a picture in this one that clicked. Fox never did make a musical before that was worth a tinker's dam with the single exception of White's last "Scandals." Patsy Kelly got a small break in this one and she should have been given more of a role for Dvorak is no bet in this house, very few go for her if we can take the comments on the picture that we received. The one high spot of the show were the Yacht Club Boys; they were plenty good.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

THIS IS THE LIFE: Jane Withers—Very good entertainment.—R. V. Fletcher, Lyric Theatre, Hartington, Neb. General patronage.

THIS IS THE LIFE: Jane Withers, John McGuire —Good entertainment and well received. Running time, 65 minutes. Played December 6-7.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

THUNDER IN THE NIGHT: Edmund Lowe, Karen Morley—Very poor. They walked out on this one.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. General patronage.

UNDER THE PAMPAS MOON: Ketti Gallian, Warner Baxter—A good picture with broken English chatter. Running time, 78 minutes. Played December 11-12.—H. Bettendorf, Opera House Theatre, Foley, Minn. Small town and country patronage.

UNDER THE PAMPAS MOON: Warner Baxter, Ketti Gallian—South American pampas was the locale for this one, and while the stars did not do so well with their brogue there was action and comedy enough to make the picture good entertainment for our patrons, who voted it O. K. Played December 6-7.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. O. Small town patronage.

UNDER THE PAMPAS MOON: Warner Baxter— We considered this better than an average programmer but quite a percentage of our audience reported that they did not care for it. We had the smallest Thanksgiving business that was ever reported here. Played November 27-28.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

WAY DOWN EAST: Henry Fonda, Rochelle Hudson—We still don't know what to say about this one. The people that saw it seemed to go for it all right, but that was only a handful.—Henry Musgrave, Cozy Theatre, Minneapolis, Kansas. Small town patronage.

WELCOME HOME: James Dunn, Arline Judge— Almost a failure as feature. Should be avoided except as added attraction. Running time, 72 minutes. Played November 16.—Harlan C. Dodd, Charlestown Theatre, Charlestown, Ind. Small town and rural patronage.

United Artists

BARBARY COAST: Miriam Hopkins, Joel McCrea, Edward G. Robinson—The picture has action and drama with some very good acting, but it is not the big super-special that it was rated. It will get by for a week-end date. Harry Carey does nice work as head of the Vigilantes. Robinson as always is good when he has this kind of a role.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

DARK ANGEL, THE: Merle Oberon, Fredric March, Herbert Marshall—Very fine picture. Drew extra business.—R. V. Fletcher, Lyric Theatre, Hartington, Neb. General patronage.

LAST GENTLEMAN, THE: George Arliss—Good comedy. Running time, 74 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

MELODY LINGERS ON, THE: Josephine Hutchinson, George Houston—Despite wonderful acting by Josephine Hutchinson, this one bogged down. A woman's picture entirely; too draggy to suit the majority.—John A. Milligan, Broadway Theatre, Schuylerville, N. Y. Small town patronage.

Universal

CRIMSON TRAIL, THE: Buck Jones—An average western. Jones always pleases the western fans.— M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. General patronage.

DIAMOND JIM: Edward Arnold, Jean Arthur— This one did not go over. Our patrons sure passed this one up. Those that did come out did not care for it. No small town picture.—M. F. Bodwell, paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. General patronage.

FIGHTING YOUTH: Charles Farrell—An exceptionally good football picture. Drew extra business and it pleased.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. General patronage.

I'VE BEEN AROUND: Chester Morris, Rochelle Hudson—Excellent program picture. Running time 68 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

MISTER DYNAMITE: Edmund Lowe, Esther Ralston—I was a little doubtful about this one, but it turned out to be a fair picture with good acting and power to hold the attention of our patrons. A little above the average run of productions. Played November 9.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

NOTORIOUS GENTLEMAN, A: Charles Bickford, Helen Vinson—Gave a moderate sized audience a thrill. Satisfying. Played November 30.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

OUTLAWED GUNS: Buck Jones—A fair western that pleased a moderate sized audience. For some reason Buck Jones is not the drawing card he was during the past two or three years. Played November 23.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

REMEMBER LAST NIGHT?: Edward Arnold, Constance Cummings—Here is one of the best murder mysteries ever made. If you want something to please your patrons play this. Advertise it big and run on best nights. It won't disappoint you or your customers. Sold as a program but a special if there ever was one. Many people said it was one of the best pictures they had ever seen. Edward Arnold is very good, as is the rest of the cast. Perfect acting and a fine story. Many thanks, Universal, for an out-of-the-ordinary attraction. If the rest of the Universal pictures measure up to this, then I've sure got a good contract.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

STORMY: Noah Beery, Jr., Jean Rogers—An unusually good out-of-door program picture. Young Beery pleasing, and with an excellent voice. Jean Rogers will go farther, also. Rex, the horse, did his part very nicely. Scenic background excellent. Played December 4-5.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

WEREWOLF OF LONDON, THE: Henry Hull— Played this as part of a midnight ghost show, following a spirit seance, and it did business.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

WHEN A MAN SEES RED: Buck Jones—Jones is slipping. Picture only fair. He used to be my best bet on Saturday night.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

Warner Bros.

BROADWAY GONDOLIER: Dick Powell, Joan Blondell—Not near the picture that Warner Bros. would lead you to believe.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. General patronage.

DR. SOCRATES: Paul Muni, Ann Dvorak—A very strong picture. Extra good entertainment, interesting story and great acting.—Bert Silver, Silver Theatre Co., Inc., Greenville, Mich. City and country patrnoage.

DR. SOCRATES: Paul Muni, Ann Dvorak—Here you see Paul Muni as a new character. Barton MacLane is truly a tough guy. If it's action you want, you will find it here. Running time, 70 minutes. Played November 15-16.—Paul C. Morgan, Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

BOX 626

MOONLIGHT ON THE PRAIRIE: Dick Foran, Sheila Mannors—Good western. Fine scenery, also good singing helped it go over. Pleased a better than average house.—Alvin A. Hables, Reel Joy Theatre, King City, Cal. Small town patronage.

PAGE MISS GLORY: Marion Davies, Dick Powell, Pat O'Brien—Does fairly well first day. Nothing after that. Powell miscast and O'Brien just a shouting Irishman. Running time, 92 minutes. Played November 24-26.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

PAGE MISS GLORY: Marion Davies, Dick Powell—A good picture but not a big special. A little long drawn out but got by okay. Average business. Played December 4-5.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

STARS OVER BROADWAY: James Melton, Pat O'Brien—This is a good show of its kind. Some of my patrons stay away from every singing show so this one did just average business. Pleased most of the ones that came to it. Played December 8.—Alvin A. Hables, Reel Joy Theatre, King City, Cal. Small town patronage.

STARS OVER BROADWAY, THE: Pat O'Brien, Frank McHugh—How long can this "High C" stuff go on? When we were "sexed" to death, the L. of D. came to the rescue. I for one am ready to start a league of some sort to stop this breed. It's a crying shame to hang this onto Pat O'Brien and Frank McHugh. In the early part of the picture, Pat looks into a traveling bag at a gun lying there. Really, you know I believe he was serious about that. —Harry Musgrave, Cozy Theatre, Minneapolis, Kansas. Small town patronage.

WE'RE IN THE MONEY: Joan Blondell, Glenda Farrell—Good fast entertainment. A little below the standard of this pair. Running time, 65 minutes. Played December 6-7.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

Short Features

Celebrity

SINBAD THE SAILOR: Comicolor Cartoon—Good. Got more laughs than most of these color cartoons. Running time, 8 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

Educational

FOOTBALL: Terrytoon—The mice and cats have a football game and show some new rules of the game. Very clever and good anywhere. Running time, one reel.—W. M. Nolen, Colonial Theatre, Monroe City, Mo. Rural patronage.

KISS THE BRIDE: Tuxedo Comedies—The best comedy we ever played from this producer. It's a honey.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

MOANS AND GROANS: Terry-toon—Pretty good. Running time, 8 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

PENNY WISE: Star Personality Comedies—Fairly good.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

RHYTHM OF PAREE: Musical Comedies—Fairly good.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

TIMID YOUNG MAN, THE: Buster Keaton—Buster hasn't forgotten how to make good comedies. In this he's a woman-hater and picks up a girl who hates men. It's good slapstick. Running time, two reels.—W. M. Nolen, Colonial Theatre, Munroe City, Mo. Rural patronage.

YE OLD SAW MILL: Tuxedo Comedies—Just another murder from Educational. All very poor.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BASKETBALL TECHNIQUE: Sports Parade—Whether your patrons are basketball fans or not this cannot help but interest them; excellent. Running time, one reel.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

CALICO DRAGON: Happy Harmony—These Metro color cartoons are O. K. The coloring is very good. Running time, 8 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

CHINESE NIGHTINGALE: Happy Harmony—Very good. Running time, 7 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

HONEYLAND: Happy Harmonies—A slight letdown from previous Metro colored cartoons but still a good cartoon. Music very good.—John A. Milligan, Broadway Theatre, N. Y. Small town patronage.

LIVE GHOSTS: Laurel and Hardy—This was Laurel and Hardy's first local appearance since their "Babes in Toyland" debacle of last season, and the reception accorded the film indicated our belief that the team's popularity will live much longer if they confine their antics to two reelers, for this went over with a bang! Running time, 20 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

LUCKY BEGINNERS: Here is a series of amateur vaudeville acts presented in nice style; excellent for week-end. Running time, 18 minutes.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

PERFECT TRIBUTE, THE: Chic Sale—Very beautiful, but won't get you any money. Running time, 20 minutes.—R. L. Sherman, Strand Theatre, North Branch, Mich. General patronage.

TWO HEARTS IN WAX TIME: Musical Revue—The coloring is its best recommendation, but that is enough. Owing to featuring a drunk, not suitable for Sunday. Running time, two reels.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

Paramount

I WISHED ON THE MOON: Screen Songs—A good Screen Song plus Abe Lyman and band.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

JUDGE FOR A DAY: Betty Boop—All Betty Boop's are clever and "Judge for a Day," showing what she would do to universal "pests," hits a responsive chord. Good any day. Running time, one reel.—W. M. Nolen, Colonial Theatre, Monroe City, Mo. Rural patronage.

RKO Radio

HOMEWORK: Leon Errol—Errol, the man who knows everything, is stumped on his son's school problem. Frantic help from friends fails to solve it but the youngster comes through with the answer. One of few good RKO two reel comedies. Running time, two reels.—W. M. Nolen, Colonial Theatre, Monroe City, Mo. Rural patronage.

MAJOR BOWES' AMATEUR' THEATRE OF THE AIR: No. 3—On this our first Bowes we got a lucky break as he appeared in person at Sioux City and through their publicity I cashed in with a freak idea of my own.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

MAJOR BOWES' AMATEUR THEATRE OF THE AIR: No. 1.—Major Edward Bowes—Poor. If the Major cannot do better he ought to quit. Running time, 18 minutes.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

PATHE TOPICS: No. 1—Anything with scientific angle pleases me. The habits of busy ants is especially interesting but to women the close-ups of these harmless creatures were rather horrifying. Running time, one reel.—W. M. Nolen, Colonial Theatre, Monroe City, Mo. Rural patronage.

United Artists

ON ICE: Mickey Mouse—A dandy cartoon. The best in many weeks.—John A. Milligan, Broadway Theatre, Schuylerville, N. Y. Small town patronage.

ROBBER KITTEN: Silly Symphony—Good, but too expensive for small towns. Running time, 7 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

WATER BABIES: Silly Symphony—All the Silly Symphonies are good and very artistic but do not mean any extra business at the box office. Running time, 8 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

Vitaphone

JACK DENNY AND ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Will some kind-hearted producer please give us a band reel that has a lot of pep and makes the audience feel like dancing? Rimac's Rhumba Band is the only one lately with any pepper, excepting Ina Ray Hutton, of course. And please, Mr. Producer, leave out the tenor and put in a good tap dancer. Band reels appeal more to the younger generation than the old. So forget about "arrangements" and tenors and give them what they want.—John A. Milligan, Broadway Theatre, Schuylerville, N. Y. Small town patronage.

TICKETS PLEASE: Broadway Brevities—Another one of those Vitaphone two reelers which would be better if they were only one reel. If your audience gets more than a few laughs let me know.—John A. Milligan, Broadway Theatre, Schuylerville, N. Y. Small town patronage.

Serials

Mascot

MYSTERY MOUNTAIN: Ken Maynard, Verna Hillie—First serial shown in over a year. Personally so dislike them that I do not feel capable of giving an unbiased opinion. Believe that it has increased business only slightly. Running time, 20 minutes, 12 chapters.—W. M. Nolen, Colonial Theatre, Monroe City, Mo. Rural patronage.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

JUMBOS AND PEANUTS

Reduced to cold type, the advance campaign that created so much local comment on "Jumbo," the circus-on-a-stage play now current at the New York Hippodrome Theatre, measures up only to the less than sensational exploitations that come to the notice of this department.

What caused most of the excitement originally in the build-up of the play was the novelty of the presentation entailing conversion of the venerable Hipp into a one-ring circus setting and this remodeling furnished inspiration for much of the preliminary publicity. But from then on the ballyhoo was strictly motion picture.

The bannered elephant street stunt, trick newspaper and poster copy used ahead of the opening are familiar enough to Round Tablers and thus these devices occasioned no undue marveling among seasoned theatremen who looked for something unusual from the Billy Rose forces.

That there are more than a few showmen operating in the smaller spots who with the same opportunities or even fewer could have stood the city on its ear is not said in any carping manner. The comparison is made only to impress upon those theatre executives vociferously applauding Mr. Rose's endeavors that there is too much taking for granted the showmanship displayed by their own managers in selling attractions, run-of-the-mill and otherwise.

There should also be warm applause for the theatreman who week after week is expected to and does put over "Jumbo" campaigns on peanut budgets.

INDISPENSABLE EQUIPMENT

The gratifying reception accorded the new sixth edition of F. H. Richardson's "Blue Book of Projection" is not surprising for here are offered over 700 pages and illustrations detailing everything there is to know about modern projection—and there is much to know. Much praise has been given the book's careful description of every piece of sound and projection apparatus, instructions for operation and maintenance, complete trouble-shooting department and lightning-fast index providing the ready answer to any projection problem.

It is interesting to know that many managers eager to keep abreast of every advance in projection, anxious to fortify themselves against disastrous breakdowns, are purchasing the Blue Book for their personal shelves. It is also significant in many quarters the Blue Book is regarded with the same importance given any other indispensable theatre equipment.

THE HOLLYWOOD INFLUENCE?

From St. Louis, the Associated Press reports Ben S. Allen, traveling companion of Herbert Hoover, as saying the former President possesses a natural fund of humor and, as an instance, related the story of a little girl who requested an autograph. Mr. Hoover signed his name six times, explaining, "You might want to do a little autograph trading and I understand it takes five Hoovers to get one Babe Ruth."

GUARANTEED TO BREAK

We have with us today Old Man Custom, the gent who appears on the scene at this time of the year with a full line of bright New Year resolutions guaranteed to break with the slightest pressure. Among his leading items, for instance, is that big-selling number purchased in quantity by those exhibitors who firmly resolve to do something for their managers. And while not as popular, but also a heavy grosser, is the resolution made by a lot of managers who intend doing a better job for their bosses next year.

There are a lot of new products on the market that will not break, chip or tarnish. But the old-fashioned, fragile resolution that bursts into a thousand pieces on short notice is still unfortunately much too much in demand.

"'Twas the night before Christmas
And all through the house
Not a creature was stirring"—
With the exception, of course, of the manager.

Honest, folks, we had nothing at all to do with it and you can blame it all on our Gert. Just when we began to look forward to the biggest kind of a New Year for every Round Tabler, ye club secretary pops up with the announcement that 1936 is also Leap Year. Don't say we didn't warn you.

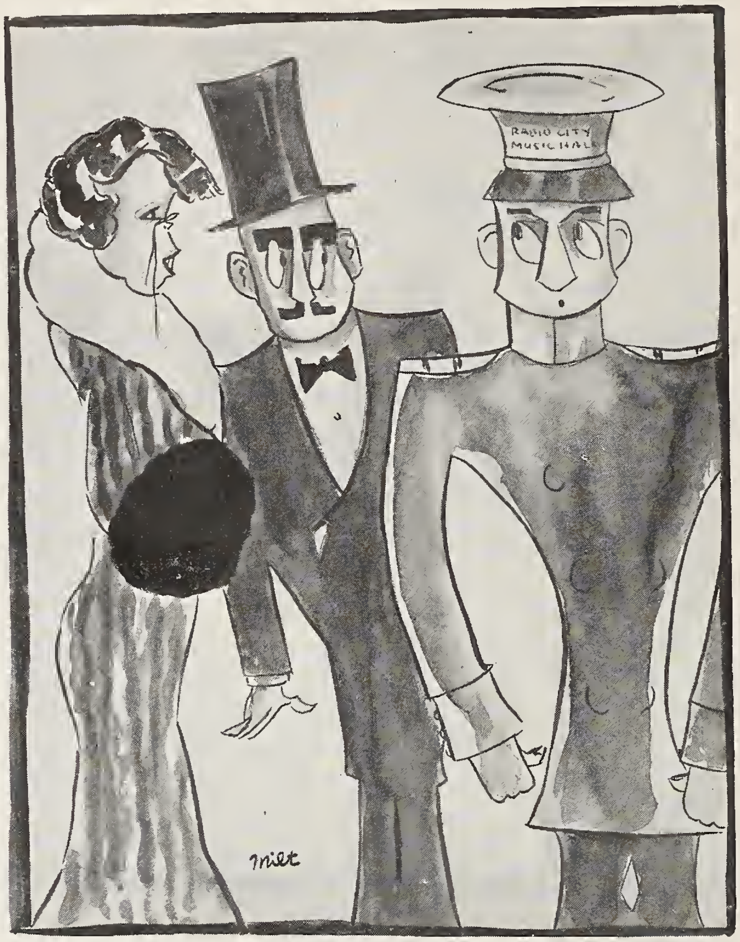
SHOWMEN'S LOBBY LAFFS!



RITZY DAME: Young man, doesn't this theatre have Bank Night?

Girl in Window Sells "Top Hat" for Martin

One of the ace attention-attractors in Guy Martin's "Top Hat" campaign at the Colfax Theatre in South Bend, Ind., was tieup with furniture store in whose window attractive girl in high hat and tails sat at telephone calling patrons (see photo). Stills and picture copy were spotted about window.

Another successful stunt Guy used was tying in dance hall on Piccolino contest for which silver loving cup was awarded winning team with tickets to runnersup. Leading beautician featured a Piccolino hairdress, running cut in newspaper ads and department store displayed coats worn by Rogers in picture.

Rubinoff Tab Plugs "Thanks A Million"

The fast-stepping Bill Green has added to his other duties the editing of a four-page tab called "Rubinoff Topics," first issue of which is devoted to the maestro's appearance in "Thanks a Million."

Tab is liberally illustrated with cuts of Rubinoff in scenes from the picture, off-stage studio shots, etc. Paper is distributed free mainly to those requesting same from among listeners on the violinist's broadcast.

Selling "Anthony Adverse"

Reported from various situations and recently from Keith's, Baltimore, is a stunt to sell the coming "Anthony Adverse" with the billing on "I Found Stella Parish" plugging the director, Mervyn LeRoy as the man selected to direct the coming Warner special. Said to be a first-time that this buildup has been used in a production not yet completed.

Schell's Costless Tabloid

With the recent celebration of a "Regent Happiness Week," Bill Schell at that theatre in Newark got out a four-page flash, front cover of which carried theatre ad and balance merchants' ads which paid for cost and distribution. Bill also managed to spot the week's attractions throughout the ads, and a brief news column was run on back page.

Starts Xmas Season With Beauty Contest

Merchants in Newport, Vt., have been putting on a gala night annually to stimulate shopping in the two weeks before Christmas. But this year the party topped all previous affairs mainly through the efforts of Manager Lloyd A. Heldman, of the Burns Theatre, in that spot who sold his Merchants' Association on a beauty contest and style show to be held at the theatre during the opening night's celebration.

There being nine towns in the nearby trading area, Lloyd arranged that girls in the nine communities were invited to compete for the post of beauty queen from each spot. To enter, femmes between the ages of 16 and 30, married or single, were asked to send photos to Heldman, with name, address, height, weight, color of hair and eyes and size of dress worn.

Presidents Act as Judges

Presidents of Newport Rotary, Kiwanis and Merchants' Association acted as judges selecting the winner from each town. Only these winners were announced. Non-winners were not publicized and their photos returned.

On the opening day of the celebration new cars were sent to each of the participating towns, the winners brought to Newport, met by chaperons and committee. Girls were then taken to the nine stores cooperating and fitted for the outfits they were to wear at the theatre style show. Merchants drew lots for their specific "queen" and presented gifts to their representatives who for one hour acted as guest cashiers.

Nine beauty shops also drew lots for the honor of serving the winners and flowers for each were also promoted. After taking part in other similar activities the nine girls at night appeared in the theatre style show wearing the outfit selected.

The ultimate winner given the title "Queen of the Newport Trading Area" was then chosen by audience applause and in addition to a loving cup the "queen" also received gifts from each of the stores.

All of this activity naturally led to much newspaper publicity, co-op ads and other angles, the theatre of course mentioned repeatedly and Heldman playing to a lot of extra business usually not available at that time of the year.

1936 Awards

The actual results of the Quigley Competitions are in themselves sufficient evidence that this project has within its sphere reached a definite objective in bringing into the spotlight the high value of exploitation and the herculean effort to put forth for the advancement of grosses by talented theatremen.

These objectives are now advanced and therefore on the threshold of the New Year, your Round Table is pleased to announce the continuation of the Quigley Awards during 1936.

Many promotions have been gained by Award winners and in every instance the Awards have been credited for these advancements. There is proof too that the prestige of First and Honorable Mention recipients has also been enhanced for these successes are regularly reported to the Big Bosses who have acknowledged appreciation of the determination displayed by their managers.

The Awards have been voted showmen in almost every classification—to first and subsequent runs, to small town theatremen as often as the deluxe managers, to overseas entrants. It is also accepted that every entry has been given equal consideration regardless of the amount expended—that only showmanship and no other factor is considered in choosing the winners. It may be noted at this time that the ornate entry has received no extra consideration from the judges because of this elaboration.

Ranking industry names from the distribution, advertising and exhibition branches have again been invited to act as Quigley judges in 1936. That so many have accepted—that they speak so highly of the project attests to the wholehearted cooperation extended by these important executives to advance the status of the man in the field.

The Quigley Silver and Bronze plaques, the First and Honorable Mention Sheepskin Certificates are the symbols by which the showman sets forth his accomplishments. Thus once more your Round Table invites every theatreman everywhere in this wide world to declare his talents through the 1936 Quigley Awards Competitions for the direct attention and approval of the industry's leaders.

Holds Food Show On "Broadway Melody"

What he reports as the first of its kind was a food show in the lobby, all expenses attached undertaken by Jack Benny's radio sponsor on a tieup with "Broadway Melody" at the Bison, Shawnee, Okla., and put over by assistant manager, Dick Warner.

Special preview was held for grocers in the surrounding territory who were guests of the company and theatre, booths erected, displays built and refreshments offered, these furnished by the sponsor. Newspaper previously not too friendly to the theatre went overboard on the gag as the food folks were big advertisers and Warner reports better relations as a result.

Chamber of Commerce cooperated by stringing lights across street in front of theatre (see photo).

Paramount Presents
THE PICK OF THE PICTURES!

Best Shows in Town for January

The show world's pick of the pictures! Come and have a grand time...Look at these three productions leading the Paramount Parade for 1936...Look at the stories...Look at the stars...Names that fill you with eager expectations... Pictures that come from triumphs of the stage and literary world, all produced under the guiding hand of Ernst Lubitsch...Each picture the week's high spot in entertainment.

"COLLEGIATE"
JOE PENNER • JACK OAKIE

INTRODUCING Joe Penner! ! ! That goofy duck salesman is back again with more laughs than ever! He and Jack Oakie have recovered from the hilarity of "College Rhythm" . . . and they're starting in again from where they left off! Only this time they're running a girls' school and they've got a couple of brand-new ideas on education!...Frances Langford, lovely radio songstress, and a cast of your comedy favorites support the stars!... Ralph Murphy directed it... Gordon and Revel, who wrote the "College Rhythm" score, wrote the song hits that you'll be whistling all season!

"THE BRIDE COMES HOME"
starring CLAUDETTE COLBERT • FRED MacMURRAY with ROBERT YOUNG

If past performances mean anything this one has all the earmarks of a smash hit . . . Claudette Colbert, whom you loved in "It Happened One Night" and in "The Gilded Lily", is the wise-cracking heroine . . . Dapper Fred MacMurray, another "Gilded Lily" alumnus and a sensation in "Hands Across the Table", as the guy she's in love with—and how she hates it! . . . And speaking of "The Gilded Lily", let us remind you that Director Wesley Ruggles and Author Claude Binyon were responsible for that comedy... Now they've outdone all their previous efforts in this new romantic triumph, "The Bride Comes Home".

"ROSE of the RANCHO"
JOHN BOLES • GLADYS SWARTHOUT

Somebody at the studio got the idea of filming a big outdoor "musical", filled with riding, shooting, singing, romancing. So we got beautiful Gladys Swarthout to play the heroine (you've often heard her golden voice on the radio) . . . and John Boles as the hero . . . We hired practically a whole Mexican army. We gave David Belasco's grand story of gold rush days in California a grand production, directed by Marion Gering. And then we got the best song writers on the coast to write a whole set of new tunes! . . . P.S. Herb Williams and Willie Howard for laughs!

FROM OUT WHERE THE STYLES BEGIN . . .

Doesn't Miss Swarthout look the very picture of a most alluring Spanish Senorita in this picture? ...Notice the wide flaring skirt of dainty organdy ruffles—contrasted by the fitted dark taffeta bodice repeating flattering organdy ruffles at throat and wrist . and the dark lace "mantilla." When next you are invited to a costume party—remember this!

Claudette Colbert has an interesting wardrobe in "The Bride Comes Home." Claudette plays a girl whose millionaire father lost his fortune . . . so she has to look well-dressed even though she can't spend much for apparel—even as you and I! . . . You'll adore the two-piece black-and-white frock that blends so well with the black Breton hat worn in the illustration.

INSIDE NEWS of the PARAMOUNT STUDIO . . . No wonder they call Ernst Lubitsch the Master Hit-Maker of the Movie World! Have you noticed the great performances that such stars as Gary Cooper, Ann Harding, Bing Crosby, Claudette Colbert, Margaret Sullavan, and Sylvia Sidney—to name just a few—have given in the past couple of months? Of course you have! And have you wondered what magic brought them to such heights? Or are you one of those who recognized the famous Lubitsch touch... the touch that takes star, story and setting and turns those elements into a grand show? . . . Now—when you see the grand pictures that Paramount will have for you in February—Gary Cooper and Marlene Dietrich in "Desire," Harold Lloyd in "The Milky Way," and Mae West and Victor McLaglen in "Klondike Lou"—you'll see grand entertainment with stars who are giving the greatest performances of their careers inspired by the supervision of the Master Hit-Maker of the Movie World—Ernst Lubitsch!

POPEYE and OLIVE OYL are going to do their stuff in a new and bigger way this year. In short, we're casting that spinach devouring sailor man in a new series of shorts! The first one is "Vim, Vigor and Vitality."

. . . if it's a paramount picture . . . it's the best show in town!

Above is reproduced one of the previously announced Paramount national ads to be released in 40 cities beginning in January. Each ad will run full length of paper and one column less than full page, will be changed from month to month, will vary typographically to conform with format and style of each paper. Copy, though institutional, highlights three or four current Paramount releases, follows the "reporter" slant and, in addition, plugs styles, shorts, etc., in a chatty, informal manner. The one-column on the page not covered by the ad can be used by exhibitors to tie their own copy in with the national advertising. It is intended that the reporter style of presentation will be continued in future ads.

Prospector Lectures in Lobby On "Call of Wild" for Adams

For his advance bally on "Call of the Wild" Bill Adams at the Colonial, Brockton, Mass., had local resident who was a prospector in the Yukon, lecture in lobby on the Gold Rush of '98 (see photo). Actual photos taken in Dawson City and the Yukon, property of the lecturer, were used to illustrate talk.

Heralds printed in type in vogue 25 years ago with caricature cuts were distributed, ushers were dressed in typical gambling outfits of that day and for lobby display Alaskan scenes were depicted. For the kids a mutt show was put on with prizes awarded to owner of dog closest resembling dog in picture.

Mills Creates Volcano For "Pompeii" Lobby

In addition to the art work made up for him by Javen Oder, Hall Theatres art head, Manager "Roxy" Mills, Rialto, Kingsville, Tex., spent a lot of time in rigging up a lobby volcano effect on "Pompeii" (see photo) that brought a lot of attention.

With 14 feet of one-inch mesh wire bent to resemble a volcano and built up to four and a half feet on a bannered platform, Roxy took three-inch scraps of paper, glueing them on the wire, using six of seven layers to cover up the light from two 100-watt red lights inside the crater. One light was on continuously and the other was a blinker to give the effect of a volcano in eruption. Varicolored paints were applied to heighten the effect.

By arrangement with superintendent of schools, show for pupils was put on the second day of showing. Mills reported standing room attendance on special rate of 20 cents for high school students and five cents for grammar school children.

For exploitation on a reissue of "Public Enemy," Manager Nick Warren, Criterion, Anderson, S. C., made a tieup with his local police department for a drive-carefully week. Guest tickets were given most careful drivers, Nick hooking in his copy to the "don't be a Public Enemy—drive carefully" slant.

Silver Ties Paper To "Mutiny" Contest

Stepping off on the occasion of Capt. Phifer's visit to Lowell, Mass., with the MGM traveling replica of the original Bounty, Manager Nat Silver of the Strand used the bally to promote one of his papers for local sponsorship of the national shipbuilding contest.

Nat started four weeks ahead by offering cash as well as entry in the national contest as first local prize, other cash awards for second and third and 25 guest tickets for runners-up. Working plans were furnished entrants and enlarged blue print shown in the lobby.

WHAT IS A CREDIT UNION

Florida Association Treasurer Describes Progress of Circuit Federal Employee Thrift Bank

by L. A. JOHNSTON
Wometco Theatres, Miami, Fla.

A Credit Union is an employees bank, chartered by the Treasury department at Washington and created to promote thrift and make banking in many of its phases easy and available to the comparatively low salaried employee. Its operation is simple and it has proved of inestimable benefit almost wherever introduced.

The plan is this. Any group of fifty or more people, bound by a common bond such as all employees of Wometco Theatres, may apply for a Credit Union charter. A contract man from Washington will investigate the application and call on your organizer and acquaint him with the simple regulations he must fulfill to secure the charter. When these regulations have been fulfilled, your charter will be granted and you are ready for business.

There is a Credit Union National Association at Madison, Wisconsin, that supplies the forms such as deposit slips, journal, ledger and other things needed at cost.

Twenty-five Cent Entry Fee

Each employee, upon becoming a member, pays twenty five cents as an entry fee. This is the only fee of any kind collected from a member. At the end of the year, all entry fees are passed to an account named Reserve for Bad Loans. The balance in this account is only used to absorb losses on loans and remains as sort of a surplus account until final liquidation.

A member must deposit at least twenty five cents a week until his account reaches five dollars. Then he is no longer required to make a regular twenty five cent deposit. After twenty weeks, he is supposed to have acquired the habit of saving something each pay day. The above does not mean that the weekly deposit is limited to twenty five cents. He may deposit as much as he can. Each unit of five dollars is called one paid-in share. This is to make it easier to figure interest at the end of the year. Interest is paid on each unit but no interest is paid on fractional units nor is interest paid on fractional months.

Loans Up to $50

As capital becomes available it is loaned to members in good standing, for provident or productive purposes. The loan application must state how it will be paid back, what it is for, and what security the applicant has to offer. You are allowed to loan up to fifty dollars to any member without security other than his signature, and up to 10 percent of the paid in and unimpaired capital to any member offering sufficient security. The sufficiency of this collateral is determined by a Credit Committee of three, and the treasurer.

The rate of interest charged members on loans is 12 percent a year on unpaid balances. You are not allowed to collect any fees or other charges of any kind that would cause the cost of the loan to exceed the aforementioned 12 percent per year.

At the end of the year 20 percent of the earned interest is transferred to the reserve for bad loans and the remaining balance, after all expenses have been paid, is available as dividends or interest on deposits. The rate of dividend or interest is not set until the end of the year and then after determining the number of paid-in share months, the rate is set and all net profit may be returned to members or part of it may be withheld and passed to surplus, and the balance paid to members. The Credit Union Section advocates a high interest-on-deposit rate instead of passing most of the profit to surplus. You cannot pay more than 6 percent on deposits. Any amount in excess of 6 percent must be passed to surplus.

Credit Union administration is handled by a Board of Directors of not less than five, a Credit Committee of not less than three, and a Supervisory Committee of not less than three. The Board of Directors elect a president, vice-president, treasurer, and clerk from their number. The clerk of the Board keeps a minute book very similar to a corporation minute book. The Credit Committee elects a chairman from their group and they investigate and pass on all loans. The Supervisory Committee elect a chairman from their group and they audit and generally supervise the operations and submit a written report of affairs to Washington quarterly.

Treasurer Keeps Books

The treasurer keeps all books and records, is bonded, and is general manager of the Credit Union. He or she must be a person with a good general knowledge of accounting and be available for business as much as possible. No one draws any salaries or gratuities of any kind. Every one donates his time and effort.

Wometco was granted a charter on April 20th of this year. We started with about forty members out of a potential one hundred ten. We now have ninety-six active members and deposits of $4600.00, and loans in force of $3800.00. We have earned $186.00 in interest and have $28.00 in our reserve for bad loans. We have no delinquent borrowers, and it has not been necessary to do any collecting. Our members have shown remarkable spirit and it has been a pleasure to work for our organization and help it grow.

"Contact," Wometco house organ, skippered by Sonny Shepherd, Hal Kopplin and L. A. Johnston, is the child of "Credit Union Activities" which originally was published to keep interest in the Union. Jack Fink, Capitol, Miami, won a prize for suggesting the new name for the magazine which now publicises all circuit activities.

THEATRE LIQUOR TIEUP CRASHED IN CHICAGO

Free Samples in Schoenstadt Theatres Arouse Clergymen and Clubs, And That's That

by BILL CROUCH

Chicago Correspondent

The plans of certain liquor distributors to advertise and distribute free samples of liquor, in tieups with theatres, met with disaster this week when public spirited organizations united in an effort to stop the plan.

The first blow struck was when Rev. Alfred Lee Wilson, pastor of the Kenwood Interdenominational church in Hyde Park, announced from his pulpit that certain theatres in that part of the city were advertising free gifts of liquor and beer.

Reverend Wilson, who is an exponent of good motion pictures and attends the theatre regularly, was aroused by the display of wine in the lobby of the Picadilly Theatre last week. Signs told that this wine would be given away on the 23rd and 24th of December to patrons.

Following this, Reverend Wilson read an advertisement on the Oakland-Outlook, a neighborhood shopping paper which is distributed free to all homes in that community, telling of a plan the Shakespeare theatre had to have "free beer nights," also an announcement that whiskey would be given away to patrons.

These announcements caused Reverend Wilson to bring the matter to the attention of his congregation in his Sunday sermon. Following this the Parent-Teachers Association, the Hyde Park Ministers' Association and various other organizations brought the matter to the attention of the liquor commissioner and the mayor. As a result the newspaper announced that a ruling of the liquor commissioner made it impossible for the theatre to give the liquor away and that plans for so doing had been abandoned.

Arthur Schoenstadt, head of the theatres planning the liquor tieup, said that had he known of the feeling against it he would not have started it. The Hennessy people had supplied 30,000 free miniatures of their product for free distribution through the Schoenstadt theatres. The circuit, it is understood, last year gave away free liquor in some of their houses and the plan helped the box office grosses.

Mr. Schoenstadt also said that bottles of liquor and beer had been used as prizes in several houses as awards on Screeno and "country store" nights, without any protest being made by the patrons.

The liquor giveaway plan came at a time which threatened to jeopardize the Christmas Movie Basket Parties which were sponsored by the motion picture industry here.

Colvin Brown, vice-president and general manager of Quigley Publications, is spending Christmas with relatives here. He just returned from a two weeks' trip to the Coast.

Instead of having outsiders come in and run an insurance plan to "protect" those who could not attend the "money night" which their theatres promote, the Anderson circuit decided to try the insurance plan in two of its theatres in De Kalb. The management offered those who wanted it an opportunity to insure themselves against loss of the award by paying ten cents for an insurance policy, which enabled them to get the money if they didn't attend the theatre. If they did attend and also held an insurance ticket they would be paid double.

The insurance tickets were on sale a week in advance of the drawing and sold fairly well. The night of the drawing a woman was present to claim the money and much to the surprise of the management she held an insurance ticket also. As a result the $375 award was doubled, making it a $750 jackpot. Mr. Anderson plans to keep the plan in operation but he doesn't intend to start it again when the award is at a high figure.

Jack Miller, head of Miller and Simansky theatres, has taken over the lease of the Lil theatre in Forest Park. Henry Bombaras is the owner.

Approximately 20,000 Christmas Baskets were distributed to Chicago's needy as a result of 250 Movie Basket Parties staged by the local industry. Under the guidance of Jack Miller, all those taking part made the most of their opportunities.

H. O. Gleiss, manager of Ross Federal Service in St. Louis, stopped over for a few hours on his way to Detroit to spend the holidays.

William K. Howard dropped in for a few minutes en route back to Hollywood for Christmas. He had just returned from Europe, where he arranged to direct a picture for British-Gaumont some time this spring. His next assignment will be "Commencement" for Twentieth Century-Fox. Traveling with him was Johnny Walker, the actor.

Loretta Schenk, bathing beauty contest winner, won a verdict of $22,000 damages against the Essaness Vic Theatre in the court of Judge Martin M. Gridley. Miss Schenk sued for injuries suffered when she fell through a glass exit door in the theatre, severing arteries in her right wrist. Lawyers for the defense questioned each venireman carefully as to whether he would be prejudiced by the plaintiff's beauty.

Harry Nortman, owner of the Kimbark theatre, is spending the holidays on his honeymoon.

Leo Blank, James Winn and Sam Clark got back from the Warner conference in Kansas City just in time to enjoy the zero Christmas weather.

"Magnificent Obsession" opens at the Palace here January 10th. Plans call for at least a two weeks' engagement. The picture also opens in Peoria and South Bend on the same date.

Morris Gottschalk, Universal salesman, is spending his vacation in Florida. The Universal office seems quiet and deserted without the booming voiced and genial Morris about.

Opening at the Chicago last Friday, "The Littlest Rebel" got off to a fast start despite the holidays, and for the opening day grosses were much ahead of "Bright Eyes," which opened just one year ago today.

Emma Abplanalp, secretary to the Film Board of Trade, will spend the holidays with the home folk in Indiana.

Mitchell Leicher, producer of Beaumont pictures, was here for a few hours between planes on his way to the Coast. Nat Salaand of the Mercury Film Laboratory also stopped off between flights.

Those departing on the Santa Fe Chief for Hollywood last week included Jesse L. Lasky, Harry D'Arrast, Winfield Sheehan, Mme. Jeritza, Joe E. Brown, William K. Howard, Johnny Walker and Carl Brisson. En route east were Jack Oakie, Sylvia Sidney, Danny Danker, Mrs. Spyros Skouras and his two nieces.

Joe E. Brown, enroute to the Coast, left his wallet and glasses in his stateroom on the Century the other day. Before the ado was over a railroad president, three film exchangemen, the lost and found staff of two railways and your correspondent had taken an active part in seeing that Joe got his belongings. The wallet contained about $4,000.

Ken Murray, the comedian, will headline the stage show at the Palace theatre New Year Eve. The Lily Pons picture, "I Dream Too Much," will be the screen attraction.

Margie Rice, luscious and lovely member of the Ross Federal staff here, is in a new office. As a result more visitors will be welcomed with that ingratiating smile.

James R. Grainger, Universal sales chief, stopped off between trains en route to Hollywood to confer with Henry Herbel, local sales manager. Mr. Grainger said he expected the Universal-Charles R. Rogers deal to go through shortly after the first of the year.

George Tobias, local theatre advertising salesman, was seriously hurt in an auto crash outside of DeKalb last Thursday night. The car he was driving skidded on the icy pavement.

IT'S A FACT—Ten years ago this time. . . . Paul Ash was making theatrical history at the McVickers. . . . Eddie Silverman was in Hollywood conferring with his boss, Harry Warner. . . . Knee muffs were worn by faddish women. . . . Irving Mack had a spare tire stolen from his car . . . he let the insurance company worry. . . . Ben Eisenberg won a gold belt buckle for selling Andy Gump comedies. . . . Calvin Coolidge was president. . . . Virginia Valli visited here with her relative over Christmas. . . . Morris Hellman was recovering from a train accident in South Bend. . . . Walter Brown and Sam Gorelick were selling film for FBO. . . . "Ten Commandments," "North of 36," "Charley's Aunt" were the three biggest box-office grossers of the year. . . . Clyde Eckhardt was assistant general manager of Fox Films. . . . Clara Bow announced she would marry Donald Keith on Christmas Day. . . . Charlie Miller was still a newly wed.

To Make Spanish Series

Imperio Azteca Studios, Inc., and Estudious Imperio Azteca, S. A., plan to make eight Spanish version pictures for 1935-36, according to an announcement by Robert L. Farfan, Jr., production supervisor, in Hollywood.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Running times are those supplied by the companies. Asterisk indicates running time as made known by West Coast studio before announcement by home office in New York. Variations also may be due to local censorship deletions. Dates are 1935, unless otherwise specified. Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1935-36 season.
